Good news was brought to the Endeavorers by A. C. Morgan, the New York banker, who is closely identified with this work, especially that of the nursery work in New York. Mr. Morgan stated that he had purchased the Netherwood property and is now making extensive repairs there, including the erection of a dormitory, new dining room and additional room for bath-tubs. Mr. Morgan gives this Netherwood Home to the work free of rent and other expense, except the maintenance of the work. He said that he stood willing to co-operate with the Plainfield people in this fresh-air work which he believed would bring lasting benefit to all who are interested.

Following Mr. Morgan, there was a short address by L. B. Robeson, also of New York, who is similarly identified with the both the New York and Netherwood work. His words were full of encouragement and he promised his loyal support. He spoke of a plan now being considered to erect a place at the camp where occasionally fathers of the children can spend Sunday if they desire while the children and the mothers are at the camp.

Mr. Biglow stated that it was for the Endeavorers to decide whether they would divide their work between the Westfield and Netherwood camps, but personally he believed that they should lend their support to the Netherwood Home as that work is now well established. As additional articles would be needed this season and it would be necessary to have some one go ahead with the work, he said that Miss Hawkins would announce the chairman of the various committees decided upon. They are as follows:

House committee, F. E. Smith; religious work, Miss Ella O. Benedict; amusement, Phillip S. Suffern; music, Miss Carrie Dewey; financial, Miss Florence G. Hawkins. These chairmen will meet for conference and their assistants will be selected soon.

Before the meeting closed the children sang several hymns and gave a number of recitations. After the benediction by Rev. Mr. Rodman, several contributions of money were received for the work.

The certificates will be issued at par, and the basis of exchange will be made on the following valuations for the surrendered stock: North Jersey, 40; Jersey City, Hoboken and Paterson, 35; Orange and Passaic Valley, Elizabeth and Plainfield and United Electric, 30 each.

BOROUGH SCHOOL BOARD HAS BUSY SESSION

It Transacts Much Routine Business and Hears the Numerous Reports.

THE TRUANCY QUESTION

THE COMMITTEE DECLARES PARENTS WILL BE PUNISHED.

Resignation of Supt. Wightman Considered in Secret—The Park Clubhouse for Commencement Exercises—Other Matters.

The meeting of the Board of Education of North Plainfield, Monday evening in the High School building, was an important one. Only routine business was transacted in the early part of the session but later the members went into executive session when the resignation of the principal, Homer J. Wightman was considered, the appointment of a school physician was discussed and matters relating to teachers and other employes of the school were brought up.

All the members were present. President Joy presided at the meeting and announced that John Valiant had tendered his resignation as chairman of the auditing committee. His place was filled by Murray Burtis. Dr. Cooley, as chairman of the building and grounds committee, reported that a woman had been secured to assist Janitor Richard McDonald afternoons at the school, and that repairs were necessary to the ceiling of two of the rooms of the Watchung School building. The plaster has become loosened from the marching of the pupils and needs repairing. He was appointed one of a committee with power to have the repairs made.

Samuel Townsend, of the truancy and grievance committee, stated that he had sent out notices to all the parents of pupils in the school notifying them that if truancy was not stopped the aid of the law would be invoked. As a result of this action thirty pupils have returned to school and Howard Carver, who had hitherto ignored the notices, had been arraigned before Judge Dond in the borough court and reprimanded. His children have been in regular attendance since. There are two others who have been notified and unless their children appear in school measures along this line will be taken against them. He stated that complaints have been received from the teacher in the cooking department about the condition in which the rooms are kept. This will receive attention at once. Miss French will be appointed assistant in the kindergarten class at the Watchung School, beginning May 1.

An application was read by Dr. Cooley from the committee on commencement of the alumni of the school asking for the use of the chapel for commencement exercises. Owing to the necessity of removing the seats and desks from the chapel, the request was denied. A subscription will be taken up among the members of the Board to assist in defraying the expense of renting the Park Clubhouse for the exercises. The use of the building was allowed them for a business meeting tomorrow evening.

Chairman Townsend, of the committee on rules, reported that he had caused to be typewritten, copies of the revised rules governing the schools and meetings of the borough. Copies were distributed among the members and action will be taken at the May meeting.

Chairman Valiant, of the finance committee, reported that warrants be drawn by the president and clerk to pay bills amounting to $2,855.77, of which $2,140.20 will be taken from the general school fund and $215 56 will be taken from the manual training fund. Collector George F. Brown reported that there was $9,884 20 on hand, taxes amounted to $509.45 and the total amount on hand at the present time amounted to $10,719.90. Disbursements amount to $713.57, leaving a balance on hand of $1,006 03.

A resolution was proposed, which will be sent to the Common Council relative to the back taxes. An application was read from Dr. Albert Pittis asking for an appointment as school physician. This was laid upon the table until the executive session which was taken immediately afterwards.

Y. M. C. A. GYMNASTS AT ANNUAL DINNER

Medals Won During Winter Were Presented After the Dinner Was Over.

THERE WERE SPEECHES

WALTER M'NAUGHTON WON THE FIRST PRIZES IN ALL THE CONTESTS.

President Stephen Cahoone Presided—Fifty-Four Were Present —A Pleasant Repast Was Served—The Speeches.

The annual gymnasium class dinner of the Y. M. C. A. was held Monday evening in the small hall of the association when there were over fifty present. Speeches were a feature of the evening and medals and badges were presented to the winners of the various championship contests.

The dinner was served at 6:30 o'clock in the rooms decorated with flags and colored lamps given by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gavett. President Stephen Cahoone presided at the dinner. He made a few remarks followed by William D. Murray who told of athletics in the "70s." He told of the endurance tests which formed the principal features of the contests twenty years ago. He said that those who enter contests should do so with the sole intention of winning for an institution which is worth belonging to is worth representing.

Others who made addresses were General Secretary J. H. Manning and Boys' Secretary Kenneth Robbie. Medals and badges were distributed by Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood, to those winning the championship contests. A medal was presented to the champion in the athletic's class, Walter McNaughton, and to the second highest, Ray Smith, and the third, Paul Collier, silver and bronze medals, respectively, were presented. As champion of the gymnastic class, Walter McNaughton also won honors. He is accredited with being the champion of the association for the year 1902-3. A silver medal was presented to William D. Reid who came second in that contest and a bronze medal was presented to Wilbur Bonliff who stood third.

The supper was served by Mrs. J. W. Gavett, Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. Stephen Cahoone, Mrs. T. F. Budlong and Mrs. C. E. A. Heywood, assisted by Miss C. Smith, Miss Cora Brokaw, Miss Florence Hughes and Miss Mary T. Draper. All the tables were trimmed with violets.

NEW ORGANIST.

J. Edmund Skiff Will Take Charge at Church of Holy Cross This Week.

J. Edmund Skiff, who will begin his duties as organist and choirmaster of the Church of the Holy Cross in the borough as successor to William E. MacClymont, takes charge of the work there this week. Mr. Skiff comes to this city with a high reputation, his specialty being voice training and singing. He has been identified with music in a professional way for the past fifteen years and has been eminently successful in his chosen work, having enjoyed the advantages of the best masters both in this country and in Europe, in voice, piano and organ.

He prefers, however, to devote time principally to voice and organ work. His name is somewhat familiar to readers of "The Etude" through his contributions to the columns of that magazine. He will undoubtedly prove a strong addition to Plainfield musical circles.

Reception to Pastor Sees.

The members of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church attended a reception which was given to their pastor, Rev. J. H. Sees, at the church on West Fourth street, last evening. The reception was given under the management of the minister's steward, M. B. Maynard, assisted by many members of the church. It was a great success socially and financially. Refreshments were served during the evening by the members of the committee.

SCHOOL BOARD WANTS WIGHTMAN TO REMAIN

Decides in Executive Session to Re-Engage Him For Another Year.

AND OTHER TEACHERS.

DR. ALBERT PITTIS GETS APPOINTMENT OF SCHOOL PHYSICIAN.

Dr. J. H. Buchanan Was Defeated for Re-Election—Mr. Wightman Has Another Offer—Hasn't Decided As Yet.

Most of the business discussed at the executive session of the North Plainfield Board of Education last Monday was in relation to the resignation tendered by Homer J. Wightman, the supervising principal of the schools. It was decided to re-engage him for another term. This was the first executive session taken by the new board since its organization and many other matters in regard to the reappointment of teachers and the janitor were brought up for discussion. The session did not adjourn until a late hour.

Mr. Wightman said this morning when asked whether he would remain in North Plainfield, that he had made no plans so far as he had not received word from the board. Whether or not he will stay will depend entirely upon what terms he is offered.

Mr. Wightman has received a very tempting offer from a city about the size of Elizabeth, in Connecticut, as superintendent of the city schools. The renumeration will be much larger than he receives here and it is easy to see that whether or not he remains here depends upon the terms offered by the borough board.

Other teachers whose terms will expire shortly will be re-engaged and the matter of the janitor was settled by his being reappointed for another term.

The appointment of a school physician caused much discussion. Two applications were filed with the board.

One was an application of Dr. Albert Pittis and the other was one of Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan. Both offered very good reasons why they should be appointed but the board decided in favor of Dr. Pittis.

Investigating Sources.

Secretary W. E. Honeyman and Inspector W. N. Pangborn, of the Borough Board of Health, are busy investigating the sources of the drains which empty into Stony brook on the properties of E. S. Hooley and T. B. Brooks.

Spring Time in Washington.

Washington is a typical spring resort and its bustle is purely social and political. There are gathered in the Capital representatives of every nation and country, and their comings and goings are of no little interest. Then the doings of the Senate and House are features which every tourist delights in following, and these features together with the visits to the numerous public buildings keep one busy all the while one is in Washington. The Royal Blue Line of which the New Jersey Central is the initial road is going to operate an excursion to Washington on May 7, and cost of tickets for the three days' excursion including all expenses is $12. Train leaves New York at 1 p. m., and arrives in Washington at 6:10 p. m. If you want to know about the trip drop a postal to C. M. Burt, general passenger agent, New York City, for tour book. SOMETHING FOR NOTHING

DESIRE TO GET IT CAUSES IMMORALITY IN BUSINESS.

First of Series of Special Sermons by Dr. Hall at Crescent Avenue Church.

Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Hall, of Union Theological Seminary, preached Sunday at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church on the "Redemption of Business Life," it being one of a series of sermons which he will preach each Sunday evening at that church. The two themes for the remainder of the sermons are "The Redemption of the Political Life" and the "Redemption of a Life Lived for Pleasure."

Taking his text from the Book of Romans, chapter 12, Dr. Hall led his hearers up to his points by comparing the times when the book was written to the present. He said that as early as the foundation of the Roman Empire men traded and bartered. It seems to be natural to buy and sell and to try to get something for which they paid nothing. Drawing down to the present time he said that commercialism of today means something entirely foreign to what it really is. Commerce is the pulse of the world he said and it will some day be the forerunner of the new Kingdom.

In speaking of business and business men he said that no man had any private business. What they have, are sent to do are all related to God very directly. A man's business, he said, may be private as far as the public interest is best attained. Business is a trust, the speaker affirmed, placed in a man to lift up the condition of those with whom he comes in contact and it a man would best transact his private business he would do well to try to lift up business methods and the body politic by pursuing fair means and honest.

Opportunity is given to people in order to better serve Jesus Christ and the public, Dr. Hall declared. "We are not here to exploit our fellow men but to uplift him."

The speaker asked what was wrong in gambling and answered his question by saying it was the desire to get something without paying something for it, of trading something equivalent in value. Business to be redeemed must be lifted up above the desire to beat a man with whom one is trading and to get something for nothing.

The desire to get something without giving something in return is the great source of immorality in business. The speaker said that the best way to gain redemption in business was to life business to a higher plane and to transact it, not as though it was a private affair but as a trust given by God.

Life Insured for $2,000,000.

The Prudential Insurance Company, through its Philadelphia agents, has insured L. Rodman Wanamaker, son of John Wanamaker, for $1,000,000. The premium on the insurance is over $20,000 a year. This makes Mr. Wanamaker one of the most heavily insured private individuals in the world, as he carries policies for $2,000,000. His insurance is said to be exceeded only by that of King Edward VII. John Wanamaker, his father, carries policies aggregating $1,500,000, and John M. Mack carries $1,250,000, of which $1,000,000 was placed recently.

HOW NEW PRIMARY LAW IS TO WORK

Makes Material Changes in Methods of Conducting the Party Primary Meetings.

REQUIREMENTS OF LAW

REGULAR ELECTION OFFICERS ARE TO BE IN CHARGE.

Details Concerning Selections of Delegates to Conventions and Nominees for All the Elective Offices in the City.

Interest is already being manifested in the workings of the new primary election law enacted by the last Legislature. The first test of the new system will be had on September next and the curiosity regarding the probable effect of the new act is likely to increase considerably, as the various provisions of the new act become more widely known.

It is already well-known that under the new act all parties will hold their primaries on the same day, the first registration day, and the registration officers will have charge of the Republican and Democratic primaries.

The first step under the new act will be taken in the latter part of August or possibly before that time, when the Republicans and the Democrats will name in the several election precincts candidates for delegates to the city and county conventions. At the city conventions the councilmanic nominee will be chosen.

To nominate candidates for delegates in a precinct ten voters must sign a petition addressed to City Clerk MacMurray, stating that they wish to have the names printed on the Democratic primary ballot, as candidates for delegates to the city convention in that particular precinct. These petitions must be sworn to and filed with City Clerk MacMurray not less than ten days prior to the primaries, that is by August 28.

For the city convention each party is to be entitled to one delegate for each one hundred votes cast by the political party for its candidate for Governor at the last gubernatorial election, and one delegate for each fraction thereof over forty. But each election district is to have at least one delegate to each convention of each political party.

On or before July 1 City Clerk MacMurray must notify the chairman of the executive committees of the number of delegates to be elected by each party in each election district. The city is to provide the ballots and boxes. No envelopes are to be used.

At the primaries the Republican voters shall cast their ballots into one box and the Democratic voters shall vote into another box. The boxes are to be like the ones used at the general election. The two Democratic registry officers are to receive the Democratic primary ballots and the two Republican registry officers the Republican primary ballots. When the polls are closed at 9 p. m., the votes shall be counted jointly by the registry officers of both parties.

If a person is challenged he may vote at the primary after subscribing to this oath:

"You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that you are a member of the ——— political party (specifying the political party to which the affiant claims to belong); that at the last election for members of the General Assembly you voted; you voted for a majority of the candidates of said party whose names were printed on the ticket of said party, and that you intend to support the candidates of said party at the ensuing election."

Any voter who shall vote in the ballot box of one political party at any previous election held under the new act, shall not be allowed to vote in the ballot box of any other political party at the next thereafter succeeding primary election.

The new act further says:

"The said board of registry and election shall admit on the registry book the name of the political party whose primary ticket each voter, voting at such primary election, voted by writing opposite the name of each of said voters in a column prepared for that purpose in each political party, as, for example, writing the letter 'D' for Democratic party and the letter 'R' for Republican party, the letter 'P' for Prohibition party, and in like manner for other political parties."

No person can vote at the primaries unless he is first registered.

The act continues:

"After each registry the voter shall ask the board of election for the party primary ticket he desires to vote, and thereupon shall receive one ticket of the kind demanded; the said voter shall retire with said ticket to one of the booths or compartments, and thereon with black pencil cross the names of all persons on said ballot except those for whom he desires to vote; nothing herein shall prevent any voter from voting for any person whose name is not on his party ticket by writing the same thereon; while in the booth or compartment he shall fold the ballot so as to expose the indorsement on the back thereof, and on emerging from the booth shall proceed directly to the ballot box of his political party and there deliver his ballot, folded as aforesaid, to the proper member of the board of election, who shall forthwith, in the presence of the voter, deposit the same in the ballot box provided the political party of each voter, unless challenged or disqualified (as already provided).

MAY BUILD BRICK PAVEMENT

COUNCILMANIC STREET COMMITTEE CONSIDERING AN EXPERIMENT.

Talk of Paving Block on Watchung Avenue, From North Avenue to Second Street.

As an experiment and for the purpose of making a permanent improvement, the Councilmanic street committee is considering the advisability of laying a pavement of vitrified brick on Watchung avenue, between North avenue and Second street, where the changes for the trolley cars are made. The committee has been considering the matter for some time past and several conferences have been held with Mayor Jenkins, as well as with the street railway company. It is estimated that the total cost of the improvement would be about $1,800 and of this amount the city would pay half and the trolley company the other half.

There are many strong points in favor of a vitrified brick pavement and as that one block on Watchung avenue is always muddy in wet weather it is believed that a permanent pavement, such as proposed, would be a great improvement. At the same time it would serve as as object lesson possibly for the ultimate extension of such a pavement.

The estimated cost calls for a first class job with a cement bottom and the best quality of brick. In many respects the vitrified brick is considered more advantageous than the asphalt. The matter will be definitely decided within a short time, when the Council will be asked to take action concerning the improvement.

KEPT IN SECRET.

Marriage of Miss Sadie Mattox and George Newmiller Announced.

After keeping the matter a secret for many months, Miss Sadie Mattox, daughter of Mrs. Sarah Mattox, of Webster place, and George Newmiller, of the same thoroughfare, have announced their marriage. It took place last fall at Bound Brook, mutual friends acting as witnesses. They have taken up their residence with the bride's mother, but expect to go to housekeeping in the near future. Newmiller is a machinist in one of the local factories.

TROTTING MEET.

Arranged to be Held at Plainfield Driving Park July 4.

At a meeting of those interested, held a few days ago, it was decided to hold a race meet on July 4, at the Plainfield Driving Park, under the auspices of the Plainfield Driving Association. Promises of a large number of entries from Morristown, New Brunswick, Elizabeth, Rahway and Woodbridge have been received and it is believed that a strong programme can be presented. There will be both trotting and pacing. Other meetings will be held in the near future to perfect plans for the affair.

DESIGN FOR MEDALS.

Decided Upon for Awards for City High School Battalion.

The design for the hundred per cent. medals to be presented to those members of the City High School battalion who have perfect attendance at all drills and regular meetings has been decided upon and the medals will be made in time to be issued at the prize drill of the battalion June 4. The medals are of bronze, bearing the words "Hundred per cent." and an appropriate latin motto. The medal proper is suspended from a bar bearing the year, "1908." Three bars for permanent ownership and new year bars may be added from year to year as won. Thus far in the term, there are fifteen men eligible to these medals.

The Railroad Employe in this month's issue contains an excellent picture of William Wyckoff, the mayor of Dunellen, who is a passenger brakeman on the New Jersey Central. An interesting sketch of Mr. Wyckoff appears with the picture.

In the later stages mortal skill is unavailing. Nobody can afford to neglect a cold.

DRUM WITH HISTORY

Captured at Bunker Hill by Revolutionary Troops.

It Bears the Scars of Battle, But Retains Its Tone to Perfection—Relic Now Owned by G. A. R. Post.

One of the most valuable historical relics in the United States is an English snare drum, the property of Richard A. Pierce post, G. A. R., of New Bedford, Mass. Several American historical societies have long tried to secure possession of it, for it is of revolutionary fame, and probably is the only one in existence which is associated with the first battle for American independence—Bunker Hill.

It is battle scarred and battered and bears the marks of service in that historic battle, when the men of 1775 determined to no longer stand the oppression of the mother country.

It has been in the family of Levi Smith, of Providence, R. I., until recently, when Israel Smith, Jr., the leader of the famous thirty-third Massachusetts regiment band, now a resident of New Bedford, presented it to the post of which he is a comrade, and it is safe to say that they will not part with it until the great majority of that organization have joined their comrades who sleep in peace. Then it will adorn some conspicuous place in one of the government buildings at Washington.

It descended to Israel Smith, Jr., from his grandsire, Levi Smith, who was drummer boy in one of the Rhode Island companies, which followed the Quaker soldier, Gen. Nathaniel Greene, to Massachusetts, to lend aid to the cause so dear to the heart of every loyal American.

When given to the grandfather of Mr. Smith that gentleman on his first furlough took it with him to his home in Providence, and after repairing a piece of the barrel, which had been knocked out by a bullet and bracing the barrel on the inside, made this relic of Bunker Hill serviceable, and used it during the balance of his term as a revolutionary soldier.

The grandfather was an expert on such an instrument, as was also his son, and it is due to their knowledge that this British drum is to-day preserved for the present generation. With a continuance of the care which is given it, it will long remain an object of interest to all students of American history.

It is this fact which has caused the leading historical societies of the country, having knowledge of its existence, to make overtures to the Smith family for its purchase. It is to-day the equal in tone of any of the modern snare drums. Like that of Cremona violin, its tone cannot be excelled. Recently the venerable band leader manipulated the sticks in the presence of a Boston Globe reporter, sounding the various beats in army life during the civil war, which is more than the snare drum is in use now. Inside of the barrel, which, by the way, is cracked nearly half around its circumference, can be seen the name, although somewhat obliterated, of the maker, whose place of business was in London. A silver plate descriptive of the drum's importance, has been placed on the barrel, which reads as follows:

"This British drum was captured at Bunker Hill, and assigned by lot to Levi Smith, a drummer in the continental army. Descended to his son, Israel Smith, a soldier of the war of 1812. Descended to his son, Israel Smith, leader of the band of the Thirty-third Massachusetts Infantry, the headquarters band which marched with Sherman from Atlanta to the sea in 1864, and presented by him to R. A. Pierce post, 190, department of Massachusetts, G. A. R."

The story, as told by Mr. Smith, who, when a lad, got it from his grandfather, is a brief one. The lad who carried the drum when the Britishers made their first attack on Breed's hill, was shot down with the first volley, and the barrel of his drum almost riddled with bullets. After the second assault, and while King George's troops were being rallied for their third and successful attack, one of the members of the Rhode Island company in question went over the intrenchments and carried back with him this relic.

Taken to the company after the British had taken the hill, the men in the company drew lots for its possession, and afterward, by unanimous consent, gave it to the Rhode Island drummer boy, Levi Smith.

At the beginning of the last century, Levi Smith, the grandfather, gave it to his eldest boy, Israel Jr., and he had it redecorated by S. Brown, of Providence, who adorned it with coats of arms of the United States and Rhode Island, while near the top were the initial letters of his father, "L. S."

THEATRICAL.

One of the most inspiring numbers in any of the numerous musical comedies that have been seen in New York this season is said to be "The Old Jay Bird" song in "The Sultan of Sulu," George Ade's musical satire that seems destined to run out the year at Wallack's Theatre. Recently this number has been made more effective by the introduction of a complete fife and drum corps, giving it a military coloring of the kind that in the Spanish War time would have brought the audience to its feet with cheers. "Since I First Met You," "K-o-m-o-r-s-o" and "My Sulu Lulu Loo," however, remain the great song hits that are whistled and sung by the crowds each night as they pour out of Wallack's Theatre on Broadway.

The extension of the engagement of "Pretty Peggy" at the Herald Square Theatre, New York, gives fresh indication of the remarkable success achieved by Grace George. Arrangements for this extension have been completed in the face of such difficulties as show beyond question the largeness of the business being done. As a matter of fact, the Herald Square is crowded every night by persons who delight in the girlish art of Miss George and in the brilliant stage pictures fashioned by Wm. A. Brady. "Pretty Peggy" itself is a charmingly sympathetic story of the love of David Garrick for Peg Woffington and of the tragic ending of that historical romance. Given the delightful environment mentioned, it is worthy of the support being bestowed so generously. The engagement will last until May 23, and matinees are given Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Novelty in construction and in situations are two of the strong points offered in "The Runaways," the new musical comedy production of Sam. S. Shubert and Nixon and Zimmerman. While these enterprising and energetic managers scored the musical comedy success of a score of years with "A Chinese Honeymoon," they assert with much confidence that "The Runaways" will show itself to be superior in the number of players, in lavishness as to costuming and scenic effects and in the number of pronounced song hits. Including the augmented orchestra, the managers will have 160 players and artisans to fittingly offer their newest attraction to theatregoers at the cosy and comfortable Casino.

The seventy-seventh performance of "The Earl of Pawtucket" at the Manhattan Theatre Saturday night, April 18, closed the largest week in the history of the play. It marked one of the greatest weeks ever known to the theatre, and decided Managers Hasting Cort Fiske and Klaw & Erlanger as to the wisdom of continuing the play at its present quarters for months to come. The mere announcement of this fact has given the advance sale of seats a new impetus, and the public has made requisition as far as four weeks in advance, which is the limit for the takings in reserve. So quickly has the reputation of the play spread and so pronounced has been the verdict that its equal as a comedy has not been seen in New York for a decade that now amusement-goers whether belonging to the metropolis or to other cities or towns, recognizes as a happy necessity a visit to the Manhattan Theatre during a stay in New York. The matinees have become extraordinarily popular, the Wednesday afternoon performance having become a favorite with family parties residing in suburban districts.

The great patronage which has been bestowed on "Mr. Blue Beard" at the Knickerbocker Theatre in New York since its premiere in January, is the most effective and sincere public endorsement that any theatrical entertainment has ever received in this country, for none other has ever scored such an extraordinary record of attendance. At every performance it has been greeted by nearly 1,000 people, and the capacity of the house. No higher commendation could possibly be accorded it, for it represents the verdict of fully 160,000 persons to date—people who recommend it to all their friends as a delightful entertainment, teaming with fun, music and novelty. "Mr. Blue Beard," notwithstanding its tremendous success in New York, is nearing the end of its run. As soon as warm weather sets in, although it will undoubtedly still be playing to the capacity of the Knickerbocker Theatre, Klaw & Erlanger will close its engagement, as they did "Ben-Hur" and "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast" in the very height of their successes. This firm has always been opposed to continuing runs of attractions whereby hundreds of people are employed into the heated term because of the great strain on the company in giving performances in hot weather on a crowded stage.

PRINCESS IN GENEVA.

Even the Prudes Can Hardly Resist Her Charm.

Impression Crown Princess Louise of Saxony and M. Giron Made Upon a Woman Correspondent Who Met Them.

A correspondent of Modern Society writes as follows from Genoa concerning the crown princess of Saxony:

"Last week I took a short trip from Lausanne to Geneva, and spent two nights at the Hotel d'Angleterre to try to see the crown princess of Saxony, who is now sitting the passions of the population of the town in which she has taken refuge. Some are romantically for her, while others are virtuously against her.

"I thought that I should have a good deal of difficulty in catching sight of her, but I met with a piece of good luck. On the very day of my arrival, as I was sitting in the hall looking at a time table with one eye and watching the staircase with the other, I saw a man's hand stretched out toward me, and heard a jovial: 'Tiens! How do you do?' It was Maitre Adrien Lachenal, ex-president of the confederation and chosen advocate of the princess, who was coming to pay his daily visit to his client, for, as can easily be believed, they have a good deal to talk about together. I was obliged to meet him, and was going to ask him how he could help me in my desire to see the princess, when I heard a rustling of silks, a tinkling of chains, bangles and chatelaines, and, with a light step, the lady came in our direction.

"'Ah, Maitre Lachenal,' she cried, threatening him with her finger, 'Louis XIV. was very nearly kept waiting, but, I have been really kept waiting for you! Truly, it serves me right; at least that's what they would say at home!' And she laughed like a girl. Maitre Lachenal bowed repeatedly and was profuse in his explanations, which satisfied me very well, for it gave time to look comfortably at the princess. She was all smiles and looked just as much at ease as if she had not just upset two courts, a few nations and become the talk of the world. She wore a jacket of sealskin reaching to her knees and lined with pink flowered silk, and on her very beautiful head of hair was a small toque of blue velvet, trimmed with fur.

"She declared that she was going out, Maitre Lachenal or no Maitre Lachenal, as she wanted to match some stuffs before dark. Then she looked at me and said, 'A friend of yours, monsieur?'

"'Yes, your—'

"She stopped him short. 'A lady of Geneva?'

"She stretched out to me a not very small hand. Then, without waiting for an answer, she went on, with a beseeching look. 'I should so much like to know a lady here who would be kind to me and help me to find the best shops and the nicest places in the town.'

"I turned quite red with disappointment, for I should have been delighted to know more of her and go about with her, but I was afraid that some among my numerous friends in Geneva would disapprove, and I dared not please myself. So I stammered a few words of excuse.

"At this moment the now illustrious young M. Giron joined us, declaring that he was ready to go out. This seemed to me rather de mauvais genre, but if a man could ever be worthy of so much sacrifice on the part of a princess, he is the one. Without having the insipid beauty of an Adonis, he has the most pleasant and gentlemanly presence, being tall, dark, with a silky, fine mustache, splendid eyes and teeth, and an irresistible air of amiable distinction."

The father of the former Crown Princess Louise of Saxony is now willing to become reconciled to her on the following conditions: Absolute separation from Giron. The grand duke of Tuscany to fix her place of residence and select her entourage. It is regarded as certain that the princess will accept the ultimatum.

DUNELLEN'S POSTMASTER DIED LAST THURSDAY

After a Long Illness, Adam Dealaman Passed Quietly Away at His Home.

FAMILY AROUND HIM

WORKED HIS WAY FROM A GROCER'S CLERK TO A PROPRIETOR.

In Business in Newark and Dunellen —Was One Time the President of Dunellen Borough Council— Other Official Positions.

Dunellen, April 24—Following an illness of nearly two years, Adam Dealaman, one of Dunellen's leading citizens and its postmaster, passed away at his home on Washington avenue, at 10:30 last night. The end came quietly and without suffering while all the members of the family were gathered about the bedside. Death was caused by an affection of the liver.

Adam Dealaman was a self-made man in the strictest term of the word. He was born in 1854 in New York State and by his own indomitable courage and stick-to-itiveness, worked his way up from a grocer's clerk to proprietor of his own store in his own building. He also found time to serve the community as a public official and his methods were always for the interests of the people who elected him.

When first branching out as a grocery proprietor, he conducted a store at Newark but afterward returned to Dunellen. Within a short time he built the present large store at the corner of North avenue and Washington street and personally supervised the business until his health compelled him to retire in favor of his son, William Dealaman, who formed a partnership with John Fenner.

During his residence in Dunellen he was elected to several offices, among them being president of the Borough Council. He was fearless in the discharge of his duty and gained many friends by it. During President McKinley's first term he was appointed postmaster and was re-appointed in 1901, the term to expire next December. He was a Republican in politics.

Mr. Dealaman was a member of Court Dunellen, I. O. F., William G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., Anchor Lodge, F. and A. M., and Defender Fire Company. He is survived by a wife and four children, Miss Josie Dealaman, William, Kenneth and Adam, Jr. He was married twice, his second wife being Miss Margaret Teel.

MORE CARS PROMISED; CHANGES IN FARES

PRESIDENT - ELECT M'CARTER SAYS COMPANY WILL CATER TO PEOPLE.

Big Order With the Stephenson Company for New Cars—Other Plans of New Concern—Offices to be Located in Newark.

The proposed traction merger, according to rumor, will probably result in many changes in the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey trolley lines, which concern operates cars in this city. Among the changes which are planned, it is said that the fare from this city to Newark by trolley will be twenty cents each way, and from Elizabeth to this city fifteen cents a single trip. Instead of collecting three fares as at present on the line from here to Elizabeth, the entire fare, according to unofficial reports, will be collected by the conductor at the start of the trip and conductor will give in return a ticket which he will punch at different points along the line.

President Elect McCarter said in an interview a few days ago that he intended giving the people just as good a trolley service as it is possible to give. "Instead of being a subject of antagonism," he said, "we hope by catering to the demands of the public, to win public confidence and commendation."

Now that the majority of the stock of the various companies affected by the combination has been exchanged for trust certificates the incorporation of the $35,000,000 concern will be effected this week. No one knows so far what the title of the concern will be nor who will be the incorporators. The headquarters of the corporation will be in Newark in a building which will be erected at the corner of Broad and Canal streets.

It is the intention of the new concern, as soon as the incorporation papers are filed, to put on more cars. The John Stephenson Company, of Elizabeth, is now working night and day on large orders which have been placed with it and cars will be ready for delivery in a few weeks.

The names of those who have been mentioned for the position of general superintendent of the corporation of which Former Attorney General T. N. McCarter will be the head are Dudley Farrand, of the United Electric Company, of Newark and Thomas Barr, a well known railway man. He is now general manager of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey lines and was once superintendent of the horse car lines in Elizabeth.

These improvements, which while based on unofficial reports, are being considered by the new management, will affect Plainfield and gives assurances of an improved trolley in this city, especially between this city and Elizabeth.

'PHONE TALK.

Representative of Bell Company Explains His Side to Members of the Common Council.

Mr. McNulty, a representative of the New York & New Jersey Telephone Company, recently appeared before a committee from the Common Council for the purpose of showing the disadvantages of having two telephone companies in Plainfield.

Mr. McNulty argued that he did not believe that it would better the local service or be of any great advantage to people in Plainfield who have need of a telephone. He said that it is the object of the company to constantly improve the service in Plainfield and that the company he represents intends to do all that is possible toward giving Plainfield service equal to the best in the country.

Mr. McNulty explained in detail the various points of disadvantage and he was listened to most attentively by the Councilmen.

As yet it is not known whether a second franchise will be granted or not. The Council does not intend to act hastily in the matter, preferring to gain all the necessary information on the subject first.

Letters from Women

Cured by the use of "Kodol are received daily Their troubles nearly all begin with indigestion or other stomach disorder.

If the food you eat fails to give strength to your body, it is because the juices secreted by the stomach and digestive organs are inadequate to transform the nutrient properties of the food into blood. That is indigestion. The system is deprived of the amount of nourishment required to keep up the strength, and the result is that one or more of the following symptoms gradually grows weak, and then weaker, until finally it is diseased. Here a great mistake is made. That of treating the diseased organ. The symptoms of the food mass this very mistake. Why should they? It is so easy to see that the trouble is not there.

Kodol Cures

This famous remedy puts the stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition so that rich, red blood is sent coursing through the veins and arteries of every muscle, tissue and fiber throughout every organ of the entire body, and by Nature's law of health, full strength and vigor is soon restored to each.

Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders.

I have used Kodol for nearly two months after each meal and it is the only remedy that gave relief from the terrible pains I endured. After a time I would take it but once a day, and now, while I keep a bottle handy, I seldom need it, as it has cured me. Mrs. J. W. COOLSBOURN, Mills Center, N. Y.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 3, "Confidence in God"—Text, I Cor. iii, 21-23; I Tim. vi, 17; II Tim. i, 12.

"I am persuaded that He is able to guard that which I have committed unto Him against that day."

Distrust is paralyzing to effort. This is especially true in Christian living. There is a certain kind of doubting which is akin to expectancy, which anticipates new discoveries of truth, which eagerly awaits enlargement of opportunity, which outgrows old experiences as it thrills with deeper emotions and enters with fuller devotion into the work of God. Such doubting is incident to expansion of nature and is a surrendering of the less that the larger life may be grasped. This is a questioning after larger truth and warmer life.

Distrust is of different parentage. It questions the truth of the old, suspecting it to be false. It yields the present opportunity because it has lost heart in the past.

Impulses have grown cold. Passionate love and heroic courage have died because confidence in the object of devotion has been overthrown.

The nerve of all high achievement lies in perfect trust in some object of devotion. The supreme object of attachment is personal, because we are persons. And of all personalities the chiefest among men is the Lord Jesus Christ. From whatever point of view we study Him, He attracts us as that is noblest in human nature and gives an aim and a goal worthy of our highest efforts, our entire devotion. The more we consider the life which Jesus calls us to live, the nobler and more attractive it becomes. The more we think of Him in His love for us and His work on earth and now in heaven for us the more completely does He satisfy and fill all the soul's needs and longings for a worthy object of love. No other element in our nature is deeper seated or more characteristic than the craving for a worthy object of devotion—some one whom we may serve and for whose sake we may sacrifice ourselves; one to whom we may give all and from whom we may receive all in return. The highest blessedness of being is to find Him who answers all the soul's cravings of goodness and affection and to rest in unshaken confidence in His favor and guidance.

He must be love,
If love be ours,
Faith and unfaith can ne'er be equal powers:
Unfaith in aught is lack of faith in all;
Then trust me all in all
Or not at all.

Paul had found the basal truth of the spiritual life—entire confidence in Christ for this world and for that which is to come.

Like precious faith is needful for us if we would be and do and endure for the right.

The Last Evil to Overcome.

The love of self in our natural good is the last evil that is overcome, and when the Lord would tell us this He wrote in His great book of the soul that only Og, king of Bashan, remained of the remnants of giants. St. Paul perceived the same truth when he wrote, "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." For the love of self is essential death and is the last of the race of giants to be destroyed. But it is the loving purpose of the Lord to regenerate the whole natural mind. Not only to teach its intellectual side to look up to Him and His word as the source of all intelligence, but to destroy the reign of the Og of self love in the good affections of the natural mind, and thus to bring the whole region of the natural affections to look to Him as the source of all good.—Helper.

Confessing a Wrong.

One of the most difficult of all things is for a man openly to confess that he has been wrong and make just reparation for injury done, whether ignorantly or willfully. It is such a rare thing to see that people are filled with astonishment when they find one so conscientious and honorable as to do it and do it freely. One will say to another, "I could not have done that," or "I would not have done it before I would have done that." They only show by such remarks how much inferior they are. For there is nothing more honorable in God's sight than the confession, open, honest confession, of sin one to another and to the courts of God's house. It is the dogged persistence in a conscious wrong that God hates.—Christian Instructor.

The Christian Outlook.

The Christian outlook is always hopeful. Christianity is conquering because it is divinely alive. It is the thought of Christ steadily growing into form by the power of Christ. It is a new thing in human hearts, creating ideals and institutions. It conquers error by light, selfishness by love, despair by faith, the native downward tendency of human nature by an infinitely mightier upward tendency resulting from the incarnation.—Northern Christian Advocate.

The Eye of Faith.

Between us and His visible presence—between us and that glorified Redeemer who now sitteth at the right hand of God—that cloud still rolls. But the eye of faith can pierce it; the incense of true prayer can rise above it; through it the dews of blessing can descend.—Farrar.

Whatever the Temptation.

Be honest with yourself, whatever the temptation; say nothing to others that you do not think and play no tricks with your own mind. Of all the evil spirits abroad at this hour in the world insincerity is the most dangerous.—James Anthony Froude.

LITERARY.

The open air number of Leslie's Monthly justifies its name by some remarkable out-of-door articles on the modern sailor, the Canadian frontier police, the first perilous ascent of Mount Bryce, and the life in a trout stream, besides a rattling baseball story and a story of characteristic sentiment by Henry Harland, who wrote the "Cardinal's Snuff Box."

In "What the Trout Stream Saw" the illustrations by Charles Livingston Bull and the text by W. D. Hulbert, supplement each other effectively. "Life on a Liner" is the story of a college man who shipped first as cook's mate on an ocean liner, and later as oiler and again as steward on smaller ships, learning at first hand what the modern sailor is and does. Agnes C. Laut's "Tales of the Northwest Police" take up a quite different kind of hardy open air adventure, and the thrilling narrative of the climbing of Mt. Bryce, by James Outram, one of the most famous of mountain climbers, is a great story of a perilous sport.

"The Autobiography of a Shop Girl" is continued successfully in this number. Beginning, "81," the story of a Yale-Harvard baseball game, stands out among the fiction, and Ellis Parker Butler's "Romance Trust," amongst the Marginalia.

Ethel A. Pennell's sketch, "In Chaucer's Youth," in the May St. Nicholas, is based on an unfamiliar historic fact. Chaucer, writer of verse, is well known to every school girl and boy; but not every grown-up, even of fair general information, knows that the lad Geoffrey Chaucer was a favorite page in the court of King Edward III, and later a squire to Prince Lionel. "In Chaucer's Youth" tells the pretty story of the ready wit and quick courage which advanced young Geoffrey from lady's page to prince's squire.

Hermann Klein, the London critic, whose "Modern Musical Celebrities" will treat in the May Century of Adelina Patti, regrets that "The Queen of Song" will not be heard in opera during her farewell tour in the United States next winter. Because of this intention, he says, "the American public will not have an opportunity to realize the full extent of that amazing development of her dramatic genius to which I have more especially made reference. But Patti is always Patti; and, whatever the conditions, her final coming will be the occasion of a rapturous welcome from the citizens of the country in which she was reared, and which can almost claim the honor of having given her birth."

Big Chorus for Opera.

The production of the "Pirates of Penzance," which is to be given at the Casino, May 21, under the direction of William Holmes, will have one of the largest choruses yet appearing in a local amateur opera. It will number fifty-three trained vocalists, all of whom are experienced in singing operatic parts.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 3—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—What does the parable of the prodigal son teach us?—Luke xv, 11-24.

It is strange that no playwright has ever dramatized this pearl of parables. It contains a "plot" of surpassing interest, which would be always true in every age and surrounding of reality. It has four scenes—the departure from the old home, the fast life in a far country, the sudden fall and poverty and the joyous return to the father's house.

The Saviour, I believe, had three lessons to teach from this parable. These are embodied in the three prominent characters—the elder brother, the prodigal son and the father.

First Lesson.—The story was told that Christians who live in the Father's house might take warning from the selfishness and jealousy and anger of the elder brother. There is danger that, like the elder brother, we are in the Father's house simply for what we can get out of it. He shows himself to be unkind, devoid of sympathy and charity and intensely selfish. It is possible that we may act in such a manner to the wayward men and women who are out in the world, far from the Father's house, that they will deem it too much of the elder brother's spirit in the church of today. We should eradicate it.

Second Lesson.—The prodigal himself teaches the evil of sin, but the possibility of forgiveness and pardon. This is shown in six steps.

First Step, Alienation.—The father with his two sons was living pleasantly in the home. This is a picture of the ideal relation between God and his human children—perfection on one side and obedience on the other. Some evil spirit crept into this younger son's heart and alienated his affection and obedience. How frequently it happens that we begin to get cold and indifferent to God and the church, and this feeling grows until we are alienated from our Heavenly Father. We should nip these feelings in the bud.

Second Step, Degeneration.—Evil thoughts cannot remain in the heart without producing evil deeds. "He went into a far country." We think we can get away from God and then be free to do evil. "He spent his substance in riotous living." He gambled, drove fast horses, became a race track tenters and card parties, played billiards, treated his friends and got to the bottom of his pocket in a short time.

Third Step, Degradation.—"He began to be in want." Sin is the most expensive thing possible. Everything good—virtue, honor, character, even his gay friends. "There arose a mighty famine in the land." Of course! Did you ever know it to fail? So long as you had plenty of money, your friends had plenty. Wake up some morning without a dollar and try to borrow, and you will find a money famine.

Fourth Step, Reflection.—Poverty, want and hunger lead a man to reflect. Sin is insanity. Reflection restores sanity. He came back to his former self. Reflection is the first step to repentance.

Fifth Step, Resolution.—"I will arise and go to my father." The "I will" was the taproot of his resolution. His will had taken him away from home; now it must bring him back.

Sixth Step, Reconciliation.—The boy acknowledged his sin and took the blame on himself. His father gladly received him and forgave him, and a complete reconciliation was made. In this story hope is held up for all.

Third Lesson.—The parable was told that we might fasten our eyes upon the Father and in Him get a glimpse of a loving, tender and compassionate God. The sweetest, grandest character of the parable is the father, and he is a picture of our Heavenly Father.

A Christian Endeavor Creed.

The Rev. Dr. John Henry Barrows at one time stated the following, characterizing it as his "Christian Endeavor creed:"

That the ironclad pledge is the sheet anchor of success and the essential element in continued prosperity. It is a great pleasure to go to a prayer meeting and find the people there.

I believe that the society changes what is many a pastor's chief burden and anxiety—the Christian training of the young—into his chiefest joy.

I believe that it augments his knowledge and love of his young people and their knowledge and love of him beyond any other known means of securing such results.

I believe that under its happy workings I can hear my young people grow in grace as you can hear the corn grow on the Illinois prairies.

Christian Endeavorers in India.

Rev. F. S. Hatch, secretary for the United Society of Christian Endeavor for Burma, India, and Ceylon, formerly of Monson, Mass., has now completed his first year of service in that capacity, involving 15,000 miles of travel up and down the empire in every kind of conveyance and recently visiting the Telegu country. Mr. Hatch writes that in three months 10,000 have presented themselves for baptism.

SWEET VOICES IN QUARTETTE

ENTERTAINMENT AT Y. M. C. A. BY SWEDISH LADIES' QUARTETTE.

Recitations by Miss Edith M. Norton Were Well Received—One More Entertainment.

The Swedish Ladies' Quartette came to this city last Thursday and entertained a large Plainfield audience at the Y. M. C. A. in one of their entertaining musicales. It was one of the supplemental course entertainments of the Y. M. C. A. and was one of the best which has been given in this city so far this season. This marks the last but one of the supplemental course entertainments for the year.

The quartette is composed of four very attractive Swedish women with wonderful voices. The melody is perfect and their stage effect is very striking. The singers were: Miss Ida Thompson, first soprano and pianist; Miss Beata Salte, second soprano; Miss Anna Heden, first alto; and Miss Elsie Buford, second alto. Miss Buford's voice is remarkably deep and she has a wonderful range of tone. Several of the selections rendered by the quartette were given in costumes of different nations.

Miss Edith M. Norton, reciter, won much applause during the evening with her recitations of a humorous and dramatic nature. Miss Norton is a very talented young woman and it is plainly evident that she has thoroughly mastered elocution. She was very fine indeed.

PROGRESS OF GOOD ROADS

IDEA OF NATIONAL AID IS FINDING MUCH FAVOR.

Recent Bad Weather Made Many Roads Impassable and Emphasized Need.

The leaven of road improvement seems to be working in all parts of the United States. An eastern man who has recently taken a trip through Texas says the enthusiasm with which the people have taken up the "good roads idea" is wonderful. In some counties they are in danger of "going wild" on the subject. Funds are being raised mainly by issue of county bonds.

In Pennsylvania, the State aid idea has taken firm hold. The plan just adopted is for the State, the county, and the township to cooperate in the work of building and improving the roads. The State is to pay two-thirds of the expense, and the county and township in which the work is done each one-sixth of the expense. The State has made available for this purpose $6,500,000 to be expended during the next few years.

The principle involved in the State aid plan is exactly the same as that involved in the scheme for National aid which has developed such popularity recently. The fundamental idea of both is that road improvement is not merely a matter of local interest and responsibility, but a matter of interest and concern to the whole people; or, to put it another way, road building is coming to be viewed as a species of "internal improvement" belonging in the same class as river and harbor improvements.

Another reason why National and State aid are becoming so popular is the realization that, unless something of the kind is adopted, the burden of bad roads, like the poor, "will be always with us." The bottomless roads of the country constitute a sort of "Slough of Despond" in which the people are destined to flounder until some one comes along to help them out. In fact the present system of "improving the roads in many localities is a burden which the local population is wholly unable to bear. It is believed that whenever the State or the Nation reaches out a helping hand to such communities, they will grasp it and bend all their energies to the great work of improving their highways, but they will never undertake the job without help from the outside.

The frequent rains of the past few weeks have made the roads almost impassable in a majority of the local communities throughout the eastern half of the United States. Perhaps this is one of the seasons why the good roads idea is uppermost in so many minds.

BRUNSWICK HEARS OF REASONS FOR VETO

Mayor Viehmann Outlines Why He Objected to Granting of 'Phone Franchise.

COUNCIL IS REBUKED

SCATHING COMMENT FOR RUSHING THE ORDINANCE THROUGH.

Believes, Because One Council Failed to Do Its Duty, Another Council Should Not Make Same Error—Substance of Message.

The ordinance passed by the Common Council of New Brunswick, granting the Central New Jersey Telephone Company, which company has applied for a franchise here, the right to lay conduits in the streets of that city and to install another telephone system there has been vetoed by Mayor Viehmann. While the people expected that the Mayor would veto the ordinance they hardly expected to see their Council rebuked in such scathing terms as the message of the Mayor contained when he practically consigned the ordinance, unsigned by him, to the municipal waste basket.

He said in his message that the applicants for the franchise were only organized into a company during the month of February which, with a capital of only $25,000, says it will start a competing system. The Mayor says that at the public hearing and at other times representatives have stated that they will provide a telephone system in that city for $12 a year and made many other promises. Mayor Viehmann says in his report that on the evening when the ordinance was so hurriedly passed one of the representatives of the company stated that he wished to emphasize the advantage of a competing company and further stated that the city was to be given twenty-four hour telephone service. In the face of all these things, Mayor Viehmann says, they rushed through the Council an ordinance giving them a franchise which does not compel them to make good any of the promises they made. The Mayor further says:

"I can come to no conclusion except the conclusion that the representations made to you have been wilfully and deliberately false and have been made for the purpose of deceiving you and securing from you a franchise ordinance the terms of which you have not understood or comprehended, and which were so loose and manifestly to the detriment of the interests of our city that I am sure had you fully understood its provisions and effect you would never have sanctioned it with your votes."

Mayor Viehmann sounds the key note of his administration when he says that the Council is living in the present and not in the past and because of the fact that some of the Board of Aldermen in the past have been lax in the granting of valuable franchises, it is no reason why that laxity should continue at the present time.

The report further states that the haste in which the ordinance was railroaded through that body arouses suspicion and says:

"You were elected to represent your people—to secure benefits for the people of the city of New Brunswick, and to give away the rights and valuable privileges possessed by the city without securing adequate return therefor.

"This company comes to our city and by various means and artifices, hurriedly, and in a manner which should have aroused suspicion, urges the passage by your body of an ordinance granting a franchise which is entirely at variance with the promises and inducements verbally made by them."

Mayor Viehmann says that the franchise is worth $60,000 and that the Council has given everything and has kept nothing, and asks, "has it been given for honest purposes?" The franchise, under the ordinance does not require them to start work at any specified time and it even gives permission to the company to defer operations on the work for ever.

Closing his message the Mayor says that the city of New Brunswick is at present at the mercy of companies to which valuable franchises have been given instead of placing the companies where they would be forced to serve the demands of the community.

CHURCH HAS BALANCE; DOESN'T OWE PENNY

Excellent Showing Made at Annual Meeting of Congregational Church Last Night.

WOMEN GAVE DINNER

IT PRECEDED THE ANNUAL MEETINGS OF CHURCH AND SOCIETY.

Goodly Sum for Benevolences—Election of Officers—Joseph E. Morse Again Made President of Board of Trustees.

A dinner and the annual meeting combined to make the Congregational church a wonderfully busy place last Friday. The repast was excellent and the showing at the business session was equally satisfactory.

The dinner prior to the annual meeting was a decided success. It was given under the auspices of the Women's Association of the church and nearly 150 people were served from 6 until 8 o'clock. Long tables were arranged in the parlors and they were prettily garnished with flowers, including pink and white roses, these colors predominating. There was also a flower and candy booth arranged in colors of pink and white. Most of the flowers used were furnished by J. I. Brower, the New York florist, and they added greatly to the general scene of beauty.

The dinner was a very appetizing one, the menu comprising lots of good things, including meats, salads, fruits, cake, etc. The affair was in charge of Mrs. John V. Beekman, chairman, assisted by Mrs. Frank A. Weeks, Mrs. Alexander Millar, Mrs. William McIntosh, Mrs. Eugene M. Laing, Mrs. Henry Romer, Mrs. Emil Messerschmidt, Mrs. W. A. Millard, Mrs. Floyd Fuller, Mrs. Charles L. Goodrich, Mrs. L. B. Morgan, Mrs. D. Foster Updike and Mrs. John M. Whiton. In addition to these persons the following waitresses assisted: The Misses Jessie McIntosh, Ethel McIntosh, Rhoda Culbertson, Carrie Fuller, Nellie Winckler, Reva Wilkins, Ethel Millar, Ethel Weseman, Margaret Weseman, Marion Winant, Harriett Messerschmidt and Edith Robinson.

At the flower and candy booth were Mrs. J. R. Martin, Miss Marion D. Woodcock and Miss Elsie DeR. Suffern. Those who poured tea and coffee were Mrs. J. A. Robinson, Mrs. Alexander Millar, Mrs. Wm. VanAlstyne and Mrs. John M. Whitop.

While the dinner was being served the guests enjoyed an informal programme of piano selections by Mrs. Ernest A. Millard and Mr. Kenyon. The music helped to make the affair a delightful one socially. The proceeds from the dinner will be used for general church purposes.

Following the dinner there was held the annual meeting of the church, the church society and the board of trustees. At the first meeting Rev. C. L. Goodrich, the pastor, presided and D. Foster Updike was chosen clerk. After the opening exercises there was received the report of the official board. This showed a gain in membership of ten on confession and five by letter, while the losses included four by death and seven by letter, making a net gain of nine. The total membership of the church is 382. The total amount of money received during the year ending April 1 for benevolences was $2,181.

D. Foster Updike was elected clerk. L. B. Morgan and A. C. LaBoyteaux were elected deacons, while Alexander Millar, H. C. Nemer and George F. Fisher were elected members of the official board.

Several amendments to the constitution were offered and laid over for action at a future meeting. The matter of a schedule of benevolences for the coming year was referred to the official board with full power.

The question of introducing individual communion cups was also referred to the official board of the church for investigation. The board will report later in the matter. It was voted that the church should be closed the last three Sundays in August, after which this meeting adjourned.

The meeting of the church society followed when W. B. Wadsworth was elected chairman and D. Foster Updike was chosen clerk. Morris C. VanAradale, as church treasurer, presented a report showing the receipts for the year to be $8,326 and the disbursements $8,306.67, leaving a balance of $19.33 with all bills and salaries paid.

Those elected trustees are as follows: Morris C. VanArsdale, F. J. Weeks, Alexander Millar, E. L. Suffern, C. E. Steiner, Everett L. Morgan and J. E. Morse. Phillip L. Suffern was elected auditor and D. Foster Updike church clerk. At this meeting several amendments to the constitution were offered and laid over for action at a meeting to be called for the purpose.

The question of pew rents against envelope system was debated at some length and a resolution that the official board be instructed to prepare a system of pew rents was voted down.

After the adjournment of this meeting, the board of trustees met and organized as follows: President, J. E. Morse; secretary, E. L. Morgan; treasurer, M. C. VanArsdale. The following chairmen of committees were appointed, the balance will be announced later: Church property, Morris C. VanArsdale; music, Frank A. Weeks; pews and sitting, Charles E. Steiner.

GOLFERS OUT AT HILLSIDE

MUCH INTEREST TAKEN IN PLAY FOR GOLF COMMITTEE CUP.

Through a Misunderstanding the Standing Was Changed—C. Westley Abbott Low Man.

The delightful weather of Saturday attracted a large number of enthusiasts to the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course. While only a comparatively small number contested for the Golf Committee cup there were many more out enjoying the game. The contest for the cup is already attracting much interest and the fact that several players have already have scored points predicts a lively competition before the close of the season. There has been a change in the standing for the cup. Howard Wright being obliged to lose the five and one half points he made this season. This is through a misunderstanding and Mr. Wright accepts the change cheerfully.

Saturday C. Westley Abbott won first honors and H. W. Beebe won the next two points, while H. R. Stockton and Dudley H. Barrows divided the one remaining point between them. Augustus R. Fisk now leads for the cup with four points, while H. R. Stockton and C. Westley Abbott are tied with three points each for second honors.

ROOSEVELT IN IOWA

He Praises Secretary Wilson's Good Work.

PRESIDENTIAL KISSES FOR BABIES.

Crosses the State Amid Enthusiastic Thousands and at the Capital Exhorts Americans to Good Citizenship.

OTTUMWA, Ia., April 29.—President Roosevelt dashed across the state of Iowa yesterday and was everywhere met by large and enthusiastic crowds. His speechmaking began at 7 o'clock in the morning, when he made a brief stop at Shenandoah, and his last speech was delivered here shortly after 8 o'clock at night before thousands of people.

His speech here was preceded by a short drive through the city, although his train was late and did not arrive until after dark. He spoke of the good work Secretary Wilson has done in the field of agriculture.

The president had as his guests during the day Governor Cummins and Secretary Shaw and for a part of the day Congressmen Hull and Hepburn. He spent the night here, leaving at 4:30 o'clock this morning for Keokuk, and will arrive at St. Louis this afternoon shortly after 4 o'clock.

One of the largest crowds that has greeted the president since his trip began was waiting for him at Des Moines in the afternoon. He was taken for a long drive through the city and stopped for a moment to address the Mystic Shriners, who were holding a convention there. He then was driven to the capitol, where he made an extended address on good citizenship, incidentally paying a tribute to Congressman Hull for his efforts in securing the new militia law. At Des Moines the president kissed a number of babies. During the drive four mothers, each with a baby in her arms, approached his carriage and handed him bouquets of flowers. They then held the babies up to be kissed, and the president did not disappoint them.

One of the features of the day was the large number of school children that greeted the president. At every place he stopped and at many places where the train did not stop the little people were congregated, waving small American flags. This feature pleased the president very much, and he referred to the children several times.

Stops were made at Shenandoah, Clarinda, Sharpsburg, Van Wert, Osceola, Des Moines, Oskaloosa and Ottumwa. The president is bearing the strain of the trip splendidly, and his face has not yet lost the tan it acquired during his two weeks in Yellowstone park.

The strikers claim that unless a speedy settlement shall be arranged the entire plant will be tied up.

Strongest Man in College World.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 29.—Fred Foster, Harvard's strong man, has just made a remarkable record under Dr. Sargent's new strength test, his figures being 160,000 foot pounds more than the old record. D. Tyng, the Princeton strong man of last year, tried to equal Foster's figures, but failed, so that the latter is undoubtedly the strongest man in the college world. His grand total was 330,213 foot pounds.

FRANCHISE TAX LAW

The Act Upheld by Court of Appeals.

APPELLATE DECISION IS REVERSED.

Judge Vann Writes Opinion, Which Was Unanimous—Home Rule Is Not Violated—New York Corporations Must Pay.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 29.—The special franchise tax law has been declared constitutional by the court of appeals by a unanimous vote, Judge Vann wrote the opinion. The court reverses the decision of the appellate division.

This decision is on the appeal of Attorney General Cunneen from the decision of the appellate division of the supreme court of the third department, handed down on Jan. 20 last, declaring the special franchise tax law to be invalid.

The court of appeals sustains the constitutionality of the law as a whole. The appellate division decided that the law was unconstitutional in that it gave the state tax commission instead of the local assessors authority to assess the local franchises.

The court of appeals holds in brief that the legislature in creating a new system of taxation, embracing a new kind of property never taxed before, had the right to intrust the power of making the assessment to state officers and that tangible property, such as rails and poles, which had been formerly taxed by local assessors, was merely incidental to the special franchises and hence that there was no infringement upon local self government.

In his opinion Judge Vann reviews the enactment of the special franchise tax law and the litigation which has followed in the efforts of the corporations to declare this law unconstitutional or unworkable. He also reviews the various constitutions of the state regarding the home rule principle.

This decision means that the corporations will have to pay this tax for four years back, and it has been estimated that it would raise anywhere from $3,000,000 to $4,500,000 annually, so that in back taxes anywhere from $12,000,000 to $18,000,000 is due from the corporations. None of the revenue from the franchise tax go to the state treasury, but all go to the localities in which they are raised.

The cases before the court involved the constitutionality of the so called Ford law of 1899, which imposed a tax on special franchises or the right granted by the state to lay railroad tracks in the streets and telephone lines in the public highways. The power to make the assessment was conferred upon the state board of tax commissioners instead of upon local assessors, and this was alleged to violate the principle of home rule as intrenched in the constitution. This contention was overruled by Judge Earl, who, acting as referee, decided the cases in the first instance. The appellate division, however, reversed and held by a divided court that the act infringed the home rule provision of the constitution.

RESCUED HIS HORSES BUT BURNED HIMSELF

William Emmons Injured in Fire That Destroyed His Barn Sunday Night.

LOSS AMOUNTS TO $500

NOBODY SEEMS TO KNOW HOW THE FIRE ORIGINATED.

Believed to be the Work of An Incendiary—A Neighbor Saw It First—The Building and Its Contents Were Insured.

The fire department of the borough was called out Sunday night at 11:20 o'clock to extinguish a blaze of mysterious origin in the barn of William Emmons. The barn was located in the rear of his house on Coddington and Watching avenues. The alarm came from box 143, Grandview avenue and Somerset street.

No one seems to know how the blaze started. Mrs. Charles Wyckoff, of Stone and Dupont streets, got up at 11:20 to attend to a sick child when she happened to be looking out of the window and saw the barn, two blocks away, suddenly blaze up. She hurried to the stables of Stonewall Jackson where she spread the alarm to some men sleeping there and they turned in the alarm.

The barn was destroyed. There were two gray horses in the structure but Mr. Emmons was able to save them although he was burned severely about the face and hands while doing so. A large amount of hay had just been put in the loft. It and the building were insured. Several sets of harness were lost. Loss, $500 approximately.

The barn was almost adjoining the stable of Augustus Mobus and the fact that the wind was blowing from the east threatened that with destruction. Seeing that the first barn was doomed, Chief Stahl directed his men to bend all their efforts saving other property.

The barn will probably be rebuilt. It is believed that the fire was of incendiary origin.

Stored in the barn were some tools belonging to the borough, which were used in working on the streets and a large quantity of rope which measured about 400 feet. The loss to the borough is about $100.

The firemen had two thousand feet of hose stretched owing to the great distance between hydrants. A Siamese joint was attached to the end of a long stretch and a hose from Warren and another from the West End Company was attached and two streams were thus thrown upon the blazing structure continuously.

MRS. LOVE'S DEATH.

Wife of a Borough Official Passed Away Last Last Sunday—Lived Here Many Years.

After several months' illness Mrs. Helen Leslie Love, wife of Andrew Love, president of the North Plainfield Board of Health, passed away last evening at about 10:30 o'clock at her home on Duer street. The end came quietly. Death was caused by heart failure superinduced by other ailments.

Born in Scotland she came to this country when she was a young woman and married Andrew Love. The marriage was solemnized by the late Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry, of this city. The wedding was performed in New York City.

For almost a year Mrs. Love had been in declining health but she still remained active until a short while ago when she took a severe cold which gradually developed into a more serious illness. She was seventy-one years of age and was a member and faithful attendant at the First Baptist church.

She is survived by her husband and four children, all of whom reside in this city. They are: Andrew Arthur, Jr.; James L., Robert and Margaret C. Love.

Kind Word for Local Agent.

The following interesting item appears in this month's issue of The Railroad Employe: "One of the hustling young passenger men connected with the New Jersey Central is George A. Ballentyne, of the Plainfield office. Mr. Ballentyne is a young man of pleasing address and a hustler, who will some day make his mark in the service of the corporation he at present so faithfully serves."

SKULL WAS FRACTURED

PHYSICIANS CALLED, BUT MEDICAL SKILL OF NO AVAIL.

Was Seafaring Man and Agent for Important Line of Steamships—Funeral From Late Home Monday Morning.

Becoming dizzy while descending the stairs at his home at 926 Park avenue, last Friday, Captain Albert Von Bretton Zerega fell headlong down the flight and fractured his skull. Dr. J. B. Captain Zerega was seventy-six years of age and had lived in this city for six years, although part of that time he was a resident in the south.

He had been nearly all his life a seafaring man. He was captain of several large steamers and just prior to his death he was the agent for a large line of steamships which plied between Liverpool and New Orleans. He was born at St. Thomas, West Indies, but came to this country when he was a boy. He is survived by his wife, Virginia Zerega, and two children, Frederick and Bertha.

WEDDED AT MOUNTAINSIDE

PRETTY CEREMONY AT WHICH MANY PLAINFIELDERS GATHERED.

Miss Mary MacMurray Became the Wife of Louis Geary, of New York.

Westfield, April 27—In the presence of many guests from New York, Elizabeth, South Amboy, Plainfield and this place, Miss Mary MacMurray, daughter of Mrs. Jane MacMurray, of Mountainside borough, was united in marriage, Saturday afternoon, to Louis Geary, of New York. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's mother and was one of the prettiest of the season.

Rev. Mr. Bamforth, of Westfield, was the officiating clergyman. The bridal party was completed by Miss Belle MacMurray, a sister of the bride, and Dr. Miller, of New York, who acted as best man. The bride was dressed in a becoming gown of white crepe de chine and carried white roses. She was given away by her brother, Hugh MacMurray, of Plainfield, while J. T. MacMurray and Ralph Grote were the ushers.

While the ceremony was taking place, a quartette from the Mendelssohn Glee Club, with which the groom is connected, rendered the Lohengrin wedding march. The innovation was effective while the music was charming.

Following the happy event the guests sat down to an elaborate wedding supper after which Mr. and Mrs. Geary left on a wedding trip. On returning they will reside for the summer at Mrs. MacMurray's home in Mountainside after which they will begin housekeeping in New York. They were remembered with a handsome array of gifts.

LITTLE HELEN HAD VIEW FROM INSIDE

Her Investigations Gave the Boulevard Its Sensation of the Present Year.

A KETTLE CAUSE OF IT

PUT HER HEAD INSIDE AND THEN THE TROUBLE BEGAN.

All the West End, Patrolman Higgins Included, Couldn't Get Her Head Out Again—Was Finally Released at the Hospital.

Helen Bocklowitz, aged three, is of an inquiring turn of mind. She wanted to know what the insides of a stew kettle look like and wasn't satisfied with an ordinary point of view. So to gain a more intimate knowledge of the subject, she inserted her small "coco" into the dark interior of the vessel and from this vantage point continued her investigations.

It is to be hoped she was satisfied. At any rate she had ample opportunity, and for some two or three hours, yesterday afternoon, she provided the West End with a sensation the like of which that interesting quarter of the city has seldom, if ever experienced.

"First off," the infant was proud of her achievement, and paraded with great eclat, up and down that part of West Third street, known as the "Boulevard," presenting, in her extraordinary helmet, a strange and awesome spectacle. Finally encountering "darkness there and nothing more," the youngster concluded she had enough and tried to remove her head piece.

Then came "the times that try men's souls." A crowd of about a hundred and fifty of assorted nationalities, inhabitants of the West End, attracted by the unusual sight, gathered around the enterprising "kid" and almost convulsed themselves laughing. Shouting and gesticulating, each one excitedly proffered advice as to the most efficacious method of extricating the prisoner. Men, women and children, not one of them was satisfied until he had a shy at the kettle; but all to no avail. They greased the infant's neck with lard and other lubricants until the poor youngster presented a sorry spectacle with the unpleasant liquid streaming all over her anatomy; they took hold of both handles to the iron pot and lifted the "kid" bodily off her feet. But the kettle stuck. It moved in a circulating direction with great ease, but off it would not come, and to further complicate matters, every time the small unfortunate was touched, she set up a howl to wake the echoes. There seemed no immediate cause for alarm on the ground of suffocation; the child's lungs were in excellent working order. When she was left alone she seemed to realize her importance and threw out her chest proudly.

Advice poured in on all sides.

"Send for der plumber," said one enthusiast.

"Getta da coppa," offered an excited native of sunny Italy, apparently under the impression that if the police could get a man into a prison he ought to be able to get him out. Patrolman Higgins tried his hand and quite disappointed his West End admirers by failing to rescue the captive little one.

"Whatfo you no send fo' de doctab," said another, of darker hue, and his advice was finally taken. The child, attended by an admiring concourse, was carried to Muhlenberg Hospital in a runabout driven by Mrs. Michael Weber. At the hospital the nurses calmly experimented and then Dr. Vanliorn, by the aid of a sharp instrument, released the unfortunate without the aid of anaesthetics.

Settled Fire Loss.

The insurance company, which had the property of George Fairchild on its list, settled last week for $141 for the fire which visited the latter's house a week ago. It will be remembered that the fire was a most peculiar one and it was thought that it had been caused by mice and matches. This, Mr. Fairchild thinks, is not the case but that the blaze was started by spontaneous combustion.

Busy Week.

This promises to be a busy week for the members of the Germg and Turn Verein in the borough. This evening the women's section will bowl, tomorrow evening the men's section will roll the sixteen-pounders and on Friday evening the singing section will assemble.

AFTER PIGEON OWNERS.

One Arrest Made in Borough for Keeping Pigeons—Others to Follow.

The investigations which the Board of Health of the borough has been making regarding the pigeon nuisance in certain parts of the borough have led to the arrest of one man and it is probable that if the nuisance is not abated in other quarters further arrests will follow.

David Conover, of Dunn street, was arrested by Constable William N. Pangborn Saturday evening and in Justice Matthson's court he pleaded guilty to having the pigeons. It is stated that he had seventy-five paid of the birds, much to the annoyance of his neighbors. He was fined $3 and warned to get rid of the birds. There is another man who lives on Watchung avenue who has been notified to abate the nuisance of the same sort.

Ran Into Road Ending.

A runaway on Central avenue, at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, caused considerable excitement. A horse belonging to Hugh Pearce, of Park avenue, became frightened at an automobile and bolted for about two miles down the avenue. No damage was done, the horse stopping of its own accord in the driveway of Road Ending. Mr. Pearce's coachman held the lines and was lucky in not being thrown.

SWELTERING AND FREEZING

WEATHER MAN'S LACK OF CONSIDERATION FOR PUBLIC HEALTH.

All Sorts and Conditions of Weather Marked a Remarkably Versatile April.

All sorts and conditions of weather were doled out to a long-suffering public during the month of April. One achievement in particular marks the capacity of the weather man, when on April 30, he perpetrated a temperature of 89, following a record of 86 on the day previous. His capriciousness is further attested by a difference in temperature of 42 degrees occurring within twenty-four hours. The temperature for the month was slightly above the normal, the highest being 89, April 30, and the lowest 26, on the 5th and 6th.

Talk about breaking records! Phew! There has passed the hottest April 30 and 26 ever registered. They were likewise the hottest April days in twelve years with the exception of April 17, 1896, when it was 96.

The total rainfall for the month, 4.05 inches, occurred within a period of nine days, causing a struggling populace to inhale dust in large quantities for the rest of the month. The greatest rainfall in twenty-four hours happened on the 14th, 1.38 inches. There were nine clear days, ten partly cloudy and eleven cloudy. The precipitation was about normal. Altogether a remarkable month.

COURT OPENS AT ELIZABETH

Justice VanSyckel Denounces Sunday Baseball in Charge to the Grand Jury.

PLAINFIELDERS ON JURY

May Session Notable for Damage Suits Against Trolley Company and Central Railroad—Causes Are Unusually Numerous—

List of the Local Ones.

Elizabeth, May 6—The opening of the May term of court yesterday attracted the usual large number of interested people. From present indications the term promises to be a lively one as there are a number of Supreme Court cases in which Plainfielders are interested which are now ready for trial. Some of these include the several suits brought against the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company on account of the Westfield disaster.

Judge VanSyckel was on the bench, and the new custom adopted by the Union County Bar Association was used for the first time. This custom is used in the Federal Courts whereby the members of Bar and the public maintain silence and remain standing while the crier formally opens the court. Its adoption yesterday received the unanimous praise of all.

In his charge to the Grand Jury, Judge VanSyckel spoke especially of the practice of gambling in saloons and pool-rooms about Elizabeth, also Sunday baseball playing. He said that he wanted the practice stopped and while he preferred that the Grand Jurors wait until after next Sunday before taking action, if the Sunday baseball playing was continued in the county he wanted all police and court officials who are legally responsible, indicted.

The Plainfield members of the Grand Jury are Robert H. Cook, Samuel P. T. Wilbur, George O. Stevens and Andrew McGardie. The Plainfield members of the petit jury are W. W. Coriell, H. M. Demarest, O. M. Dunham, Charles Geise, Theodore LaBue, Thomas A. Moore, J. A. McKeon, Jonathan B. Smith, I. D. TenEyck.

Of the Supreme Court causes the following are of interest to Plainfielders:

Marsh represents the plaintiffs and Riker & Riker the defendants; Carrie Bristol against the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company, in tort, same counsel; Marie Claassen and William Claassen against the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company, in tort, C. AN ADDITION TO PARK CLUB

THE GROUND WAS BROKEN FOR THE FOUNDATION MONDAY.

Will Provide for Substantial Enlargement of Main Hall and Adds Other Features.

Ground was broken Monday for the foundation of the new $12,000 addition to the Park Clubhouse and it is hoped that the entire building will be ready for use next October.

The plans for the addition are substantially as already announced in The Daily Press. They provide ample accommodations for a splendid dance hall or auditorium facing a stage, seventeen feet in width. The club has always been cramped for room in its main hall when giving entertainments of a dramatic or musical nature, as well as dances, and the spacious new hall will provide much relief. On either side of the stage are large dressing rooms.

A tea room eighteen feet by twenty-two feet, ten inches, will be a feature of the renovated building, and generous kitchen accommodations will be afforded. A women's dressing room, fourteen feet six inches, by sixteen feet six inches, will be a marked improvement, and there will be a men's dressing room slightly smaller. The additions will extend both on the north and south sides of the building as it stands at present. The architect and builder is Charles H. Smith.

The recommendations were that children's fines be reduced from two cents to one cent a day, and that the requirements for applications for library privileges be changed as follows; that in case of those applying for privileges who are known to the librarian and whose names appear in the latest city directory, the endorsement of the owner of real estate be dispensed with at the discretion of the librarian, and in any case the person vouching for an applicant need not be an owner of real estate, if in other respects satisfactory to the librarian. These recommendations were adopted by the board, as was also the recommendation the sum of $350 be appropriated for the purchase of books for the general library.

The recommendation of the librarian that a list of biographical works be prepared was adopted, and the librarian was requested to prepare such a list. The report of the librarian for April was read and ordered on file, after which the meeting adjourned.

CHANGED LAWYERS.

Court Allowed Transfer on the Affidavit of the Plaintiff.

In the case in tort of Miss Evelyn Simonson, of the borough, against the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, for injuries sustained in the Westfield disaster, C. A. Marsh, yesterday in the court at Elizabeth, asked for a transfer of counsel for the plaintiff at her request. It was her wish that John H. Van Winkle & Son, of this city, act as her counsel instead of Lawyer Welch, of New York.

In an affidavit presented by Miss Simonson she claimed that misrepresentations had been made to her by previous counsel. The court allowed Lawyer Welch and his partner, Lawyer Stillman, of Jersey City, the customary fees for what they have done and granted the request of the plaintiff for the transfer of counsel.

NO ENTERTAINMENT IN THE HOUSE OF GOD

Rev. H. C. Cronin Expresses Decided Opinions at County Sunday-School Institute.

AMONG THE SPEAKERS

AFTERNOON AND EVENING SESSIONS AT PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Various Phases of Sunday-School Work Presented in Afternoon by Mrs. Alonzo Pettit, of Elizabeth —The Speakers for Evening.

Superintendents and teachers of many local Sunday-schools attended the institute of the Union County Sunday-school Association which was held in the Park Avenue Baptist church last Tuesday afternoon and evening.

At the afternoon session the time was taken up with devotional exercises, blackboard talks, map teaching and many other interesting topics of Sunday-school work. This was conducted by Mrs. Alonzo Pettit, of Elizabeth, and was followed by a question box which was also conducted by Mrs. Pettit.

At the close of the afternoon session supper was served in the chapel of the church which was in charge of Mrs. Nelson Runyon, Miss Jennie Giles and Miss Elizabeth Runyon. In the evening the institute was called together again.

The speakers were Rev. H. C. Cronin, of Jersey City, J. V. Foster, president of the New Jersey Sunday-school Association, Rev. G. M. Shotts, of Scotch Plains, and Mrs. Alonzo Pettit, of Elizabeth. The evening session was largely attended.

Rev. Mr. Shotts gave an exposition of the Sunday-school lesson for next Sunday as an idea for the teachers present to learn their lessons with a system. Mr. Foster gave an account of the objects of the association and some plans which have been mapped out for the work. Mr. Cronin, in speaking of entertainments held in churches said that he was decidedly opposed to having any kind of an entertainment in the House of God. He was even opposed to holding Christmas entertainments in the church, saying, "Even Santa Claus should be eliminated from the church." He said that in his church he has not had a supper, entertainment, or even a social to which admission was charged since he has been pastor of the church for ten years.

TRIP TO COLORADO.

Accomplished With Aid of a Clever Lecturer and Excellent Views.

A trip through the gorges, grand canyons and mining districts of Colorado was made by the Men's Club of the Congregational church, last evening. W. L. Mason, of New York, conducting. Mr. Mason's subject was "Under the Turquoise Sky." The lecture was entertaining and instructive and illustrated by beautiful photographic views of Colorado scenery. Arthur Mosher, of Central avenue, rendered solos on the violin with Herbert Harold, accompanist.

The last meeting of the club will take place on the first Monday in June and will be a "ladies' night."

"WAY DOWN EAST."

Final Attraction in Supplemental Course at Y. M. C. A.

"Way Down East" to be given by Miss Gay Zenoiar McClaren is the strong attraction advertised by the Y. M. C. A. as the next and last entertainment in the supplemental course Monday evening. Miss McClaren will be remembered by those who heard her in her presentation of "The Sign of the Cross," in the Star Course two years ago as a reader of remarkable ability. Cello selections will be rendered by W. Pauling DeNike, well and favorably known to Plainfield people.

Helped Her Celebrate.

Sixteen little people assisted Lillian Schlief, of Park avenue, in celebrating her sixth birthday yesterday afternoon. Games were played and light refreshments served.

Injured at Basket Ball.

W. O'Laughlin is suffering from a severely sprained right ankle as the result of an accident in the Reform Club-Business Men's basket ball game Monday evening.

Samuel D. Sanlters, of East Fifth street, has been called to his home in Florida on account of the death of his mother.

An Artist Who Roasted Frankfurters

TWO women lived near the sea, but not in sight of it. As the spring wore on and the air began to be warm in the sun fire and bright with the etheric sun gold they longed for a whiff of the salt water, a sight of the blue green, foam capped breakers. They took a trolley to Coney Island, seven miles away.

At the shore the friends found a warm corner at the intersection of a pier and a bathing shed, where the sun shone and the wind could not enter and where there were not too many broken bottles to prevent them from stretching out upon the drab sand. One turned her back to the sun and built sand houses like a happy child; the other sat facing the sun and gazed silently far out over the sea, where her heart is always. Both breathed in deep and long the electric ocean ozone.

This was very poetic and idyllic, so I have been at pains to tell of it, but there is more to it. That is, that the two friends before they knew it were made so hungry by the glorious sea air—or was it the sun tonic which so stimulated their digestion?—that the "hunks" of gingerbread they had brought with them was too small.

Near by was a pretentious restaurant that had all the luxuries of the season placarded upon its outsides and little besides oldish doughnuts and baked beans in its insides. The women took a seat at a table and asked for the soft shell crabs on the bill of fare.

"We ain't got no crabs yet. The season ain't open."

"Lobsters?"

"We ain't got no lobsters yet. The season ain't open."

The season was evidently open enough to advertise the crabs and lobsters on the menu, but not open enough for these to materialize before the customers. The customers had to walk by faith and not by sight.

The friends left the delusive place and wandered disconsolate. "I know what," said one. "Here are some roast frankfurters. Let us have some frankfurter sandwiches."

"I don't like frankfurters," answered the woman with the finikin palate.

"But these look uncommonly good," said the one who has learned not to be too squeamish. The result was they approached the stand of the frankfurter man. He was uncommonly clean; so was his outfit. He had a row of frankfurters upon a sheet iron plate over a charcoal furnace. He turned them with an air of solicitude and watchful care as their plump sides became brown and juices bubbled out.

Well, the two respectable ladies were so hungry that they each ordered a frankfurter sandwich. The frankfurter roaster split a well baked bread roll, whisked a sausage upon it with a fork, handed it to the customer and said, "Help yourself to mustard."

The ladies did so; then, bold and unabashed, started down again to the sunny corner in the sand. A row of rowdies, idle waiters and Coney Island fakirs lined the walk on each side. As the ladies went past them, carrying each her frankfurter sandwich, some of these fellows uttered mournful dog howls and others barked, "Bow, wow, wow!"

Nevertheless the frankfurters tasted extremely good, and the ladies devoured them with relish, even the one who frowned on frankfurters owning that they were very nice. When the women started home, they passed again the frankfurter stand. There was the man roasting sausages still, with the absorbed air of an artist and an enthusiast, as though world movements depended on the perfect cooking of those tiny pink meat rolls. The woman who does not like frankfurters told the man that his were the best she ever tasted. His face brightened up at the compliment.

"There's lots more in roasting frankfurters than a body would think," he said. "You have to watch 'em every minute. Time and ag'in I've hired somebody to roast 'em for me and never found anybody to do it right. There's an art in it, you know, and I was two years learnin' to turn 'em out as good as this."

The man was the true artist. He wrought to perfection the only work his brains and environment permitted him to do. Everybody can do some one thing in perfection and make a good living at it.

HOUSE CLEANING HINTS.

How to Make Carpets, Walls and Brasses Neat.

This is the time of the year for the dread house cleaning. It is only dread, however, when it is not done properly. There shouldn't be clouds of dust and debris if the cleaning has been conscientiously attended to during the year.

The woodwork, the paper and the ceilings perhaps require more attention than anything else because they are usually neglected.

Take a loaf of bread and make wads of the inside; then, standing on a stepladder, clean the wall paper with long, rapid strokes downward. This will be found to have a wonderful effect if done carefully. The brass chandeliers. If they have been neglected, need oxalic acid, followed by a brisk polishing with tripoli and paraffin. Wrought iron must be well washed and then wiped over with kerosene. Parquet floors should be rubbed with wax and turpentine polish, one pound of melted wax to one pound of turpentine, and then polished.

Glass, whether of windows or mirrors, can be made much brighter by being washed in weak tea or alcohol.

The carpet should be spread, after shaking, on the grass or on a clean floor. It should be scrubbed with a new broom dipped in a pail of ammonia water or ox gall and water in the proportion of a pint of gall to three gallons of soft water. If the carpet does not need to come up after the sweeping, it can be wiped over with a cloth wrung out frequently in clean water to which ammonia has been added.

The cellar is perhaps one of the most important places in the house. Every nook and corner should be cleaned out, even the coal bins. The rat holes should be stopped up with chloride of lime. Last of all, apply a generous coat of whitewash to the walls, ceilings and even foundation stones.

Above all, clean out your closets; dispose of everything for which you have no immediate use. It is by accumulating things she may at some time need that the wary housekeeper stores up trouble and hard work for herself.

FOR A SUMMER HOME.

A Hint Concerning the Furnishing of the Living Room.

The picture represents a large room, occupying nearly the whole of the ground floor of a summer house. The color scheme is pale green and terra cotta, the woodwork being painted white. The small paned windows are wide to admit plenty of fresh air and sunlight. The woodwork of the ceiling is stained green to correspond with the walls.

The settles in either side of the fireplace are particularly attractive for a large room. They are upholstered in green denim, the same material being used for the lower section of the walls.

ALICE DE WALD.

The New Skirt.

Skirts begin to show some signs of rebellion against the close fit that has prevailed so long, and there are three story skirts, arranged to show three separate parts or to have three deep and ungathered flounces. These are cut on the bias and laid around more like folds than flounces. The sleeves are also three story affairs, and, if one may use the strange comparison, the effect includes three levels and three perspectives. First is a cap effect at the top, then a big and puffy middle at the elbow, and the rest is close like the chatelaine cuff of yore. Some of the thin sleeves are tucked half way down, and the rest is bagged in at the wrist so that the outside hangs down much farther than the inner side. These are anything but graceful, but it is said they are the forerunners of worse atrocities in sleeves than a woman ever dreamed of. It is expected that the new styles will be in full vogue by fall.

Don't Meddle.

Mend your own faults; let other people's alone. Let others develop their individuality in their own way. Don't meddle. Mind your own business.

SMART AND PICTURESQUE.

Delicate Pastel Shades—The New Woolen Goods Very Supple.

There is much extravagance apparent in the new styles. Yet we must all agree there is far less of the grotesque and more of picturesque simplicity than of old. Costumes are plainer, and better taste is displayed in the matter of trimmings. Moreover, there are styles to suit every one, and many of them may be used successfully in renovating last year's gowns.

The new woolen materials are very soft and supple. The newest specimens all show a white thread or white knots interwoven with the self color. Voiles are very pretty with these broken flecks of white, which are also seen on the new zephyrs and lawns.

All the delicate pastel shades in pale blues, pinks, soft greens and biscuit tints are in vogue as well as every possible tone and half tone of gray, ranging from the darkest iron shades to the delicate oyster tints. Black and white is as favorite a combination as ever, and much ingenuity is revealed in the blending together of the two colors.

A dainty evening dress is shown in the cut. The material is silk net over silk, and the entire trimming consists of bands of velvet ribbon placed perpendicularly.

ELABORATE STYLES.

Sack Coats of Black Silk—Costumes in Pale Shades.

Many and varied are the new fashions, and it is invariably a survival of the fittest, for not all the new frocks and frills can be popular.

The sack coatee will certainly prevail, and it is made in black silk as a separate wrap and is particularly attractive in peau de soie inlet with transparent motifs of guipure or in taffeta lace set in wide tucks or accordion plaited.

The separate black coat is a boon to the woman who wears nothing but black and is very attractive with the limp trailing skirt of soft material.

The spring costumes arranged with some specics of sack coat are in pale shades of cloth hopsack and summer frieze, and the chief tints are almond, mastic and putty, strawberry tints, reseda with a green tone and also some light tints in green. Bright shades of royal and purple blue are shown, but these will probably have but a brief reign, and the sun will no doubt put them to shame.

The cut shows an afternoon gown of blue veiling over taffeta of the same shade. The sleeves have the new full puffs and caps.

FOR PLEASANT WEATHER.

Transparent Hats of Lace—Colored Straw Trimmed With Tulle.

In millinery transparent hats of lace are adorned with ribbon, velvet and plumes. Colored straws in hyacinth blue or parma mauve, champagne or bright yellow straws are fashionable trimmed with tulle or the season's flowers. Transparent tulle toques with long drooping paradise plumes or shaded ospreys are very smart. Colored veils are once more in the fashion, not only in brown, red and blue, but in mauve, pink and green.

Reseda or mignonette green has superseded the crude emerald green of millinery. The pork pie model of early Victorian days is a favorite shape, as also is the Spanish turban. Lace is again much used for draping brims of hats, and lovely long ostrich plumes form the sole adornment on many of the latest hats.

Tiny button roses are arranged in wreaths to wear as an evening headdress.

Gray veiling gowns trimmed with taffeta applique are among the smartest things this spring. The applications represent berries and their leaves rather than flowers. Acorns with oak leaves are the newest. The acorns are made over a raised frame so that they stand out in bold relief.

The illustration shows a particularly smart model of light weight coffee colored cloth. The costume has a cape of the same material with diamond shaped steppings.

WHAT IS WORN.

Craze For Bordered Materials—Blurred Designs Fashionable.

There is quite a craze for bordered materials. Sometimes it is a flowered band or a simple branch of roses run across the selvage. Blurred designs and cashmere patterns are most fashionable, after which we can mention quite a new series of glace, alpaca, mohair and canvas in the new supple make which is required this season to meet the new clinging style in dress.

Trimmings are inset with mother of pearl scales, gold platinum and steel Greek lace insertions and Russian embroideries are very smart and much used on white silk or cloth coatheta. Hanging ornaments, fringe and frogging appear on the three-quarter coats, many of which are of black cloth or black silk. Buttons, too, are a prominent feature on skirts and bodices.

Black chantilly lace is very fashionable, and some fine imitation is being sold in the guise of capes, round or pointed.

The illustration shows a picture hat of cream straw. It is trimmed with a large bow of pale blue ribbon and a knot of rosebuds under the brim.

NOVELTIES OF THE SEASON

Waists Are Elaborately Trimmed. Pelerine Effects Smart.

Bodices are elaborately trimmed, much crossed, fichu style, and on the whole less pouched than of yore. Pelerine effects are introduced whenever possible, and with many of the new costumes a pretty detachable little pelerine edged with fringe and with long stole ends is made to wear with the frock, or else it is made with lace and net or chiffon with frills and long ends. As a timely hint a round, deep lace collar provides an excellent foundation for a pelerine cape.

Waistcoats are a novelty. They are made in fancy velvet or panne white embroidered silk and suede kid, and enameled or hand painted bits of old brocade are cut diamond shaped to form waistcoats over kilted chiffon fronts, each point being buttoned with a jewelled button.

The new bordered delaines are charming to make up into blouses and blouse slips.

The illustration shows a modish gown of gray veiling. The waist is made with the fashionable cape effect and loose hanging sleeves. It is trimmed with bands of taffeta strapping. The skirt has a pointed double yoke effect, and the rest is laid in perpendicular tucks.

FASHION HINTS.

Much Embroidered Wedding Dresses. Waists of All Over Lace.

Wedding dresses are much embroidered in floss silk, mother of pearl scales, silver and dewdrop beads.

In evening dress we see hanging bat wing sleeves, berthas, tassels, flowers, floral fringes and bouillone flounces. Ganging is used extensively on both waists and skirts. The trimmings are elaborate. Black and white lace are seen side by side on the same dress. Hand painted satins and embroidered velvets are bejeweled or powdered with gold and silver spangles.

Waists of heavy all over lace are very smart to wear with fancy crepe de chine skirts. When a large black or all white hat is added to this and the costume finished by the addition of a black silk three-quarter length coat, the effect is very smart.

Large black hats made of shirred muslines are very popular.

The illustration shows a carriage coat of gray peau de soie, with a facing of burned orange silk. The hat is of pearl gray chiffon, with a white ostrich feather.

COATS AND COSTUMES.

Short Coats—Three-quarter Coats. Plain Gored Skirts.

The little coats this year are remarkably smart. Many of them are built of glace silk or the still more serviceable peau de soie.

Boleros of every shape and all variations are with us still. Many of them are built with the long stole fronts, which afford a splendid opportunity for the display of choice embroidery.

Short sack coats are made of moire trimmed with lace, oriental embroidery, tassels, etc.

Biscuit and putty colored cloth three-quarter coats are lined with white satin and have watteau plaited backs and box plaited fronts.

The plain much gored skirt reigns supreme for most of the new woolen goods, while those who prefer variety will find an infinity of styles in the hip yoke box plaited or gathered skirts, but in all the skirts the front width is still quite narrow and usually kept plain.

The tailor made in the illustration is of blue cloth having a thread of white. The jacket has the effect of several layers, each layer being bordered with braid. The skirt has a plain front gore and the rest laid in layers edged with the braid.

CHANGES IN FASHION.

The Elbow Sleeve No Longer Used In Waists—Black Dressing Gowns.

The elbow sleeve seems to be a thing of the past as far as the separate waist goes. All the new sleeves are long and have full puffs. Some of the prettiest blouses are shirred in bands across the bust and the tops of the arms, below which the fullness is allowed to flare.

Quaint old fashioned berthas of lace renovate many an old waist where the difficulty is tightness across the shoulders or a lack of length on the shoulder seam.

There is just at present a craze for all black, especially in thin stuffs for evening wear. Jet paillettes are used more than ever, and entire robes of this are fitted very closely as to skirt, with fluffy effects of chiffon on the waist and puffs to the sleeves.

Gowns of rose pink chiffon are worked in coral beads and present a charmingly dainty effect.

The coffee coat in the illustration is of pale blue mousseline de soie and has lace insertion with a wide edging for the frill at the bottom of the waist portion and sleeves.

THE NEW GOWNS.

They Show a Distinct Improvement Both In Style and Cut.

Dresses show a distinct improvement both in color schemes and in cut. Broad shoulders are now the rule, and this is atoned for by the long perpendicular lines of the trimmings. Circular lines are used on the shirred skirts of voile and collenne, but even these dip considerably in the front to give a long effect.

Graduated flounces are only used to give the outward sweep which a long skirt requires. These flounces are so skillfully concealed under trimmings and embroideries that they can only be detected by looking at the underside of the cloth.

Trains are not quite so long. On the other hand, the sides and front of the skirt are longer.

Waists are made with fullness in the front and at the wrist or elbows.

BLACK CREPE DE CHINE GOWN.

Drawn lace is very smart, also maltese, and, in fact, these lighter laces are to a great extent supplanting the Irish weaves, which are more suited for outer wraps and cloth gowns than thin materials.

From Paris we have a quantity of rough linen hand embroidered blouses. These are for country and river wear and are made with a high neckband with a turnover Prussian collar and neat little stock and tie. Some, too, are made with a high neckband of fine batiste embroidered in different colors, with insertions of hand beadings and veinings. These are very dainty, are practical for washing purposes and look delightfully fresh.

The illustration shows a smart crepe de chine dress trimmed with black and white embroidery.

WHAT IS WORN.

Long Dust Coats For Motoring—The New Embroideries.

Long dust coats for motoring have perfectly flat trimmings, as lace, frill, etc., bold too much dust.

Quite a protective veil for motoring can be arranged by one small veil of chiffon draped closely around the face to just below the mouth and over this fine lisse veiling with black spots drawn less tightly. This has been found sufficient even in dusty weather and keeps the face warm despite keen winds.

The embroideries this season are lovely and costly, but clever fingers can make charming imitations. Medallions of printed muslin are laid on silk and inclosed in lace, which would bear very close inspection, and really the finer muslins are like painted lisse. A pretty ball gown worn at quite an important function had an exquisite trail of apparently painted flowers which were actually cut out from muslin and appliqued with fine embroidery silk.

Modes are becoming daily more complicated. The best of all fashion is apparently simple, but herein lies a great deception, for there never was a time when more attention was given to every detail of dress.

The cut shows a smart waist of ecru crepe de chine trimmed with fine tucks and strappings of the same.

SCARCITY OF LABOR.

It Has Been Disastrous to California Fruit Growers.

A Combination That Failed to Control the Market—San Francisco's Famous Chinatown to Be Moved.

[Special San Francisco Letter.]

LARGE fruit crops, of most all varieties in this state, and a scarcity of labor, and large crops throughout the country, have been disastrous for the growers and shippers of fruits during the past season. Some of the fruit scarcely repaid freights, and much of it did not pay the cost of production, excepting the earliest shipments, and the grapes, which commanded unusually large prices. Large quantities were carried by the canners, consequently they made a small pack, comparatively, and were very particular as to quality and size. Dried fruits averaged much smaller than the previous season, brought lower prices, and the labor of harvesting and in canning cost more. Grape growers have been more fortunate, but those of the latest districts lost part of their crops by rain. Generally speaking, the deciduous growers have not passed a profitable year. The output, however, was larger than that of the previous year. The total shipments were 7,141 car loads, while the shipments of 1901 were 6,459 car loads. Of the shipments in 1902 New York received 1,475 car loads, and Chicago 1,201 car loads. Pears were in greater demand than any other variety of fresh deciduous fruits. the total shipments being 2,011 car loads; peaches, 1,777; grapes, 1,633, and plums and prunes, 1,475. The shipment of pears shows an increase of about 25 per cent. over that of the previous year. There is a falling off in shipments of peaches of about ten per cent., and an increase of about 30 per cent. in the shipments of plums and prunes. The shipment of grapes shows a slight increase in the eastern demand.

The output of raisins is estimated at 96,000,000 pounds; that of 1901 was 150,000,000, the largest of any crop in the history of the state. The output of prunes is estimated at 150,000,000 pounds; that of 1901 was 81,500,000 pounds. The prune crop of 1900 was 360,000,000 pounds. While the raisin growers have received good prices, and are working in harmony with the wine makers, the Prune Packers' association have some disrupted, and growers closed out for what they could get. The growers had agreed to sell only to the original packers, and the packers agreed to buy only from the organized growers. The growers were to fix the price, and they attempted to organize 90 per cent. of the growers in the association, and those in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, sold for what they could get, and then there was a general "cutting" everywhere.

IMPORTED CHINESE BRIDE.
(Market Value of a Girl Like This Is Fixed at $1,000.)

The output of other dried fruits is as follows: Peaches (estimated) 24,000,000 pounds—3,500,000 pounds less than that of the previous year; apricots, 12,000,000, a falling off of nearly 400,000 pounds; apples, 6,000,000, a decrease of 500,000 pounds; pears, 3,000,000, a decrease of 1,500,000 pounds; plums, 2,800,000, a shorter product by 1,600,000 pounds; nectarines, 420,000, a decrease of about 30 per cent.; figs, 7,250,000, an increase of 740,000 pounds; and dried grapes, 450,000, an increase of 90,000 pounds.

The orange crop for the season of 1901-2 was 19,180 car loads of 350 boxes to the car. The crop for 1902-03 is estimated at 22,000 car loads. The year has been prosperous for orange growers, and the profits were larger than those of the previous season of 1900-01. Within the past few years orange orchards have been more extensively planted in northern California, and these are now bearing, which accounts for the increased crop. Heretofore, it has been held that the southern part of the state was the "citrus belt," but it has been demonstrated that citrus fruits will grow in the foothill sections—north as well as south of the Tehachipi, the so-called belt range. The orange is as secure from frost in the northern foot-hills as in those of the south. And also just as liable to be nipped in the bud. The orange crop from the north was marketed last year before New Year's day, and sent to the south the first ripe oranges of the season. This seems to be strange, but it is owing, it is believed, to the fact that the summers in the north are not so long and dry, and that there is more strength in the soil, whether irrigated or not. Altitude and not latitude, limits the growing of citrus fruits, and until this fact was learned the cultivation of these fruits was limited to the lower levels of southern California.

The lemon crop of 1901-2 was 1,826 car loads. The crop was not profitable, nor large, as our growers have not reduced the cultivation of this fruit to an "exact science," nor provided for its necessary care and storage. Most of the larger and more experienced growers have not passed satisfactory profits. While we supply the markets west of Chicago, our growers have not been able to profitably reach the markets of the Atlantic states, owing to the competition of the Sicily

San Francisco is more prosperous than ever before in its history. This is mainly because of the "open door" to the east—China, the Philippines and our acquisition of the Hawaiian islands. There is a great and an increasing demand for laborers, especially in the building line. Within the past year 25 "sky-scrapers" have gone up, from eight to 14 stories. Until a few years ago, there were only half a dozen tall buildings in the city, builders fearing the effects of earthquakes. But as lots became more valuable, the buildings rose higher and were put up much stronger.

The city authorities are endeavoring to "improve" the Chinese quarter out of existence, or rather move it to the suburbs. It is proposed to tear down the rookeries and shanties and widen the streets, after condemning the property for that purpose. Chinatown is about eight blocks square and is encroaching upon the American quarter on three sides, and has absorbed part of the Mexican quarter on the north side. This was, originally, the business part of the city, but as the city extended toward the bay by filling in lots, the merchants moved in that direction, and the Chinese occupied the deserted business houses, some of which have stood for half a century. In this quarter is situated the Old Mission brick house in the city, the bricks for which were brought from New York on a sailing vessel. It is now a tenement house, occupied by about 500 Chinese. Property in this section has become so valuable within the past year that it looks as if the "Chinese must go" to the suburbs and there build another "Chinatown." But they prefer their present business location. They do an immense trade with the Caucasians, most of which they would lose if they were pushed back out of the business streets. Property owners who rent to them will make a legal fight against this "renaissance," and the Chinese will aid them. It will be a long and a stubborn legal battle.

The removal of these 30,000 Celestials from the very business center would be a great financial benefit to the city, and would largely increase the values of adjacent property, especially the residential property on Nob Hill. Dwellers in that section must come through Chinatown to reach their places of business, and so must those who live in the southern and northern parts of the city. The Chinese quarter may be called our "Middle Kingdom," considering its favorable and commanding location. If the movement shall be successful, it will be the first instance of the kind—the removal of a "colony" of about 30,000 people from the heart of a city to its suburbs, and against their will. On the sites of these rookeries will arise brick buildings, with modern improvements, and perhaps several "sky-scrapers." From the most luckily populated, filthiest and most immoral quarter in the city it will be changed into one of the most beautiful and valuable. It will, in a measure, do away with much of the gambling and opium smoking among the white people, for Chinatown will not be so convenient to them. They are largely instrumental in maintaining Chinatown, and in its expansion.

Strange South African Animals.

A naturalist at Hanover, Cape Colony, describes many remarkable small animals which abound there. Among them is a gecko, called by the Dutch farmers "getje," whose large tail comes off with a slight touch, and remains jumping about on the ground, attracting the attention of an enemy, while the animal itself slinks away, and eventually grows a new tail. Among the solifugae is a most extraordinary animal resembling a spider, sometimes nearly three inches long, and of which Mr. Cronwright Schreiner says that he knows "no creature which for its size is so terribly armed." Its disproportionately large head is made up mainly of a double pair of nippers of great power. The "bush spinekrop," as the Dutch call the animal, hunts for its living and is a fierce fighter. Sometimes it will kill a scorpion. There are many trap-door spiders that display great ingenuity, and several poisonous species of dreadful appearance.—Nature.

Grammar.

"What part of speech is the word 'marriage?'" asked the girl on the piazza of the Hardened Wretch.

And he, being himself a married man, replied:

"It's a subordinate conjunction."

The examination paper read: Parse the word Pennsylvania in the sentence: "A hold-up occurred the other night in Pennsylvania."

The bright boy answered that it was an abstract noun, being the name of a state, but Mr. Casault, when asked about it, thought it a proper noun in the objective case, being the object of "hold-up."

"The woman and the man were married yesterday—parse woman."

And the answer of the boy was: "A preposition, governing 'man.'"—N. Y. Times.

Not the Usual Result.

"How can you afford to give away these salt pickles with your meals?" asked the man who dined cheaply at the little German restaurant around the corner.

"Ah, but you forget they make the awful thirst, said the proprietor. "The awful thirst makes trade at the bar. Is it not the clever idea?"

"It certainly does make one thirsty," said the man at the table. "I feel those I've eaten already. Bring me—"

The proprietor's face was a study in expectancy.

"Bring me another glass of water!"—N. Y. Tribune.

Where He Caught Him.

One day a man was brought before a judge for stealing a cheese from a grocer's door, and the principal witness, a carter, told how he had seen the man take the cheese and had run up and held him.

"Then you caught him in the nefarious act?" said the judge.

"The what, sir?" said the witness.

"You ought him in the nefarious act, I say," repeated the judge.

"Not me," was the reply; "I caught him by the scruff of the neck."—Tit-Bits.

Wonderful Woman.

"Horatius!" said the professor's wife, "I don't believe you've heard a word that I've said, and here I've been talking for half an hour!"

"Well," said the pondering professor, "who could hear it? You seem just as fresh as when you started."—Stray Stories.

Where Hats Are Unknown.

Her Honey House.

An Iowa woman who was cleaning house one day accidentally knocked out a brick and some mortar from the side of a little used room. In doing so she came upon a curious humming sound and a delicate odor. She reported the circumstance to her sons, and two of them climbed up the outside of the house and removed some of the weather boards to investigate the phenomenon. They were much astonished to find that the whole side of the house nearly had been filled in by the bees with honey and honeycomb. Taking down the remaining boards, they carefully extracted the material, stored it in a convenient place for the winter, and ate honey on their muffins for many months thereafter.—N. Y. Herald.

"Liberty" Losing Popularity.

The statue of Liberty which "enlightens the world" from a small island in the upper New York bay, is not so popular as she was in the days of her youth. A dozen years ago 85,000 visitors made use of the small steam ferryboat that plies between the Battery and her resting place, while the past year saw but 40,000. The men in charge of the statue and the boat—a private corporation—have become weary of their task and have requested the war department to take it over. Secretary Root has taken the matter into consideration. The government will doubtless take care hereafter of this lady from France, while the excursion line will be run by some private concern.—Washington Star.

Greatness of Alaska.

The remarkable resources of Alaska give so much promise of rapid development that popular interest in our far northern territory is continually growing. In order to assist in forming a clear conception of the vast extent of Alaska, Mr. A. H. Brooks, of the United States geological survey, has prepared a map in which Alaska is represented superposed upon the United States, with its northern edge lying upon Lake Superior, and along the border between Minnesota and Canada. In this position Alaska covers, in whole or in part, 23 states and territories. The area of Alaska is almost one-fifth as much as that of all the rest of the United States.—Youth's Companion.

Natural Colored Silks.

Recent experiments in France have shown that the yellow and green colors possessed by the silk spun by certain caterpillars are due to the coloring matter derived from food, and passed through the blood of the spinners. By impregnating leaves with artificial colors the experimenters have caused some species of caterpillars to produce silk of bright orange-yellow and fine rose hues. By the aid of the spectroscope the presence and nature of colored pigments in the blood of the little animals was established.

Strange Tribe of Eskimos.

The remnant of a strange tribe of Eskimos has been discovered on Southampton island, at the north end of Hudson bay. These people had never seen a white man until recently. Their huts are built of the great jaws of whales, covered with skins. In the middle is an elevation, on which is a stone lamp used for lighting, heating, cooking, melting snow and drying clothes. The tribe is almost extinct, only some 16 being left.—Chicago Journal.

A Hawk's Strange Act.

A strange tale is told of a hawk at the menagerie in Central park, New York. Two birds live in the same cage, and some time back one of them developed a tumor in the leg. The other bird thereupon attacked the tumor with its claws and succeeded in laming it.—Cleveland Leader.

Another Surprise.

The young man took from his hip pocket a whisk broom and brushed a spot on the carpet until there was not a trace of dust remaining thereon.

Then he pulled up his trouser legs at the knees and knelt carefully upon the freshly brushed spot.

"Clarice," he began, in a fine chesty tone, "doubtless ere this my demeanor toward you has betrayed to you the secret of my heart—my heart—yes, that's right—the secret my heart struggles to convey to yours. I love you, Clarice, and beseech you to become my wife."

Resisting an impulse to be conventional and discourse upon the suddenness of the proposal, Clarice determined to stick to the facts and replied in a relieved tone:

"Yes, Algernon, of course I will. Don't you know I had been wondering when on earth you were really going to get up the courage to say it."—Baltimore American.

Feline Discipline.

"I called the kitten," writes a correspondent, "who sprang from her basket where she had been lying with her mother and followed me into the next room. The cat followed, growling warningly, and, taking it up by the neck, replaced it in the basket. Again I called it, and again it came at my call. This time the mother, growling still more threateningly, followed us again; but this time she seized the kitten by the tail instead of the neck, evidently as a punishment, and pulled it roughly along, the kitten mewing helplessly. For a third time I called, and once more it came to me; but this time the mother was silent. She came, took up the kitten, dragged it off, and then began to bite it again and again in order to secure its obedience. This method was successful, and the next time I called it was in vain."—Animal Life.

A Skinned Fox Bites.

A story is being told in Bangor, Me., to show the great vitality of the fox. In the town of Lubec one night a party of three men were chasing a chicken thief that had a den near the village. The dogs started the fox and drove him past one of the hunters, when a quick shot seemed to have killed the animal. All hands came up, and the man who did the shooting began to skin the fox. The skin had been removed up to the shoulders, when the animal's jaws suddenly opened and then closed with a vicious snap on the hand of the hunter. With a hunting knife the fox's jaws were pried apart and the bleeding hand was released. It bore the teeth marks, which the hunter will always carry as evidence of what a Maine fox can do when supposedly dead and more than half skinned.—Albany Argus.

He Knew His Luck.

"No, sir, I don't want any accident insurance!" exclaimed the irritable party. "It would be just my luck not to have a blamed thing happen to me if I was carrying an accident policy."

"A life insurance, then?" suggested the agent.

"Worse and worse," was the reply. "Why, I wouldn't have one chance in a thousand of dying in time to make anything out of the company, if I had a policy. Oh, I know my luck."—Chicago Post.

Westlake's Gossip of Amateur and Professional Sports

BILLIARDS—

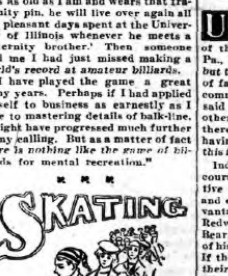
EDWARD C. REIN.

WITH a world's amateur record before him if he made the score of one button, Edward C. Rein, a Chicago board of trade man stood close to the billiard table while a big crowd of merchants, professional men and enthusiastic billiardists watched with "bated breath."

"Oh, I never could take advantage of opportunities," said Mr. Rein, and he missed the shot. As it was he concluded his bulk-line game an easy victor, with an average of 12½, better figures than any amateur ever made in competition before with the exception of the average of Wayman McCreery, the late billiardist of St. Louis. As a matter of fact Mr. McCreery was rated as a professional by nearly all critics because he played openly for stakes and occasionally refereed matches for compensation.

"How does it seem to have a chance to excel any other amateur's mark?" asked Mr. Rein after the game. "Well, to tell the truth, I did not think of that average. I don't think any player who is absorbed in a contest thinks of his average at the time he is playing. The spectators were more excited than I was. At the particular moment that I had to make that point to beat McCreery's record, no one could guess what I was thinking about. If you had 100 guesses you could not tell what was uppermost in my thoughts—what occupied my mind more than the draw shot I had to execute. I had a very important matter before the directory of the board of trade which I was going to attend to the following day, and that came up before my vision every time I shot. Strange that it did not affect my play. Finally it was ushered into the background of my mind, and the picture of a letter from my son who is at college took its place. I saw the sentence in which he told me about joining a Greek letter fraternity society, and when I actually shot I materialized under my breath, 'When he gets as old as I am and wears that fraternity pin, he will live over again all the pleasant days spent at the University of Illinois whenever he meets a fraternity brother.' Then someone told me I had just missed making a world's record at amateur billiards.

"I have played the game a great many years. Perhaps if I had applied myself to business as earnestly as I have to mastering details of bulk-line, I might have progressed much further in my calling. But as a matter of fact there is nothing like the game of billiards for mental recreation."



Tandem Formation

FIGURE skating has gone out of fashion. The latest craze among skaters all over the country is the "tandem formation," and the parks in the cities and river surfaces in the country are merry sights with these groups of skaters their Tam o' Shanters and coats of many colors and their white mittens, tacking from side to side as they glide along. The old style of forming into line—company front, so to speak, with the skaters taking hold of hands, seems to have become obsolete. And what a blessing it has been to the police who take care of the ice in the city parks! A dozen or more skaters sweeping down like this menaced the small boys who could not get out of their way.

"The rhythm of the tandem formation so much in vogue this winter," said a park superintendent, "is somewhat poetical. It makes the youthful skaters think there is a greater amount of fun to be gleaned from the sport than we even got in our young days, and presents the very poetry of motion that the writers have raved over. I think the Canadians were quickest to see the advantage of the tandem formation—tandem in style even if there are more than two in line—and in the parks of the big cities of the United States the style is all the go now. If the young man and his sweetheart want to speed around the park or on the river, they will find the tandem formation augments speed, produces a restful feeling, because of the rhythmatic motion, and if the skates are sharp, enables the skaters to develop much more speed than under the old style of crossing arms and holding hands. Another way for two skaters to use the tandem is for the girl who stands in front, say, to put her arms back so that the young man may clutch them above the elbows."

That figure and fancy skating, so much the rage a few years ago, has gone by the board is palpable. The national figure skating championships have been discontinued. G. D. Phillips, for several years the speed and figure skating champion—he held either the speed or figure championship during the interval between 1897 and 1897, no less than 22 years—says that ice hockey has eliminated the desire to excel in fancy skating. The figure skater uses a curved skate with a small pivot for the toe, whereas the skate in vogue now is the flat skate that gives a firm footing. It is difficult to execute curves with the hockey skate. With the rocker skate that presents one-third of the surface to the ice, the graceful skater may make all sorts of curly marks on the ice. Where hundreds of these skates were used five years ago the racing skate with a blade 18 inches long and only an eighth of an inch wide, seems to have crowded the old style skate out. Once the skater gets accustomed to the racing skate he forsakes the rockered skate for good.

THE JERSEY COAST.

Prosperity seems to have visited the Jersey coast, coming in giant strides. Millions of dollars have been and are being expended for the improvement and elaboration of the various resorts that line the coast from its most northern point, Sandy Hook, down as far south as the beginning of Barnegat Bay. The bulk of it is confined, however, to those places comparatively close to the Twin Cities, Asbury Park and Ocean Grove.

Compared with other shore resorts of the land, it will have to be admitted that the resorts which line the north Jersey coast were not, up to this year, the greatest in magnificence and variety of attractions. The Jersey coast resorts were pleasant places, it is true, but they lacked much which made their rivals to the north and south popular in the eyes of many patrons. This fact seems to have dawned on the Jerseyites and the coming year promises to see this State well up in the van.

To one Asbury Park has appeared as a huge Sunday-school picnic ground. The fact that Ocean Grove is the property of the camp-meeting association and that the Twin Cities are the destination for hundreds of Sunday-school excursions every year is largely responsible for that idea. Nevertheless Asbury Park has been an attractive place to many who have considered it particularly satisfactory as being free from certain undesirable elements to be found at the other more fashionable places. Now, Asbury Park is planning to offer superior attractions and try to still eliminate the undesirable features.

There is a great future ahead of Asbury Park if it is not spoiled in the making. With improved railway service which is now promised, it is going to be the most prominent resort within easy reach of New York. Its progressive campaign should build up a wonderful patronage for the city and its hotels. At the same time its neighbors, which are now putting forth every effort to become desirable spots to gather during the heated months, seem in a fair way to make the Jersey coast the most attractive of all the series of resorts that border on the Atlantic.

THE GREATEST GOOD.

This attempt to have the drawbridges over Newark bay and the Raritan and Hackensack rivers closed during the rush hours with the railroads is deserving of the support of the people in the suburban cities throughout Jersey. The traffic through none of these bridges amounts to the importance of that of the railroads which feed New York with its business men as well as freight. It is rather important, therefore, that there should be as little delay as possible and any equitable arrangement which will not seriously interfere with the traffic on those waterways is much to be desired.

Plainfield is interested in this movement as the traffic on the Jersey Central is often delayed at the Newark bay bridge by the passage of some craft. In the morning hours when the trains to New York follow each other in rapid succession and a host of men and women are to be carried to their business duties in the great city, it is important that everything shall work for their speedy transportation. Delays at the draw may seriously affect some and are bound to work as an argument against living in this section. The same is true of the late afternoon and early evening when the same procession of trains leaves the Communipaw terminal.

The present project would close the drawbridge for certain hours only. It is opposed by Newark merchants and the boatmen. It may inconvenience some of them a trifle but the far greater inconvenience which results from delayed trains on the railroads should not be forgotten. The greatest good for the greatest number is what is desired and that would be a regulation of the draws so that trains at the rush hours would not be held up by some little oyster sloop or other unimportant craft.

CLUB FAIR.

Success Attended Efforts of the Park A. C. Saturday Afternoon.

The members of the Park A. C. held a fair Saturday afternoon on the lawn of Mrs. W. J. Rooms, of Willow avenue, which was largely patronized and netted the club $48.50. This will be devoted to securing jerseys for the members and for fitting up the clubhouse which is located on the grounds of the Martin property on Mercer and Washington avenues. John Valiant, Jr., and Tracy Howard had charge of the candy table. Gwendolyn Strong and Lawrence Milne had the ice cream table in their charge and Russell Pond and Leslie Brokaw were in charge of the cake table. Lloyd Fisher and Jack Dewey presided over the lemonade table and Charles Lyman, Jr., took control of the grab bag. The committee in charge of the fair comprised Lawrence Milne, Jack Dewey and Lloyd Fisher.

There were no prizes.

NO SPRINKLING BY CITY NOW

But Action on the Subject Is Expected in the Near Future, However.

MORE MACADAM ROADS

Council Holds Lengthy Session, But Nothing of Great Importance Is Considered—Petitions for Street Sprinkling Received—Lots of Other Business Is Transacted.

A long session of the Common Council, including a forty minute recess, marked by no business of any great importance, was held last Monday. It was the regular May meeting and all the members were present. There was no end of routine matters, including a number of ordinances for final adoption. The application made by the Central New Jersey Telephone Company for a franchise was not mentioned or considered, as it was believed it would be. The question of municipal street sprinkling was left to an executive session held after the regular meeting, and this will probably be brought up for action in the near future.

When the meeting was called, Mr. Tolles moved to suspend the regular order, so as to allow for a hearing on the proposed extension of the sanitary sewer. During this time a communication was received from O. B. Leonard, Dr. Frank S. Wells, T. E. F. Randolph and Robert McCutchen advocating the extension of the sewer system, claiming that such an improvement would be a great benefit and would tend to cause the erection of many buildings, they claimed that at least fifteen houses will be erected along the proposed route of the extension if the sewer system is provided. The communication was referred to the street and sewer committee. Later in the evening Mr. Tolles offered a resolution in connection with the proposed ordinance calling for the extension of the sewer system and moved that the ordinance be referred to the street and sewer committee to be reported upon at a later Council meeting.

Then followed a bunch of petitions and communications. The residents on the south side of West Seventh street, near Division street, asked for an electric light. The matter was referred. A communication was received from J. Fred MacDonald and other residents of Watchung avenue, asking about the proposed widening of the avenue, which the city expected to carry out after the property-owners did their share of the work. The communication was rather sharp and called the attention of the Council to the fact that no answer had been received from previous letters on the subject. The property-owners want to know what the city proposes to do about the matter. On a motion offered by Mr. Tolles, the communication was referred to the corporation counsel.

Two petitions, one headed by City Judge Wm. N. Runyon and the other by Postmaster E. H. Bird, asked the Council to consider and act upon the question of municipal street sprinkling. The petitions were referred to the street and sewer committee. A petition from A. D. Thompson and others, asking that Woodland avenue from East Seventh street to Watchung avenue be macadamized, was received and Mr. Tolles of the street committee, reported that provision had been made for this work and would be included in a general ordinance to macadamize a number of streets. A similar report was made on a petition received from Henry Leifke and others asking for the acceptance and macadamizing of West Fifth street, between Grant and Monroe avenues.

P. C. Lounsbury and others petitioned for an electric light at the corner of West Second street and Plainfield avenue, claiming the corner to be especially dark. The matter was referred.

In view of the power vested in the Common Council to appropriate special sums for the use of the Board of Health in emergency, the Board of Health, through its president, C. J Fisk, asked the Council to appropriate the board $1,386.18 in addition to the regular appropriation, in order to square accounts to January 1, 1901, on account of the care of contagious diseases, including small pox cases. The sum was appropriated.

Another communication was received from C. J. Fisk, as president of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, in which he asked the Council to remit the taxes assessed against the new hospital property, as the property was purchased for the sole purpose of building a new hospital and is exempt from taxation. The matter was referred.

The residents of Columbia avenue, between Leland avenue and Frederick street, asked for an electric light, which matter was referred, and the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 75, G. A. R., asked the Council for the usual appropriation of $100 with which to assist them in a proper observance of Memorial Day. The appropriation was granted.

The Board of Trade communicated with the Council regarding the matter of consolidating with the borough with the city, and asked the Council to appoint a committee to confer with a committee from the board to see what steps are advisable to secure such a union. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

The Potter Printing Press Company asked the Council to remit $38.14 overpaid taxes on the company's property on South Second street. This petition was referred to the finance committee.

Jacob Q. Dunham, janitor at the city offices, petitioned the Council for an increase in salary from $16 to $25 a month on the grounds that the work requires so much of his time that he believes that he is entitled to more money. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

Building Inspector T. O. Deane reported that during April thirty-three building permits were granted and Street Commissioner Gavett reported that during the same month there were twenty-four sewer permits granted. Dr. Charles B. Lufburrow, city physician, reported that between January 1 and May 1, of this city, he made in all 175 visits to the city poor. This includes thirty visits to the Insane Asylum. There was one death, Josephine Myers, in that time. He reported that the city's health at this time is very good.

L. J. Spicer resigned his position as a call-man in the fire department and his resignation was accepted on a motion by Mr. Lee, chairman of the fire committee.

At this time Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh made a report on several matters with which he has had to do. He stated that the Supreme Court had dismissed the writ in the case of M. Donavan, of the city fire department, against the city, as previously reported in these columns. Regarding the case of the American Sewage Disposal Company against the city, he reported that the complainant company had not yet concluded the taking of testimony. In the matter of the renewing the contract with the Plainfield Water Supply Company for a term of nine years, Mr. Marsh decided the question by reporting that the failure of the city to notify the company at the expiration of the contract with the city on May 1, was the same as renewing the contract for the specified time and no other action was necessary.

Mr. Marsh also reported that in the case of F. T. Rice against the city for damages to his horse, wagon and harness, by reason of an obstruction left in one of the city streets, the complainant had offered to settle the claim for $75, whereas he originally claimed $150 as damages. On Mr. Marsh's recommendation Mr. Tolles moved that a settlement be made for $75.

Still one more matter reported upon by the corporation counsel was that relative to an amendment to the city building ordinance which compells all persons in the fire limits in erecting partitions in stores or similar places to make such partition 1½ inches thick instead of ¾ of an inch and the same must be covered with plaster board and filled in with studs of brick. Mr. Lee later explained this action by saying there are now several instances where persons had erected light partitions to divide stores and these are simply fire-traps. Mr. Lee introduced an ordinance covering this point according to the amendment and it was passed on the first and second readings and ordered advertised. These partitions must extend from the floor to the ceiling and safely constructed to prevent fire spreading from one part of a store to another.

The lengthy report of George E. Collins, city auditor, was presented by Mr. Daniel, chairman of the finance committee, and read. A major portion of the report will be found in another part of The Daily Press.

In accordance with resolutions offered by Mr. Daniel the sum of $1,500 was borrowed for the improvement of the sanitary sewer system and $500 was transferred from the general to the fire fund.

A communication was received from the Town Improvement Association of Plainfield and North Plainfield in which the women offered to take care of the city park from the present time to November 1 next for $100 and make such improvements as the sum would allow. On Mr. Tolles' motion the offer was accepted and the $100 was appropriated for the specified object.

After Mr. Tolles offered an ordinance providing for the laying out, acceptance and macadamizing of West Fifth street, from Grant to Monroe avenues, according to the city ordinance covering that kind of work, he offered another ordinance providing for the macadamizing of a number of streets. The work must be done by November 30, 1901, and the ordinance provides for the issuance of thirteen bonds of $1,000 denomination each to cover the expense of the work. Commissioners are to be appointed to assess benefits and damages and the property-owners are to pay their proportionate share for the work. These bonds are to run three years and are to bear 5 per cent. interest. This ordinance, as well as the one preceding it was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised. Monday evening, June 1, was the time set for a public hearing on these proposed improvements. The streets covered in the second ordinance are as follows:

Woodland avenue, from East Seventh street to Watchung avenue; East Seventh street, from Richmond street to Belvidere avenue; East Third street and Midway avenue, from Richmond street to Berckman street; Berckman street, from Front street to Tenth avenue; Prospect avenue, from Park avenue to Hillside avenue; Sycamore street, from Fourth street to Sixth street; West Seventh street, from the present macadam to the city line; West Fifth street, from Park avenue to Monroe avenue; South Second street, from Plainfield avenue to Muhlenberg place; Albert street, from Front street to Dunellen avenue; Dunellen avenue, from Clinton avenue to Compton avenue; Rock avenue, from Middlesex county line to the southeast end of the present macadam; Darrow avenue, from West Fourth street to West Seventh street. This work is to be equally as good as the macadam on Madison avenue, between Park avenue and Fifth street.

Before the Council adjourned Mr. Daniel called up two ordinances for final adoption. One was that providing for the appropriation of $125,000 for a new City High School and the other one was the tax ordinance. Both were adopted and ordered advertised. On Mr. Tolles' motion the Council then adjourned to meet Monday evening, May 18, at 8 o'clock.

THREE DIVISIONS.

Changes in Method of Operating the Lehigh Valley System.

The contemplated changes in the operating department of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, are being discussed, as under the new plan one of the divisions will be abolished, which will necessarily make a number of changes in the officials. It is said that the first division will extend from Buffalo to Geneva; the second from Geneva to Easton and the third from Easton to New York. The large dining hall at Geneva will be closed for the purpose of providing offices for the new headquarters. It is thought that in operating this road with three divisions instead of five, as at present, a great saving will be made.

ON WEDDING DAY.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Heidloff Happily Surprised by a Party of Friends.

A surprise party was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Henry Heidloff at their home on West Front street, Wednesday evening, in honor of the fifteenth anniversary of their wedding day.

The party assembled at the home of Mrs. Margaret Sweeney, of Liberty street, at an early hour and then went to Mr. and Mrs. Heidloff's home in a body. The host and hostess were taken by surprise but most enjoyable evening was spent, when music and games were the leading features.

A piano duet was rendered by Frederick and Miss Anna Cramm, of New York; a piano solo by Miss Lillian Duckworth and several others took part in musical and vocal selections.

STREET WORK.

Busy in the Borough Putting the Macadam Streets in Condition.

Work on the streets of the borough has been progressing merrily during the past week. Delayed as first by rains and inclement weather the street committee has been making better pavements while the sun shines with the result that many of the streets in the borough are now in good condition. The work has been under the supervision of Chairman James E. Arnold, of the streets committee of the Borough Council.

There is some talk of macadamizing some of the streets but this matter has not yet been seriously considered. The five streets which will receive attention first, it is planned, will be upper Deer street and Pearl street.

A Little Early Riser

now and then, at bedtime will cure constipation, biliousness and liver troubles. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the famous little pills that cure by arousing the secretions, moving the bowels gently, yet effectually, and giving such tone and strength to the glands of the stomach and liver that the cause of the trouble is removed entirely, and if their use is continued for a few days, there will be no return of the complaint. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

CONDITION OF CITY FINANCES

Report of City Auditor Collins Shows City Accounts for Last Three Years Correct.

THE RECOMMENDATIONS

City's Liabilities and Assets Are Summed and Explained—Would Make Some Changes—It Commends Present City Officials—Text of Portion of Report.

The report of City Auditor George E. Collins was made public at last Monday's session of the Common Council. The accounts for the last three years were reviewed and found correct but Mr. Collins gave some interesting facts concerning the condition of the city's finances and made some suggestions as to the present methods which he believed would be to the advantage of the city.

This report is a voluminous one and contains many schedules of back taxes and other figures of no particular interest to the general public. There are some interesting portions of the report and these are given in full. The important portions of the report are as follows:

Audit report for the years 1900, 1901 and 1902.

In accordance with an agreement made December 27th, 1902, with Mr. George P. Mellick, then chairman of the committee on finance of the city of Plainfield, N. J., I have audited the books and accounts of the said city for the years 1900, 1901 and 1902 and the following is my report, supplemented by sundry schedules and forms.

The audit comprised a complete verification of all entries, footings and balances on the Treasurer's books, together with a comparison of vouchers, cancelled bonds, etc., with the record of cash disbursements. The verification of the footings of all records of the Tax Collector's office, postings to the tax receipt books and to the individual credit of the tax payers in the ward books as to general taxation. Footing and posting of all record of Martin act receipts and all assessments, and the comparison of all reports, pass books and other evidences that the money received had followed proper channels. A careful review of the receipts by the City Clerk of license fees of all kinds and the turning over of such funds to the city treasurer. A similar statement of the receipts of the city court for fines imposed.

The result of the work in each department will be taken up herein after and treated in detail.

The financial standing of the city as at December 31, 1902, is shown by the balance sheet, Schedule "B," the details of which, as appearing on the City Treasurer's ledger, are as follows:

LIABILITIES.

Bonds:

The city's indebtedness, represented by outstanding bonds, consists of the 4 per cent. bonds issued for sewer construction to the amount of $141,000 and two bonds of $1,000 each, for street improvement.

Bills Payable.

The notes of the city outstanding at December 31, 1902, amount to $15,461.- 88 of which $6,400 is for addition to the sewerage plant. The balance is represented by two notes for maintenance, being $4,000 for account fire department and $3,061 88 for the operation of the sewer equipment.

Martin Act Funds.

There remains in the hands of the Treasurer, balances of the proceeds of the sales of real estate for arrears of taxes, which have been conducted by authority of the Martin act, as follows:

Tax sale of 1900	$ 355 68
Tax sale of 1901	311 84
Tax sale of 1902	1,011 43
Total	$1,578 94

Further the amount paid at these sales in excess of the city's claim is included in a trust fund of $385.47, making a total held subject to redemption of $1,964 61.

M. Honan & Sons—Attached.

Being a balance of $115 40 remaining on account of a transaction in connection with the construction of the sewers.

ASSETS.

Sewer.

The book value of the sewer plant and equipment is $179 122.29 which, is in excess of the city's outstanding liability on this account by $29,722.29.

The real value of this plant is considerably in excess of the figures at which it is carried, as liberal provision for maintenance and repair is made every year and considerable money has been spent in construction, in addition to the bond issues on which the book value was based.

Fire Departments.

As great care is exercised in keeping the buildings and equipment of the fire department in the highest degree of efficiency, the value of $55,-223.47 at which the proper is carried, would seem to be moderate.

There is no debt outstanding as against this property, the whole amount having been paid from the taxes.

Martin Act Investments.

The city's purchases at the several Martin act tax sales have been as follows:

Tax sale of 1900	$4,561.93
Tax sale of 1901	203 91
Tax sale of 1902	290.97
Total	$5,055.81

Assessments Receivable.

Assessments have been levied for street improvement and macadamizing and flagging and curbing and there remains to be collected a total of $3,044.12 as detailed on the balance sheet.

Taxes Receivable.

The balances receivable on account of the taxes levied for 1900, 1901 and 1902 is shown as appearing on the Treasurer's ledger, from which record the total receivable in respect of the back years is also derived, the amount outstanding being $91,029.55.

At least $30,000 should be regarded as being doubtful of collection, as by the action of the provisions of the Martin act, all tax levied on real estate is collected after three years and what remains is made up of personal, poll and dog taxes, which are in many cases difficult to collect.

An exhaustive schedule of the arrearage has been prepared and this subject will be further commented on, under the head of the "Office of the Tax Collector," together with suggestions as to improvements in the plan of the records, aimed to simplify the work, and to increase the value of the books for the purpose of reference.

Accounts Receivable.

These balances represent amounts which were found to need adjusting, as the audit progressed, and as the funds were not in the Treasurer's hands when his accounts were closed for the year, they were here treated as accounts receivable.

Cash On Hand.

The balances on deposit, at the credit of the city on December 31, 1902, have been fully verified and were found to amount to $44,434.

Surplus.

The assets exceed the liability by the sum of $218,423.30 as the values appearing on the Treasurer's ledger and if $30,000 is deducted from the total of taxes receivable, as being doubtful of collection, as heretofore recommended, the surplus would be $188,423 30.

Office of The City Treasurer.

This office has a splendid system of double entry accounts, embracing in its scope all financial transactions relative to the city's business. The books are so operated that they not only tell a complete story of the receipts and disbursements for each department, but by a system of resource accounts, it is possible to get at the total amount applicable to each department, from each tax levy and the balances remaining uncollected of each year's taxation.

Vouchers are filed in numerical order for every item of disbursement, corresponding with the order of the entries on the cash book. They have all been compared and found correct, with the exception of those shown in Schedule "C," which have not been presented for payment.

All footings and postings were checked and the balances verified.

Office of the Tax Collector.

This office has received and passed to the City Treasurer in the three years under review, about $780,000. As with few exceptions, the individual payments are small in amount, the work involved is enormous in volume and the results are very creditable to the people in charge.

The bookkeeping methods are cumbrous, involving much unnecessary repetition and increasing the liability of errors.

Further the records are encumbered with a large volume of arrears of personal and poll tax which the Collector considers uncollectable. With a view to putting this evil before the Common Council, schedules have been made of all outstanding taxes at December 31, 1902, including everything not more than twenty years old. Many of the people named are said to be dead. Others have moved beyond the jurisdiction of the courts. It is recommended that this matter be taken up with the Collector and all that is hopelessly uncollectable, be eliminated.

Throughout the books are items marked "remitted," but as the plan of the books makes no provision for references, it is not possible to ascertain whether the remitting has been by the constituted authority, and these items have been listed with the outstandings and marked "remitted?" to bring them to your attention.

Vigorous enforcement of the law, would doubtless result in the collection of a considerable sum, and the reports of the Marshall should be of value in forming a correct judgment regarding the value of the amounts which are claimed to be uncollectable.

Those items, which in the judgment of the Council, are to be carried, as possible of collection, should be transferred to a book of arrears, which should be ruled and printed to conform to the design hereafter recommended for "ward books." The labor and expense involved would be more than compensated for by the greater facility with which they could afterward be handled and by making it possible to make all the transactions of the Collector's office, elements of a plan of absolute proof, which will be fully described under the head of "ward books."

The books, known as "ward books" can be much improved by adding columns to give the date and authority in each case where tax is remitted.

Further, if a cash column is added, in which to enter the amounts of each payment, it would be possible to prove these books with the tax receipt book, as accurately as a double entry ledger is proven. The value of such a proof cannot be over-estimated, as it would show the correctness of the posting to the individual credits of the tax payers, in the ward books, the posting of the debits for the cash received to the various years in the tax receipt books and would show the total of the balances outstanding of each year's tax levy. By these totals the City Treasurer and the Collector of Taxes would be certain that their books were in agreement. The difference between the total outstandings at any two proofs, would have to equal the cash receipts for the time elapsed between proofs, thus confirming the footings of the cash book.

A draft of the rulings and headings for the ward book with the additions suggested above, is furnished in Form "I." It will be observed that the rulings added do not necessitate increasing the size of the page, as the space needed has been taken from other columns where the spacing in the old books is unnecessarily wide.

Alteration of the original figures on the "ward books" should be strictly forbidden, as after the levy has been accepted by the Council, the figures form the basis of the records for the year. When the Assessors or others discover that a change should be made, a form prepared for this purpose, should be used and after being approved by the Council, the Collector should make the correction, entering proper reference. The papers should then be forwarded to the City Treasurer, so that he may correct his accounts and file away the papers for audit.

The book, known as the "cash book," or "delinquent cash book," is inadequate in its provisions and the title is misleading. A book planned as per form "II" will give all the information now found in the "delinquent cash book" and in addition to admitting of more accurate proof, would by its provisions for distribution, eliminate the large volume of repetition of entries, now necessary to keep up the present "tax receipt book." Whereas, a large book is filled every year, a single page would answer to summarize a year's receipts in respect of each year's tax levy; the details all being fully set forth in the cash book, form "II."

Greater safeguard should be thrown around the collection of taxes. It is due to the Collector and his bondsmen, as well as to the taxpayer, that every precaution be exercised, to place the office above criticism.

The present arrangement of the city offices is admirably adapted to a plan of checking, under which no tax receipt is a discharge, unless counter-signed by the City Auditor. The money could be received by the Collector, as at present, entered on his record, and the bill stamped "paid." The bill so stamped, should then be passed to the auditor's office, where the same and the amount of the payment should be listed on a sheet or form adapted for this purpose, the Auditor's stamp affixed, and the bill, bearing both stamps in evidence of payment, issued to the taxpayer. The Auditor's tally sheet should be forwarded direct to the Treasurer, who should compare it with the Collector's report.

By providing a moderate salaried assistant in the office of the City Clerk and Auditor, that office could arrange to conform to the office hours of the Collector of Taxes, and the very necessary improvement in the plan of work inaugurated.

Let it be clearly understood, that nothing in this suggestion, should be construed, in the slightest degree, as an attempt to reflect on the present conduct of the Tax Collector's office. On the contrary, the undoubted evidence of the integrity and faithfulness of the present incumbent only tends to emphasize the facts, that the city of Plainfield is peculiarly fortunate in the selection of its public servants and that while in making or filling the various positions of trust, plans *should be inaugurated to fully safe*guard these important offices in the future.

The audit of the Collecter's books has embraced every feature of the work of the office and such errors in bookkeeping as admitted of simple correction, have been *cheerfully ad*justed by the Collector when brought to his attention.

Items which require your consideration and authorization to correct or adjust, are set forth in schedule "E."

Office of the City Clerk.

This office receives all the fees for licenses issued to hackmen, peddlers, carters, auctioneers, etc., and a comparison of this book with the stub of the certificate book, showed every certificate accounted for, with the exceptions hereinafter noted.

The fees for advertising and transfers in respect of liquor licenses being only occasional transactions have not been so thoroughly recorded but as the absence of a record has resulted, at times, in these items being temporarily overlooked, a form for a more complete book to include all cash receipts has been prepared in compliance with the request of the City Clerk, see form "III."

City Court.

This department has kept no record of cash receipts and disbursements.

The figures used in this report have been compiled from a minute book or diary kept by the City Judge, for the period from January 1, 1900, to September 2, 1901, and from this latter date from the police blotter at police headquarters, the City Judge having no record whatever. This work was of a confused and imperfect character in the scope of an audit, as it involved the reading of the minutes of all cases to ascertain the final disposition and in all cases where fines were imposed, the listing of the dates, names and amounts.

It will be seen how necessary it is that a simple but complete record of cash receipts and disbursements be provided for the City Court. Form "IV" has been prepared to meet this need and it will be observed that in addition to furnishing a complete record of the receipts, it provides for detailed information regarding disbursement of money. This latter provision is of the utmost importance as during the three years under review, the City Judge disbursed $333 28 that did not pass through the hands of the City Treasurer.

By the adoption of this form, the [illegible] of error will be reduced and [illegible] will exist no reason why the receipts should not be passed to the Treasurer every month.

All cash disbursements should be represented by vouchers, numbered and filed to correspond with the order of their entry on the cash book, form "IV" so as to admit of satisfactory audit.

Schedule "A."

This schedule is heretofore referred to in this report under the comments on the audit of the Tax Collector's office and is composed of twenty-one supplementary books. The first two of these books show in detail the outstanding taxes of the levy in respect of the year 1902, as well as all items on the ward books for that year, that are not satisfactorily closed. This latter includes the items which are supposed to have been remitted by either the Commission of Appeal or the Common Council.

The Corporation Counsel has stated that all taxes remaining on the books after twenty years are presumed to have been paid, unless it can be proven that in the mean time a promise to pay has been made.

Guided by this opinion, schedules of the arrearage for nineteen years prior to 1902 have been prepared, a book being devoted to each year.

The volume of the outstandings and unsatisfactory credits is so large that this division into separate books as to each year, was found necessary, so as to put the subject matter into convenient form for the consideration of your committee and the Council.

The subject of proper reference to the authorization for the remitting of taxes is one that should have your careful attention, as the present methods provide no safeguard on this point whatever.

The collection of personal, poll and dog taxes, judging by the volume now in arrears, would seem to be a difficult matter, whereas the tax on real estate is certain of realization.

Therefore, it is recommended that in the future, the tax levy of each year be taken on the books of the Treasurer, in two figures.

The tax on real estate to be considered a real asset for the purpose of calculating the city's resources and the balance to be regarded as of nominal value, as otherwise the figures are liable to prove misleading, giving the impression that the surplus is much greater than it actually is.

The accounts, with the exceptions noted, are in business-like shape and in every department the city appears to be efficiently and faithfully served.

Finally.

Throughout the entire progress of the audit, I have received the kindliest treatment by the officials with whom I have been brought in contact, who have spared neither trouble nor inconvenience to afford me the most ample facility and assistance and to their several efforts is due much credit for the satisfactory results obtained.

In closing, I desire to thank you and the several members of your committee, the City Treasurer, City Clerk, Collector of Taxes, the City Judge and other officials for the courtesy with which I have been treated.

Respectfully submitted,

G. E. Collins.

THEATRICAL.

"The Sultan of Sulu," the George Ade musical comedy which is nearing its fifth consecutive month at Wallack's, has broken all records for receipts at that theatre. According to the statement of the management of the theatre Mr. Ade's piece has given the historic playhouse the largest four months' business in its history. There is every reason to believe the popular satire will continue for many months. Of the many musical numbers in the production "Since I First Met You" is perhaps the most popular. However, "U. S. A.," the new song rendered by Miss Maude Lillian Berri, the prima donna, is one of the novelties of the piece.

Klaw and Erlanger's great production of the Drury Lane spectacle, "Mr. Blue Beard," will be continued as the Knickerbocker Theatre but two weeks longer, beginning this evening. The closing performance will positively take place Saturday evening, May 16. Notwithstanding the great success of which still prevails, no extra performances will be given. Beginning this evening, therefore, but sixteen opportunities will remain in which to witness this remarkable spectacular entertainment. These will be the last times it will ever be presented in New York, it opening the New Iroquois Theatre in Chicago in September. After being presented there several months it will be seen in some of the larger cities. At the close of the engagement of "Mr. Blue Beard" at the Knickerbocker, over 300,000 people will have seen it, giving it the record of the largest attendance for its run ever scored by any attraction in New York City. Seats for all remaining performances may be ordered by mail or telegraph.

MEMORIAL FOR DR. BABCOCK.

Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards is Interested in the Movement.

Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, formerly pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, but now of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York, is prominently identified with a movement to erect a memorial to the late Dr. Malthie D. Babcock, who was pastor of the New York church. The cost of it has not been determined, but will probably reach $250,000. The memorial will consist of a wholly new edifice for Christ church, in West Thirty-fifth street, New York, and will be given by the Brick Presbyterian church. Dr. Richards refuses to say much about the plans at present.

Memorial Day Observance.

The G. A. R. Memorial Day committee met Saturday evening and completed arrangements for the observance of Memorial Day. I. L. McVoy was appointed marshall for the day and it was decided to attend divine services Sunday evening, at St. Josephs's R. C. church, North Plainfield, when Rev. Father Miller, the rector, will preach an appropriate sermon. The members of the Woman's Relief Corps will also attend this service.

To Preach Here Again.

Rev. Dr. Edward Judson, of New York, occupied the pulpit at the First Baptist church, Sunday morning and evening, and delivered two very strong sermons. Large congregations were present at both services. A week from Sunday, May 17, Dr. Judson will again preach at this church, after which he will go abroad for a year.

Water Frightened Horses.

The bursting of the hose at the fire Friday morning in the rear of 31 Somerset street caused a panic among the horses which were being shod in the blacksmith shop of Frank Hand. Two of the horses broke loose but were captured by Howard Cooper. The noise of the water pouring onto the sheet-iron side of the shop made a deafening noise which caused the panic.

Told of A. M. A.

A special service was held at the Congregational church, Sunday evening, under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society, when Rev. Ellsworth Bonfield, of New York, gave an interesting talk concerning the work of the American Missionary Association.

Went to a Dance.

The members of the Criterion Club drove to Somerville, Thursday evening, for a reception and dance.

PROMINENT MAN IN YORK

WM. W. TYLER DIED AT HOME OF HIS BROTHER IN THIS CITY.

Hydraulic Engineer of Prominence Passed Away at Home of Mason W. Tyler.

William W. Tyler, aged sixty-one years, died last Monday at 9 o'clock at the home of his brother, Col. Mason W. Tyler, of West Seventh street, following an illness of long duration. He came to Plainfield six weeks ago and since that time gradually failed.

Mr. Tyler was born at Amherst, Mass., and graduated from Amherst College in the class of '63. He afterward followed the business of a hydraulic engineer. He was an inventor and on the subject of water wheels he was considered an authority. His home was in York, Pa., and it was from that place that he came to Plainfield. He was a sterling Christian and a very active member of the Congregational church and Sunday school at York. Mr. Tyler's father was a professor of Greek in Amherst College for a great many years. He died a few years ago. Mr. Tyler leaves a mother, a wife and three children.

The funeral services will be held from the home of Col. Tyler this afternoon at 3 o'clock and interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

Knights Attended Service.

Over 100 of the members of the local Knights of Columbus attended the communion services at St. Joseph's church Sunday morning. The mass was celebrated by Rev Father Miller.

WANT SEWERS FOR BOROUGH

Sentiment of Public Meeting to Discuss Sewer Question in the Borough.

DISCUSSED PRO AND CON

Pass Resolution by Unanimous Vote That Efficient Sewerage System is Desirable for Borough—The Various Methods to Accomplish the Desired End.

Arguments for and against the adoption of a system of sewerage for North Plainfield were heard April 26, at a public hearing on the sewage question given by the Borough Sewage Commission in Baengerbund Hall. The result of the meeting was an expression of those present through a resolution, which was carried without a dissenting vote, setting forth that "it is the sense of this assemblage that an efficient sewerage system is desirable in the borough as soon as the best system for this locality has been decided upon." The resolution was offered by Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of Rockview avenue, one of the heaviest property owners in the borough.

The meeting was attended by representative property owners in North Plainfield, as well as by many interested residents in this city who have real estate interests across the brook. Chairman of the Commission B. A. Hegeman, Jr., presided at the meeting and with him upon the platform were Elston M. French, W. C. Smith, Mayor N. B. Smalley, Fred. P. Smith, representing the Municipal Sewage Disposal Works, of New York, and Joseph Wickham, a civil engineer, of the borough, who had much to do with the construction of the local disposal beds.

When the meeting was called to order by Mr. Hegeman he said that he regretted that there were not more of the people of the borough present as the meeting was held for the purpose of giving all a hearing on the matter. He stated that the commission has done all it could do with the question in examining the workings of the Plainfield system of disposal beds, studying the possibilities of tidewater drainage and ascertaining the approximate cost of arranging with this city to use its plant near Dunellen. He stated that the commission had arrived at the conclusion that tidewater drainage was the ideal method of disposing of the borough sewage but the cost was almost prohibitive. It would probably cost in the neighborhood of $250,000 which at 5 per cent. interest would bring the amount to about $4,000 a year which would also mean that the running expenses would run up to about $16,000. This would mean an increase in the tax rate of 64 points. A septic plant as Plainfield now uses would cost about $90,000 approximately, if it would comply with the requirements of the State Sewage Commission. The least expensive plan would effect an arrangement with Plainfield whereby North Plainfield could use the disposal plant of this city. This would cost about $15,000, including the cost of raising the sewerage matter by means of an electric pump, four feet to overcome the grade. The most desirable plan was to build a trunk sewer to tidewater with Dunellen, Plainfield and North Plainfield sharing the cost.

Some interesting points in regard to the working of a disposal bed were given by Mr. Smith, of New York. He said the chief objection to tidewater drainage was the great distance over which it would be necessary to run piping. He told of the functions of the septic tank. He said that there could be no objection to emptying the effluent into such a stream as Green brook if a proper septic tank and disposal bed were used. He cited the system now in use at Morris Plains where the effluent empties into the stream which furnishes the water supply to Jersey City. That water, he said, was very pure and was of a high standard. He said that in order to further guarantee a perfect system a tall chimney could be built to carry off the gases but this would necessitate heat. This could be secured by a garbage crematory which could be fed by organic matter secured from the bottom of the septic tanks and the other refuse matters from the city. The crematory would pay the entire cost of the maintainance of the disposal plant.

Joseph O. Osgood told of the workings of the local system. He stated that many erroneous articles have appeared in regard to that system and that few people have a clear idea of the workings of the plant. He explained clearly what the functions of the plant were and told why it did not work satisfactorily in the first place, ascribing the reason to poor quality of sand through which the material was filtered. He said that in some plants the purification of the sewage matter was secured through the use of chemicals, but, in his opinion, the best way was to have a system of a combination of septic tanks and contact beds. He said that in this manner 60 per cent. of the organic matter was purified in the tanks and 30 per cent. of purification was obtained in the contact beds. The rest of the complete purification was secured by oxygen as the effluent passed from the contact beds to and in the streams into which it emptied. This gives 90 per cent. of purification in the plant and the other 10 per cent. in the stream making the effluent perfectly pure. The State analysis of the effluent from the local beds is 80 per cent. purification.

Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed gave his opinion in regard to the law bearing on any action which might be taken by the meeting in writing and said that a petition must be signed by at least ten property owners; that said property owners must give their consent to the proposed measure in writing; that a majority of the voters of the borough would have to agree to it and that the Mayor and Council could issue bonds to install the system in case there are funds to put the system in working order.

A few remarks were made by Mayor Newton B. Smalley who said that in his mind it was only a short time before that matter would be settled whether or not sewers would be installed in the borough and that the meeting was called for the purpose of having the public spirited citizens of the borough express an opinion as to whether they wanted such a system or not. He said that he believed that the borough was ready for some system as the present method is very crude and that he hoped the improvement would eventually come about. During the course of his remarks he said that within a radius of a block there were no less than twenty-five cesspools, many of which are constantly emitting a stench which, at night, is almost unendurable. He said that such a system was a menace to the public health.

The meeting was then thrown open to the property owners represented.

Dr. H. K. Carroll was the first one to speak. He said he did not want to see an experimental system installed but, if one must come, he wanted one which had been tried and had not been found wanting. He thought the findings of the commission should be put in print so that all could study the facts at their leisure. Tidewater drainage, in his opinion, was the only system of the different ones he was opposed to taking any action which might be binding, at present.

From the real estate dealer's standpoint, Charles H. Lyman, of Washington avenue, gave arguments why sewers should be installed, and the sooner the better. He stated that in his opinion it was not any more expensive to have the tax rate go up a few points than to spend large amounts each year cleaning out vile smelling cesspools. He told of some cases, a few of many with which he daily comes in contact, of persons settling and purchasing property in Plainfield because North Plainfield was not equipped with a system of sewers.

"Look at the tax rate in Plainfield and then look at it in North Plainfield," he said. "Have we sewers in North Plainfield? No. Have we sewers in Plainfield? Yes. Then look at the valuation of property in Plainfield, some land in the residential section of the town sells for $75 per foot, while I have trouble in getting rid of property in the borough for $20 per foot."

W. W. Howland was one of those who objected to the proposed improvement, saying: "I do not think we need sewers in the borough at present. The subject is a very important one and we have learned a great deal here this evening. The only system before us is the Plainfield one and whether that one is the best of its kind or not we do not know. It seems to me that it would be wiser not to take any action at this time but give the commission an opportunity of looking further into the matter."

William J. Buntfield, of Rockview Heights, said that the question before the meeting was, in a sewer needed and what would be the cost. He said that Plainfield has experimented but North Plainfield should benefit by the experience of her neighbor and secure the best system. He was in favor of the scheme.

Senator Charles Reed said that if no sewer is necessary it is not necessary to decide which system was the best. He said that it would be a good thing to have some kind of a system in North Plainfield so as to do away with cesspools. He did not believe in the theory of years ago that anything was good enough. He said that just as soon as the borough gets sewers the value of property would rise.

John Goodwin spoke against the plan because he thought it would increase the tax rate while Dr. J. H. Cooley argued: "I believe we want some system of sewers in the borough but I do not believe that we want to try any experiments. I am in favor of a sewerage system in the borough. I have found that overflow cesspools have done excellent work but the day of the sewer in North Plainfield can not come too soon."

Mayor of Plainfield Olin L. Jenkins was present and said that as he was a property owner in the borough he was prompted to attend the meeting to urge some kind of a sewerage system. He told of how he had to pay $20 a year to have cesspools cleaned and further said that the tax rate for sewers in the borough would never amount to that per year. He said that as soon as the sewerage was carried off in some kind of a system property would increase in value.

From the tenure of the remarks made at the meeting last evening it is very plain that the bulk of the property owners of the borough are heartily in favor of having some kind of a sewerage system installed in the borough and the fact that the resolution offered by Mr. Saunders was carried without a dissenting vote shows that they are tired of the crude methods now in vogue and that they desire a change as soon as it can be brought about.

REAL CIRCUS BY AMATEURS

I. C. T. Club Has Arranged to Give An Amateur Circus With Some Assistance.

MAKING GREAT PLANS

A. A. Duchesnois, of New York, Will Assist the Committee—Will be Given May 21 and 22, With One Matinee—Full Brass Band—Other Details of Affair.

After working secretly on the project for the last month, the I. C. T. Club has made announcement that it will shortly go into the amusement line on a large scale and give a circus in Plainfield, the like of which the citizens have never seen before. Not only will the club members themselves show what they can do in the tan bark ring, but they will be assisted by professionals from New York with a great array of horses, animals, musicians and the like, not forgetting the golden chariots and the aggregation of side show freaks and prodigies. The plan will require a large outlay of money and energy and the club has resolved to use both to make the affair a distinct success.

Arrangements with the club committee will be A. A. Duchesnois, of New York, who has years of experience in conducting amateur circuses and who with the famous Harry Lehr, gave the great society circus at Newport last year. He was in this city, yesterday, and expressed himself as being confident that the I. C. T. Club could carry out its part. He has already been engaged by citizens of New Rochelle, Kingston and Mount Vernon, N. Y., to assist them in giving similar amateur affairs in those places next month.

As planned at present, the circus in this city will be given on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, May 21 and 22, with one matinee. Three tents will be used, the largest where the main show is to be given having a capacity of 1,800. A full brass band will furnish the music. Committees have already been appointed and the young men are now at work completing details. Regular rehearsals in charge of Mr. Duchesnois will not be commenced until two weeks before the dates announced.

THEATRICAL.

The management of Wallack's Theatre in New York is preparing a dainty souvenir to be presented to George Ade at the end of the coming week when "The Sultan of Sulu" will have completed the fourth month of its phenomenal success on Broadway. The object of the souvenir is to mention Mr. Ade, as it were, for having written the merry musical success that has given Wallack's the largest four-months business in its history. "The Sultan of Sulu" has repeatedly broken every record made at this historic playhouse and will enter its fifth month with no apparent sign of waning popularity. In "The Sultan of Sulu" Mr. Ade is said to have a piece that promises to earn royalties for the humorist several years to come.

It will be good news for the little patrons of Keith's Theatre, New York, that Burkes' troupe of trained dogs has been engaged for next week. These animals possess the keen canine sense to a marked degree, so much so in fact that they appear to have humane intelligence. Bellman and Moore will present the comedy sketch "Hester's Promise." This is perhaps as neat a piece of work as is done on the vaudeville stage today. To the old timers the announcement that John Kernell will appear will mean much, and to those who have never seen this sterling Irish comedian a treat is in store. Cole and Johnson, the colored 'pets of New York's "400," will do their colored aristocracy, introducing original songs and witticisms. Ward and Curran in "The Terrible Judge" will provoke many a laugh, while the neat dancing and comedy work of the Hoovers cannot fail to please. Another artist in the dancing line is John Ford, who in his style has no rival in the world. Funny sketches in crayon by Chalk Saunders; Clarice Vance, the southern singer; Brooks Bros., comedians; Charles Howard, in Hebrew characters, together with many others, complete a bill that is fully up to Mr. Keith's high standard.

All reports from Buffalo, Utica and other cities up-State where "There and Back" was presented agree that the Messrs. Shubert have the laughing success of the decade in this play by George Atlas. Chas. E. Evans and Chas. H. Hopper have roles which seem to have been specially moulded for them and the laughs come so fast that the audiences are in continual roar while the curtain is up. During the engagement of "There and Back," at the Princess, which begins Monday, April 30, Percy Bouclault appears in a delightfully sentimental creation, a twenty-minute curtain raiser entitled "The Man Who Stole the Castle."

Klaw and Erlanger's spring production this season will be George V. Hobart and Edward E. Rose's new American farce, "John Henry," in which Dan Daly will play the title role. It will receive its premiere in Philadelphia, May 11, and, after two weeks in that city, will be presented at the Herald Square Theatre in New York for a run, opening Monday evening, May 25. The foundation of the story of the new laugh-maker is comic incidents from Mr. Hobart's humorous sketches of the same title, which published in four small volumes, have made the record-breaking sale of 265,000 copies. Mr. Hobart and Mr. Rose have translated "John Henry" with all his strong individuality and merry revel in original extravagance of speech, to the stage in an attractive story, into which they have interwoven his most comic adventures and the characters who have most interested the hundreds of thousands of readers who have laughed to the limit of human endurance in their perusal of these sketches. This role is one peculiarly suited to Mr. Daly, who will make his first appearance in years in a comedy part outside a musical production. In personality, natural drollery of speech and stage methods he is exactly suited to it.

Social of Young Women's Club.

The Young Women's Club held its monthly social, Thursday evening. There were vocal and instrumental solos by Miss Justina Smith, followed with games and the serving of refreshments. The entertainment committee consisted of Miss Leahy, Miss Moralles and Miss Agnes Morse, while Miss Dora Wilson and Miss Nellie Clarkson had charge of the refreshments.

Usher at Notable Wedding.

Elsworth Dwight, of New York, formerly of Rockview avenue, was one of the ushers Thursday evening at the wedding in the Rutgers Presbyterian church, New York, of Miss Jesse Campbell McIntyre, daughter of Ewen McIntyre, to Francis L. Patton, Jr., son of former President Patton, of Princeton University.

Trip to Sweden.

Mrs. Harry Johnson, wife of the steward of the Park Club, accompanied by Miss Christina Olsen and Miss Freda Anderson, will leave this city in the early part of June for Sweden where they will visit their homes for three months, returning late in September or early in October.

Plain Food on Royal Tables.

There is a considerable list of illustrious persons who have been content with the simplest pleasures of the table. It was not thought undignified at Windsor in Queen Victoria's time to serve apple tart for luncheon, or the homeliest pudding. The apple tart was served on silver plate, but it remained apple tart for all that. In India, however, such unaffected dishes do not harmonize with viceregal splendor. It is related that the viceroy's eye lighted one day upon a dish at which he gazed for a moment with incredulity. "What is this?" he demanded at last. A trembling retainer gasped that it was rice pudding. No less a personage than the viceroy's consort had ordered the humble pudding which eminent statesmen may be seen eating at their coffers with undisguised enjoyment any day of the parliamentary session. But the viceroy frowned. "Take it away," he said. "Never let me see such a thing again." This is how the orient differs from the occident. Rice pudding might have ruined the dignity of the viceregal table in native opinion.—London Chronicle.

All Mixed Up.

"Is it correct to say that Gen. Blazes received a reception?"

"Er—no—well it doesn't sound just right, but"—

"Well, the citizens gave him one, didn't they?"

"Yes."

"And he received it, didn't he?"

"Well, he didn't refuse it, anyhow; but, see here! He was received by the citizens, wasn't he?"

"Yes."

"How could he receive and be received at the same time?"

"Yes; but when they gave him the reception he received them all and shook hands with them, didn't he?"

"To be sure, but they received him with a reception at which he received them and accepted their congratulations with a cordial reception—oh, hang this language, anyhow!"—Washington Times.

Weighing a Perfume.

An Italian physicist, Signor Salvioni, has devised a microbalance of such extreme delicacy that it clearly demonstrates the loss of weight of musk by volatilization. Thus the invisible perfume floating off in the air is indirectly weighed. The essential part of the apparatus is a very thin thread of glass, fixed at one end and suspended horizontally. The microscopic objects to be weighed are placed upon the glass thread near its free end, and the amount of flexure produced is observed with a microscope magnifying 100 diameters. A mere nothing—weighing one-thousandth of a milligram perceptibly bends the thread.—Science Siftings.

German Benefactress.

Representatives of all the kings of Europe marched in the funeral procession of the late Baroness von Cohn-Oppenheim, daughter of the old Emperor William's banker. The baroness was a benefactress on a grand scale and did more for literature and art than all the princes of Germany together. Some time ago, when a number of poor people lost money in a bank in which she was interested, she paid their claims, amounting to $2,000,000, in full.—London Mail.

I. C. T. CLUB GAVE A STAG

ONE OF MOST SUCCESSFUL ENTERTAINMENTS GIVEN BY THAT CLUB.

Musical Selections and Boxing Bouts by Local Celebrities—Refreshments Served.

Strictly speaking, it was a "stag" the I. C. T. Club rendered its members and friends, April 29, but in reality it was one of the most enjoyable affairs the organization has ever conducted. The attendance was so large as to fill the large hall and the fun did not lax for a moment.

A feature of the lengthy programme which had been prepared was a number of boxing bouts by local celebrities. Some of the teams were the Mullen Brothers, Tommy and Willie, Buckley and Brown, McCray and Wilson and McDonough and Johnson. All are expert with the mits and the contests were close and exciting.

Other numbers on the programme were the Black Diamond quartette, composed of John Taylor, Oscar Green, Walter Britton and William Wilson, in vocal and instrumental selections and fancy dancing, piano selections by William Harsell, vocal solos by Fred Bowden and phonograph selections by Joseph Mills. It was midnight before the affair was concluded by serving refreshments.

The committee which had charge of the affair consisted of Leonce Texier, chairman; Howard Drake and George L. Apgar.

MILLIONS SPENT IN BUILDING UP COAST

A Remarkable Growth Since Last Season of Some of Jersey's Coast Resorts.

MUCH BUILDING NOTED

ALLENHURST AND DEAL HAVE SEEN A SPECIAL BOOM.

Long Branch Railroad Will Join the March of Progress—Asbury Park Will be the Centre of the Several Shore Resorts.

The changes that have been wrought on the north Jersey coast during the last winter and the march of progress in the pretty summer resorts are more pronounced and noticeable south of Elberon than in the towns north of Long Branch. In the development of this wonderful chain of summer resorts there is much variety in plan and detail, but a singleness of purpose which is too marked to be regarded as purely accidental. While the boroughs of Deal and Allenhurst are without any physical lines of separation, they are equally favored by the wealthy class, which has been making extraordinary inroads on the wide and sandy area which only a few years ago was the substance of a few Jersey farmers who long ago were gathered to their fathers.

During the last year Allenhurst and Deal have witnessed the upbuilding of many stately structures and the manifest tendency of the times is in the direction of vast expenditure. The new clubhouse at Allenhurst, grand and massive though it is, and representing the acme of architectural aspiration on the Jersey coast, is but the type of still greater and more imposing effort of the architects who have steadfast and patient active incubation for the ensuing fall.

There is, also, noticed in the development of the shore towns a desire on the part of the summer residents to build costly casinos, around which the several cottage contingents may cluster and form their social centres of summer entertainment.

With the purchase of the beach at Asbury Park, and the expressed intention of that ambitious and populous coast centre to become a winter resort, has come also a significant promise of the railroad companies to work hand in hand with the people for the upbuilding of the entire north Jersey shore.

It is said that the New York and Long Branch Railroad Company will expend $6,000,000 in straightening its tracks and providing means for quick transit between New York and Asbury Park.

That Asbury Park is to become the centre of this great system of summer resorts is regarded there as practically conceded. Asbury Park is ready to accept and prepare for her future greatness, and the purchase of the beach, its improvement and development is but the prelude of the Greater Asbury Park.

It is conservatively estimated that upward of $3,000,000 has been expended on the north Jersey coast since last summer. This vast sum represents only the individual construction of summer homes and public buildings, and does not include the important network of municipal improvements, which has been carried forward with remarkable liberality. More than $180,000 has been expended for the construction of sewers, extension of gas mains, the introduction of new water systems, the grading of streets and the protection of the sea front.

Under depressing conditions, with labor dissatisfied and menacing, and with the precipitation of local strikes which helped to retard the work and dampen the enthusiasm of prospective builders there have been constructed between South Elberon and Sea Girt nearly 100 new buildings since last summer—almost a town in a few months.

Locomotives Apienty.

The Rock Island Railroad is buying twenty locomotives a month. Rather expensive, when the average cost of a new locomotive is $16,000. The Pennsylvania orders are for something like 400 locomotives. The Atlantic type of locomotive has been adopted for passenger service on the Pennsylvania system, east and west of Pittsburg.

The X-Rays.

Recent experiments, by practical tests and examination with the aid of the X-Rays, establish it as a fact that Catarrh of the Stomach is not a disease of itself, but that it results from repeated attacks of indigestion. CLUB WOMEN'S ANNIVERSARY

Great Event of Monday Afternoon Club at Casino Thursday Afternoon.

WERE OVER 200 PRESENT

After Anniversary Breakfast Came a Charade Written by Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, a Musical Programme and Toasts—Miss Kenyon Sketched History of Club.

An elaborate breakfast, a bright comedy charade performed by a capable cast and well rendered musical selections united to make memorable the entertainment of the Monday Afternoon Club Thursday at the Casino. The brilliant programme was in fitting celebration of the club's fifteenth anniversary.

After the breakfast menu had been discussed, several toasts were given as announced in yesterday's Press, and an anniversary song written by Mrs. Isaac Miller was sung. The toast on the club's history by Miss Ellen Elvira Kenyon was among the best of the afternoon. Miss Kenyon was the founder and first president of the club which was organized in 1889, incorporated in 1889 and admitted to State federation in 1894. The club has had seven presidents as follows: Miss Ellen E. Kenyon, 1888-90, '92-'94; Mrs. David P. Hall, 1890-92; Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, 1894-96; Mrs. William H. Sterling, 1896-97; Mrs. Edward C. Perkins, 1897-99; Mrs. John M. Whiton, 1899-1901; Mrs. Edwin W. Conklin, 1901.

Following the toasts and anniversary song a "Charade in Three Words" by Mrs. Florence Howe Hall was produced. This was a short comedy sketch including delightful singing and dancing. It was cleverly written and thoroughly enjoyed by all. The cast was as follows:

First Word—First Kate Greenaway Girl, Miss Fredricka Mead; Second Kate Greenaway Girl, Miss Louise Saunders; Third Kate Greenaway Girl, Miss Alice Haven; Fourth Kate Greenaway Girl, Miss Lillian Kline.

Second Word—Bridget the Cook, Mrs. Charles E. Brooks; Mary the Waitress, Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch; Mrs. Gayety, Mrs. David P. Hall; Miss Gayety, Miss Viola P. Conklin; Walking Delegate, Mrs. Charles A. Stover.

Third Word—Hercules, Mrs. Josephus H. Howell; Omphale, Mrs. Charles E. Brooks.

In the interim between the parts of the charade, the following music was rendered:

CLASS ANNIVERSARY.

Mock Trial Was Chief Event at a Pleasant Gathering.

Class No. 15, of Trinity Reformed Sunday-school, was entertained last Thursday night at the Albert Schomp, of West Front street. The affair was held in celebration of the first anniversary of the class. A business meeting preceded the social part of the evening when reports were read and addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the church, and Elmer Wheeler.

A mock trial was one of the pleasing features of the evening. Charles M. Dolliver acted as judge while the lawyer for the plaintiff was Thomas Tuner and for the defendant, Albert Schomp. Miss Bessie Wilcox, W. J. Trembath, Clarence Rittenhouse, Frank Platts and Mrs. W. J. Trembath, took the leading parts. The prisoner before the bar, Rittenhouse, was acquitted and those present celebrated the occasion with musical selections.

Among those who were present as guests were Superintendent of the Sunday-school Fred E. Smith, Rev. Cornelius Schenck and Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Martin.

To Open Camp in June.

According to the present plans Miss Sara Curry and her children from the Little Missionary's Day Nursery, New York, will take possession of the Nethercwod Fresh Air Home early in June, when it is believed that all the improvements will be completed and the home will be ready for occupancy.

Headquarters for Nurses.

During the early part of May Miss Waters, Miss Doughty, Miss Kiernan, Miss Stewart, Miss Fitzsimmons and Miss Anderson, all trained nurses, will take up their residence at the corner of Park avenue and Fifth street, in the house occupied by Dr. Charles G. Davis, dentist.

Letters from Women

Cured by the use of Kodol are received daily. These ladies nearly all begin with indigestion or other stomach disorder.

If the food you eat fails to give strength to your body, it is because the juices assisted by the stomach and digestive organs are inadequate to transform the nutrient properties of the food into blood. That is indigestion. The system is deprived of the kind of nourishment required to keep up the strength, and the result is that one or more of the delicate organs gradually grows weak, and then weaker, until finally it is diseased. Here a great mistake is made. That of treating the diseased organ. The best doctors in the land make this very mistake. Why should they? It is so easy to see that the trouble is not there.

Kodol Cures

This famous remedy puts the stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition so that rich, red blood is sent coursing through the veins and arteries of every muscle, tissue and fiber throughout every organ of the entire body, and by Nature's law of health, full vigor, health and strength are restored to each.

Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders.

I have taken Kodol for nearly two months after each meal and find it the only remedy that gave relief from the terrible pains I endured. After a time I would take it but once a day, and now, while I keep a bottle handy, I seldom need it, as it has cured me.—Mrs. J. W. Coolbaugh, Milo Center, N. Y.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 10.—Comment by Rev. T. H. Doyle.

Topic.—What does the story of Zaccheus teach us?—Luke xix, 1-10.

When Louis Kossuth visited the United States, so great was the enthusiasm for Hungary that the trees around the New York Battery were crowded with people who had climbed there to see the distinguished stranger as he passed. That Zaccheus could not get to Christ for the crowd, but had to walk out the avenue ahead of the procession and climb a tree to see him, argues greatly for the popularity of our Saviour.

This story is one of the most interesting in the life of Christ and suggests many useful lessons.

1. Some occupations hinder our coming to Christ.

He was a Roman tax gatherer, and as his business represented Roman oppression it was unspeakably hateful to the Jews. His case was aggravated because he was the chief of the publicans—because he resorted to extortion and because he was a renegade Jew, and thus become a traitor to his country.

There are businesses now which no man can follow and be on the road to heaven. There are even legitimate lines of business in which it is hard to be a Christian. We may let a good business so fill our minds and hearts that we have no time for Christ.

2. Some personal characteristics may hinder us from coming to Christ. Zaccheus's little of stature, a mere mite of a man. When he came to the crowded street, he was unable to see. Big, burly fellows would push the hated dwarf to one side. He might have rid himself of his despised business, but he could not "by taking thought add one cubit to his stature."

Some have traits of disposition, such as pride, stubbornness, love of pleasure and fashion, evil habits and inherited passions that make it harder to enter the kingdom.

3. Some broad shouldered man hides our view of Christ.

Wherever Zaccheus went he always found a broad shouldered man between him and the object he wished to see. How many little people allow some great man of their community to obstruct their view of Christ! When you try to lead them into the kingdom some great shouldered man comes up between them and salvation. They say to your entreaties, "There are Dr. Blank and Professor So-and-so, who are as good as any Christians, yet they are not members of the church." The great man hides their view of Christ.

4. An intense desire to see Jesus will be rewarded with success.

Zaccheus conquered his difficulties. It may have been curiosity, but curiosity led to conviction when it leads to Christ. If he could not get through the crowd, he could run ahead of it. If he was small, he could piece out the shortness of his stature by adding to it the height of that sycamore tree. To see Jesus was the desire that drew the sordid earth to a higher point of view. "Where there's a will there's a way."

5. Jesus Christ is searching for us.

Christ was searching for Zaccheus first—before Zaccheus believed Christ came into Zaccheus' town and down Zaccheus' street and along to the tree on which Zaccheus sat. Looking up He saw Zaccheus, and, speaking his name, said, "Come down." "The Son of Man came to seek and to save that which was lost." When we are searching for Christ and Christ is searching for us, salvation will come to our house.

Nineteen stories and articles and one hundred and twelve illustrations form the contents of the May Cosmopolitan. J. Henniker Heaton, M. P., contributes an article on the British Parcel Post—particularly timely, in view of the plan, about which the entire mercantile world is showing so wide an interest, to introduce into this country the system of carrying parcels in the mail. Ella Adelia Fletcher is the author of a charmingly illustrated essay on "The Power and Beauty of Woman's Eyes." The wonderful possibilities of scientific corn culture are explained in an illustrated paper, by A. D. Shamel, of the Illinois Experiment Station, entitled "The Marvels of Corn Culture," illustrated with a series of exemplifying photographs. Sir Edwin Arnold has written for this issue of The Cosmopolitan an entertaining essay on a strange subject for him to treat—the tying of knots, with many practical illustrations. The May Cosmopolitan is remarkably strong in fiction. Among the contributors are Henry Seton Merriman, Olivier Henry Frank R. Stockton, Julia Valentine Bond and Tom Masson.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 10, "Obedience to Our Kingly Text," John xv. 10; I John iii, 22.

Abiding in love.

Jesus said, "If ye keep My commandments, ye shall abide in My love."

This must mean at the very surface of it that those who obey His commands He will continue to love. If there was no more than this, it is sufficient to prompt all really devout souls to follow His will and orders. The promise that He will love us is enough of incentive to attract to loyal obedience. How can any one expect the continued regard of the Lord, how abide in His love, if there be disregard of His will and rebellion against His orders?

Looked at from one point of view the commands of Christ are the announcement of the absolutely unalterable laws of all spiritual life. They are no mere demands of an arbitrary and irrational will. They are based in the very nature of spiritual existence. They are the essential truth, and Jesus tells us of them because He loves us and would lead us into all the fullness of blessed life. The only possible path to safety is to keep in love of Jesus. He not only tells us what the rules are, but He keeps them Himself and so opens the way for us to fellowship forever with Himself and the Father.

But we may go a step beyond this and discover that our loves above are as firmly knotted around our natures by this obedience as they are bound in His nature. Whoever receives an order and obeys it, by that very act fastens in his own nature a new regard for the one obeyed. He gives love as well as receives it. Obedience confirms and establishes our love to Christ. The more we know of His will and the more fully we keep it the deeper become our attachment to Him and His purposes. We identify ourselves with all His mind and work. We love Him as really as He loves us.

Obtaining requests. "And whatsoever we ask of Him." This is a direct consequence. It is not a species of favoritism. It is not in the ordinary sense of reward. Identical interests, appreciative knowledge of His purpose, active participation in His work, leads to asking such things as shall make us more completely helpful in His blessed work and closer to His loving regard. Before the request is offered by us it was prompted in us by His loving gracious spirit.

Obedience is not a strait jacket, but is the joyous upleaping of a soul to express itself. It is loving response to a loving call. Obedience is not a chain to fetter us outwardly; it is a spirit within responding to a call to companionship and coworking.

In the Shadow.

We must all go there sometimes. The glare of the daylight is too brilliant. We become injured and unable to discern the delicate shades of color or appreciate neutral tints—the shadowed chamber of sickness, the shadowed house of mourning, the shadowed life from which the sunlight has gone. But not; it is the shadow of God's hand. He is leading thee. There are lessons which can be learned only there. The photograph of His face can be only fixed in the dark chamber. But do not suppose that He has shut thee aside. Thou art still in His quiver; He has not flung thee away as a worthless thing. He is only keeping thee close till the moment comes when He can send thee most swiftly and surely on some errand in which He will be glorified. O shadowed, solitary one, remember how closely the quiver is bound to the warrior, within easy reach of the hand and guarded jealously!—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

Only One Way.

There is really only one way to live a genuine, healthy, useful, Christian life, and that is never to draw any pressing notes for our blessed Lord and Saviour, but to perform the duty of the hour in the hour and to take the next step that is right before us. The eccentric John Randolph once cried out in his shrill tones: "Mr. Speaker, I have discovered the philosopher's stone. It is, 'Pay as you go.'" This is as sound a maxim in religion as in finance. A vow of consecration is a rightful, solemn, legitimate act, but, like the vow of wedlock, is to be of perpetual obligation. To perform a vow means to do at once our dear Master's bidding. The secret of faithful keeping of our vows to Him is to keep our hearts in the love of Jesus.—Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler.

Care For Our Souls.

See how men throw overboard the lading of the ship when it becomes a question of care for their lives. Reason teaches them that the less precious must go first. They do not throw over first their gold and then their corn; neither do they lose their lives to save their ingots. So let us, above all things, care for our souls and their eternal interests.—Episcopal Recorder.

Making the Most of It.

We may not have much ability, but if we are faithful in the exercise of the little we have, we shall find our labor as much as intending it, either awake or encourage others of greater power to do their best.—Lutheran.

Each Day's Motto.

To choose this motto each day
Will be a blessed plan:
I'll try to do one good, kind deed
For Jesus if I can.

I'll try to see in other lives
What He would have me do
And in a tender, loveless way
Be kind and good and true.

I'll try to make each little day
Record one deed of love
Which I may read at eventide

"CELLAR GANG" BROKE GROUND

Started Excavation for the New Borough Engine House With Much Ceremony.

GREAT CROWD PRESENT

Mayor Smalley Handled the First Shovelful of Earth, Then Members of "Cellar Gang" Took Their Turn—Social Time Followed and Everyone Rejoiced.

Thirty strokes of the fire bell over the Warren engine house on Somerset street announced the formal beginning for Mayor N. B. Smalley to take the first shovelful of earth from the site of the new engine house of the North Plainfield fire department, and the work on the new headquarters was formally started. Three rousing cheers rose on the still night air as Mayor Smalley plunged a shovel into the earth and tossed its contents into a waiting cart. Three more cheers rose from three hundred lusty throats when Chief T. Dunn Doane, of the Plainfield department, dug a shovelful of earth and then, amid a continuous round of cheers and the sounding of bells of nearly fifty bicycles, the members of the famous "cellar gang" fulfilled their agreement and dug steadily at the excavation for almost an hour.

The celebration of so great an event in the borough fire department as the starting of the building of the new headquarters was attended with appropriate ceremonies. Long before the appointed hour large numbers of people gathered at the scene of the excavation and gained points of vantage from whence they could view the digging of the first shovelful of earth. At 7:15 the members of the engine company, accompanied by the West End Hose Company, marched out of the engine house behind the hose truck and, headed by the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, marched to the residence of Recorder Thomas Doud, of Duer street, to secure picks and shovels and then through the principal streets of the Park and business section of the borough.

The parade was headed by Chief Julius J. Stahl and Assistant Chief Herman Klinsman. The guests of honor were Mayor N. B. Smalley and members of the Common Council and Chief of the Plainfield Fire Department M. O. Doane. Some carried red fire torches and lanterns.

At 7:22 the fire bell began to ring and at 7:33 Mayor Smalley amid resounding cheers raised the first spadefull of dirt. By 7:37 the first cart, the largest one of the two dozen on hand, started to leave the site for the dumping grounds near the house of Joseph A. Blatz. Mayor Smalley, when he had laid down his shovel, proposed three cheers for the new engine house which were responded to by over three hundred citizens. Chief Stahl proposed a three cheers for the Mayor which were responded to equally as heartily after which the members bent their backs to the work.

After the work had been finished at the lot the members of the "cellar gang" repaired to the rear of Debele & Stahl's store a few doors away where refreshments were served. A social time followed the gathering there when souvenirs of the occasion were distributed among the members. On a neat little card was printed the date and a gentle reminder of the occasion was attached, a silver plated shovel almost three inches in length. This was gotten up by William Debele and J. J. Stahl, two of the leading members of the company.

The members of the "cellar gang" who started the work last evening were: Recorder Thomas Doud, John Carney, Chief Julius J. Stahl, Lafayette Rosenstahl, Bert Bodine, David Bodine, S. B. Joseph, Alonso Brokaw, John Schenck, Louis Fairchild, Jacob Higgins, Patriot Kellegher, Frank Kessler, Merton F. Langer, Thomas McGann, James Newman, William Rickert, Edward Smith, Raymond Schenck, C. O. Smith, George Stewart, George Schierath, Charles Stahl, Rudolph Spiegel, Elden Smalley, James Walker, George Hammer, Philip Kirch, Warren McLaughlin, William Krewson and E. F. Conover.

The cellar, of course, was not completed last night, but the excitement for the excavation for the work was awakened to Mobus Brothers last week and the will be pushed ahead as fast as possible.

The shovel used by Mayor Smalley was donated by A. M. Griffen. It will be silver plated and suitably engraved with the name of the donator and the Mayor with the names of the Chief of the fire department and members of the Borough Council.

BONDS FOR ENGINE HOUSE DISPOSED OF

Sold by Borough Council to Plainfield Trust Company for a Premium.

AT COUNCIL MEETING

SCHOOL BOARD WANTS BACK INTEREST ON MONEY BORROWED.

Claim Admitted by Borough Counsel—Appropriation Made to Grand Army for Memorial Day—The Routine Business Transacted.

Bids were opened for bonds for the new engine house in the borough, an appropriation of $25 was voted for Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., for its Decoration Day celebration, a matter regarding the payment of back interest on money borrowed for school expenses by the Borough Board of Education, were the principal items discussed last Friday at the regular monthly meeting of the Borough Council in the Council Chambers. All the members were present excepting Councilman Nichols.

The bids for the fire house bonds were received shortly after the meeting opened. The bid of the Plainfield Trust Company for $10,100 for 4 per cent. bonds expiring on January 1, 1915, was the highest of the three received. It was awarded to the local banking concern. The others were from W. J. Hayes, bankers, of Cleveland, O., for $9,900 and Dicken, Robinson & Company, of New York, bankers, $10,002.

A communication was received from the Plainfield Board of Trade proposing that a committee of three be appointed by the Mayor to confer with a committee from the City Council and a committee of four from the Board of Trade to see what could be done in the way of a consolidation of the two towns. Mayor Smalley appointed Councilmen Robert Clark, Jr., Charles L. Lee and Morris G. VanArsdale.

A communication was received from the Board of Education of North Plainfield calling attention to the present school law which provides that when a school tax has been voted and assessed but has not all been collected, the shortage shall be made up from taxes received from other purposes or borrowed by the borough to make good this deficiency. The board claimed that the law had not been observed, with the result that the board had been compelled in the past to borrow in anticipation of such taxes to meet school expenses and the interest charges met from school funds while properly they should have been borne by the borough. This letter stated that $633.03 in interest has been paid out of the school funds since 1897 and asked if it was not proper to have it refunded from the general fund of the borough account.

This matter was referred to Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed who stated that there was no question but the board was entitled to the money it asked for. Previous to 1898 this was not so but the law of 1902 changed it. It was referred to the finance committee.

Treasurer and Tax Collector George F. Brown reported that the total receipts for the past month were $3,790.06, disbursements, $3,016.26, leaving a balance on hand of $733.80.

Chairman James K. Arnold, of the street committee, reported that the sum of $295.35 had been spent out during the past month for street repairs and Chairman Clark, of the lamps committee, stated that $462.65 had been spent for supplies and cost of lighting and added to $96.15 for Architect Smith's salary, in part, the amount was $559.78. Eight arrests and $15 collected for fines were reported by Chairman Lee, of the police committee. Claims, amounting to $1,360.43 in the aggregate were ordered paid. A resolution by Chairman Northrup, of the finance committee, was offered authorizing the Mayor and Clerk to borrow $1,000.

Chairman Arnold, of the streets committee, offered a resolution to the effect that Walnut avenue, between Harrison avenue and Wilson avenue, be macadamized. Two resolutions were offered by Councilman Lee, one to the effect that back salary be paid to Lawrence Fahn and that the sum of $40 be appropriated for the purchase of a uniform for a regular marshal. Mayor Smalley appointed Hayes C. Reynolds as special marshal for one year beginning yesterday.

The street committee, as a result of a resolution by Mr. Arnold, was introduced to look into the matter of laying a storm sewer on the eastern side of Grove street from the northern side of Prospect place to Green brook. The construction of the sewer will be under the charge of the street committee. That committee was authorized to look into the matter of repairing the washed out gutter on Jackson avenue between Somerset street and Watchung avenue. The meeting then adjourned.

CLIPPING SOCIAL AT GRACE

GIVEN BY GOLDEN RULE CIRCLE OF KING'S DAUGHTERS.

Programme and Those Who Took Part in the Affair—Those at Different Tables.

A clipping social, which was held under the auspices of the Golden Rule Circle of King's Daughters, for the benefit of the city nurse, was the means of attracting a large number of people Thursday evening at Grace M. E. church. Music, dialogues and other features were on the programme and a social time was enjoyed later in the evening when refreshments were served.

"Gossip," a dialogue, was one of the laughable features of the programme. Those who took part in it were Miss Bessie Conroy, Miss Lillian Teeter, Miss Annie Hoagland and Miss Jennie DeMott. "A Wonderful Scold," was the title of another dialogue in which were Miss Bessie Conroy, Miss Lillian Teeter and Miss Annie Hoagland. Piano solos were rendered by Miss Edna Sebring and Miss Lillian Teeter. Those who took part in another dialogue were Miss Minnie Carroll, Miss Mabel Stevens, Miss Clyde Slater, Mrs. Dyckman Winkler, Miss Mary Hoagland, Miss Sadie Winkler, Miss Grace Clark, Miss May Conroy, Miss Tillie Bennett and Miss Adah VanHorne.

Mrs. Charles Harden, Mrs. Elizabeth Herman, Miss Lottie Huff and Mrs. Giddes had charge of the ice cream table while Mrs. Dyckman Winkler, Mrs. E. L. Earp, Mrs. Mary Hoagland and Miss Grace Clark had charge of the fancy table. Those who had charge of the lemonade table were Miss Sadie Winkler, Miss Winnie Carroll, Miss Clyde Slater and Miss Mabel Stevens. The candy table was presided over by Miss Mary G. Steiner, assisted by Miss Clara Van Fleet, Miss Ida Fountain and Miss Carrie Tingley.

The committee, which had the arrangements in charge, comprised Miss Della Voehl, Miss Agnes Tingley, Miss May Conroy, Mrs. Charles M. Greer and Mrs. Isaac Runyon. It is to these women that the success of the affair is due as it is believed that the proceeds from Thursday night's affair will cover the amount left unfilled in the pledge towards the support of the nurse.

INSTITUTIONS TURNED DOWN

MUCH WONDERMENT AS TO WHY THE LEGISLATURE ACTED SO.

Newark News Says Senator Cross is Getting a Whole Lot of the Blame.

Nobody has yet given a satisfactory explanation of the Legislature's attitude in refusing to make an appropriation for the needed new wing at the Rahway Reformatory, says the Trenton correspondent of the Newark News. One reason offered was that the domestic building erected last year cost too much. Soon after deciding this, the Senators suffocated Senator Strong's bill for the employment of an architect to investigate what the cost should have been. They also refused to approve the plan for the employment of a State architect to direct all work on public buildings.

As it stands now the reformatory is full. There are 356 cells and they are about all occupied. After they are filled the first offender, for whom it was intended, will have to go to State prison, where there is no room to spare. More machinery is needed at the reformatory to allow of the installation of other trades to make the inmates self-supporting, or more nearly so. This request was also turned down. The only allowance made was for bare maintenance.

The appropriations asked by the State Village for Epileptics, to erect buildings and increase the capacity for patients, were also turned down by the appropriation committee. Less than one-tenth the epileptics who are eligible for treatment here can be cared for at the village for lack of accommodations. The appropriation allowed by the committee was barely enough for maintenance and necessary repairs. It may not hold out for that.

Other institutions were treated in a similar way. Since the Legislature adjourned Senators and Assemblymen are telling stories of cheese-paring on the part of the committee with much indignation. Senator Joseph Cross, of Union, who was its chairman, is getting a whole lot of the blame for a policy many members are declaring to have been small and generous. Senator Cross opposed an appproriation to provide for the expenses of the dedication of the Antietam battle monument, on the ground that it was to be a junket.

Members whose appropriations were turned down, and managers of institutions who received scant courtesy, are unable to understand why such strict economy should have been exercised with a surplus of $3,000,000 at the State's command, benefiting the State only to the extent of two per cent. per year, even if it does help to swell the profits of the banks where it is deposited.

Writers Growing Taller.

Below will be found the statistics of the average height of 20,000 English boys and men: At the age of 17 these averaged 5 feet 3 inches in height; at the age of 22, 5 feet 9 inches. At 17 they weighed 10 stone 2 pounds; at 22, 10 stone 13 pounds. No nation is increasing in height and weight so rapidly as the British. In 50 years the average has gone up for the whole nation from 5 feet 7½ inches to 5 feet 8½ inches. The average height of the British upper classes at 30 years of age is 5 feet 8½ inches; of the farm laborer, 5 feet 7 3-5 inches. The criminal class brings down the average, as their height is but 5 feet 5 4-5 inches.—Chicago Post.

Famous Pictures Ruined.

The Rome correspondent of the Daily Mail says that owing to unscientific treatment while they were being renovated, several famous pictures belonging to the Doria palace, at Genoa, have been lost to the world. The paintings included two Van Dycks, a Carlo Maratta, a Pris Bordone, a Valerio Castelli, and two Guido Renis. The cleaning was intrusted to a professed cleaner, who washed the paintings with an alkaline solution which completely destroyed them. It is stated that the Van Dycks were among the most valuable specimens of his work. The loss is incalculable.

Mirror for Seasickness.

Signor des Planches, the Italian ambassador in Washington, says that if you look intently at a mirror you will be cured of seasickness. On his way across the ocean he was so sick that he did not care whether he lived or not, and even doubted that he was himself. To reassure himself that it was really he that was so wretched, he looked in a mirror, and was instantly cured. He ate a substantial breakfast, and then told his experience to a Chicago woman on deck, and showed her the mirror. "What a fright I am," she exclaimed, "and my hat is not on straight! Just hold the mirror a minute till I can arrange it." Her seasickness disappeared as quickly as the ambassador's. At any rate, that is what he told the reporters.—Youth's Companion.

Paid Bridesmaids.

At a recent wedding held in New York there were no fewer than 15 bridesmaids, who were all punctually paid. Besides the beautiful toilets, given by the bride's father, they each received $25 for appearing in the wedding train. Some of the young ladies receive as much as $100 for their "office of honor," while one woman, who is much sought after for her beauty, has appeared as bridesmaid at more than 200 weddings, and has in a short time amassed quite a little fortune, besides receiving many costly presents. —Chicago Post.

Morocco's Progressive Sultan.

The sultan of Morocco is described as a progressive young man, whose misfortunes are quite undeserved. Though he grew up in the seclusion of an oriental palace, and had no real education from the western point of view, he has thrown off the cramping influence of early training and is keen to acquire knowledge. Europeans who have visited his court have been struck by his unusual intelligence, and they say he actually does possess a rough working acquaintance with the practical side of modern science.—N. Y. Last Straw.

"Well, what do you want now?" queried old Growells, as the insurance solicitor entered his office. "You have bullied me into insuring my life, my store and the title to my real estate—what is there left to insure?"

"I just dropped in," calmly replied the man with the adamantine check, "to see if you would like to insure your insurance policies."—Chicago Daily News.

Horse-Stalls in Japan.

The Japanese back their horses into their stalls, and the door, to which a conveniently constructed grain and hayrack is fixed, closes at the head. No one needs to go in beside one side of the animal. There is no danger of being kicked, no refuse matter is visible and it seems a sensible way to arrange a place for any horse.—Knowledge.

Consumption of Rice.

CAMERA CLUB WINS TROPHY BACK AGAIN

Recovers Metropolitan Whist Trophy From Park Club's Veteran Four.

IN A CLOSE CONTEST

PARKS WON TROPHY FROM CAMERA CLUB NINE WEEKS AGO.

One of the Closest Matches of the Season—The Camera Club Winning by a Score of 10 to 8—The Regular Teams Play.

After holding the Metropolitan challenge trophy for nine weeks, during which time they scored eight consecutive wins for it, the veteran Park Club whist four lost the match last Thursday to the City Camera Club team. It was by far one of the best matches yet played this season, the play being exceedingly close. Strangely, it was the Camera Club team that lost the trophy to the Parks nine weeks ago, after the former had scored five consecutive wins.

The Camera Club team won last evening's match by two tricks. So close was the playing that it was not until the last round was nearly finished did the Camera Club team realized that it was in possession of the valued trophy. The Parks took the first round 3 to 2, while the Camera Club four took the second round 5 to 2. The last round was a tie, each team scoring three points, making the total score 10 to 8 in favor of the Camera Club.

The Park Club four consisted of Samuel Townsend, S. St. John McCutchen, George T. Rogers and Joseph H. Howell, while A. F. Freeman, F. H. Freeman, W. J. B. Hegeman, Jr., and Ralph T. Willis represented the Camera Club. The Forest Hill Whist Club is the next challenger and the match will probably be played at the Camera Club rooms Thursday evening, May 7. This will give the Camera Club team plenty of whist for next week as on Monday evening the team plays the Newark Bay Boat team for the State trophy.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL.

Block Appeared Before Justice Huff Charged With Attempting to Rob Safe in Fay's Bakery Saturday.

Joseph Block, of New street, charged with breaking and entering Fay's bakery at the corner of West Second and Liberty streets, Saturday, was this morning held for the Grand Jury without bail by Justice F. J. Huff.

The State produced as witnesses, Patrolman James Saunders, who captured the prisoner as he was passing through the window and Harris Ellis, or Forbman, who saw the men drilling into the bakery safe. Fay testified to leaving the store locked up in good condition early in the evening.

William Newcorn, who appeared for the defense, endeavored to prove that Block was not recognized as one of the men working at the safe, the inference being that he was on the premises by chance. Francis J. Blats appeared for the State.

There is a suspicion that the men concerned in the attempted robbery of the Fay safe are the same gang that has been doing several other similar "jobs" in Plainfield and vicinity.

RECEPTION TO WRITER.

Pad and Pencil Club Entertained Millard F. Elderton.

In honor of Millard Fillmore Elderton, the well-known newspaper man who resigned his position on a local paper to accept the city editorship of the Elizabeth Journal, the Pad and Pencil Club tendered him a reception in its club rooms Saturday evening. The newspaper men of Plainfield presented him with an umbrella as a token of their esteem.

A social timed followed which was termed a "Night in Bohemia," during which refreshments were served and a general good time was held.

INFORMAL DANCE.

Saturday Night Gathering at the Park Club Was Successful.

The Saturday night dance at the Park Club attracted a large number of society folk, including many of the younger set. The affair, while in charge of the entertainment committee, was given under the patronage of Mrs. Samuel Townsend and Mrs. Walter M. McGee, both of whom received the guests, assisted by other members of the committee. Music for dancing was furnished by Garland, of New Brunswick, and it was very satisfactory.

ANNUAL MUSICALE AT SEVENTH-DAY CHURCH

Attracted a Large Crowd to Hear a Very Enjoyable Programme.

CHURCH WAS CROWDED

WAS GIVEN UNDER CHARGE OF THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SOCIETY.

Annual Event at Seventh-Day Baptist Church Excelled Those of Past Years—Those Who Took Part—The Committee.

Although preceded by eight others of a similar nature, the annual musicale of the Seventh-Day Baptist church Christian Endeavor Society, held last Thursday, was clearly the most successful. In point of artists it greatly excelled and the audience tested the capacity of the large edifice.

Miss Jessie Utter was directly in charge of the affair, acting as accompanist, and she was assisted by the following well-known artists: Lewis H. Moore, of Brooklyn, organist; Miss Dorothy Waldo, violin; Fullerton Waldo, viola; Dr. Leonard Waldo, violincello; Mrs. Anne Mulks, of New York, contralto; George H. Smith, tenor; E. Maxwell Honeyman, tenor; Henry B. Drake, basso, and Fred S. Cutler, basso. With a few exceptions all have appeared at local entertainments, but they achieved another triumph at last night's affair. As each number was concluded, the applause was unstinted and encores had to be given.

Mr. Moore is exceptionally deft with the keys and the gentle yet convincing nature of his tones was greatly admired. He gave as solos the overture, "Pearl of Bagdad" by Toretz and Guilmants' Grand Chorus in E flat. The quartette composed of Messrs. Smith, Honeyman, Drake and Cutler contributed several pleasing selections. Mrs. Milke has a rich modulation while her tones are coupled with force. She gave the "Water Lillies" and "Serenade" in the first part and "Life Is Vain" and "Aria From Herodiade" in the second.

The tenor solos of Mr. Smith were greatly enjoyed as were those by the instrumental trio composed of Fullerton Waldo, Dr. Waldo and Miss Dorothy Waldo. While a silver offering was being taken, Mr. Moore presided at the organ.

The musicale was arranged by Miss Utter with the assistance of the music committee which consists of Mrs. J. E. Kimball, Mrs. F. J. Hubbard and Charles P. Titsworth. The young men who acted as ushers were O. S. Rogers, Arthur J. Spicer, George L. Babcock, Asa Randolph, Dr. Marc L. Clawson, Dr. C. B. Whitford, J. E. Kimball, W. C. Hubbard, George Clarke and Paul Whitford.

DISASTER DID IT.

W. B. Clarkson Had to Walk Home and Sued for Damages in Consequence.

William B. Clarkson, of Sewaren, brought suit against the Jersey Central Railroad for $300 damages. Clarkson, who is employed in a telephone agency in New York, took a train at Jersey City for Sewaren on the night of January 22. It should have connected at Elizabethport with a Newark train for Sewaren, but that was the night of the railroad wreck at Westfield and the train was delayed.

He was obliged to go to Rahway, take a train to Woodbridge and walk home. He was put to an extra expense of 27 cents, he said, besides the inconvenience. He said that the company had offered to pay him $35 but he did not think that was enough.

Judge Erwin told the jury when the case was brought before him Thursday that as the company's service was disarranged by the Westfield disaster it could not be charged properly with negligence. The jurors gave Clarkson a verdict for $25.27.

KING'S DAUGHTERS TO CONTINUE BABY CAMP

Increased Pledges for Work Made at Meeting of City Union of K. D.

ARE FOUR NEW CIRCLES

SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING OF CITY UNION HELD AT TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

Reports From Circles in City Union Showed Increase in Membership and a Greater Amount of Work Accomplished.

The semi-annual meeting of the City Union of King's Daughters was held Tuesday afternoon in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church and was largely attended. Miss Lillian A. Force, the retiring president, occupied the chair for the last time in that capacity. After calling the meeting to order, Miss Force asked Rev. Dr. Schenck to read the Scripture lesson and offer prayer.

The first report presented was that of Mrs. S. A. Krom, treasurer. Her first report covered the period of six months, but as the members wanted to know the result for the year, figures for that time were given. The report showed total receipts of $1,432.88 and disbursements of $1,111.05, leaving a balance of $321.83. There is a balance in the camp fund of $183.83, but this is to be used for a loan to at the camp building.

The report of Mrs. W. L. C. Gleuney, as chairman of the nurse committee, contained warm words for Miss Emily Tracy, who was obliged to give up the chairmanship of the committee, and for Miss Anderson, the former nurse, and Miss Olive De Lany, the present nurse. In all 243 cases have been cared for during the past six months and there have been three deaths.

Then followed the reports from the various Circles, telling what each had done during the past six months. The work consisted of making articles for the nurse's closet, helping poor families and contributing to both home and foreign mission enterprises, including mission work in New York. Each report was very encouraging.

At the request of the president, Miss Zaidee VanBoskerck, agent for the Organized Aid Association, told how helpful the Union had been to the association and she thought it an excellent plan that the camp on the mountains will be so conducted this summer that children can be kept there for a whole week instead of two or three days. She threw out the suggestion that if the members would report to her cases of need, they would be able to do that much more for their own organization. At the same time she realized the fact that the King's Daughters assist in a peculiar way as no other organization can.

When the pledges were called for the total amount, $770 was found to exceed that of a year ago. Then if was about $400. The pledges made are as follows:

Advance Circle, $50; Benevolent Band, $200; Charity Circle, $125; Cheerful Workers, $50; Daughters of the Cross, $100; Whatsoever Circle, Trinity Reformed church, $30; Brightside Circle, $15; Whatsoever Circle, Park Avenue Baptist church, $5; Golden Rule Circle, $25; Opportunity Circle, Mt. Olive Baptist church, $10; Cup Bearers' Circle, $50; Junior Advance Circle, $10; Silver Cross Circle, $50, and Loyal Daughters, $50. The last four named Circles were organized this week. Nearly every Circle reported an increase in membership and a greater amount of work accomplished.

It was the unanimous wish that the baby camp work on the mountain should be a success this season and all expressed the opinion that it would be and that there would be no lack of support for this enterprise, inasmuch as it has proven to be such a blessing to many children and mothers.

The officers for the coming year were then chosen as follows:

President, Mrs. Charles A. Reed; vice president, Mrs. Dorsey W. Hyde; recording secretary, Mrs. F. W. French; corresponding secretary, Miss Anna Most; treasurer Mrs. S. A. Krom. To Miss Force, the retiring president, and all other officers who retired, the Union extended a hearty vote of thanks for their loyal devotion and earnest work during the year. This completes Miss Force's second year as president.

HOPE BOYS OUT OF FORM

EASILY BEATEN BY BUSINESS MEN'S TEAM TUESDAY NIGHT.

Final Score Was 20 to 9—But Game Was Very Exciting—Large Crowd Present.

The basket ball game at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, last evening, between the Business Men's team and Hope Y. M. A. team, attracted a large number of spectators. The game was exciting from start to finish, although it was rather one-sided, the home team winning by a score of 20 to 9.

The visitors lost the game for the reason that they were out of practice and they did not support one another as they should. They did not play as strong a game as during the league series. They had plenty of chance to score, but they either went to pieces or were wild in throwing. The Business Men's team put up a strong game and the men showed the benefit of frequent practice.

The line-up was as follows:

BUSINESS MEN.		HOPE Y. M. A.
Whitford	right forward	Dilks
Doane	left forward	Porter, Duckworth
Spicer	center	Foster, Roseberry
Browning	right guard	McConnehie, Foster
Clark	left guard	Chamberlain

Score—Y. M. C. A., 20; Hope Y. M. A., 9. Goals from the field—Spicer (3), Whitford (3), Doane (2), McConnehie, (2), Porter (1), Chamberlain (1). Goals from foul—McConnehie (1), Doane (4). Fouls—Business Men, 10; Hope Y. M. A., 11. Referee—Charles Burdette Morse, of Hope Y. M. A. Umpires—Ray Smith and Harry Scull, of Y. M. C. A. Timekeeper—William Doane. Scorers—William Reinecke, of Y. At the close of the recital Miss Palmer had in store a surprise for her pupils in Master Hans Bergman, a pupil in the Virgil Piano School of New York. HANGS HIMSELF IN CITY JAIL

Wm. Ross Takes His Own Life While a Prisoner Locked in a Cell.

BELT SERVES PURPOSE

Done So Quietly That It Wasn't Known Until a Passing Officer Spied the Body—Cut Down by the Police, But Too Late, As Ross Was Already Dead.

William Ross, of 311 Plainfield avenue, committed suicide at 7:40 o'clock, last Tuesday, at the city police court, by hanging himself with an ordinary black belt which he fastened to the bars of his cell door. Ross was arrested at 3:45 Tuesday afternoon by Patrolman Overbaugh for drunkenness.

The circumstances of the suicide were somewhat unusual. At 7:35 that night, Ross called to Sergeant Frederickson, who is acting chief in the absence of Chief Kiely, and requested a drink of water. He appeared to be laboring under no excitement at the time, although still largely under the influence of intoxicants. The sergeant gave him the water, and Ross then held out a couple of coins to the sergeant with the request that a messenger be sent to inform Mrs. Ross of her husband's whereabouts. The prisoner was told to keep his money and Patrolman Saunders would be sent to his wife. The sergeant then returned to the court room, and, five minutes later, Patrolman John Conroy, passing by the cells, noticed Ross hanging in a heap, the belt strap around his neck tied to the bars of the cell door. Not a sound had been heard even by the prisoner in the next cell.

Conroy instantly summoned help and with the sergeant's assistance cut the strap. The body collapsed on the cell floor, there being not the slightest evidence of a remaining spark of life. Death came from strangulation.

Dr. Charles B. Lufburrow was sent for and was on the scene two minutes after the discovery of the hanging had been made. He pronounced life extinct, death having occurred within the space of a few seconds. Dr. Westcott, of Fanwood, the county physician, and Dr. O. L. Jenkins, mayor, were also summoned and delivered the body over to Undertaker G. W. Cole. Dr. Lufburrow worked over the body a long while after arriving on the spot but his efforts were of no avail.

Ross had a bad police record, although he had never been arrested for anything more serious than drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He was the son of a former restaurant keeper of Park avenue, his father being now an inmate of the Soldier's Home at Kearney. He leaves a wife and nine children, eight of them girls. He was thirty-eight years old.

The theory of the police is that Ross was attempting merely to "bluff" them and gain their sympathy; and that, after he had secured the strap about his neck, he was too intoxicated to struggle or cry out.

A Press reporter called upon Mrs. Ross at her home on Plainfield avenue yesterday and learned something of Ross's past history. The dead man was a stone-cutter by trade, a native of Elizabeth, and had lived in Plainfield sixteen years. Mrs. Ross, whose eyes gave evidence of much weeping, stated that her husband had been working steadily since he had last been "sent up," which was for sixty days about eight months ago. He had always been kind, she said, to herself and children, although he had seemed somewhat despondent of late. He had seemed much as usual when he left her yesterday morning.

Ross lived in a ramshackle house, and his numerous children, at the time the reporter called, were playing contentedly about the yard as though nothing had happened. Ross is said to have been in arrears with his landlord and to have gone on his last drunk with $6, which his landlord had refused to accept. He had words with a bartender which led to his arrest.

The case of Mrs. Ross and her nine children, eight of them girls under the age of fourteen, is altogether pitiful. Forced soon to vacate their poor home on Plainfield avenue for nonpayment of rent, they will be left by

LIKE HALF CENTURY AGO

OLD FOLKS CONCERT GIVEN BY MIZPAH LODGE OF ODD LADIES.

Costumes and Selections Were of An Appropriate Nature—The Participants.

An old folk's concert was the attraction at Washington Hall last Tuesday which drew a large number of people from this city and Westfield. It was given by the members of Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, of Odd Ladies, in their lodge rooms. The affair was given for the benefit of the general fund of the organization, which, during the past three months has been growing to a great extent. It may be repeated.

The programme was entirely in keeping with the customs of a half century ago. All the performers were attired in costumes of the first part of the past century and, in all, the evening was most enjoyably spent.

Those who took part were Mrs. R. E. Cox, Mrs. Henry Bush, Mrs. H. L. Gibbons, Mrs. A. Randolph, Miss Terry, Miss Norman, Mrs. Howard, Mrs. R. W. Edgar, Miss Fannie Norman, Miss Lewis Cedar, Miss Madeline Edgar, Miss Mabel Perry, Miss Lillian Conkling, Miss Addie Mills, Miss Bessie Hoerster, Miss Hattie Edgar, Miss Lydia Edgar, Colonel Edward Perry, Pierre Moore, William Ayres and James Hoffman.

A tableau, representing an "Old Maids Tea Party," was a feature of the evening in which all those listed on the programme took part. Miss Hattie Edgar favored with some Spanish dancing and Miss Edgar provided the accompaniment upon the piano.

The committee in charge comprised Mrs. H. L. Gibbons, Mrs. E. K. Cox, Mrs. Randolph and Mrs. Henry Bensel.

TEST TUBE BURST.

Ernest Powlison Had His Face Burned by Exploding Chemicals at Borough High School.

While at work in the laboratory of the North Plainfield High School, Monday, Ernest Powlison, the son of John A. Powlison, of the firm of Powlison & Jones, was burned about the face by an exploding test tube.

Young Powlison was pouring some alcohol into a test tube containing some sulphuric acid when he started to shake it up to mix it more thoroughly. Without warning the fluids exploded throwing the burning mixture in the boy's face. He was taken to the office of Dr. Long where his injuries were dressed. He was not seriously injured.

Called No Pastor.

The published statement which appeared in another paper to the effect that a call had been extended to Rev. John Justin, of Union, to accept the pastorate of the German Reformed church in the borough has been branded as absolutely false. It has aroused considerable indignation among the members of the congregation.

Will be Completed This Week.

MUSIC AND TABLEAUX WERE MUCH ENJOYED

Delightful Musical Given by the Misses Whitney at the Casino Last Tuesday.

ASSISTED BY OTHERS

ERSKINE PORTER, BOY SOPRANO, HAS A WONDERFUL VOICE.

Several of Their Pupils Assisted in Instrumental Work and in the Series of Poses Plastique and Tableaux Mouvants.

One of the leading social events of the week was the musicale and series of tableaux given last Tuesday at the Casino under direction of Miss May Vincent Whitney, pianist, and Miss Bertha Hurst Whitney, reader, assisted by Erskine Porter, soprano, a youthful prodigy, nine years of age. The entertainment was divided into two sections, the first a musicale with Miss May Vincent Whitney in charge. Miss Whitney arranged a delightful programme, and, together with her pupils performed with a degree of skill that won the audience completely. The tableaux composing the second part of the programme were in charge of Miss Bertha Hurst Whitney and revealed a knowledge of Greek subjects carefully portrayed that made this division of the entertainment as instructive as it was pleasing aesthetically.

The musical section consisted of twenty-seven well rendered selections by Miss Whitney and her pupils, the Misses Florence Dickerson, Muriel Collins, Frances Rittenhouse, Carolyn Welles, Myra Emmons, Clara Van-Fleet (and Ursula Krewson, Charlotte Conger and Miss Remsen. Wm. E. MacClymont and Miss Whitney played the overture to "William Tell" which was particulary enjoyed. The selections by Erskine Porter, who is a pupil of Francis Fisher Powers, evinced a wonderful ability for one so young. Master Porter's singing was characterized by a delicacy of sentiment and a power of technique that won for him rounds of applause. He has a wonderful voice. The readings by Miss Bertha H. Whitney were given with historic skill and strength of interpretation, and brought out to a full extent the humorous and dramatic possibilities of her selections. The audience was appreciative and generous in its manifestations of approval.

The second part of the programme consisted of poses plastique and tableaux mouvants, a series of tableaux representing scenes from Greek myth and fable. The Misses Sophy Pegg Barlow, Elsie I. Brokaw, Saidee Mae Howell, Cornelia L. Hyatt, Marion H. McCutcheon, Isabel G. Milne and Mary E. Valiant, made beautiful pictures in their Greek costumes. Calcium lights added to the scenic effects. The piano accompaniments was played by Miss Alberta E. Waterbury.

The ushers were T. Harold Whitney, George E. Horne, Charles B. Morse, Rhey T. Snodgrass, E. Maxwell Honeyman and Louis V. P. Wilson.

Surprised Her.

Ten little girls, youthful admirers of Mrs. Nathan E Lewis, of Arlington avenue, gave her a surprise party, yesterday afternoon. It was planned and arranged by Miss Helen Rogers. Mrs. Lewis was consulted as to whether she would be at home but was properly surprised when they appeared. The afternoon was spent in playing games.

To Speak at Orange.

Mrs. Harry Stanton Blatch, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and president of the New York Suffrage League, will address the Orange Political Study Club, May 5. A number of the members from the Plainfield and North Plainfield league will attend.

Going to Russia.

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Saunders, of Washington Park, are planning for a trip to Russia during June. Mrs. Saunders and a party will probably precede Mr. Saunders and the latter will join them in Russia. Mr. Saunders will combine pleasure with business.

Epworth League Anniversary.

The Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church is making great preparations for the the anniversary exercises of the League next Sunday. Special music and other features will be the means, no doubt, of attracting a large number to the services.

The Girl Who Is a Thoroughbred

"It's mostly by the things she doesn't do that one knows her."

"Ah!"

"For instance, she never whines. That, I do believe, is one of the first attributes of the thoroughbred woman or girl. She bears her own troubles and doesn't force her friends to bear them for her. When the girl who isn't the real thing has even a finger ache, the whole world knows it, the whole world has to feel the twinges of that finger ache. When the thoroughbred girl has a heartache—a breaking heart—no one knows its existence under the smiling exterior she wears. In fact, it is principally in sorrow and in adverse situations that the thoroughbred strain comes out. It is easy enough to present an imposing appearance when all goes well; it is not so easy to stand upright when one is crushed by circumstance. It is a noticeable point about the thoroughbred girl that while she may not always shine in favorable surroundings the minute she has anything to endure—the more she has to endure, in fact—the more she rises to the occasion."

"You remark the same thing in thoroughbred horses, I believe?"

"Yes, in a team of horses, if there are three heads of ordinary degree and one thoroughbred, the thoroughbred does three times his share of the work and fairly dies in the harness."

"Well, there are other points"—

"Dear me, yes! You can never make the real thoroughbred girl uncomfortable or ill at ease unless she has done something she knows is wrong, something against her own principles. She has a calm, sure poise which nothing can disturb, certainly not the actions of her inferiors, when they show themselves to be such."

"And the thoroughbred girl never gossips?"

"Certainly not. When she has something to say she says it whether it be good or bad, but she doesn't make conversation out of it. She is above that."

"And she has a soul of honor?"

"Yes; like a man—I beg your pardon—like a man thoroughbred. There is the other kind of man, too—the male mongrel, who resembles the woman of his kind."

"And she keeps secrets?"

"She forgets them after they have been told to her, and she doesn't even know what you are talking about when you refer to them."

"And she is not politic?"

"She gives favors, big or little, according as she is situated. She particularly dislikes to take them. She never asks for them."

"And she is not curious?"

"She may be so inwardly, but she never reveals the fact. What one is willing to tell her she accepts, but she never digs for knowledge, and the fact that a friend of hers wishes to conceal a thing makes it distasteful to her to know that thing."

"And her treatment of servants?"

"Ah, that is a sure sign! She treats them as if they were human beings. The mongrel woman orders them as if they were slaves."

"But she sometimes has a temper, your thoroughbred woman?"

"Right you are, but it is a royal temper. It never causes her to appear undignified, to raise her voice, to grimace, to show herself at her worst. A few words spoken in an even lower tone of voice than usual—show her anger."

"But is she a saint? Does she never take revenge?"

"Revenge? No; she is too proud for that. Small slights, even those that hurt a great deal, she passes over in silence, merely foregoing the acquaintance of the person who showed them. When, at last, she is driven near or dear or weaker than herself is attacked and there is a necessity for defense, then she does strike once, and once only, a clear, merciless, deadly stroke. You never find her bungling it or nagging. But in her scale of justice she has such a large view of the world that mercy more than outweighs punishment."

"And that's what half the women one meets are trying to be—thoroughbreds?"

"Yes; it's a fad now, and the appearance is not so hard to put on. It's when the real test comes, however, that the veneer cracks off. But as for the real thoroughbred woman—she is about the best, the truest, the most worthy of being loved in this world."

WOMEN GOLD SEEKERS.

They Have Struck It Rich In Various Ingenious Ways.

It is a phase of the period that for the first time in civilization, so far as known, women are in the stampedes to new gold regions and in the rushes along with men boomers to new lands. Recently a girl in a northwestern state heard of a mineral claim that was to be vacated on the 1st of January, owing to not having done on it the work necessary to "prove up" the property. Without telling of her intention this girl of grit started to drive to the claim and be on the ground by midnight of the new year. The thermometer was 14 degrees below zero, and, worse yet, a blizzard was raging, but the young lady drove through the savage weather and camped upon the claim till morning, when she set up her stakes and wrote her name upon them. Now she is in possession of a property that will give her returns worthy of her grit.

An American woman physician, tall, strong, dignified and wise, went to

MISS FITZ ON A JOURNEY.

Dawson in 1898. It had been made practically impossible for an American doctor to go into practice in the Klondike. Nothing daunted, the American woman physician began work as a trained nurse in one of the rude hospitals. It was the time of typhoid, and capable nurses were in demand. The lady's sphere of influence grew wider and wider, she watched her opportunities and made investments wisely till now, after only five years, she is ready to retire with money enough to support her the rest of her life.

A refined young woman, a widow, walked over Chilkoot pass in the summer of 1898. She remained in Dawson a year, but did not strike it rich. She learned, however, a useful trade there, one she hardly expected ever to acquire—namely, laundry work. On receipt of the news of the gold discoveries at Cape Nome she went down the Yukon with the "boomers" and got there. She did not wait for some man to give her a bushel or two of gold dust, but at once opened a laundry and reaped rich reward. American men, thank fate, try to be clean wherever they are, and if they cannot be clean they keep as clean as they can. Well, this widow, who never dreamed she would take in washing for a living, finds herself laying up a neat competency.

Among the most notable of all is Miss Frances E. Fitz, who came "outside" last winter for the first time in three years. Miss Fitz, stenographer, went to the farthest northwest, taking her typewriter along. She landed at Nome, but went a hundred miles beyond to Council City, a new mining camp. The plucky young woman was alone, but fortune favors the brave, especially if the brave one is that rare creature, a brave woman.

At once in Council she was made clerk to the government recorder. The typewriter did it. She had gumption, had Miss Fitz. She recorded mining claims, drew up contracts and bills of sale and copied documents of all kinds, besides attending to a great amount of correspondence. Her pay was exceedingly good, to say the least. An intelligent typewriter girl, with her own machine, who understands business forms cannot be picked up at call in a mining camp. With her first savings Miss Fitz had built a warm, snug winter log cabin and prepared to stay there till she found fortune. A cellar under the floor of an Alaska log cabin serves as an ice chest in summer and a storeroom for food in winter. Such cellars are opened by a trapdoor in the cabin floor. Miss Fitz dug her own cellar.

She bought mining claims; she became a notary public; she purchased a partnership in the Council City News, the first paper in the mining camp. Meantime she continued being a stenographer and typist for any who wanted her services. With all these irons in the fire and with a head to look after them all, this typical American girl accumulated property rapidly and took care of it, too.

Then at length, early last winter, the longing for her old home and friends overcame her, and she journeyed to Nome in a sled drawn by Eskimo dogs. Muffled in furs, strapped upon the sled, a driver running alongside to whoop on the dogs, she began the journey, but a blizzard overtook them on the coast, and the whole outfit nearly perished. However, a girl like that is not to be either drowned or frozen, and Miss Fitz reached Nome in safety and embarked for the States. But the fascination of the dazzling arctic zone is over her, and she will return to Council City.

FASHIONS OF THE MOMENT.

Deep Belts With Short Coats—New Cotton Gowns.

Deep belts are universally worn with the sack bolero. In fact, only a tolerably deep one is admissible, as no jacket, skirt waist or blouse should show between the belt and the bolero. The pointed belts made of tinsel ribbon are very effective with a dark coat and skirt, but are not suitable for a large figure, as they call too much attention to the waist.

Those who are making their cotton and linen gowns will be glad to hear of the crepe cotton with black spots. The price is small, and this material makes up so smartly that the fact of its being cotton is entirely overlooked. The little flecks and dashes of white in the crepe add greatly to the effect. Mottled pastel red, blue, tuscore and pink are all good in their way. A little dress of this type, slightly relieved with black, can be made to wear over a silky sateen and will be charming for morn- ings, for the river or sea side. There is also an admirable gray which could be worn for mourning or otherwise.

Every fabric is being pressed into service for the blouse of beauty and the blouse of utility—washing satin, crepe de chine, Japanese silk, muslin, foulard and that delightful fabric known as chiffon voile are all charming wear.

The cut shows a smart accordion plaited peau de soie coat having a broad fancy collar.

COATS AND SLEEVES.

Coffee Coats Pretty and Becoming. Small Coats.

Lace coffee coats are very useful for home wear, but are disappointing elsewhere, as they have a loose negligee effect which is not desirable away from one's own fireside. The blouse with deep fall of lace and extensively pouched front has more style, and, if cut square, the neck is easily filled in with a chemisette when required less decollete.

There is apparently a tendency to return to the fashion of distinct sleeves differing from the bodice. Several of the Paris models have had the diverse undersleeves so extended that the real oversleeve formed little more than an epaulet. However, while we wear loose bodices and sack boleros, the sleeve of different color or material has very little chance.

Lace is as popular as ever, and in medallion form, arranged separately or in groups or partially broken lines, will be very modish.

The small black coats, inlet with medallions of lace, are very smart, and these will be worn over black and white skirts as well as with black ones of every description.

The cut shows a three-quarter coat of gray novelty goods.

SEMIDRESSY COSTUMES.

Veiling Suits That Are Not Strictly Tailor Made.

A suit that is not strictly a tailor made and can be worn on semidressy occasions is a necessity in the smartly dressed woman's wardrobe.

One such costume seen recently was of deep blue veiling with a loose blouse jacket having an odd-shaped collar of cern Linen ornamented in shades of blue and green. The skirt was laid in tucks and flared from a trifle below the hips down. The bottom was simply a wide hem headed by three tucks.

Another costume was of black veiling ornamented with black and white silk braid and having a little vest of white moire cut in points and dotted with tiny pearl buttons.

Waists of all over coarse lace are smart with such costumes, and the hat is supposed to match the suit.

Deep red veiling is very pretty made up in this way with a hat of rough red straw.

There is one blouse we all love and shall continue to love during the hot weather, and that is the net lace or crochet blouse, the only lining permissible in such a garment being mousseline de soie or chiffon. When this blouse is made of very good lace, severe simplicity is best, and the woman who is not too thin will do well to have it made to fasten plainly with a little fullness pouching at the waist in front and the yoke piece kept as transparent as possible. Thin people should reverse this order of things and fasten the blouse in front with an enormous jabot of lace and with frills of the same over the hands. In all cases the sleeves are fairly voluminous from the elbow, and here may be introduced an undersleeve of chiffon or net.

NOVELTIES IN HATS.

Smart Picture Hats—Toques Trimmed With Aigrette.

The smartest picture hat of the season is of cream or white lace with a broad border of black velvet. The brim is much curved and slightly raised on the left side, where it is filled in with flowers or a velvet bow fastened in with a paste buckle. Both the inner and the outer brims are of lace with an inch wide velvet border, and the low, flat crown of lace has a velvet edge. Tulle swathed and in big choux trims these hats, with just one feather sweeping around the side or one or two tips peeping over the raised brim.

A toque which is modish and fascinating has a crown of plaited chiffon and chenille in all black or black and white, and the deep brim of the toreador model is encircled with tucked chiffon. Over this comes a fringe of lozenge shaped sequins, which hang loose and flash and glitter with every movement. On the left side is a flat rosette of the stiffly plaited cockade type, with a handsome stud of paste and steel and a big brush osprey.

The picture shows a smart sailor shape of yellow straw trimmed with pink roses.

Getting at the Facts.

SUMMER WRAPS.

They Are Dust and Fleecing—Made of Lace and Silk.

A dressy wrap is an indispensable adjunct to the smart girl's summer wardrobe. It may be of almost any material, crepe de chine even, but it must be wide and roomy and have graceful drooping lines.

Sack coats of heavy lace are lined with louisine silk and tie with long chiffon ends. In black they are generally useful, besides being most dressy. A garment of this description can easily be made at home, and the lace already shaped can be bought for these wraps as well as it can for robes.

The taffeta silk coats are giving way to peau de soie, as the latter wears well and taffeta certainly does not.

Louisine, both in the dull and the lustrous weaves, is another silk most popular for waists, suits and serviceable linings. It is as cheap as taffeta and twice as well worth buying.

All the sleeves of garments are wide and flowing.

FOR DRESSY WEAR.

All White Costumes Ever Popular. Thin Black Gowns.

The cream or the all white gown has come to be an accepted fact, and it is certainly smart as well as almost universally becoming.

These dresses are usually made of veiling or crepe de chine and are trimmed with inletting of heavy Irish lace or heavy silk embroideries. Fringe is also seen on many of them.

The Greek key pattern seems to be a favorite for the bottoms of skirts and the bordering of capes and wide collars. It is often carried out in black velvet of a narrow width.

For a useful dressy costume nothing can surpass the thin black gown, whether of lace or of some thin spangled material. Crepe de chine robes also are embroidered in silk and trimmed with handsome fringe. Taffeta applique brightens up costumes of black voile and crepon.

Very decorative are little bows of black velvet on white or cream crochet. On a blouse of this description there is nothing so pretty as a simple pattern with sufficient frou frou down the front.

The picture shows a dressy coat of gray silk trimmed with lace dyed to match.

A Vegetable Curiosity.

Attorney General Douglas of St. Paul, Minn., has a vegetable curiosity. It is a hybrid plant which at the roots is putting forth potatoes and above the ground several well developed beefsteak tomatoes. The plant was produced at the state experiment station by grafting a tomato vine to a potato plant.

THE WHY OF STOLES.

Heuristic Reasons Given Why Dame Fashion's Latest Deserves.

I have been breaking my head for two days, as the French say, to find out why the pretty new lace arrangements now worn as ornaments over coats and dresses and on wraps of every description should be called stoles. It would seem that every one is stole mad just now, for few there be without something in the kind. There are many varieties of these affairs, which I think scarcely merit to be called garments, since they are entirely ornamental.

A few of these stoles are arranged with short capes of the dress or coat material or else of some light and delicately colored silk. Generally speaking, all those of cloth or solid goods are made with a stitched hem, but others have accordion plaited ruffles, sometimes two or three, one above the other, but all below the stole arrangement of lace.

The Monte Carlo coats seem to be particularly well adapted for decoration in this style, and most of them do have the lace down the front. The heavy Irish crochet lace is more showy and, in fact, better than any other except the renaissance, but many prefer the relief of the Irish point. It sets up so well on any kind of material and shows like sculpture when put upon cloth in one of the soft and beautiful pastel shades so well liked for handsome tailor suits. In saying "tailor suits" in this connection I do not mean the gowns worn in the street for all occasions, for the delicate colors and tints are impossible for such requirements, but the dresses are finished in the perfection that is called tailor made. Every seam is pressed and finished so that the gown seems to be thrown together. On such a dress the Irish lace shows like incrustations of ivory carving. Some of these fine broadcloth gowns have a short coat of the same stuff, and while the dress is incrusted with the lace the coat has a stole down the front. Few of them show any attempt at a high collar, but the dresses still reach the chin.

Thin dresses are so pretty that I scarcely know where to begin to speak of them. The very prettiest is the skirt moderately long in front and demitrain in the back, with five or six narrow ruffles at the bottom, and the full gathered back. Many dainty thin frocks have folds down the skirt to flounce length, and these they are let loose, to form a graceful and desirable fullness. Sometimes these plaits are arranged in clusters, and they also are left to form a flounce at the hem, but between the clusters of folds there are set diamonds of castle braid and lace. These come in three and four sizes, so that the small ones are used on the waists and the larger ones on the skirt.

I saw a beautiful dress at one of the big stores. It was made of lace of a delicate all over trailing design. The underskirt was ivory white taffeta, and skirt and lining were made up together, so that when the seams were sewed the folds came under in fan shape, in a way to show the delicacy of the lace in the dress. Down each seam in the skirt there was a line of heavy Irish point made so that the ends fell on the side of the fan shaped folds. The waist was blouse shaped, with a pelerine cape of the lace edged by the Irish point. This also was laid all around the hem of the skirt.

Among the novelties is the linen cheviot with the little rough knots over the surface. It is made into everyday street costumes and is generally treated like the woolen cheviots. The colorings are the same, and they are strap stitched and slot seamed like the woolen stuffs. Some have blouses with sailor collars, while others have the regulation sang bayque effect.

A dress of this durable and satisfactory material had long flared and double slot stitched seams, besides a whole lot of other stitching wherever it could be added. The bodice was snug, with a tiny postillion at the back. It buttoned closely in front and had a turn over collar, a high white linen collar, a chemisette and a narrow black tie. How neat this looked beside the very frivolous yet beautiful trippery of the fanciful lace and other thin dresses with all their fluffy daintiness! It was water in a desert.

The new hats? Oh, no; not this time. There is not room for them under a volume. But they are so bedecked with flowers and ripe and unripe fruit that one smells them a block away.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

What the New Woman Is About

A SCENE so extraordinary that it is surprising no more notice has been taken of it was witnessed not long ago in Philadelphia—quiet, Quaker Philadelphia, of all places in the Union for anything violent to occur among well bred people. The gentle yet wide awake women of a certain temperance society were holding a meeting. It was a meeting for members of the organization, yet stranger spectators were present. The case was discussed of Reed Smoot, the United States senator from Utah who was charged with being a practical polygamist and concealing the fact. The ladies denounced in unmeasured terms the brazen insult to American and all womanhood which the presence of a polygamist in the nation's highest legislative body would mean. They threw into their speeches all the eloquence of the feminine new found power in public oratory as they spoke their minds on Mormon polygamists. Indignation and excitement were at their height when a young man in a back seat rose and announced that he was a Mormon missionary and would like to explain his particular brand of theology to the ladies. There was a gasping for breath among the women, then a storm of furious hisses and cries, these becoming savage and menacing like the howls of the French petroleuses. At length the words "Throw him out!" could be distinguished. There was an ominous moment of delay, then half a dozen of the older, stronger women made a simultaneous rush at the offender. Their wrath was too great for mere words. They seized hold of him, others joined them, and the interloper was irresistibly shoved toward the door. He had no chance to defend himself, for an amazon army was on him. It pushed him through the door, through the hall, and then white, slender feminine hands actually hurled him down stairs, and he went tumbling to the bottom. Talk of weak woman!

Do not sit with legs crossed at the knees. It stops blood circulation, paralyzes the free action of the great neural system that supplies the lower half of the body with nerve stimulus, therefore life and health. I have known neuralgia, rheumatism and partial paralysis to result from long continued pressure on these great nerves. Besides, and what will count for more than all with some women, the crosslegged attitude is ugly and ungraceful. It does not look pretty.

A young lady of fashion lately met with a disastrous fate. She had a party gown made according to an "exclusive" model. She depended on the dressmaker not to permit any common trash to get hold of the model and copy it. The dressmaker, in the face of a promise to the contrary, did just that and built another girl's gown on the same pattern. "Of course now I can never wear the dress," said the first girl indignantly. Dear, dear! This is dreadful.

A reverend gentleman recommends the founding of a school to teach girls to become good wives. Yes, yes. But it would be much more to the point if the reverend gentleman should look at his own side of the house and found a school to teach men to become good husbands. They need it more than women do, heaven knows. Moreover, there is much talk of mothers' clubs. It is about time we had a few fathers' clubs for a change. Mothers have been preached at by church and state for forty centuries, while it has been supposed that any old thing would do for a father. It is a grievous mistake that one civilization is suffering most grievously for. Give us some societies for the improvement of fathers!

It is a wonder that more women do not learn to prepare the bottled maraschino cherries, so called. They are high priced, but every woman who lives in the country and has cherry trees of fine quality can prepare the fruit in this way. In general in the canning and preserving of cherries an exquisite flavor may be got out of the stone by the use of the stone the fruit carefully, laying aside the seeds. With a hammer crush the cherry stones, so that the delicate, almondlike flavor of the inner pulp may be got at. Put the crushed stones and seeds in a little bag along with the sugar intended to sweeten the cherries and boil to a sirup to be poured over the fruit previous to cooking it.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

SOME INDIAN HOMES.

They Show Progress Made from Savagery to Civilization.

Pole and Brush Shelter Supplanted by Strong Framework and Now White Man's Architecture is Employed.

[Special Arizona Letter.]

WHEN and where man first made a dwelling for himself it is impossible now to determine. There can be no question that at first he found a shelter for himself and his family under the shadow of the rocks. Then, like the wild beasts, he discovered and used caves, hollow trees and the like, to which he came back after his daily excursions for food, with a sense of comfort and pleasure he had not known in his shelterless days.

Doubtless from seeing the birds construct their nests he gained the first idea of volitionally making a home for himself, and far more rudely than the birds did he construct his first home.

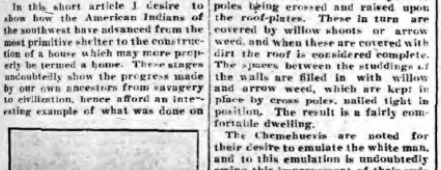
CHEMEHUEVI HOUSE AND GRANARY.

In this short article I desire to show how the American Indians of the southwest have advanced from the most primitive shelter to the construction of a house which may more properly be termed a home. These stages undoubtedly show the progress made by our own ancestors from savagery to civilization, hence afford an interesting example of what was done on our behalf long before we appeared on this sublunary sphere.

Fig. 1 is a photograph of the pole and brush shelter or "kan" of an Apache family in southwest Arizona. The Apaches, by nature, are nomads. They are the southernmost branch of that great Tinneh family of Alaska, of which the Hupas are the California representatives, the Navahoes the New Mexico representatives and the Apaches the Arizona representatives. Their habitations are of the rudest, and when a locality, not too far from water, and where there remain until the [illegible] which they regard as unprofitable leads them to desire a change. This photograph shows the better kind of shelter that they construct. Heavy poles are placed so as to construct a rudely oval framework. Willows, arrow weeds and other brush are then cut and reared up against these poles, being loosely attached to them by withes. Other brush is thrown upon the top, and thus a rude roof is provided to the shelter which serves to keep off the rays of the sun, somewhat breaks the force of the wind and partially shields its inmates from the fury of a winter storm.

PRIMITIVE APACHE HOME.

Fig. 2 is that of a Chemehuevi house, on the top of which is a rudely constructed granary, called a saquin. While this is built of exactly the same materials as the Apache "kan" of Fig. 1, it begins to approximate more nearly to the shape of a civilized home. Poles are placed upright at the corners and braced laterally by the pole roof-plates, on exactly the same principle followed by any modern builder of a frame house. Rude pole studdings are then inserted and fastened with greater or lesser security. There is a rude attempt at a doorway. The roof, however, is flat, two layers of poles being crossed and raised upon the roof-plates. These in turn are covered by willow shoots or arrow weed, and when these are covered with dirt the roof is considered complete. The spaces between the studdings of the walls are filled in with willow and arrow weed, which are kept in place by cross poles, nailed tight in position, the result is a fairly comfortable dwelling.



PIMA HOUSE OF JOSEPH M'DONALD.

The Chemehuevis are noted for their desire to emulate the white man, and to this emulation is undoubtedly owing this improvement of their rude structures.

Fig. 3 is a home of an educated Pima, known to the whites as Joseph McDonald. Though he himself, with all his family, which includes his wife and little son, together with his father and mother, are all dressed in civilized clothing, it will be seen that his wife is busily engaged in making one of the baskets for which the Pimas are so well known. Joseph is the interpreter for Rev. D. M. Wynkoop, Presbyterian missionary to the Pimas at Gila Crossing, about 20 miles from Phoenix, Ariz. I think I am correct in saying that he built the house himself. It will be seen that it is a great improvement upon the two former illustrations. The bricks are of "adobe" (which is a sun-dried clay) and the same kind of sticky clay is used for mortar. The door frame, doors and roof are put on in civilized style and the stovepipe indicates the presence of a white man's stove. Joseph is an intelligent and progressive Indian, with considerable native ability and force of character. He has great influence with his people, and under the intelligent leadership of Mr. Wynkoop has been able to do much good to his people.

It is very interesting each Sabbath day to attend the little church where Mr. Wynkoop preaches and Joseph interprets. Some 300 men and women and children assemble and, after singing and prayer, in the former of which Joseph joins heartily and earnestly, Mr. Wynkoop speaks plain, practical words of helpfulness to them in English, which Joseph interprets into Piman.

Not only in religious teaching of this kind, however, does Mr. Wynkoop speak to the people. He believes in the practical religion of work. Under his direction several hundred acres of desert land have recently been reclaimed. The irrigation ditch, several miles in length, has been engineered and constructed for the purpose of conveying water to this hitherto useless land, and many generations in future will rise up to call him blessed for the practical work he has done for the Piman race.

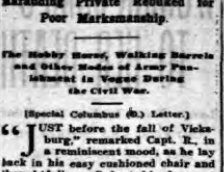
FRESH WAR STORIES.

Marauding Private Rebuked for Poor Marksmanship.

The Hobby Horse, Walking Barrels and Other Modes of Army Punishment in Vogue During the Civil War.

[Special Columbus (O.) Letter.]

"JUST before the fall of Vicksburg," remarked Capt. R., in a reminiscent mood, as he lay back in his easy cushioned chair and thoughtfully puffed at his fragrant Havana, "Osterhouse's corps, to which I was attached, having driven the enemy's force across the Atchafalaya river, crossed over below Grand Gulf, to go around Vicksburg. The troops had two days' rations, and after those gave out the boys had nothing to eat except what they could get off the country along the line of march. The blue coats were good foragers, however, and confiscated, to meet the demands of empty haversacks and emptier stomachs, flour, ham, shoulders, chickens, live stock, etc. The 'rebs' had hidden everything at the approach of the 'Yanks,' and the way we got the provender was to subsidize the negroes by promises of army privileges and protection. The darkies had helped to hide the coveted articles and they would lead the Yanks to an unsuspicious brush pile in the middle of a field, and, after removing the brush, they would dig down until they struck all sorts of eatables.



THE HOBBY HORSE.

"Just before the battle of Raymond Gen. Osterhouse had taken possession of a country log house, and was resting himself on the porch, when a private on a foraging expedition scared up one of those queer southern specimen of the porcine species, a razor-back hog. In his haste to secure the prize, without looking where he was shooting, he threw his musket to his shoulder and let drive at the gaunt porky specter. The bullet flew wide of its mark and buried itself in a rafter directly over Osterhouse's head.

"Gen. Osterhouse, who was very Dutch, sprang to his feet and shouted to some other men near at hand:

"'Mans, go und git dot soldier vot shot at der hog, and pring 'im before your shenera!'

"Five or six men rushed after the guilty soldier, arrested him, and marched him before the commander.

"'Vos dot you vat shot?' he demanded of the culprit.

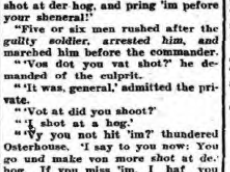
"'It was, general,' admitted the private.

"'Vot at did you shoot?'

"'I shot at a hog.'

"'Vy you not hit 'im?' thundered Osterhouse. 'I say to you now: You go und make von more shot at de' hog. If you miss 'im, I ha' you bucked and gagged. I don't care you tam vot you take in so way of provisions, shust so you ton't take any pahies' shoes und stockings!'

"The soldier saluted and went out to try another shot. Before he could do so, however, Mike Thomas, a little Dutchman in company A, Sixteenth O. V. I., had caught the hog in a fence corner, and the lusty squeals of the frightened 'razor-back' could be heard for a mile. Mike had no knife with which to dispatch his prize, and he jerked a splinter off the fence-rail, jabbed it in the poor brute's throat, and killed it.



BUCKED AND GAGGED.

"The fellow who had come so near hitting Gen. Osterhouse came up about this time, and asked Mike to let him shoot the dead hog, in order to keep from being bucked and gagged. Mike agreed to this, and the soldier resting his musket on the fence, fired a leaden plug into the carcass. Then he marched confidently back to where Gen. Osterhouse was still sitting on the porch, and told him he had shot the hog.

"'Pully pog!' exclaimed Gen. Osterhouse; 'now you shust go und pring me two nice juicy shteaks from der ham, and I vill excuse you.'

"'Can't do it, general,' sorrowfully replied the soldier, who found himself in a worse pickle than before.

"Osterhouse was a jolly old soul, however, and after listening in a highly amused way to the fellow's stammering explanation, mitigated his punishment to shooting all afternoon at a target.

"The buck and gag was a mode of punishment used both in the infantry and cavalry. A mode peculiar to the cavalry was the 'hobby-horse.' Men who violated the discipline by leaving camp without permission, stealing hogs or chickens, or similar offenses, were punished in this way. A pole would be placed between two forked sticks at one end and in the crotch of a tree at the other, about ten feet from the ground, and the culprits would then be made to climb up and straddle the pole. The elevated and constrained position soon became very uncomfortable, but a guard was standing up and down saw to it that the offenders remained on the 'hobby' until their term of sentence had expired.

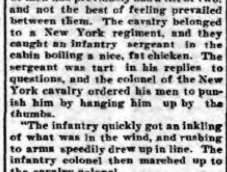
"A mode of punishment peculiar to the infantry was the 'walking barrels.' A string of offenders would be placed inside barrels, from which the two ends had been removed, and their arms would be poked through two holes near the top. A file of offenders thus caparisoned marching along with solemn tread was a very comical sight, and was always hugely enjoyed by the other fellows.

"One day in 1863, just after a lively skirmish with the enemy, in which he was put to rout, a body of cavalry drove some infantry out of a cabin and took possession. The two bodies of men had previously had a tilt or two, and not the best of feeling prevailed between them. The cavalry belonged to a New York regiment, and they caught an infantry sergeant in the cabin boiling a nice, fat chicken. The sergeant was tart in his replies to questions, and the colonel of the New York cavalry ordered his men to punish him by hanging him up by the thumbs.

"The infantry quickly got an inkling of what was in the wind, and rushing to arms speedily drew up in line. The infantry colonel then marched up to the cavalry colonel.

"'Cut that man down!' he demanded, 'or I'll do it myself,' at the same time suiting the action to the word.

"'He was insolent to a superior officer, and he shall be punished,' retorted the cavalryman, hotly. The first man that attempts to cut him down shall take the consequences.' He, too, whipped out his sword and his men rushed around him with drawn sabers. The infantry advanced with bayonets lowered, and for a moment the situation was a most thrilling one. The soldiers' blood was up on both sides, neither colonel would yield an inch, and bloodshed seemed inevitable.



THE WALKING BARRELS.

"Just in the nick of time, however, Gen. H— galloped up and hostilities 'petered out' as quickly as they had arisen.

"'I was that sergeant,' laconically concluded Capt. R—. "Have another Havana."

U. S. MARINE CORPS.

Barracks It Occupies Have a Wide Historic Interest.

Time Was When They Were the Center of Washington's Social Life —Built as Camp for British Cavalry.

[Special Washington Letter.]

THE marine band is a famous musical organization of which everybody has read or heard, but very little is known concerning the marine corps itself. The marines are the policemen of the navy, walking their beats and maintaining order aboard ship, just as the policemen in our cities walk their beats and make crime and disorder difficult.

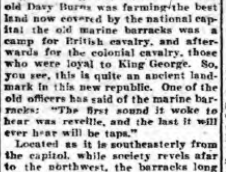
As the navy has grown the marine corps has increased in numbers until it is now as strong as a brigade of soldiers, and as efficient, for the men are well drilled and disciplined. The barracks in this city is no heavy with reminiscences and quaint memories as grandfathers and grandmothers, and as interesting. The story of the life of the old barracks is as interesting as a book; the right kind of a book, of course.

This ancient post was originally British, and it was erected under the reign of George III. At the time when old Davy Burns was farming the best land now covered by the national capital the old marine barracks was a camp for British cavalry, and afterwards for the colonial cavalry, those who were loyal to King George. So, you see, this is quite an ancient landmark in this new republic. One of the old officers has said of the marine barracks: "The first sound it woke to hear was reveille, and the last it will ever hear will be taps."

Located as it is southeasterly from the capitol, while society revels afar to the northwest, the barracks long since ceased to be in the social swim; but time was when there were greater echoes of fife and drum and banjo for the two-step and merry waltz than of the notes of evening bugle. There it was that Nellie Grant was introduced to the English lout and gurgler who made her life miserable, and clouded the happiness of the whole family and the great general, whose unappreciative daughter she then was.

Everybody in society used to speak of it as "the dear old marine barracks." There the widow of a brave confederate general, whose troops made a charge famous in history, often met with handsome young officers and mingled with them in the many hazy lancers, until rumor had her engaged to be married to a score of them; for they all fell in love with her. It has played its part as beau par excellence as not another military or naval station in this country has done. But society has gone, and the one of the young officers has said: "All we do now is work—and read the Bible."

The old barracks mounts guard off in the eastern branch side of the city, locks arms with the navy yard, and surveys the rest of the town with that exclusive English air it has. It fills up the eight square acres there, lying between Eighth and Ninth streets southeast, and I and G streets, and has built around itself a high brick wall plastered over milk-white, with a dark red rim running all around its top, like a streak of blood, and its base tarred black as a cannon ball. The long white wings of the grisly quarters stretch out on either side of the center house. In the dark the whole place grows ghostlike. The little chimneys of the barracks come peeping over the wall, but their roofs run up away from it, and all the buildings in the yard throw shadows over such quaint, bewitching corners and sides and half-windows, that the person outside the wall is captivated with their wonder and their charm. But by day it is quite different, becomes stolid here, manly, altogether British again, and, until you know it by heart loses the enchanting ways it has by night.



THE SOUTH GATE.

The center house and the wall are all the general public ever sees. This is a red-painted building of two stories, with an attic-third, and it is sandwiched in by one of those old double-chimney walls. Porches, with slender iron pillars upholding a white balustrade, run off in the front and the rear, and big chocolate looking stones climb crisscross up the white plastered walls at all four corners. A square cut gate with a barred window in the middle, [illegible] at the right of the center house, and this is the entrance to the barracks; which is guarded by night and by day by the boys in the gray-blue coats.

The center house has always been officers' quarters, and at present is the home of eight or nine young bachelors. This end was built in 1801, and was the first in the inclosure.

During the civil war there was confined in the southeast attic room of this center house that arch-freebooter of the confederate army, old Raphael Semmes. That was in 1864. There was a second lieutenant stationed at the barracks, who was one of the three appointed to guard the prisoner. There was a sentinel below and another at the gate, and old Semmes made noise enough to be heard all over the place. He was an interesting old chap, looked like Andrew Jackson and had the old Andrew temper, too.

Then, afterwards, there were several conspirators of the Lincoln assassination confined there for a short time. It has been stated that Booth was imprisoned there, but that, of course, is an error. Before the crime he was a frequent visitor; used to come along with another actor on Sunday afternoons. In those days the post was a great rendezvous for visitors on Sundays. Nearly every one of the presidents up to quite a late date made a habit of dropping in every now and then on the barracks to watch guard mounting or dress parade. President Johnson used to come nearly every Sunday, take off his old silk hat and sit on the steps of the commandant's quarters, and watch the drill. Then there was an old bonanza king from California, old Senator MacDougal, who used to wear sombrero chaparejos, all the straight cowboy outfit, and come riding in on his bronco. Grant was also there a good part of the time, and Nellie Grant used to come to all of the dances, together with Lizzie Porter and the Beall girls.

It is related that the British stabled their horses in the right-hand quarters now occupied by the men.

The main facts on record relating to the history of the barracks are:

1799 to 1800—Traditionary camp for colonial troops of cavalry.
1800—Established as marine headquarters.
1801—Erection of buildings.
1806—Completion of barracks.
1814—Partially destroyed by British.
1815—Repaired.
1827—Partially destroyed by fire.
1880-84—Recruiting station.
1884-1900—Recruiting station and school of application.

The inclosure is oblong in shape, with all of the buildings surrounding the great central courtyard or parade ground. A walk leading from the center house across to the flag staff on the opposite side cuts the parade ground in half, also.

The quarters of the men are a study. Here only are men stationed for any length of time, and the marines have made their quarters homelike. There are no bare walls here, but photographs, flags, pictures, curios, all sorts of odds and ends picked up in travel by land and sea.

Southwest of the sand drill ground there is a whole village of new khaki canvas tents. Here the recruits are quartered, although some of them are bunked in an old ramshackle shooting gallery. There is a school also for the little drummer boys located in the southwest corner, where there are always upward of 25 youngsters under instruction; and they make quite an addition to the marine band drum corps on public occasions.

On the north side of the inclosure is the home of the commandant of the corps, a home built in 1805. Here all of the commandants for an entire century have lived, and here they have entertained distinguished guests; such as Gen. Jackson, Gen. Scott, and all of the presidents, from time to time, until Cleveland came and ignored the old barracks. Since then no president has visited the "dear old marine barracks." That also has tended to take it out of the social swim.

Of all the sights in Washington which visitors ought to make a part of their itinerary of the city the marine barracks is one of the most interesting and important.

Put it down in the list of places you will see when you come here and you will some day.

SOUTHWEST CORNER OF GROUNDS.

AN OLD-TIME ALMANAC.

Within Its Faded Pages Are Found Many Quaint Passages and Observations.

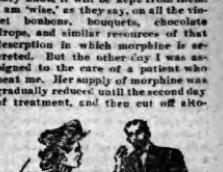
A rare possession in the line of publications is a torn and faded volume owned by Mrs. P. W. Williams, of this city, says the Topeka (Kan.) State Journal. It is described on the title page as "The New England Almanack and Gentleman's and Lady's Diary for the Year of Our Lord Christ, 1775—Circulated for the Meridian of New London, in Lat. 41 Deg. 25 Min. North." The key to the forecast of the days of each month is furnished from a crude drawing of "The Anatomy of Man's Body, as Govern'd by the Twelve Constellations." The various months are preceded by a timely verse of poetry, and scattered through the weather tables are notes indicating the anniversaries of important events, poetic quotations and aphorisms. Timely warnings as to probable weather conditions are given at various periods. For instance, between the 6th and 9th of August the farmer is advised to "Make money while you may, for a mighty storm is coming." In the space devoted to this month in this old almanac: "The dame that's old now feels the cold which makes her scold." In the February chronicle is found this warning: "Monopolizers, take care, lest you are dragged to the bar."

Included in the interesting contents are a poetic narrative, entitled "The Neglected Maid's Lamentation," a number of precepts, a list of the "Friends' Yearly Meetings in New England," a treatise on "How to Get Riches," "Distance of the Principal Towns in New England from New London. With the Most Noted Houses of Entertainment on the Road," "A Table of Interest at 6 Per Cent," "A Poem on That Worthy Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the United States, by a Friend to His Country," and "A Receipt for Pickling Beef and Pork."

HID DRUG IN HAIR.

Woman Morphine Fiend Kept Big Stock of the Poison Concealed Under Her Tresses.

"It is well known," said a nurse in an up-town sanitarium, to a New York Times reporter, "that women addicted to morphine will resort to all sorts of tricks to hide the drug for use when they know it will be kept from them. I am 'wise,' as they say, on all the violet bonbons, bouquets, chocolate drops, and similar resources of that description in which morphine is secreted. But the other day I was assigned to the care of a patient who beat me. Her supply of morphine was gradually reduced until the second day of treatment, and then cut off altogether. Still the patient continued to get morphine. There was no doubt about that. Not only myself but every nurse and employe in the house was under suspicion. The patient was a woman with a beautiful and bountiful supply of hair. Her husband, who visited her twice a day, was virtually accused of bringing her the drug, and he was naturally indignant.



FOUGHT LIKE A WILDCAT.

"'What do you suppose I am paying good money for a cure for?' he asked.

"The fourth day the doctor in attendance stood for a long time over the patient, who was drowsy with morphine. Suddenly he put his arms around her and lifted her to a sitting posture.

"'Now,' he said, 'we are going to comb your hair, and perhaps you will feel refreshed.'

"The patient fought like a wildcat, and the secret was out. She had enough morphine hidden in her long hair to last her six weeks if we had not found it out."

DO YOU PLAY POKER?

If So, You Will Understand This Story Told by Pat Sheedy, Famous Gotham Sport.

Poker stories were being told, and finally "Pat" Sheedy told one. "It was out in Missouri," he said, "that five men sat down to a play a friendly game. Things went along fairly well for a time, and then there was a big jackpot. One of the players told me about it afterward.

"'I opened the pot and they all stayed,' he said. 'There was some raising done before the draw, which did not scare anybody out and made the pot worth while. Then we took cards and the betting began. We put up about all the money we had and there was a showdown.

"'The dealer had a king full on aces. The man on his left showed three aces and a pair of kings. The other players, both of whom looked resolute and determined, held four kings and four aces respectively.

"'The other man who was telling me about the game stopped there,' continued Mr. Sheedy, 'and I asked him: "What did you hold?"

"'"Me?" he queried. "Me? Oh, I was the coroner and I held four inquests."'

Wives Sold at a Bargain.

Wives are objects of bargains and sale in parts of Russia. In the district of Kamyschin, on the Volga, for example, the price of a pretty girl from a well-to-do family ranges from $50 to $100, and in special cases a much higher sum is obtained. In the villages the lowest price is about $25. It is customary for the fathers of the intending bride and bridegroom to haggle for a long time over the price to be paid for the young lady.

The Smallest Tree Known.

The Greenland birch is the smallest tree in the world. Although its height is less than three inches, it covers a radius of about 30 inches.

"OH! I WAS THE CORONER."

American Diamond Fields.

From seven diamonds weighing from 2 to 21 karats in value have been taken up in Wisconsin and adjoining states. Prof. William B. Hobbs traces the diamond fields of North America to the volcanic region of the Cascades with deposits of valuable gems. They usually have a matrix of the diamond as the black shale—or "blue ground"—around the necks of the burned-out volcanoes. The loose stones found seem to have been transported by glaciers, and in following up the probable courses of these ancient ice rivers the lines converge in the barren territory stated.—N. Y. Sun.

A Busy Day.

Hallie—What's the matter, Kitty? You look all tired out!

Kitty—And no wonder. I've had a hard day of it. I don't know when I've worked so hard. I looked at the men clean up the railroad station this morning, and after that I saw three safes raised into four-story windows and four loads of coal delivered in bas kets.—Boston Transcript.

NOT READY TO ACT.

No decision has yet been reached by the Common Council on the application of the Central Jersey Telephone Company for franchise. It was rather expected that the subject would come up at the last meeting of the Common Council but the application is still in the hands of the street committee and Chairman R. I. Tolles, of that committee, had nothing to say about it at the session. There was talk of a public hearing sometime ago but nothing definite has been done regarding it.

It is of interest to note that the New Brunswick Council has passed the franchise for the same company over the Mayor's veto and the new company will proceed at once to install its system in that city. All sorts of charges and counter-charges are being made as to the methods used in the fight over the franchise.

The present delay in acting on the application can be easily explained. The Councilmen are desirous of pleasing the people. If there is a general demand for a new company, the franchise will probably be granted. Otherwise it will not. Until they know more of the public feeling on the subject, they will not feel clear to move in the matter. A general expression of opinion through the columns of The Daily Press is much desired by the members of the street committee.

A committee of citizens and city officials has recommended that the city of Summit purchase its water plant from the Essex-Union Water and Light Company and erect an electric lighting plant of its own. Summit seems to be considering the question of municipal ownership quite seriously judging from these happenings. Summit should make sure about the legal status of the water supply plant before it purchases it. Its troubles with the millowners in the "Rotted" will be remembered. The water company was charged with drying up the springs which feed the stream which passes out at Scotch Plains.

The announcement made a few days ago that Homer J. Wightman would remain as supervising principal of the North Plainfield public schools was received with general satisfaction throughout the borough. Everybody knows that Mr. Wightman has done much to improve the borough school and that he is a valuable man. The talk that the advocates of Greater Plainfield, when they secured control of the Borough Board of Education, would turn him out was the rankest nonsense. The members of the board know a good man and they intend to keep him. The new board has, however, accomplished wonders in its campaign after the truants so that "playing hookey" is fast becoming unknown in North Plainfield. Special credit for this should be given to Samuel Townsend, chairman of the committee on truancy.

A keen observer affirms, in the Philadelphia Record, that considering the direct returns, no other class of advertising is so poorly done as is that of the summer resorts. "In the course of the season the average amount paid by the average hotel man for advertising in the newspapers is a trifle over $100, and in many cases this sum includes the booklets. Few spend more than $1,000. The 'ads' are not changed even from year to year. Yet there is no other enterprise which could bring better returns from liberal and modern advertising in the leading newspapers."

Very satisfactory was the opening of the Crescent Oval Saturday as a baseball field. The diamond is a good one while ample accommodation has been made for the spectators. The covered grandstand is a welcome feature but it would still be improved by a shade roof at the western end to keep the sun out of the eyes of the spectators. It looks as if the young men of the Alis Club were going to be very successful in their baseball season even with the league games going in opposition.

The supplemental course of entertainments at the Y. M. C. A. came to a close last evening with a programme of unusual excellence. The star course during the winter was very satisfactory and this extra course has been equally pleasurable. The Y. M. C. A. has been remarkably successful in its effort to provide good, wholesome entertainment for the young people of Plainfield.

Another P. and R. engineer ran past a red danger signal with fatal consequences. When the red light is neglected, the results are generally serious to somebody.

REGULAR COMPETITIONS

Honors at Hillside Divided—All Scores Unusually Low—Dr. A. W. Anderson Low Man at Park Club—Hillside Defeats Harbor Hill—The Various Scores.

HILLSIDE CLUB.

Saturday was an ideal one for the popular game of golf and the devotees of the sport gathered in large numbers at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, where throughout the day the game was enjoyed fully. The course has never been in better condition. Much time and labor has been spent in putting the course in shape and the greens are almost perfection.

In addition to the playing, the social features at the clubhouse were plentiful. The club steward, Mrs. Lena Hellstrom, served a great many luncheons during the day, and Mrs. Evarts Tracy gave a small luncheon for a few friends. All were delighted with the service and mean at this part of the club life promises to be a distinctive feature this season. It was noticed that many of the old-time members were at the clubhouse, while not a few tried their luck at the game.

There were two events on the course, the weekly play for the Golf Committee cup and a team match between Hillside and Harbor Hill, both in the afternoon. In the weekly competition it was a record day for low scores. Robert Abbott, Morris J. Dumont and H. D. Hibbard each with a net score of 77 tied for first honors. Each received two points for the cup. Out of all the scores posted the highest net was 83.

The scores for the Golf Committee cup are as follows:

	Gross	Hand.	Net
Robert Abbott	78	1	77
Morris J. Dumont	81	4	77

In the team match between Hillside and the crack Harbor Hill team, the home players simply overwhelmed their opponents, beating them by a score of 35 to 3. Olaf Saugstad was the only member of the Hillside team that was down. Under the captaincy of Morris J. Dumont, the local ten played a superb game throughout, showing that Hillside has most promising material for matches. The summary:

PARK GOLF CLUB.

Low scores were the rule at the Park Golf Club Saturday afternoon when the weekly competition for the President's cup was held. With the course in the best of condition and the day a perfect one, the golfiacs turned out in crowds and thoroughly enjoyed the day.

By dividing second honors with Samuel Townsend, Former Senator Chas. A. Reed came to the fore in the race for the trophy and now leads by a small margin. Dr. A. W. Anderson, one of the most enthusiastic golfers, was in fine form and won first place for the afternoon.

After having completed his rounds in the competition, Morgan T. Townsend lowered the course record with a 36, two better than bogey. His score compared with bogey as follows:

Townsend	3	2	7	4	4	4	4	6	—36
Bogey	4	5	6	4	5	4	5	4	—40

The standing for the President's cup is now as follows:

Temporary officers have been elected, and the new body is known as Salaam Temple.

WAS COMPLETE SUCCESS

HELD AT THE RANDOLPH - COOLEY SCHOOL SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Japanese Fan Dance Given During Afternoon—Refreshments Served in Tea Room—For Benefit of "The Quiver"—Other Details.

A very successful Japanese fete and tea was held at the Randolph-Cooley School for young women Saturday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock. The affair was the idea of Miss Lord, instructor of English at the school, and her untiring efforts in planning and in training the girls were in a large measure the cause of its success.

The rooms were tastefully decorated with strings of Japanese lanterns, fans, dog-wood and quaint Japanese pictures, and the pupils were tastefully gowned in soft Japanese silks.

During the afternoon, twelve of the young women, three times executed a pleasing Japanese fan dance in costume and sang a quaint Japanese love song. Those who took part were the Misses Gladys Biglow, Margaret Gibbs, Marjorie Howard, Lillian King, Katherine McCutchon, Grace Otterson, Gladys Peck, Mary Runkle, Marion Smith, Margaret Townsend, Anne Waldo and Evelyn Wells.

Refreshments, consisting of tea, lemonade and ice cream were served in true Japanese style in the beautifully decorated tea room. Miss Helen Martin was in charge. There was a candy booth in charge of the Misses Helen Batchelor, Elinor Waring and Caroline Martin. The cake table was in charge of Miss Marion Smith and Miss Ellen Burke, and the Misses Gladys Biglow, and Margaret Low were at the fancy booth. The ever popular grab bag was presided over by Miss Dorothy Burke and Miss Blossom Randolph was the popular Japanese fortune teller.

The affair was highly successful financially as well as socially, and more than $100 was taken in in the course of the afternoon. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the school paper, "The Quiver."

WOMAN JUMPS TO HER DEATH

Leaps From Trolley Car Near Garwood and Strikes on Her Head As She Falls.

CAR AT FULL SPEED

Either An Attempt to Commit Suicide or Due to Confusion in Sudden Desire to Leave the Car—The Body Was Taken to a Friend's Home Nearby.

Miss Dagmar Jensen, aged twenty-five years, a domestic in the employ of Mrs. Bacon, of Fanwood, was killed last Sunday at 5 o'clock by jumping from a rapidly moving trolley car one mile east of Garwood. The car was bound from this city to Elizabeth. The woman struck squarely on her head and the spine was fractured near the base of the neck. The car was backed and when the woman was picked up she was still breathing feebly.

There were several Plainfield people on the car, among them being George Frase, Thomas B. Howett and John H. Coss. According to the story told by those who saw the woman jump, it is thought that either the woman deliberately planned suicide, or else become confused and forgot to stop the car. She had been in this country only three weeks, during which she has had spells of melancholia.

The County Physician was telephoned for and he gave a permit to remove the body. It was taken to the home of a friend who lived a few blocks away. The conductor and pas*sengers did everything in their power* to revive her but it was useless, as she died in five minutes after the accident.

"PIRATES OF PENZANCE."

Everything Ready for Its Complete Production May 21.

"The Pirates of Penzance," which will be given in the Casino, May 21, is probably the most difficult opera that Gilbert and Sullivan have written. As a rule amateurs cannot sing the difficult numbers, and consequently the opera is seldom given in its entirety. May 21 every bar of music, solos and choruses, will be sung in a most pleasing and intelligent manner.

Just think of the cast. Judge Runyon as the "Sergeant of Police" will tell you what a policeman's life is like. Raymond A. McGee with his magnificent bass voice will show you what a pirate king should look like, and sing like a—well come and hear him. Geo. Smith as Frederick, the lover, will undoubtedly have a number of proposals of marriage next (leap) year. Major-General Holmes has ordered new dresses for his twenty-three daughters, and would like to pay for them with the proceeds of the opera.

Miss Delanoix (Mabel) has a very trying part which covers a range of over two octaves; she just smiles at high C. Come and hear her, she is not married yet. Mrs. Ward, everybody remembers her magnificent portrayal of Jane in Patience. You must hear her laugh in the Paradox trio.

Go to Armstrong's at once and get your tickets. All seats are reserved.

NEW COURTS.

James E. Martine Comes to Rescue of East End Tennis Club.

The club will lay out a court on that site in a few days so that it will be ready when the season gets in full swing.

LOCAL TEAMS MEET DEFEAT

Many of Them Beaten in Saturday's Baseball Games—All Attract Crowds.

SOME GOOD PLAYING

Crescent Oval Opens Career As a Baseball Field With Defeat for Alis—Hope Loses to Dunellen—St. Mary's Swamped at Scotch Plains—Westfield is Beaten.

Saturday was not a particularly happy day for the local baseball teams as nearly all of them were beaten. The day was ideal, however, and large crowds attended all the games. Of most importance was the opening of the Crescent Oval as a baseball field.

PLAINS, 18; ST. MARY'S, 0.

Scotch Plains, May 11—The strong aggregation of ball tossers at the Plains administered a severe drubbing, Saturday afternoon, to the St. Mary's team of the City League. The heavy hitters of the local found White, of the visitors, for thirteen hits, beside Harvey's home run in the seventh, while Davis, of the home team, was invincible, allowing only one base hit, and this not until the ninth inning. The support given him was of league style, only one error being charged, William on third base being the guilty man.

One of the features of the game was Bosterli's playing at second base, gathering in every thing coming his way, no matter how warm it was. Not a man on the visiting team reached second base. Following is the line up and score by innings:

AEOLIAN, 3; WESTFIELD, 0.

Westfield, May 11—The Westfield baseball team met defeat on Saturday at the hands of the Aeolian team of Garwood, in one of the prettiest exhibitions of the season. It was mainly a pitcher's battle, only three hits being made off Wallas, Westfield's new find from the west. The final score was 3 to 0 in favor of the visiting team. The fielding was sharp and good and the whole game was played with much snap. The score by innings was as follows:

Batteries—Westfield, Wallas and Burke; Aeolian, Gaffeny and Poole.

ECHOS, 28; ORANGE F.C. 22.

By a score of 28 to 22 the Orange Field Club, of this city, was defeated Saturday afternoon, when it played a game of ball with the Echo A. C., at Cranford. The local players put up a strong game but played in face of heavy odds.

RUTGERS, 9; N. P. H. S., 7.

The North Plainfield High School baseball team journeyed to New Brunswick, Saturday morning and played a game with the Rutgers Prep. School. The borough boys lost the contest by a score of 9 to 7, principally through bad errors, a total of twelve being charged up against the team. George and Ovens, the battery for the visiting team, performed well but the errors made by all but three of the team were too much to overcome. The teams follow:

Rutgers Prep.—H. Lang, cf; Heath, p; Bazley, 3b; McKibben, 1b; Hancock, lf; G. Lang, ss; Fisher, 2b; Winckler, rf; Cose, c.

R. A. A., 10; WATCHUNG, 3.

The Reform A. A. opened the season Saturday by defeating the Watchung baseball team, of Dunellen, by a score of 10 to 3. It was a lively game throughout and the patronage was large. It was played at Dunellen.

Scott twirled the lambskin for the local team with the result that he made fourteen strike outs while Monahan who did the twirling for the Watchungs made four.

The lineups:

Reform A. A.—Scott, p; O'Laughlin, c; Higgins, 1b; McGinley, 3b; Taylor, ss; Parent, lf; Dean, cf; O'Neal, rf. Umpire, J. Parent.

FLEMINGTON, 9; S. W., 8.

The Flemington Athletic Association defeated the Safe Works team 9 to 8 in an exciting eleven inning game Saturday at Flemington. Both teams played fast ball and the result was in doubt to the end. The battery work of both nines was a feature. Summary:

Flemington—Biddle, c; Slattery, p; Dick, 1b; Miller, 2b; Lates, 3b; Hann, ss; Scott, lf; Cormody, rf; Foran, cf.

STAR A. C., 17; ALIS, 10.

The Alis A. A. baseball team made its initial appearance Saturday afternoon on its own grounds, Crescent Oval, before a large and enthusiastic crowd of friends, including a host of the fair sex. The team had for its opponent the veteran Star Athletic Club, of Newark. All things considered the home team did well, although the members made a bunch of miserable errors.

Barnes, the regular catcher, was unable to play on account of a sore hand, and Egan took his place, and in the second inning George Dupee had to take Geo. Schoonmaker's place on third base, the latter having injured his knee. Burt pitched all but the last two innings, when Dupee finished the game.

The accommodations for seeing the game at Crescent Oval are fine, a large substantial covered grand-stand having been erected, together with bleachers.

The summary of the game is as follows:

DUNELLEN, 13; HOPE, 11.

The baseball aggregations that represent Hope chapel and Dunellen gave a very striking illustration Saturday of how the national game should not be played. A "Comedy of Errors" in nine painful acts, with the score laid at Hope Common, is the story in brief of the afternoon's work.

There were a few redeeming features. Ettinger, for Dunellen, and Martin, for the locals, rapped out a couple of beautiful hits past centre field that resulted in home runs, although in one case rapid fielding might have limited the runner to three bags. Ettinger pitched respectably well, outclassing his opponent who took several baleon flights up into the clouds and was hit freely at all times.

Both nines enjoyed a merry-go-round on the bases, aided by exceedingly yellow fielding. O. Dodge, who presided for Hope, fanned six men, and Ettinger struck out seven Hopes had a splendid chance to win out in the eighth with the score ten to nine in their opponent's favor. They rallied strongly with the stick in their half of the eighth and ninth innings, but wretched fielding with Dunellen at bat in the ninth, allowed the visitors to score three runs and spoiled the locals last forlorn hope.

Line up and score by innings:

Dunellen — Giles, ss; Smith, 3b; Ettinger, p; McQuade, c; Brown, 1b; Ayers, 2b; Smalley, rf; Giddis, rf; Hurlick, lf.

Hope—Howell, lf; Martin, 2b; F. Dodge, 3b; Shortman, ss; O. Dodge, p; Dalley and Symonds, 1b; Hewitt, rf; Roseberry, cf; Bolan, c.

Hope	0	0	3	0	0	2	3	1	2	—11

ST. AGNES, 5; C. GIANTS, 2.

In a hard fought, well played game, Saturday, the Cuban Giants met defeat at the hands of the St. Agnes Lyceum nine, on the Arlington avenue grounds. The game was remarkably free from errors, and was won in the fifth inning, when St. Agnes tallied four times on an error by Alexander at centre field.

The batting and fielding of Johnson for the Giants was a feature, and Brokaw, who occupied the slab for the Cubans for the first time, likewise distinguished himself. The Giants earned both of their runs, and St. Agnes one of theirs. The batting order was as follows:

Cuban Giants—Nelson, c; Davis and Alexander, cf; Brokaw, p; Johnson, 2b; Hopkins, lf; Hatchett, rf; Peterson, 3b; Moore, 1b; Simmons, ss.

St. Agnes—Kane, Gray, Harper, Cody, O'Rourke, Nelson, Brown, Meyers, Long.

Score by innings:

Cuban Giants	0	0	0	0	1	0	1	0	0	—2
St. Agnes	0	0	0	0	4	0	1	0	0	—5

Y.M.C.A., 18; N. MARKET, 6.

Superior field work and good pitching won the game between the New Market nine and the Y. M. C. A. for the latter Saturday afternoon, on St. Mary's field. The game resulted in a score of 18 to 6.

Tom Keefe held the pitcher's box for the Y. M. C. A., and made eight strike outs while Whitley, of the New Markets, put out two men. Star playing was done by Munro at shortstop. He played last year with the Hope Y. A. A. This year he has improved greatly.

The Y. M. C. A. was much the superior at the bat than the visitors although the New Market men were faster on the bases. The first inning showed that the Y. M. C. A. had the best part of the string and they kept hold of it all through the game.

The line-ups:

Y. M. C. A.—Munro, ss; Parent, 2b; Mayer, c; Beckman, 1b; Smith, 3b; Marsh, lf; Keefe, p; Hall, rf; Koons, cf; Sutphen, umpire.

New Market—Lyons, rf; Pettington, cf; Waglow, lf; Fletcher, ss; Drayton, 3b; A. Nelson, c; George Herman, 2b; Wykoff, Voorhees, 1b; George Whitley, p. George McCombe, umpire; Walter Nelson, scorer.

The score by innings follows:

Y. M. C. A.	1	0	0	1	2	1	3	1	0	—18
New Markets	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	0	0	— 6

UNION MEETING OF TEACHERS

HELD IN THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH SATURDAY EVENING.

Advisability of Forming a Union of Sunday-School Teachers Discussed—Another Meeting.

A union meeting of the teachers of the Baptist Sunday-schools was held in the First Baptist church Saturday evening, when the advisability of forming a union of Sunday-school teachers was discussed. The purpose of forming such an organization is to review the lessons of the following Sunday. The scheme met with instant favor and another meeting will be held this Saturday evening, when an organization will, no doubt, be completed.

It is understood that Rev. Gideon M. Shott will teach the lesson for the present, until a regular pastor is secured at the First Baptist church. The meeting is primarily for the benefit of the First and Park Avenue churches, but all the other teachers of Baptist and other denominations are welcome to attend.

A meeting of the teachers of the First Baptist church Sunday-school was held Sunday afternoon after the regular session of the school, when the question of changing the hours of Sunday-school sessions was brought up. It was agreed to change the hours during the hot weather from 2:30 in the afternoon to 9:30 in the morning and to continue the new hours beginning the third Sunday in June to the third Sunday in September.

It was also decided to send the teachers of the primary and infant departments to the Summer-school at Asbury Park this summer. Other matters of importance were discussed.

New Fruit Store for Westfield.

Wm. H. Grogan has leased one of his North avenue stores to F. Margentino, of Plainfield. Mr. Margentino will conduct a fruit and confectionery business. He has been in this business in Plainfield for the past eleven years. The Westfield store will open June 1. —Westfield Standard.

Epworth League Anniversary.

TRIAL OF CRIMINAL CHARGES IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURTS.

Finds Wm. Ralph Not Guilty of Robbing Store at Gladstone—He Claims That Wm. Leary is Responsible.

Somerville, May 12—The trial of the criminal cases of the April term of Somerset county courts was taken up here yesterday morning before Judge Schenck.

The first case moved by Prosecutor Griggs was that of the State against William Ralph, who was charged with having broken into the general country store of James W. Rodenbaugh at Gladstone January 30 and stealing three boxes of shells, a half dozen of razors, a box of cigars and a dozen packs of cigarettes.

In his own behalf the defendant testified that on the night in question he went to the postoffice in company of William Leary. After inquiring for mail they left the office and went past Rodenbaugh's store. Some seventy-five yards the other side Ralph alleges, Leary told him to wait while he went back to the store. After about ten minutes Leary returned and gave him a box of shells. He went to Mayberry's barber shop and then home. He swore he had no knowledge of the robbery. Leary skipped after Ralph was arrested. John A. Frech was counsel for the defense. The jury, after a short deliberation, rendered a verdict of not guilty.

John Morecraft and Harry Hayes, of North Plainfield, charged with the theft of chickens, retracted their pleas of not guilty and pleaded non vult.

William Kennedy, breaking, entering and larceny, retracted and pleaded non vult.

James A. Little, assault and battery, retracted and pleaded non vult.

DEATH OF G. W. SANFORD.

Former Teacher at City High School Dies at Greenville, N. Y.

George Weeks Sanford, who organized the commercial department in the City High School in 1897 and conducted it for four years, died Monday morning at his former home at Greenville, Greene county, N. Y.

After training in shorthand and commercial lines, he graduated from the Normal School in Geneva, N. Y., in 1897 and came to Plainfield. He was a faithful and conscientious worker and made many friends here. He also taught in the local Y. M. C. A. He left here to accept a better position as head of the commercial department of the Free Academy at Utica, N. Y.

At the beginning of the spring vacation, he went to his old home at Greenville. When vacation was over, he was unable to return to Utica on account of a severe attack of grip. Complications followed which resulted in his death.

the death of the wage-earner practically destitute.

Papers were to have been issued today requiring Ross and his family to vacate the premises at 211 Plainfield avenue, but in view of the death of Ross, they will probably be withheld for a time at least. Decision was rendered in Justice Moffett's court last week against Ross in the landlord and tenant case of McCarthy against Ross.

Blameworthy as Ross may have been, the burden and suffering falls not upon himself but upon his innocent family.

THEATRICAL.

William A. Brady has issued a notification cancelling all the road time held for Grace George in "Pretty Peggy." The production will finish the season at the Herald Square Theatre, New York. Grace George, who was booked to begin her next season in October at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, will open in September instead in order to resume her run at the Herald Square Theatre, where she has scored a remarkable success.

Vaudeville in all that the word implies will be furnished by the bill offered at Keith's during the coming week. Chief among the acts that will keep the interest centered is the slack wire work of the Great Sidonia. True to nature is the sketch "The Bowery Sweethearts," offered by Fields and Whalen. The little ones will be astonished at the work done by Buster Keaton who is the youngest of the Keaton family, father, mother and son. He is a whole show in himself, with his singing, dancing, jokes and comedy turns. "A Gymnast's Parlor Amusement," in which the Pantzer Trio, assisted by Mrs. Carl Pantzer, is the refinement of acrobatic comedy work. Marion Littlefield, the famous contralto, will sing, while Edward Doyle will do some wonderful feats of juggling. Reno and Richards; Al Lawrence, Parker's Marvelous Dogs and a well-known story illustrated by Keith's moving pictures will also appeal to the younger element. These with many others all as good in their line will help entertain rounding out the bill to the usual Keith completeness.

Frank Daniels, whose success with "Miss Simplicity" at the Casino last year was one of the noteworthy events of the season, has brought this same merry musical concoction to the Academy of Music, New York, for a three weeks stay, beginning Monday.

Mr. Daniels has for years been one of the most popular of our American comic opera comedians and year after year he has succeeded in securing pieces that have met with most pronounced favor. "Miss Simplicity" is said to afford the comedian the best opportunities he has ever had to show how funny he can be.

Miss Marie Cahill's manager, Daniel V. Arthur, announces that the musical comedy, "Nancy Brown," in which Miss Cahill has been appearing at the Bijou Theatre, New York, with much conspicuous success, will close its season at that house Saturday night. This was decided upon, owing to the fact that Miss Cahill has not been enjoying the best of health lately, and because her season in Boston opens rather earlier than usual. Her physicians advised her to close before the extremely hot weather comes, and recommended a trip to Europe. Miss Cahill will sail for England the latter part of this month, returning in August.

Another Council Meeting.

The idea of adjourning the last Council meeting to Monday evening, May 18, is intended to give more time to the consideration of city business. The regular meeting last week was too long a session to suit most of the members and where there is so much to consider the policy will be to have another meeting during the month.

YEAR AT CHILDREN'S HOME IS REVIEWED

Annual Meeting of Plainfield Children's Home Association Held Thursday.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

MRS. HORACE KIMBALL RE-ELECTED TO THE PRESIDENCY.

Association Lost Thirteen Sustaining Members by Death or Removal—Dr. Rushmore Was Appointed Visiting Physician.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Children's Home Association was held Thursday afternoon, when the work for the past year was reviewed. The association has cause for deep regret in the fact that during the year it has lost thirteen sustaining members, either by death or removal from the city.

The members discussed at some length the prospects of the addition to the home, made possible through the generous gifts of James Clark.

In the choice of officers the following were re-elected: President, Mrs. Horace Kimball; vice presidents, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Mrs. Laura B. Gilbert, Mrs. J. C. Peck; recording secretary, Mrs. Ruth C. Leonard; corresponding secretary, Miss Lucy H. Everett; treasurer, Miss Ella Serrell.

Dr. Edward Rushmore was again appointed visiting physician to the Home and Mrs. Sarah A. Henderson was re-engaged for another year as matron. The standing committees and board of managers will be announced at the meeting to be held Thursday, June 4.

The report of the treasurer, Miss Ella Serrell, showed receipts for the year to be $6,387.20, which includes $970 received from sustaining members, $390 from annual subscriptions, $414.04 interest on investments, donations amounting to $649.56 and $3,000 received as legacy received from the estate of Miss Eleanor Roome, together with other smaller cash receipts. The expenditures amounted to $6,476.67, leaving a balance May 1, of $966.53. The amount in the City National Bank is $680.42 and the amount of cash on hand is $98.11. The treasurer's report is audited by Charles Place and C. W. McCutchen as auditing committee.

JOURNAL'S CHANGES.

Elizabeth Journal Incorporated and Under the Editorial Charge of Joseph D. Lowden.

The Elizabeth Journal has incorporated, the title of the business being turned over to a company, recently formed. The company is capitalized for a comparatively small amount and is what is known as a "close corporation." Almost the entire issue of stock is held by Mrs. Vashti B. Foote and Augustus S. Crane, the former retaining the controlling interest. The remainder of the stock is held in small lots by Miss Julia M. Foote, Henry H. Foote, William P. Toler, Joseph D. Lowden, Augustus W. Schwartz and Thomas R. Millin, the last three being heads of departments and employes of long standing in the Journal office.

Since 1879 the Journal has been managed for Mrs. Foote by Charles C. McBride. He retires very much to the regret of those with whom he has been associated. Mr. McBride is succeeded in the editorial chair by Joseph D. Lowden, who since 1886 has been the city editor.

ONE BAD INNING DID IT

CITY HIGH SCHOOL BEAT ST. FRANCES XAVIER BOYS.

Final Score of Game Played on the Stillman Field Was 9 to 4.

The City High School baseball team defeated the St. Francis Xavier Preparatory School team in an uphill game played on Stillman Field Thursday afternoon. The score was 9 to 4.

The visitors started right off to score in the first inning and netted two runs on loose playing by the High School. They also scored in the second and third innings. When the High School boys came to the bat in the fourth, the score stood 4 to 1 in favor of the visitors. A combination of sharp singles and costly errors properly proportioned caused six of the High School players to circle the bases before the third out was made and after that inning there was at no time any doubt as to the outcome of the game.

VanAuken pitched the game for the home team, and although he had not had a ball in his hand for nearly two weeks, he broke his record as pitcher, striking out nineteen of the opposing batsmen. He received good support after the first inning and only eight errors were made by the High School. The visiting pitcher proved an easy mark for the High School boys, who made six hits in the course of the game. The infield playing of the visitors was unsteady throughout and there were times when the whole team went up in the air at most important places in the game. Their outfield, however was right up to form at all times, and played an errorless game, exciting much applause by excellent judgment of flies. Walters took Miner's place in the seventh.

The teams batted as follows:

P. H. S.—Thompson, 1b; Smith, 2b; Craig, ss; Ulrich, lf; Munro, c; Miner, Walters, rf; VanAuken, p; Bock, cf; Brokaw, 2b.

S. F. X.—Downey, ss; Duffy, lf; Barry, 3b; Connoly, p; Egan, cf; Quinn, rf; Schmitz, 1b; Taylor, 2b; Graff, c.

CHILD LABOR PROBLEM.

Chicago Choir Boy Attempted to Take a Hand in Settling It to His Own Advantage.

"The young 'kid' of the present day is entirely too practical," commented the man whose eldest son had reached the precocious age of eight years.

"Yes? What's he been doing now?" hearily quizzed a Chicago Inter Ocean reporter. He expected another "proud papa" story.

"Oh, my wife came home a few evenings ago enthusiastic, or rather indignant, over the child-labor question after she had heard an address by some women on the subject. She expressed herself very forcibly at the dinner table that evening to the effect that no child should be compelled to work, and the youngster contented himself with commenting that 'Papa says we can't eat if we don't work.'

"The burning question of the day was forgotten until last Sunday morning. His mother was about to prepare the boy for church, where he sings every Sunday as a choir boy.

"'I'm not going to sing any more,' he announced, when she called him from the kitchen, where he had been teasing the cat in a very irreligious manner.

"'Why not, Willie?' inquired his surprised mother.

"'I'm not 14 years old yet,' he explained.

"She was rather mystified until he continued, 'you said children under 14 years should not work.'

"'You're a naughty boy, and think how nice it is to sing in church,' she said, coaxingly.

"'Well, it's mighty uncomfortable, and my growth is getting stunted from prayin' so much,' he argued.

"To this sacrilegious argument there was no reply and the boy sociologist was spanked. There was a choir boy with red eyes at services that day, but he appreciated that there is a halo of piety around his occupation which must suffice for all physical discomforts."

Newly Wedded Couple Forced to Ride on Train in Handcuffs for Several Hours.

honeymoon. At the railway station a large number of their friends seized them, handcuffed them together and placed them on the train. A large cowbell was fastened to the handcuffs and every time the couple moved the bell gave the alarm. Printed dodgers were passed through the train announcing that "Sallie and Ed Are Married."

The bridal couple, says the Chicago Chronicle, was compelled to ride as far as Frankfort, a distance of 70 miles, chained together like prisoners. At that point they left the train, went to police headquarters and had the handcuffs cut with a chisel.

PLAINFIELD LITIGANTS WON

TWO SUITS IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURTS DECIDED.

One Wound Up by Plaintiff Paying Defendant—Plumber's Suit Over Work Done.

Two suits were settled in the Somerset county courts at Somerville in favor of the Plainfield litigants. Counsellor W. S. Angleman represented the successful party in each instance, and F. A. Pope, of Somerville, the other side.

The first suit was the Supreme Court case of Elijah Stevens against John P. D. Kirch, administrator of the estate of John Whitehouse orth, deceased. This was a suit brought to recover the sum of $388.87. The defendant denied owing the plaintiff anything, and filed an offset for $482.05 and interest. The case was settled before it was called for trial, by the plaintiff paying the defendant the sum of $490. W. S. Angleman, who represented Mr. Kirch, the defendant, reversed the usual order of things by making the plaintiff pay the defendant the sum mentioned.

The second case was that of Dennison J. Galbraith against Charles E. Moldenke, and was a suit for the recovery of extras for plumbing work on the defendant's house at Watchung. The case was referred by Justice Garretson of the Supreme Court to Hon. James J. Bergen, of Somerville, as referee. Three days were consumed in hearing the case. On the conclusion of the argument, after all the evidence was in, Mr. Bergen announced his decision in favor of the plaintiff on all the issues involved, and decided that there was due Mr. Galbraith from Mr. Moldenke the sum of $383.26.

OVER VETO.

Brunswick's Council Again Grants Ordinance to the Central Jersey 'Phone Company.

By a vote of 7 to 5, the members of the New Brunswick Council have passed the ordinance of the Central Jersey Telephone Company over Mayor Vishmann's veto.

The objections raised by Mayor Vishmann in vetoing the ordinance were explained by the company's counsel, Alan Strong, who said that the company would not only put up a bond of $6,000, guaranteeing that any streets torn up would be laid again in the same condition that they were before the work was started and that the company would also put up a bond of $2,500 additional to show that it meant business.

The session was the liveliest that has been held in years. One alderman, A. S. Marsh, said that one member of the board had been threatened if he voted for the ordinance; that he would lose his police appointment and that he, Marsh, has been offered a money consideration if he voted against it. Marsh voted for it.

The company, according to the ordinance, will begin work installing the conduits in six months.

MISSED NEARLY HALF.

Young Wife's Pronunciation Test for Verifying Suspicions Worked Only Too Well.

A St. Louis broker told a Republic reporter the other day of how a young thing, recently married to a colleague of his on the exchange, discovered that her hubby had been indulging a little too freely in the cup that cheers.

At first she held her breath, she was that frightened. Then followed a long period of suspense, wherein doubt upon doubt accumulated.

Finally she determined to find out beyond all possible doubt whether her suspicions were well founded. To a fear friend she confided the source of her trouble; and from this friend she learned that it had always been said that a man even slightly intoxicated cannot pronounce words of any length. Whereupon the young wife decided that that would be a good plan to try.

When next the friend met the young wife she was in a state of great agitation. When asked if the suspicions had been verified, the young woman burst into tears and said that they had.

"I handed him this list," she said, between sobs, fishing from her bag a paper which gave to her friend, and which contained the following words:

"Phthisis, photochromy, hypochondriasis, parachronism, phrenasthetoscope, prosopagnosia, antimonianism, pseudaesthesia."

"And," she continued, while her friend read the list, "he missed nearly half of them."

MONSTER PANTHER SHOT.

Measured Nine Feet and Four Inches in Length and Had Been a Vicious Beast.

The largest panther ever killed in Nevada county, Cal., measuring nine feet and four inches in length, was put to death on Scotchman creek, near Washington, by Benjamin and Emmett McCullough not long ago. The men, while hunting, came upon a fine buck reposing in a small open space. A moment after a monster panther was seen about ten feet from the stag, crouching and ready to spring. One of the hunters shot at the panther just as it leaped and the beast rolled over on its back. Only for a moment, however, for it was on its feet in an instant and started for the men. As the beast advanced they kept their rifles going, first one and then the other shooting at vital spots. Not until the panther was within a few feet of the men did it roll over on its back dead. The panther was full grown. Its claws were worn short from traveling over the rocky hills, its skin, however, was soft and glossy. On many occasions the tracks of the panther have been followed in an effort to find the den of the beast, and several times members of hunting parties have caught glimpses of the animal. Sheep and live stock have suffered from its depredations.

READY TO SPRING.

Where Toads Are Venerated.

At the ancient church of St. Michael, at Schwartz, in the Tyrol, the sacred edifice is invariably kept securely closed on the evening before every great festival, and the simple peasantry of the district are convinced that on these occasions, when no one is present, an immense toad comes crawling before the altar, where it kneels and prays, weeping bitterly. No one ever hurts a toad in the Tyrol, for the population is imbued with the belief that toads are for the most part good Christians who have made vows to go on pilgrimages and who have died without fulfilling their pledges. So the poor creatures go hopping about astray, bewildered and perplexed, striving to find their way to shrines, which perchance have long ceased to exist.

WHAT SPRINKLING OF STREETS WOULD COST

Estimates Considered by the Councilmen Throw Light on the Subject.

LOTS OF FOOLISH TALK

IT WOULD PROBABLY COST THE CITY CLOSE TO $10,000 TO DO IT.

No Foundation for Reports That It Could be Done for $2,000 or by Fire Department Horses—Councilmen Ready to Hear Argument.

The members of the Common Council who have given much time and thought to the question of street sprinkling are very much amused concerning the grossly exaggerated reports as to what it will cost the city to satisfactorily do this work. Such reports have been characterized as the foolish ideas of persons who know little or nothing about the matter. Some persons have an idea that the city can sprinkle all of the macadamized streets for about $2,000, but a close examination of the facts does not bear out the statement.

At the executive meeting of the Council Monday evening, following the regular meeting, the question of street sprinkling was discussed at some length and a few facts based on a rather conservative basis will be of interest just now.

It is estimated that it would require ten teams, as many watering carts and as many men to start with. There are thirty-five miles of macadamized streets in the city and at the least calculation they would have to be sprinkled twice a day, once in the morning and once in the afternoon. The average amount of work to be expected of any one team and wagon would be six miles a day. Now, allowing that the city hired the number of teams and wagons necessary, it would cost at least $4 a day for each team and wagon, and estimating on two hundred days, which is conservative, it would then cost the city about $8,000. On this basis it would ultimately cost near $10,000 for the services of a foreman would be required, as well as that of an additional man to care for the horses. To be sure these are only estimated figures and facts, but they serve the purpose of giving taxpayers an idea of the expense, and the members of the Council are considering wisely before any step is taken.

Some few persons have advanced the idea that the city fire department horses could be used to good advantage in the street sprinkling. It is not thought that the fire committee would be willing to have the horses used in this way, but if such should be done, it might mean a more serious loss in case of fire. The delay of five minutes might entail a loss of $50,000, a much larger sum than the street sprinkling would cost.

The question of putting the cost in the tax budget has not been considered seriously as yet, for the Councilmen are waiting to hear from Corporation Counsel Marsh as to the legal phase of the matter. It is understood that Mr. Marsh is of the opinion that the cost for this work can be put in the general tax budget by making the appropriation for the street work large enough to cover the sprinkling. This could not be done this year, unless the Council amended the tax ordinance, which has just been adopted on its third reading. It is roughly estimated that such action would increase the tax rate at least seven or eight points, something that the average taxpayer would not relish. Besides, the figures given do not include cost of water, a large item of expense.

However, the Council intends to give the question every consideration and even if the people want to stand the expense the members will not refuse them. A hearing on the matter will be given soon, when everybody will have a chance to speak for or against the enterprise.

HOW MEMORIAL DAY WILL BE OBSERVED

Plans for Its Observance by Local Members of the Grand Army Post.

TO DECORATE GRAVES

SPECIAL SERVICES AT REFORM HALL IN THE AFTERNOON.

Company K and the High School Cadets Expected to Act As An Escort to Veterans—Special Preaching Service May 24.

For some time past the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., have been preparing for the proper observance of Memorial Day, May 30, and within a short time all details will be completed. The Post has received $25 from the Borough Council and $100 from the Plainfield Council to assist in the observance and according to the plans now made, a creditable day should be spent. This day, which has been set apart for honoring the memory of those who gave their lives for their country, is very sacred to the veterans and as each year finds the ranks smaller and smaller, the devotion to this cause strengthens measurably. Winfield Scott Post has been fortunate during the past year in losing a very few members and this is a cause of much thankfulness.

On Sunday evening, May 24, the members of the Post and the Woman's Relief Corps will attend divine services at St. Joseph's R. C. church, on Manning avenue, where Rev. Father Miller will preach a patriotic discourse and there will be special music by the choir.

On Decoration Day in the morning the various cemeteries in Plainfield and vicinity, including Westfield, will be visited by details and the graves of dead soldiers decorated with flowers. According to the usual custom there will be a short parade in this forenoon and it is likely that Company K and the Plainfield High School cadet battalion will join in this parade. The Raritan Brass Band has been engaged for the occasion and will lead the line of march. It is also quite likely that the North Plainfield and Plainfield avenue cemeteries will be visited and special exercises held by the veterans.

The Post and Corps will reassemble in the afternoon at Reform Hall, where special services will be held, consisting of music by the band, singing by children and an address by a speaker, whose name will be announced later. The veterans will also hold their own special service, including the reading of President Lincoln's address at Gettysburg. There will also be other attractive features to mark the occasion.

Isaiah L. McVoy has been appointed marshal of the day and he will be assisted by William C. Smith, as an aide, in the parade. The arrangements for the observance of Memorial Day are in charge of a special committee from the Post, of which W. C. Smith is the chairman and Dr. J. F. Berg is the secretary and treasurer. This committee is now engaged in perfecting the plans. Another meeting of the committees will be held Saturday evening, when further steps will be taken to complete the plans.

At Reform Hall the Post will be assisted by members of the Woman's Relief Corps in the exercises and a committee from the Corps will have charge of the children's chorus.

LAID AT REST WITH HONORS

Military Escort For Remains of Former Major E. Douglass Murphey.

FUNERAL FRIDAY NIGHT

Conducted by Rev. C. E. Herring, the Young Man's Pastor—Told of His Work While at Southern Pines—A Cadet Escort for High School Battalion.

There were funeral services over the remains of Egbert Douglass Murphey, Jr., at the home of his father, 29 Sandford avenue, Friday night at 8 o'clock and the remains were escorted to the vault at Hillside by a detachment of the City High School battalion Saturday morning at 10.

The home of the departed youth was thronged with his sorrowing friends last evening that they might look for the last time upon the face of the dead and might hear the words of Rev. Charles E. Herring, the pastor's tribute to the dead.

The simple services opened with the singing of the baritone solo, "In My Name Written There?" a favorite hymn of the departed. After a brief prayer, Rev. Charles E. Herring spoke a few words of the lad's career and of his promising future, cut short by his untimely death.

He spoke of the boy's especial interest in religious work—told how he was a member of the First Presbyterian church and an earnest worker in the church Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Society. He said that while Murphey was in the south, he was called upon to address a convention of colored people at Southern Pines, North Carolina. He spoke on the subject of "Lost Opportunities." In conclusion he said it would be his eager desire to form a Christian Endeavor Society before his return north. His health prevented this but the society has been formed and is known as "The Douglass Memorial Christian Endeavor Society of Southern Pines."

After words of comfort to the bereaved parents, the services closed with a brief prayer and the singing of the hymn "Will Jesus Find Us Watching." The body rested in state with stacks of guns at the head and foot and the American flag draped with crape resting across the stacks. The lad was buried in the uniform of the High School battalion, of which he was major and the sword, gloves and hat rested on the coffin.

The floral decorations were abundant and handsome. Among them was a large piece from the High School battalion and faculty where he was held in high esteem. A subscription started at the school for flowers resulted in the securing of $40 in the course of the morning. A part of this money will be used for the purchase of a picture, French's "Death of the Sculptor," to be hung on the walls of the school chapel as a memorial.

Saturday morning the body was taken from the house to Hillside cemetery. A detachment of thirty men from the High School battalion accompanied the body. Commandant James A. Macnab was in charge and Cadet Captain Alden E. Moore commanded the detachment. At the cemetery there was a brief prayer by Rev. Mr. Herring. In conclusion the body was taken into the vault between the double lines of cadets and "Taps" was sounded by Buglers Thompson and Briggs.

The pall-bearers were Major Frederic T. VanAuken, Captain Francis E. Anderson, Ex-Adjutant Blanchard M. Hopper, Adjutant George L. Babcock, Quartermaster Lorine T. Koons and Lieutenant Arthur F. Conant, of the High School battalion.

The lad is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Egbert D. Murphey, a younger sister, Ruth, and a younger brother, Chauncey.

TABLEAUX AND MUSIC.

Chief Features of Entertainment by Children of Sunday-School at Church of the Heavenly Rest.

The children of the Heavenly Rest Sunday-school won the hearty approval of fully two hundred and fifty people at an entertainment given in the parish house of the church on Clinton avenue last evening. The programme was arranged by Mrs. E. E. Brown to raise funds for a mid-summer children's outing at a seashore resort.

About twenty-five of the scholars had part in the exercises. The special feature was a tableau entitled "Egyptian Queens," planned by Mrs. Brown. A piano duet and trio by the Squier family, proved most acceptable. The entertainment was a financial success.

The programme included musical selections and drills by the school, piano selections by the Misses Grace, Nellie and Edith Squier, mandolin solos by Ray Pugh, solos by Miss Florence Phillips and Valeria Brooks, "Floral Love Story" by Miss Emma Grannatt, recitation by Miss Viola Leivers and several tableaux.

The committee in charge were Mrs. E. E. Brown, of Astor place, chairman; Mrs. William Peck, of Clinton avenue; Miss Elizabeth Foster, of Grove street; Mrs. Vannorden, Miss Jennie Wenzel and Miss Nellie Miner.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic—For the Week Beginning May 17—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—The lad with the loaves and fishes. John vi. 5-13. (A meeting with the Juniors.)

At the close of a long day of service Christ and His disciples were on the eastern shore of the Galilean sea, surrounded by a vast multitude of people who had made no provision for the evening meal. The disciples urged Him to send them away to provide for themselves, but the Master said, "Give ye them to eat." This seemed to them impossible because of their limited store, which consisted of five loaves and two fishes carried by a boy. But these Jesus miraculously multiplied, giving to the disciples and they giving to the people. This was continued until all were fed, and then it was found that twelve basketfuls of fragments remained.

In this incident a "lad with five barley loaves and two fishes" played an important part and in doing so illustrates the fact that even children can have a very important relationship to the Lord Jesus Christ. In years gone by the church accorded little place to the child in the courts of our God. God called Samuel to His service, accepted the praises of children and the Master took the children in His arms and blessed them, yet the church was slow to recognize the fact that children can have any place or part in religion or in the life of the church. Its attitude was rather that of the disciples of Christ than that of the Master Himself. But this attitude toward children has undergone a wonderful change. Hopes of a revival are received in the church and lead sweet Christian lives. Thousands of them as Junior Endeavorers render faithful and loving service to the Master, whom they love, and are frequently the means of leading others to faith in Him as Savior.

The possibility of such conditions is foreshadowed in the incident of the lad with the loaves and fishes. 1. He was personally attached to Christ and His disciples. Not only had the men and women followed Jesus, but the boy had also done so. Discipleship cannot be limited to age. Some of the most saintly of God's people have given themselves to Him very early in life and at the most advanced ages both old and young experience and know the most of us are spiritually but "babes in Christ." Children can love and trust the Saviour, and we may rejoice that this fact has such abundant recognition today. 2. He served Christ. It is impossible to serve without seeing that this lad carried the loaves and fishes for Jesus and the apostles. They may have had him with them for this very purpose. Children can serve Christ. Their little lives can be consecrated to Christ and in praise, in prayer, in study, in Christian living and in Christian deeds they can serve Him. 3. Christ used the boy with the fishes in the services of others. Under the blessing of Christ the boy's limited provisions were made capable of feeding thousands of people. So Christ today can take the possessions and talents even of the children and make them redound to the glory of God and the benefit of mankind. How thoroughly the Junior Endeavor society has demonstrated this fact! Therefore it should be our aim to increase its numbers and to enlarge its usefulness.

THEATRICAL.

Messrs. Montgomery and Stone, who are credited with two absolutely new creations, the Scarecrow and the Tin Woodman in "The Wizard of Oz" at the New Majestic Theatre, New York, have long been favorites in the better class of vaudeville theatres, but this is their first appearance here in an important production of extravaganza. On the other side of the water, Montgomery and Stone are equally famous, and they got a rousing reception from all classes of theatre-goers whenever they face an audience in the British metropolis. They are among the few American comedians who have had the honor of appearing before His Majesty King Edward the Seventh by special request.

Greeley Square is the heart of Greater New York, in a theatre sense, and the throbs there are felt throughout the arteries that extend east and west, north and south, throughout the busy, bustling, hurrying metropolis. Greeley Square is important from another fact—all these roads, streets and avenues lead direct to the Manhattan Theatre, where public interest, so far as the amusement world is concerned, is centred just at this time. Since "The Earl of Pawtucket" has made his home at this popular playhouse, it has to its credit the largest business known to any playhouse in New York. The Wednesday and Saturday matinees have grown into great popularity with women and children, and as a rule while the theatre is crowded at matinees, the seats are taken up by the fair sex to such an extent that few men are seen.

The "Song of the Cities," the most unique of the many novel features of the "Prince of Pilsen," the merry Pixley and Luders musical comedy that is enjoying a prosperous run at the Broadway Theatre, has proved such a popular conception that Henry W. Savage, the producer of the piece, should have secured some kind of a copyright. The song and the accompanying dances are so popular with the audiences that some members of the profession are already imitating both the music and the "business." Since Miss Harriet Burt was selected to play the part of the typical New York girl, there have been no complaints that Miss Burt does not satisfactorily typify Miss Gotham. It will be remembered that Miss Burt was selected from a list of over four hundred applicants. "The Prince of Pilsen" will surely remain in his present quarters for many months to come.

WORKED BRUNSWICK PASTORS

SAID HE WAS AN EPISCOPAL CLERGYMAN HAILING FROM PITTSBURG.

Departed Leaving Numerous Bills Behind—Said to be a Professional Swindler.

Plainfield people should be on their guard against a smooth looking individual wearing a clerical garb and representing himself as an Episcopal minister. This man who is about forty-five years of age has recently visited New Brunswick and called upon Rev. E. B. Joyce, rector of Christ Episcopal church; Rev. C. E. Pierce, of Grace church Dale, rector of the St. John's Episcopal church, and departed leaving them with the unpleasant thought of having harbored a swindler of the slickest type.

The fellow represented himself as Rev. W. W. Raymond, of Pittsburg, who had a parish in the diocese of Rev. Bishop Whipple. He secured board there, introduced himself to the rectors in town and made such inroads into their confidence that Sunday morning he read prayers from the reading desk of Christ church. Monday secured some clothes, shoes, furnishings and a dress suit from merchants about town. Tuesday appropriated, it is said, some things from the boarding mistress and Wednesday skipped town an hour before a telegram arrived from Bishop Whipple exposing him.

It is said that the fellow has made a practice of going from place to place swindling Episcopal ministers. He made his appearance in this section some time ago when he represented himself as a Methodist divine. He is said to be one of the smoothest swindlers outside of jail.

The Wastes of the Body.

This waste cannot be replenished and the health and strength kept up without perfect digestion. When the stomach and digestive organs fail to perform their functions, the strength lets down, health gives way, and disease sets up. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure enables the stomach and digestive organs to digest and assimilate all of the wholesome food that may be eaten into the kind of blood that rebuilds the tissues and protects the health and strength of the mind and body. Kodol cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. It is an ideal spring tonic. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 17, "Epworth League Anniversary Day"—Text, Rom. viii, 31.

The story of how the Epworth League originated has been often told, but will bear retelling many times. It is specially interesting, as the anniversary of its founding returns, to call to mind the incidents of its birth.

For a number of years societies of young people had been organized in many parts of the country for earnest work in the Methodist Episcopal church. In some localities these had been united in general societies until in 1889 there were five such having the same purposes in view. It was felt that a union in one general organization was greatly to be desired. To reach this end invitations were issued to all five of the several societies to appoint delegates to meet and arrange for such consolidation. The representatives were elected and met in Cleveland, O., May 14, 1889. After the fullest consideration of all interests involved the Epworth League was organized as a union of all the five existing bodies. Such a union was possible only as the result of the deepest conviction that a union was necessary, the most courteous and conciliatory conduct on the part of some and the spirit of earnest prayer and faith in God for divine guidance on the part of all. The difficulties to be overcome were great, but were all fairly and fully met.

The new society started at once with a large membership composed of the local chapters which had been gathered under the Young People's Methodist alliance, the Oxford league, the Young People's Christian league, the Methodist Young People's union and the Young People's Methodist Episcopal alliance.

In these previous organizations some had placed special emphasis on the *spiritual life, while others had com*bined literary work and Bible study with it and tried to develop usefulness in works of mercy and help as well. The new organization recognized the value of all these various lines of work and provided for them.

The aim of the Epworth League is to develop the highest type of New Testament piety in its membership. This is to be accomplished by attention to the devotional elements of Christian life and is in charge of the "spiritual department." The development of practical skill in mercy and help work is under the care of the second department. Literary work and social needs are all provided for under appropriate departments, as is also the matter of finance and correspondence.

The plan is admirably suited to meet the needs of the young people in a connected denomination like that of the Methodist church. No undenominational or interdenominational society could do this so well.

The Epworth Herald, published at Chicago, is the organ of the society. It has secured a circulation the largest of any similar young people's paper in the world.

The next general convention of the Epworth League is to be held in Detroit in July of this year.

Faith.

"Without faith it is impossible to please Him." How inspiring to know that one has lived who perfectly pleased the Father! "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Faith was the secret spring that caused such absolute approval. Following in His steps of faith, we, too, may please God. We will choose the single eye, the simple life, the trusting faith and the abiding fellowship which will make faith possible, and then we will practice faith, persevere in faith, stand the tests of faith, grow in faith, rejoice and triumph in faith, be leaders and perfecters of faith, shall come, and we shall see the King in His beauty and sit down with Him on His throne.—Christian Work.

Food First.

What would you think of a person who could not take time to eat and sleep? Surely you would tell him that the time given to that which is necessary to the life is well spent, even as regards business itself. If health breaks down, what are you to do? And of what avail is all your work if you do not live to reap its fruits? It is just that I would say to you. If you let your soul grow faint and exhausted for want of nourishment, of what avail *is all the religious talk, or even the ful*fillment of urgent and indispensable duties?—Fenelon.

Prayer.

Prayer is the peace of our spirit, the stillness of our thoughts, the evenness *of our recollection, the seat of our med*itation, the rest of our cares and the calm of our tempest. Prayer is the lamb of a quiet mind, of unruffled thoughts. It is the daughter of charity and the sister of meekness. He that prays to God with a troubled and discomposed spirit is like him that retires into a battle to meditate and sets up his closet in the outquarters of an army and chooses a frontier garrison to be wise in.—Jeremy Taylor.

Heavenly Messages.

Marconi sends a wireless message across the sea and all the world wonders. The children of God have been for ages sending them beyond the stars and have been rejoicing in daily answers, but the inconsistent world expresses neither amazement nor admiration.—United Presbyterian.

Real Glory.

Real glory
Springs from the quiet conquest of ourselves,
And without that the conqueror is naught
But the first slave.

—Thomson.

PROPERTY IS SOLD UNDER MARTIN ACT

City Disposes of Property of Delinquents Who Have Failed to Pay Taxes.

CITY PURCHASES ONE

ALL THE FORTY OTHER PROPERTIES GO TO OUTSIDE BIDDERS.

Good Number Attracted to the Sale—A. Kenzman Bought in Twenty-One—Amount Received From the Sale Was $2,125.91.

The sale of lands under the provisions of the Martin Act conducted Thursday by Collector of Taxes, F. H. Smith, attracted a fair-sized crowd of interested citizens, some of whom desired to invest in Plainfield property. One noticeable feature of the sale was that the city was only obliged to buy in one property. Collector Smith adjourned the sale of seventeen properties.

In all forty-one properties were sold and the bidding was spirited. The prices ranged from $6 to $225, and in each case the purchaser was obliged to pay the amount of tax, together with the additional sum charged for advertising at the interest of 10 per cent. The property can be held for one year after the notices have been served on the original owners and those affected thereby. The purchaser is required to pay for the search on the property.

Of the forty-one properties sold, A. Kunzman purchased 21; Councilman Murphy, 2; C. E. A. Heywood, 5; Arther Murphy 4; Robert H. Cook, 4; Ralph Waldo Emerson, 3; Wm. Sandford, 1 and the city bought in one property. The amount received from the sale of the property was $2,-125.91.

Collector Smith met with some opposition during the sale by a few persons who seriously objected to his selling their property. One man in particular, who had failed to receive a tax bill when they were sent, argued that it was manifestly unfair to sell his property in the way prescribed by law. Mr. Smith informed the taxpayer that it was his duty to come after the tax bill when he failed to receive one, that it was not the duty of the collector to do anything but collect the money as assessed by the Board of Assessors. The party, upon the advice of Mr. Smith, went out to find Assessor Hand for the purpose of having the matter rectified.

PASSING OF FORMER SCHOOL CADET MAJOR

E. Douglas Murphey Succumbed to Fatal Illness at His Home Wednesday.

HE MADE A GOOD FIGHT

BUT GRADUALLY WEAKENED AND WAS BROUGHT HOME TO DIE.

Had to Leave School Last February and Spent Some Time in Southern Pines, N. C.—He Was a Very Popular Young Man.

E. Douglas Murphey, former major of the City High School battalion, died Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at his home on Sandford avenue. His death was particularly sad and the whole High School is today shrouded in sorrow and in the social and church circles in which he mingled the hand of death has cast a silence which expresses the sorrow that is apparent everywhere.

Major Murphey was just twenty years of age; a young man with an excellent future before him and a record equally as good behind him. He was a member of the City High School but on account of his health he was obliged to leave his studies last February to seek recuperation in the south. There, at Southern Pines, N. C., he fought bravely for life but instead of improving he gradually weakened. They called his trouble intermittent fever but a few days ago, when his father went after him and brought him back to this city, it was found that the young man had an aggravated case of typhoid. He was already beyond medical aid and yes*terday morning he slept his life away,* surrounded by his sorrowing father and mother.

He was a sergeant in Captain Edwards' corps at the City High School before the school battalion was organized. When the battalion was organized he at once enlisted as a member and soon became major. He has built up that part of the school wonderfully since he has held that office and has done much to place it on its present footing. He was a member of the class of '04.

He is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Egbert Douglas, Sr., of Sandford avenue. He was a member of the First Presbyterian church and for many years has taken an active interest in the Sunday-school work.

PLANS FOR NEW BRIDGE

WHAT FREEHOLDERS ARE GOING TO DO AT GIRAUD AVENUE.

Somerset County Board Agrees to Everything Desired by Union County Men.

The new bridge which is to span Green brook at Giraud avenue is going to be a fine structure, according to the plans agreed upon by the committees from the Union and Somerset County Boards of Freeholders. It will be remembered that the Somerset Freeholders stood out against a modern bridge last year but a change of heart came over them this season and now they have agreed to all the ideas of the Union county men and erect a bridge that will be a credit to city and borough.

At the last meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders, the appropriation for the bridge was raised from $1,700 to $3,800. Somerset's board will do the same. As now planned the bridge will be fifty feet wide, allowing for a ten foot walk on either side, and the span will be forty-five feet long, the length adopted for all the bridges over Green brook in this vicinity. Bids will be asked for three styles of bridges and the most reasonable one in cost will probably be adopted.

FASS IS SET FREE; WAS IT BLACKMAIL

That Theory Advanced to Explain His Arrest and Farbmann's Disappearance.

FASS READY FOR TRIAL

BUT CHIEF WITNESS WAS GONE AND NO PROSECUTION DEVELOPED.

Fass Had Witnesses to Prove His Innocence, But They Were Not Needed—Case Was Dismissed by Justice Huff.

The case against Jacob A. Fass, charged with being implicated in the attempted robbery of Fay's bakery, May 3, was dismissed in Justice Heff's court Monday evening.

Counsel Blatz for the prosecution asked for a dismissal, inasmuch as the principal witness for the State, Farbman, through whom information had come leading to the arrest of Fass, had disappeared. Counsel Newcorn for the defense objected to a dismissal without a hearing, stating that he had witnesses to prove that Fass was at home on the night in question, and could account for every minute of his time. Mr. Blatz persisted in not making a case against Fass, and the charge was therefore necessarily abandoned.

The warrant for the arrest of Fass was issued by reason of an affidavit made by Farbmann to the effect that Fass was concerned in the affair, by which statement Farbmann contradicted his testimony given in the Block trial a week ago; when he asserted that he had not recognized any of the men whom he had seen drilling into the safe.

As a matter of fact, it is reported on reliable authority that Fass is a much abused man. It is alleged that Farbmann made out his affidavit against Fass for the purpose of blackmailing the latter, and when he discovered that Fass was determined not to knuckle to him, he became frightened, and "skipped" town. This is an inside view of the affair that explaining a whole lot of mystery, and reveals Farbmann in a new light. Counsel Newcorn for Fass would be very happy if Farbmann could be located.

TO GRAND JURY.

Justice Hand Referred the Assault Case Brought Before Him Monday Night.

The trial before Justice Hand last Monday in the case of assault between Josephine Carey and "Rev." James Brooks, Ella and Marietta Brooks resembled a Methodist revival as much as it did an ordinary case at law. Counsel Swackhamer, who appeared for the Brooks family, and Harry Runyon, who represented Josepine, made impassioned appeals to the court amid choruses of amens from a crowd of spectators that crowded the small court room to suffocation. Justice Hand decided to send all papers in the case to the Grand Jury, now in session, and give the superior court a chance to wrestle with the problem.

Josephine Carey, in her own behalf, testified that on May 1, James Brooks, his wife, Ella, and her sister-in-law called at 721 Watchung avenue, where she was employed as a domestic, summoned her to the door and severely pummeled her face. No particular reason was given to explain the assault. Brooks denied that he was present at the time in question, although he had received a written invitation to be there, to which his wife and sister-in-law responded, the meeting resulting in the battle aforementioned.

In view of the conflicting testimony, Justice Hand decided to submit the case to the Grand Jury.

AMERICANIZING OF INDIA

RETURNED EXPERT REPORTS EXTENSION OF AMERICAN INDUSTRIES.

Jersey Mosquito Outclassed by Its Indian Relatives—Jerseyites Take Courage.

American industries seem to be booming in India. This is the report that Frank A. Rodgers, of Los Angeles, California, American laundry expert, brings from that country, from which he has just returned.

Mr. Rodgers is spending a few days with H. W. Marshall, of the American Steam Laundry, demonstrating laundry methods. He is making a tour of the leading cities of the country before returning to his home in Los Angeles. He was sent to India from Boston with complete equipments of laundry machinery, and established the first and only American steam laundry in Bombay.

Mr. Rodgers states that American machinery and American methods in India are supplanting those of European nations. There are about two hundred Americans engaged in business in Bombay. Almost everything manufactured in this country, says Mr. Rodgers, is shipped by carloads to India and finds there ready sales.

Incidentally, Mr. Rodgers has a word to say on the subject of mosquitoes. The size of the little winged pests in India is several times greater than that of the far-famed Jersey mosquito, and their bite sometimes requires the attention of a surgeon. Seventy-five of the insects weigh an ounce.

ARMENIAN SPOKE.

Addressed Trinity Reformed Church and Marconnier Chapel Sunday.

Mugerdich Kalemjian, an Armenian, now a student in the Rutgers Theological Seminary, delivered an interesting lecture at Trinity Reformed church, Sunday night. The massacre of his parents caused him to give up his studies of law and escape from Turkey to this country to study for the ministry.

The speaker said that the Armenians were the first Christians, they having accepted Christianity 315 years after the birth of Christ. He told how thousands of Christian Armenians were killed by the Turks. He expects to return to his country as a missionary. The offering received last evening was given to Mr. Kalemjian to assist him in his studies.

In the afternoon he addressed the Marconnier chapel at Oak Tree.

ASK FOR ANOTHER TRAIN

PETITION SENT TO GENERAL PASSENGER AGENT C. M. BURT.

Want One That Leaves New York Between 4:10 and 4:20 at Night.

A petition has been sent to the Central Railroad of New Jersey by about 250 citizens of Plainfield and vicinity, asking for an additional train from New York to leave between 4:10 and 4:20 in the afternoon. The train would accommodate a large number of patrons of the road who are now obliged to wait for the 4:30 train, and who, by the desired arrangement, could spend from a half to three-quarters of an hour more in Plainfield in the evening. This accommodation, especially in the summer season, would be deeply appreciated. The petitioners have asked for an express train, to stop at Elizabeth, Plainfield, Bound Brook and Somerville.

The petition was sent to General Passenger Agent C. M. Burt, Wednesday, the company agreeing to give the matter its most careful consideration. Most of the signers are Plainfield people, although there are also affixed the names of many influential citizens of Somerset county. Among the Plainfield signatures are those of Isaac L. Miller, Marion S. Ackerman, James Taylor, Sr., Augustus Van Derveester, George White, Lewis G. Timpeon and Charles P. Bull.

Mrs. Giles is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Agnes Scheckline; and five sons, John, James, Herbert, Leon and Clarence Long. The last three named are at the Catholic home in Hopewell.

A STRICT LIBEL LAW

Governor Pennypacker Signs Grady-Salus Bill.

OPPOSED BY PENNSYLVANIA PRESS

He Claims Measure Will Not Harm Reputable Newspapers—Aimed at Reckless Journalism Only.

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 13.—Governor Pennypacker has approved the Grady-Salus libel bill and at the same time issued a long statement giving the reasons for his action. The bill, which was in the governor's hands for more than a month, goes into effect immediately and repeals all laws or parts of laws inconsistent with the new act.

The governor claims there is nothing in the terms of the measures which prevents any newspapers from making such comments upon legislative measures or upon the official acts of state, municipal, county or public officers as are proper for the information of the public or are in the line of legitimate public discussion.

Continuing, he says: "The bill in its application is not confined to officials, but affects as well the citizen or business man, whose conduct constitutes no part of the right of the public to information. The corporation officer who has been falsely charged with crime, the manufacturer who has been falsely accused of being a drunken brawler, the woman whose domestic griefs have been unfeelingly paraded or whose chastity is improperly suspected, the student who has been falsely accused of murder, the clergyman who has been cruelly maligned, the quiet citizen whose peace of mind has been destroyed by the publication of evil gossip, the merchant whose credit has been affected by groundless rumors and the sufferers from reckless but not necessarily malicious publications are given the right not to prohibit publication, but to recover the damages which they have sustained provided they prove negligence or lack of care on the part of the publishing newspapers. All of these are instances of what has in fact recently occurred.

"Within the last quarter of a century two presidents of the United States have been murdered, and in each instance the cause was easily traceable to inflammatory and careless newspaper utterance. Crimes are widely propagated not by the malice, but by the recklessness of the press, and in certain classes of cases, among them murder, the accused are at times convicted or acquitted before they reach the court room."

The governor concludes his statement as follows: "The proposed legislation has been regarded by a large proportion of the reputable press with great misgivings. It is natural that this should be the case. The future is ever uncertain, and the easy way to avoid the dangers ahead is to stand still. This is nevertheless not the wise course. The boy conscious of many lapses who is invited by a stern father into a private room enters with a dread, and yet the purpose may only be to arrange for the coming holidays. When the gardener comes with his hoe into the garden which has been left to run wild it is safe to say that it is the mullein and not the pea which is likely to suffer. This bill may not be the best possible legislation, but the purpose is commendable, and should experience show it to be defective something better may be devised. It ought to be cordially and cheerfully accepted by the reputable press, for they have a special interest in how the public may be induced to take away the ground the wheat perishes. It threatens them with no danger. Seeking to utter the truth and not the falsehood, what have they to fear?

"Into our courts, where learned judges administer the law with fidelity and juries are drawn from the masses of the people, well fitted to determine who is the wrongdoer, they are not likely to be summoned or if summoned they may go with entire safety. This much is certain: Now as then the laws of God and nature are immutable and inexorable, unless means are found to uproot some of the tendencies of modern journalism the influence, already badly shaken, will be utterly lost, and the influence of the press, which has been so potent an agent in the development of civilization and in securing civil liberty, will be gone forever.

"With a serious sense that the evil is of more than ordinary moment, with full knowledge of the importance of the press and of its value to mankind through all past struggles and with the hope and belief that the greater care and larger measures of responsibility brought about by this law, tending to elevate the meritorious and repress the unworthy, will promote its welfare while benefiting the community, I approve the bill."

THE TABLES TURNED

Sweeping Injunction Against Omaha Business Men.

MUST NOT BOYCOTT EMPLOYEES.

District Judge Emphatically Lays Down Law That There Must Be No Interference With Workmen's Rights as Citizens.

OMAHA, Neb., May 13.—Judge Dickinson in the district court, on application of John O. Yeiser, an attorney representing the labor unions whose members are on strike, has issued an injunction against the business men and proprietors even more sweeping than that issued by the federal court against the unions last week. The order restrains the business men from refusing to sell goods to dealers who employ union labor, prevents them from boycotting union labor, requires the Business Men's association to cease holding meetings or conspiring against the unions or in any way interfering with the unions in the management of their affairs.

The order of the court restrains the Business Men's association and others named as defendants as follows:

"First.—From in any manner threatening to injure the business or person of any employer of members of cross complainants' union or member of labor union, or any person who may employ or desire to employ such union men, or from refusing to sell commodities and supplies of merchandise to employers of such union labor and from discriminating against such persons in the prices charged for any such commodities.

"Second.—From threatening or intimidating in any manner any person into joining the said Business Men's association or any organizations to join labor unions.

"Third.—From threatening or intimidating any person who may have become a member of said association or organization, if he employs organized labor or recognizes labor unions, into discontinuing such employment.

"Fourth.—From imposing any fines upon its members, or any person, for violating any agreement not to employ organized labor or not to recognize a labor union.

"Fifth.—From receiving or paying out any money whatever in pursuance of any agreement to break up labor unions except attorneys in this action.

"Sixth.—From paying or offering any money to officers or members of unions directly or indirectly as a bribe to do or not to do any act in pursuance of any agreement or any of said defendants against such unions.

"Seventh.—From importing or engaging agents or servants to import any laborers into the city of Omaha or state of Nebraska in pursuance of any existing plan to destroy labor organizations or under any similar or new arrangement or plan.

"Eighth.—From bringing any other injunction suit in this or any name in pursuance of any general plan of prosecutions to break up labor unions or of any new or similar plans connected directly or indirectly with any existing plans."

Frauds in Haitien Securities.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, May 12.—The Moniteur Officiel publishes the report of a committee of inquiry appointed by President Nord charging extensive frauds in the issuing of Haitian government securities. The amount involved is about $2,000,000, and the securities are alleged to have been fraudulently issued, with the complicity of the National bank of Haiti. The opinion prevails generally that the government will hold the bank responsible and that as the bank is a French institution the latter will take the case before a French tribunal.

Work of the Big Guns.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—At the navy department the substance of the report on the recent tests of the guns aboard the monitor Nevada off Cape Henry have been made public. Two 12 inch guns were each fired ten times, several of the rounds being together. The result is considered gratifying by the department.

University Rooms in Manila.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 13.—At a meeting of the undergraduates it has been decided to raise $1,000 for furnishing a room in the new $25,000 International club in Manila. Dr. Henry Talbot of the Protestant Episcopal church of Manila. He urged the need of having rooms fitted out by the students of different universities, to be supported by them. Harvard, Yale and the University of Pennsylvania will also fit out rooms in the building.

Misinformed About Newchwang.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The state department has satisfied itself that it was unintentionally misinformed respecting the reported Russian reoccupation of Newchwang. TWO BURGLARS WALKED IN VISITED MIDDLEBUSH HOME WITH THE AID OF PLANK AND TREE.

Captured $50 in Cash and Some Clothing, When They Were Frightened Away.

Middlebush, May 13—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Huff was entered Saturday night by two masked men and a quantity of clothing and about $50 in cash was taken. The burglars were frightened away before they finished their job by the screams of Mrs. Huff as the men tried to enter the sleeping room of the aged couple. Neighbors, hearing the cries, rushed out of their houses and joined in a chase of the thieves across fields. They escaped.

Entrance was gained to the house by means of a plank stretched from the limb of a nearby tree to the window in the upper story. The rooms down stairs were ransacked, and the money was taken from a drawer in the dining room. John Kregis and John Hicks, neighbors, chased the men for nearly a quarter of a mile, during which shots were exchanged between pursuers and pursued. None of the shots, it is believed, took effect. A woman by the name of Mrs. Osbourne saw the men and describes them as being two darkies, one very dark and the other a little lighter. This is the third time in two months that the house has been robbed.

VAN AUKEN WINS.

Gets the Appointment to Annapolis Naval Academy at Competive Examination at Elizabeth.

The competitive examination, held by Congressman Charles N. Fowler at Elizabeth, Saturday, for the purpose of selecting a midshipman at the Annapolis Naval Academy from the fifth Congressional district of New Jersey, resulted as follows:

1. Frederic Tabor VanAuken, 310 East Sixth street, Plainfield; 2. Nathaniel Pendleton Rogers, Jr., East Front street, Plainfield; 3. William H. Cook, Madison; 4. Charles Simpson Robert, 175 Martine avenue, Plainfield.

Mr. VanAuken, therefore, will be appointed midshipman, and the others, alternates, in the order named.

VanAuken made an attempt last year to secure the appointment for West Point, but was defeated by N. Pendleton Rogers, of this city. Van Auken came out second in the competitive examination. Rogers having successfully passed the necessary examinations for entrance to the academy, VanAuken took the examination for Annapolis.

While there is no means unhoped for, the appointment has been a decidedly agreeable surprise to the winner. The necessity of further courses of study for entrance examinations this summer will make it necessary for Van Auken to leave the High School without securing his diploma, although the extra studies necessary will be taken at the High School. The entrance examinations will be held June 15.

SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.

Fearlessly Handled by Rev. E. V. Stevenson at Grace Episcopal Church Sunday Morning.

Sunday observance was fearlessly handled in the sermon preached by Rev. E. V. Stevenson, rector of Grace Episcopal church, Sunday morning. He was outspoken in expressing his opinion regarding the general neglect of Sunday, and said that if it continued is would be because the people thought more of themselves and their pleasure than of religion and the welfare of the church.

The rector did not deny anyone the right to seek such pleasure on Sunday as they choose, so long as they do not interfere with the rights and observance of other people who want to keep the day holy, but he said that the Christian people have certain inalienable rights which the State is bound to recognize and assist in the observance of a Christian Sunday.

BOARD OF TRADE HELD MEETING

A Number of Important Matters Were Considered Tuesday Evening.

WANT SWIMMING POOL

Street Sprinkling and Granting of a Franchise to New Telephone Company Also Discussed—Want Better Trolley Service Saturdays on Account of Ball Games.

A number of important matters of public interest were discussed last Tuesday, at the monthly meeting of the Board of Trade, in the rooms of the Camera Club on East Front street, among them being the questions of street sprinkling and the granting of a franchise to the Central Jersey Telephone Company. Better bathing facilities in the Fourth ward were advocated. President L. B. Woolston was in the chair.

Reference was made to the inadequate accommodations afforded by the street railway company to patrons desiring to attend Saturday afternoon baseball games at the Alia and Cuban Giants' grounds. C. W. Runyon expressed the opinion that the company should be urged to run extra cars on the Arlington avenue line beginning at 1 or 2 o'clock Saturday afternoons. If it should not be practicable to run additional cars, the company, it was said, ought at least to put on trailers. The increased revenue that would accrue to the company, said Mr. Runyon, would more than compensate for the expense of running the extra cars. Mr. Runyon was appointed a committee of one to confer upon the matter with Division Superintendent Phillip Maguire of the street railway.

The street sprinkling problem was considered at some length. Various phases of the situation were discussed, among them the difficulty of obtaining sprinkling wagons and the cost of stables and men to take care of them. It was decided that it was best to have the matter entirely in the hands of the Council without appointing a committee for conference.

In regard to allowing a second telephone company to do business in Plainfield, the concensus of opinion seemed to be that much better service would be obtained with only one company as at present. Elston M. French explained the extra trouble and expense that business firms would be obliged to undergo, by having to use two telephones, if the franchise for a new company was granted. He stated that the service in cities where there are two companies in the field is generally poorer and more expensive, and mentioned Newark, Jersey City and Trenton as cities that has tried the double system without any appreciable measure of success. The fact that the streets would have to be torn up was given as an additional obstacle. President Woolston agreed with the majority upon the inadvisability of the proposed move, but stated that if the Common Council found upon investigation that cheaper rates would result, there was nothing to prevent the people from demanding the change. He was assured that the services with two lines in operation was less cheaper and generally less speedy. George J. Tobin gave as a case in point the slow service that he had been able to obtain in Trenton. The $30 residence and $36 business service with one company was agreed to be the best possible.

Harry C. Runyon spoke of the insufficient bathing facilities afforded the inhabitants of the Fourth ward. He stated that, of 5,000 people in the ward, probably not more than 3,000 have proper opportunities for bathing. Most of the houses in the ward are occupied by at least two families and in many of them there are no bathing accommodations at all. Bathing in Green brook is strictly prohibited by the police. There should be some place, bath houses or a swimming pool, where the Fourth ward public could perform their ablutions without interference. Mr. Tobin suggested that a portion of Green brook might be fenced in for the purpose. President Woolston stated that some such arrangement would undoubtedly receive the approval of the mayor. At Mr. Runyon's suggestion a committee was appointed to bring the matter to the attention of the proper authorities as follows: Harry C. Runyon, George J. Tobin and M. J. Cashin.

DELAYED ANNOUNCEMENT.

Miss Florence Young and Frank L. Newman Married Last September.

Announcement has just been made of the wedding of Miss Florence Young, of Long Branch, to Frank L. Newman, of 319 Richmond street. The ceremony was performed last September by Justice Joseph Clark, of Scotch Plains. This will be a surprise to many as both the contracting parties are well known in this city, where the groom is employed at the Rushmore Dynamo Works. Mr. Newman has been living in this city and his wife has been residing with her parents in Long Branch since the wedding, but sometime this summer Mr. and Mrs. Newman will go to housekeeping at Long Branch, where they will reside permanently.

ALL TALK OF IT.

I. C. T. Club Circus is the Chief Topic of Conversation This Week.

Horse races, politics, baseball and shop talk have all apparently sunk into oblivion during the past week and the topic of conversation seems to be the circus promoted by the I. C. T. Club which will be in this city for two nights this week, Friday and Saturday with a matinee Saturday afternoon.

It will be the greatest and grandest aggregation of human freaks, startling hippodrome races, thrilling gymnastic feats, dare-devil acts on horseback, laughable situations, exrutiatingly funny clowns, leather lunged barkers and lecturers and the inevitable peanut sellers and pink lemonade men. It will be a show that has never been equalled in Plainfield.

The array of professional artists is most complete.

William Holbert, whose success in the Hope minstrels won him much praise, will appear as Mills Onaang. This act alone is well worth the price of admission "and if the audience is not satisfied the money will be refunded." Divo, that wonderful beast which Darwin immortalized, will be one of the star attractions. He will do a startling "stunt" in looping the loop in a miniature automobile. Matthew D. Sweeney and Thomas M. Muir will make a great pair of clowns and altogether the show will be well worth going to see. Tickets can be secured from the members of the club, at Schreiner's drug store, or at Warnock's bakery.

Funeral Services Held Over Remains of W. J. Monsell Today.

Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The pall bearers were P. Corrigan, Edward McGee, Thomas Fitzgerald, P. Harrington, J. Driscoll and Charles Jeager.

The United States Express Company netted $165 from the auction sale of unclaimed packages Saturday evening. The auction was conducted by Peter H. Lasourette. It is fitted with clockwork, a series of springs, a fuse and other electrical appliances. An electrician who saw the machine thought that it was part of a self extinguishing gas stove heater, but was not certain. At first Mr. Goodwin thought that he had bought an infernal machine but his friends assured him that it was harmless. "GROWING YOUNG AND KEEPING YOUNG"

Subject of First Lecture by Mrs. Jennie Fowler-Willing Yesterday Afternoon.

INTERESTING SPEAKER

LARGE AUDIENCES WERE PRESENT AT BOTH LECTURES.

In the Evening Spoke on "Rejuvenated in Appearance"—Held at Trinity Reformed Church and Was a Rare Treat.

Those interested in the lectures being given by Mrs. Jennie Fowler-Willing, under the auspices of the local W. C. T. U., are enjoying a rare treat. The first two of these lectures were given yesterday afternoon and evening in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church, when large audiences gathered to hear this talented woman.

Her first lecture in the afternoon was on "Growing Young and Keeping Young." Mrs. Willing, though past eighty years of age, is exceedingly active and in her lectures she gives practical demonstrations of her theories. Among other things, Mrs. Willing said: "In this strenuous, hurried American life, there is everything to make us weak, angular and awkward. The result is worn-out nerves, both our own, and those of the people with whom we have to do. This lecturing will be a missionary scheme, if it will bring a few thousand good people to stop, and study how to keep themselves in condition for the best service."

Last evening Mrs. Willing gave her second lecture on "Rejuvenated in Appearance," in her talk purposes to show young people how to become strong by safe, home gymnastics, graceful without dancing risks, and to keep their fresh healthful vigor; and the elderly, how to clip the wings of their vanishing youth. She also told how to be graceful in manner and movement, as well as strong in muscle, and how to stand, sit, walk, talk, look and move with proper dignity and grace.

In connection with these talks Mrs. Willing went through a series of gymnastic movements, explaining their benefits to all who would practice them daily. Both lectures were greatly enjoyed by all.

RUNAWAY ON NORTH AVENUE

Trolley Struck Runabout And Threw Occupants Into The Street.

HORSE SEVERELY CUT.

Woman Injured on Leg and Badly Shaken Up—The Infant Escaped— Horse Ran Down North Avenue and Crashed Into a Cigar Store on Park Avenue.

One of the worst runaways seen in the business district of the city in some time caused much excitement on North and Park avenues last Tuesday. A horse driven by Samuel Hunt, of East Third street, who was accompanied by his wife and infant child, became frightened by a trolley car striking the rear wheels of the vehicle as it entered Watchung avenue from East Third street, and ran away.

The car struck the runabout and overturned it, throwing the occupants to the ground. Hunt held fast to the reins but the horse got away from him and continued on his run down North avenue. At Park avenue the horse was going at too great a speed to make the turn and ran head first into the large display window of M. O. Dobbins' tobacco store. The horse first struck a cigar store Indian and breaking the image in two, pushed it through the pane of glass. The crash of glass as the animal, driven to a frenzy, tried to free itself from the window, attracted many and while the crowd stood back as a respectful distance George Apgar, a letter carrier, and Matthew D. Sweeney rushed to the animal's head and held it while others removed the glass which formed a collar about the beast's neck.

The horse was taken to Cole's stable on West Second street where it was found that it had received severe cuts from the glass and broken carriage. The carriage was wrecked.

The horse was owned by William Jackson, of East Third street, a brother of the woman who was thrown from the rig. The woman was injured on the leg and was badly shaken up, although the baby, which was in its mother's arms, escaped uninjured. The people in the carriage and the owner, William Jackson, are respectable colored people, who have lived here many years.

The Very Helpless Sort Of Woman

"NOW, there's one of them," remarked Successful Woman to her friend Old Bachelor.

He looked up from the depths of his comfortable armchair by the window. "Er—I thought so," he ventured as he watched their visitor departing down the street.

"She is a helpless woman—she'll never be anything but a helpless woman," remarked his friend. "Look at the way she walks. She shows it in that alone."

The girl was a plump, rather pretty blond, whose fair hair straggled quite untidily from under a hat pinned on crooked. Her skirt was held haphazard so that it was well up on the side and trailed in the back. She dragged her feet along listlessly, and one hand, thrust into an unbuttoned glove, swung aimlessly by her side.

"And she thinks she can go on the stage," sighed Successful Woman—"the stage, where not only neatness, but chic in personal appearance, is required; the stage, where one has to hustle from morning till night, where alertness is needed, if in no other profession. I tried to dissuade her from it," she went on. "I encouraged her drawing. She does that fairly well. But she said it was useless, there was so much competition nowadays. I asked her if she had ever tried to sell any of her sketches. And she actually said; 'No. How would you go about it? I would like to draw for the Fashion Plate Magazine, but I don't know the woman or man who accepts the drawings. Couldn't you give me a letter of introduction?' 'I don't know them, and I can't,' I answered. 'Anyway I wouldn't. Why, goodness alive! If your drawings are good, they'll take them, and if they're not no amount of letters of introduction will persuade them. Just walk in and leave your drawings there, and then if they refuse them try to find out what is the matter with them, and then go on and try again.'"

"Women are certainly fond of having some one else do their thinking for them," remarked Old Bachelor somewhat cynically. "I should think you would find that to be the case in that column of questions and answers you run in the Daily Screamer."

"Humph! Do I?" returned Successful Woman. "They are all the time asking me: 'How would you go about it to write a successful novel? What should I do in order to become a beautician? Trained nurse?' Anything that can be answered immediately by applying to the school or the hospital or the proper place, even the spelling of words and historical facts which involve only the opening of a book on a shelf in the very room where they sit—a multitude of foolish, inane, perfectly obvious questions which they could answer themselves if they stopped to think two minutes!"

"I always thought it one of the reasons why women do not progress more rapidly that they are forever wanting to lean on each other. They won't stand up straight and use the brains that God gave them."

"Oh, they'll improve after awhile," answered Successful Woman, "and after all it isn't the woman who asks questions who is the worst. The very fact that she asks questions shows that she is anxious to change her condition, to improve. The woman I simply can't stand is she who allows herself to be mowed under by circumstances, the woman who lets things stay just as they are because 'Oh, what's the use? They can't be changed!' The woman who when things go wrong takes refuge in those eternal tears—that woman drives me wild. Why, there isn't anything which can't be changed if a bright, persevering woman puts her mind to it."

"After all, the helpless women are a godsend," put in Old Bachelor with his little smile. "If they were all clever, what would you clever women do?"

"I've got nothing to take your viewpoint," answered Successful Woman. "There's no woman I'm more sorry for. Put the self reliant woman in any position, in poverty, in disgrace even, and she will work her way out, but the helpless woman, she is a failure even with the best of starts, and she is lucky indeed if she does not transmit to her unfortunate children a heritage of weak pills and vacillating minds."

SMART BLACK COSTUMES.

They Are Very Useful and Becoming to the Average Woman.

The smart woman fully recognizes the charm and adaptability of a good black gown, and the accessories now in vogue are simply made for the black toilet. The soft silky fabrics of the moment are most effective in black, and transparencies are easily arranged by means of a white slip.

The smart black skirt worn with a blouse either of tinted lace worn over white or of white taffeta lavishly adorned with tinted lace is quite a modish toilet with a loose sack wrap of some description, but preferably in white or the palest putty or biscuit cloth.

The new white coque boas, tipped with black chenille or powdered with black petals, are most fascinating with a black toilet, and the white lace picture hats bordered with wide rims of velvet are ideal with black gowns. Big scarfs in tinted lace are worn over white blouses. The scarf is first drawn tightly around to the back and then draped again to the front to form a loose drapery over the bodice.

There never was such a season for lace, not only on dresses, but on outside wraps, which in many cases are made entirely of it. The manufacturers of today are perfect wonders in copying real Venetian point, renaissance, etc.

The picture shows a walking suit of black trimmed with fancy braid.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WARM WEATHER MILLINERY

Straw Hats Have Taken the Place of Chiffon to a Large Extent.

A great variety of fancy straw hats are to be seen this season, and not so many chiffon as heretofore. When these chiffon hats are used, they are exclusively for dressy occasions and are made of tiny ruffings and shirrings mixed in with straw or satin braid.

All the hat shapes are larger than ever and if anything flatter. The trimmings are put on in flat fashion, and this is true even of feathers, aigrets being the only exception, and often they are set in at an angle which takes away a good deal from their height.

A great variety of small flowers, rosebuds, fuchsias, small berries, etc.,

are being used for trimmings. This is especially the case with tailor made hats, where garlands of these are applied on the brims. Hats made entirely of leaves or flowers are always smart and are trimmed with rosettes of pale colored tulle or satin ribbon.

For country wear with tailor made frocks Paris milliners are inventing all sorts of odd straws. There is a certain amount of smartness noticeable in the biscuit straw and black chiffon bow on a black turban hat with odd tassels and loops of straw at the back. Straws as a rule are rather hard, and the cunning of the Parisian milliner is shown by the fact that she is mixing them with gauging or tucked chiffon, the softening effect of which no one can deny.

The hat in the illustration is a new tailor made model of cream straw trimmed with white silk and rosettes and quill in a dark red shade.

FOR UP TO DATE WOMEN.

Black and White Effects—Embroidery a Smart Trimming.

There are endless variations of the black gown arranged over a white foundation, but separate motifs of lace of large size are most effective when the material is cut away to show the white underneath. Fine silky tulle is a favorite material for black skirts, and this is charming with many tucks of the small pin type, with lace in...sertions or transparent medallions.

Embroidery is a most fashionable trimming for the moment, and very subdued and harmonious colors are so deftly blended that the effect is neither crude nor bizarre. Perhaps the most effective results are obtained by combining several shades of one color, such as blue shading from pale sky blue to a deep royal blue.

The separate motifs of embroidery or lace look very handsome on crepe de chine or thin textures, but stitched lines and broad strappings are very popular on cloth and hopsack costumes.

The sack bolero has caught on immensely, though it is by no means a desirable garment for every one.

A charming fancy of which women do not seem to tire is that for the little short lace coats known as tea or coffee sacks and which are often worn over a blouse. There is no doubt of the utility of such garments, especially for afternoon wear at home. They give a finish to a blouse and are not difficult to make.

The picture shows a tailor made suit made of mixed goods and trimmed with pipings of a lighter shade.

SEPARATE WAISTS.

The Tendency Is to Have the Waist Match the Skirt.

Separate waists are still in vogue, although the tendency is to have them match the skirt.

Many waists have a deep cape effect rounding up in the front into the collar. Those which do not do this usually have a wide collar or berths of lace.

The shirt waists meant to be worn with tailor made suits are without these shoulder effects, but on a dressy blouse they are indispensable.

Waists blousing both back and front are seen in lace trimmed with perpendicular strappings which simulate a bolero.

Fichus of every conceivable shape are smart and useful accessories both for waists and summer dresses.

For morning wear the plain shirt waist of white cheviot or white embroidered linen is the proper thing, worn with the tailor made tie of chevlot or white pique.

Delaines rush linens close in popularity for country frocks. Some of the newest patterns from Paris show the spot, while checks and stripes are also increasing in favor.

The waist is the cut is of soft silk and guipure lace, with a triple yoke and box plaited front.

SILKS FOR THE SEASON.

Some of the Novelties—Fringe Again in Vogue—Tea Gowns.

In one window alone I saw ten different colors and tints in printed silk all in one design, and that a curious arrangement of white lines upon a background of color. The lines spread in one part so that the background was much in evidence, while farther along the white lines gathered closely so that there was a distinct figure in white. This arrangement somehow made the silk look as though the white portions were raised in quite high relief above the surface. The colors were lilac, pale green, pink of a soft indefinite shade, frosty and bright blue, tan, reseda, biscuit, gray and brown, all with the white. The silks were draped with beautiful bands, medallions and edgings. Wide ribbon also lent its rich finish. Ribbon is used to a greater extent than usual for all sorts of garments, yet lace is the trimming beyond all others in popularity.

Nearly all the silks for the season ahead of us is soft and much like crape in draping qualities. Some of the daintiest of the soft silks have flakes of silk floss on the surface. These flecked effects are carried into the light woolen dress goods, especially noticeable being some of the voiles. These are very lovely when the soft flakes are scattered over the surface. The hopsacks and several of the stuffs generally made up for tailor suits show the same fancy. The old fashioned all wool delaines are shown as among the newest of the light weight wools, and as great care has been taken in the printing of them they are worthy of a place among woman's prettiest things. They make up into delicious tea gowns and afternoon dresses. The colors vary from very dark solid colors with tiny flower bunches in nature's tints to ivory, pale blues and hydrangea, mauve, mastic, fawn, navy blue, reds in several shades, and, in fact, so many shades and tints that I could not mention them all, but this I may say: The small bouquets and sprays of flowers portrayed in the design are exquisitely beautiful and more like microscopic pictures than printed patterns. Satin ribbon in form of sashes and narrow to match for bows, with loops and ends, and lace—lots of lace—make the accepted trimming. Cream and white, also ivory with small natural flowers, are among the dainty and black and colors, and also with white only, form some of the prettiest combinations. Black and white, with one or the other in preponderance, will be among the most fashionable of all the combinations in hats, dress and all other paraphernalia and impedimenta belonging to womankind. Parasols of white silk and chiffon have great black chenille dots. On the parasols the medallions are placed as well as on the skirts.

Fringe is again put forward, and this time it may become a rage, for the fashions of today are so nearly like those of the days when fringe was seen on everything that it may come as a natural sequence. There is a decided movement in the way of skirts flounced to the waist and double and triple skirt effects, and that will be a welcome change to eyes weary of the tight skirts. As the newest skirts are shown we may notice that they have long, flowing lines, but there is a something foreshadowing the things of which I have spoken, though just what it is or where it is impossible to say. But it is. It began with the hats, but until the blouse is relegated to the limbo of old styles it will not be noticed. The evening dresses are more defined than the street attire, and there is no hesitation in openly adopting the fashions of our grandmothers with some slight modifications.

It is often amusing, if not altogether profitable, to trace styles, and yesterday I came across the origin of the new feather distinctive fancy of the aigret on the millinery of today. As most of us know, this aigret is now made in the shape of a small duster, with a regular bolder, and is set on the hat on boomed so that it sticks out exactly in front. Well, this style dates from the days of Solyman the Magnificent, one of the earliest and, incidentally, the most bloodthirsty of the Turkish sultans. He wore one on his turban, and from then on the sultans have worn the same kind of aigret, though at different angles, in their headgear. And some of the foreign military officers have aigrets very nearly like those of Turkish rank, and are worn in quite as aggressive a manner.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

WOMEN IN TURKEY.

Even There an Awakening Movement is Perceptible.

The very last to swing into line in the onward march of the new woman have been the women of Mohammedan countries. Even the Chinese have been before them. By Christian nations this backwardness has been set once for down to Mohammedan theology and so dismissed from the mind. But now comes a Turkish lawyer, Kasem Ameen, and writes a book demanding complete emancipation for Mohammedan women and showing in no mild way that the Musaulman faith enslaves the sex. He does not deny that Mohammedan women are enslaved, ignorant, dwarfed mentally, fat, helpless and anaemic bodily. He even attributes the present degeneracy of the Turkish nation to the fact that the mothers of the race are of such sort. Corruption, lack of noble moral convictions, treachery, cunning and backwardness in the ways of modern civilization characterize the people and all owing to the baneful ignorance of Mohammedan mothers, declares Kasem Ameen, Esq. In the matter of the degradation of Mohammedan women he admits all that is claimed by the most radical come outer of the feminine sex in the occident. He says, "We have no love in our opinion of woman that when we want to denounce a man for his rascality we say, 'He has been brought up by a woman.'"

But then— At this point the Turkish lawyer and woman champion shoots off in a line directly opposite the course of reasoning taken by Christian woman's rights people. Theology has nothing at all to do with the Christian woman's superior, nobler, freer development, quotha. The difference is merely one of mode of thought and of custom between oriental and western races. He waxes wroth that Christian nations should lay the lamentable condition of Turkish women to the only true theology, Mohammedanism. If religion really affected the customs of a people, quotha, further, then the Mussulman female would be the freest, the most developed, most enlightened woman of all the world. The Koran itself, says Kasem Ameen, Esq., elevates woman and provides for her as no other code of religious teaching does.

Then he proceeds to excuse by one of those explanations which accuse. Centuries ago, in the beginning of the makings of the Moslem empire, the followers of the new faith were intent only on conquest. The sword was to their seeming the best weapon to spread the faith. They overcame whole tribes of heathens and adopted them by force into the bosom of the true church. But these wild tribes had their revenge, like the races conquered by the Israelites of old. In time they corrupted the true believer with their unholy, heathen ways, and one of the chief of these was the degradation of woman.

Anyway, the Turkish ideal of womanhood is certainly heathenish enough, and we may let the argument stand with that admission. Now, not a woman, but a man, Turk of the Turks, believer of the believers, issues a trumpet call for the education and emancipation of Mohammedan women. It required a man, for Turkish women are too sunken in ignorance and slavery to demand better things. The book has aroused profound sensation in the Moslem realm. Women count for nothing, but it is among the men that the new woman awakening is taking place. The party of the Young Turks, especially those educated in western European schools, are welcoming the new woman book as a great illumination and demanding for themselves educated wives capable of being their intellectual companions and friends. They are tired of the fat, ignorant, silly child wife business.

Meantime in Constantinople itself a modest new woman work is progressing quietly, unobtrusively—that is, sending out year by year the very girls that young Turkey wants for its wives and intellectual companions. This movement centers in the American College For Girls at the Turkish capital, a college founded and maintained by noble American women.

The students of the school comprise the strangest mixture of races ever drawn together by the common desire for an education. Fifteen different nationalities are represented, ranging from Persian to Greek and Englisb. Every brand of Bulgarian known to man, except perhaps fetichism, is also represented among the girls, and, owing to the gentle influence of the teachers, all dwell together in loving harmony.

Many of the college students are from the troubled Balkan states, which is a bright sign for the future there.

MARY EDITH DAY.

A HOMESICK MILLIONAIRE.

Nowhere Is He So Lonely as in the Place He Once Loved That Has Changed.

The late John W. Mackay might be considered a supremely successful man, for he was rich, and knew the pleasure of generous giving to those on whom the burdens of life fall heavily. Yet by his own confession to a friend, says a writer in the Philadelphia Press, the vanishing years not only took with them many of the old familiar faces of his early struggling youth, but they changed the west, as he knew it, until it ceased to seem like home.

"You see," Mr. Mackay once explained, "a man is nowhere so lonely as in a place he once loved and returns to only to find it altered beyond recognition. That is the case with me; and it is the reason I spend so much time abroad.

"I was born in 1831, and went west with the high tide of gold-seekers. I roughed it with the rest, my ambition being to make myself an equal to the hero of my boyhood, a man I used to see hurrying through City Hall square in New York when I played there as a boy,—a man with a hurried step and a bundle of newspapers under his arm,—James Gordon Bennett.

"I learned to love the rough west as I've never loved any other place. I got my gold, but I have lost my home. I can hardly realize it, but my west is no more. It died with my youth. So I am glad to get away from everything that reminds me of its passing, as some men will live anywhere, everywhere but in the house they were happy in before the death of a wife."

WELL PAID FOR HER WORK.

Addressing Invitations Gives a New York Woman a Handsome Income.

A New York woman of considerable social prominence, but limited means, succeeds in maintaining her position by a novel industry that does not, in the opinion of "the set," place her outside the pale of respectability. She addresses invitations and attends to correspondence as a means of adding to her income. She has the entree to most of the well-known houses in the city. Many of her patrons consider it an unusual favor to have their invitations go out to the world addressed in her unmistakable chirography. Some of them are never able to be invited to the houses that she goes to, says a New York exchange.

She realizes how much some of her patrons appreciate her services and her prices are higher than what she has any other person's charge for the same service. She makes a very good living out of this rather arduous work and her time is much occupied.

It is a familiar saying that persons who are most occupied by social duties are most punctilious in discharging them promptly. This shows itself strikingly in a custom that developed first this season.

It is now considered the smartest usage by persons who devote thought to such matters to leave cards the day after a large or elaborate entertainment. It is not expected, of course, that the hostess will be seen. That is now the least part of a call. But it is good form to leave cards the day after.

NO STRAPS IN BERLIN CARS.

When All the Seats Are Filled No Passenger Is Permitted to Enter the Car.

There is no hanging on to straps in the street cars of Berlin, even in the rush hours. The police regulations forbid the carrying of a larger number of passengers in a car than is authorized, and that number, which is posted conspicuously in every car, is the same as the number of seats, plus a few permitted to be carried on the front and rear platforms, usually six persons on the two platforms, says the New York Sun.

When all the seats are filled no passenger is permitted to enter the car. Standing in aisles or holding on to straps is not permitted. Similarly on the platforms when six passengers have found places there.

"This regulation," says Consul General Mason, "often separates a man and his wife, who are not allowed to return home by the same car, but it has the effect that there is no overcrowding and standing on each other's feet. The conductor and motorman are instructed to enforce the regulation and they do it without fear or favor. The conductor is, in this country, clothed with the authority of a policeman on board his car, and can put off any passenger who misbehaves. This is probably the secret of the whole matter. The conductor is a municipal officer within the prescribed limits of his duty."

Sleep and Physical Soundness.

To sleep at any moment is evidently a sign of physical soundness and Philistine sanity, especially in the matter of the nervous disorders, says the Medical Press. A physician would have little anxiety about the general condition of a patient who could sleep at will on a railway journey. In these days of hurry and bustle there could be no more encouraging sight to the philosopher than a railway carriage at noonday full of sleepy passengers.

Vegetable Panacea.

The humble onion contains a powerful medicinal agent in the form of an oil, the sulphide of allyl, and it is the fumes of this oil that cause the eyes to water when peeling this vegetable. When cooked much of the allyl is lost, but other elements containing sulphur remain intact. Onions are an excellent remedy for colds and are also an effectual relief for chronic bronchitis.

The Advancing Army of New Women

I AM going to tell you a story proving the possibility of attaining your ideals if you work toward them faithfully and long enough, holding fast to them meanwhile as to life itself. More than a generation ago a German girl went to Cincinnati. She was very young, very quiet and retiring and she had no money at all. But she had a good musical education and an enthusiasm for music that lifted her to the plane of the gods. Cincinnati was rather provincial then, having neither its great music hall nor its beautiful art museum. There was no great desire for music culture. The young German girl, Clara Baur, began giving singing lessons to any pupils she could get, and they were not many at first. But the girl teacher had even then an ideal. It was of a noble school of music, in which the art harmonic should be taught in all its branches, horn, string and human voice. She was so sweet tempered, so earnest and enthusiastic, as well as such an excellent instructor, that she gained friends and patrons rapidly. In a little while she opened a small conservatory of music. She stuck to business faithfully, never letting her enthusiasm flag, which was the main thing after all. What is also important, she never let down for a moment in her high ideals of music. Pupils increased. Miss Baur worked hard still, both for love and money. She was only a little woman and she was alone, but full of grit and genius. She saved her earnings, not with the idea of retiring from work, but of building a home for music. At last she has succeeded in her plan. A conservatory of music costing $100,000, with a beautiful concert hall, has lately been erected by the indefatigable little lady and it is all her own.

Did you ever take a walk bareheaded in the warm rain? The raindrops contain atoms of the liquid gold of life which the sun rays send to the sweet old earth to make her blossom and bring forth. The raindrops in the face soften and clear the skin; they soak into the roots of the hair and invigorate it; they cool the fretted, fevered scalp and brain. The rain bath is uncommonly promotive of health and good looks. Wear some old cotton garments thin enough for the rain to penetrate, stay in the falling shower till you are soaked through, then go home, remove the saturated garments and rub yourself briskly till you are dry. You will feel like a new woman. In the tropics the natives do not remove their clothing after being caught in one of the rains that tumble out of the sky by the bucketful. They simply go about their business in the sunshine till they dry off and are all the better for their rain bath.

The old fashioned scold is disappearing from the earth, eternal rest to her! You seldom hear the incessant "scold, scold, jaw, jaw," that used to be the special prerogative of the old woman. In days when woman was oppressed grievously by man the only way in which she could get even with him was by lashing him with her tongue, and we have the evidence of history in the ducking stool that she availed herself of so frequently. Old women used to rate all creation by the hour. But it has been many a year since I have heard a real, old fashioned scold. As woman gets her rights she ceases to scold.

Never tell your ailments to anybody but your doctor and never tell your troubles at all. The desire to do so arises from a morbid craving for sympathy, a craving you ought to squelch. When you draw on others' sympathies, you are apt to end by feeding on them. They have troubles of their own, and you have no right to exhaust their nerve force.

Recently in New York city a man was taken with a laughing fit. He just began and laughed and laughed and laughed for a week without any known cause. His unnatural mirth infected others, so that the moment they saw him they, too, began to giggle and snicker without any cause except just the catchiness of the thing. At last he was taken to a hospital, where after several days the laughing attack left him. Then he was discharged cured. But the curious point in this case is that never once did anybody, physician or layman, say the man had hysterics. If he had been a woman, now!

The editor of the much talked of women's daily newspaper in Chicago is reported as having said that the new journal is not going to be a champion of woman suffrage. Then what's the good of it? What is the need of it? It is foredoomed to failure.

Talk of woman and her many clubs! August Belmont belongs to twenty-five, William C. Whitney to twenty-two, President Roosevelt himself to ten, while one New York man, William G. Davies, is a member of forty-two.

"I am my own confidential agent," says Hetty Green, the richest woman in America.

A woman with trailing skirts in the street was lately caught by a wind that whirled her around till her feet were tangled in her train and she was helpless. Then the wind hurled her to the sidewalk, her head striking the curbstone and getting a severe wound. Served her right for wearing those impeding and useless skirts.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Unwelcome Honor Thrust Upon an American Diplomat.

Savage King Wanted Him to Marry His Daughter Because He Had Cured His Majesty's Aching Foot.

[Special Washington Letter.]

BLIND men see with the eyes of others. In matters of history and travel the majority of us see with the eyes of others.

Listening to the living voice of one whom we know and believing his words to be the words of truth and soberness, we can take a trip to far distant Formosa, receive a little instruction and considerable entertainment.

Dr. Edward Bedloe, of Philadelphia, consul to Amoy during the Harrison administration, and consul to Canton, China, during the McKinley administration, carries with him a very remarkable coin which is the subject of a peculiar story, as narrated by this scholar, traveler, diplomat and statesman.

"I became the possessor of this piece of pagan money in Formosa," he says. "It was a talisman having a history of some sort before it came into my possession. I received it as a fee for a remarkable surgical operation, performed by myself without the aid of a trained nurse, without any of the adjuncts of modern traumatic treatments.

"Formosa, as your geography will tell you if you don't already know it, is a large island lying off the coast of China. It is now the property of Japan, having been acquired by that wonderful nation when China was defeated in the brief but decisive war of the last decade. At the time of my visit Formosa was nominally a Chinese possession, but the unconquered, savage natives have an unbroken custom of killing and cutting the head off of anyone wearing a queue, which is known as an evidence of Chinese citizenship. The savages of Formosa have no mania which equals that of their queue collectors. On account of this peculiarity the Chinese never made any attempt to politically rule the people.

"A tribe or nation called Hakkas live on the western side of the island, and the Formosans live on the Pacific side; a mountain range dividing their territories. They live in harmony and the Hakkas act as go-betweens in all affairs of trade or treaty between the Formosans and their queue-wearing enemies. Understanding these conditions, and in order to avoid all international complications, when I visited Formosa I left my Chinese retinue far behind and employed Hakka guides and chair bearers.

"We went to the Formosan town nearest the coast and the king did me the honor to advance some distance from his throne to meet me. American representatives are in excellent repute all over the east because our nation has never exhibited any desire to acquire territory, such as has characterized all European nations. In Formosa I was the 'Hi Quong Foy Kee,' or the 'Commissioner of the Starry Flag,' and so the big ruler left his tiger-skin-upholstered camphor-log throne to meet me. It is because the Hi Quong Foy Kee is a person to be honored by potentates that my eminent host came part of the way to meet me. It was a hard trip for him, too; for he was lame and supported on either side by great big, square-jawed, evil-eyed husky *Chinamen-killing war*riors.

"I had been obliged to do considerable walking over some rough roads, and his highness noticed that I was limping a bit myself, and asked through the interpreter what caused my lameness. The interpreter informed him that I was a medicine man and that my lameness would soon pass away, as I knew how to cure myself of all diseases.

"This seemed strange to the mighty warrior, who said: 'I am sore and unhappy, for I have a devil in my foot. If the Hi Quong Foy Kee is a devil killer, he must kill the devil in my foot.' From appearances he seemed to have a devil, and his name was legion, for his foot was bandaged and swathed until it was as big around as a beer barrel, if you know what that is. His retainers were obliged to steady him on his one good foot, and his nurses kept his bandages wet all of the time, which showed that they knew some of the virtues of water as a pain killer and healer.

"He implored me to drive out the devil which was destroying his sleep and driving him mad, and I agreed to do what I might be able to do. I told him that if it was a Chinese devil in his foot it might be impossible to drive it out. I was hoping, in case of failure, I told him that in killing the devil I might cause him considerable pain, but he agreed to suffer without anger. If I would do my best. I then ordered a hot foot bath, partly as a curative and partly also to relieve myself of the dirty prospect of washing that tremendous grimy foot and dirty leg.

"Into a large trough they poured pure spring water, and then they threw in heated stones until the water came to a boil. Into this I caused the big foot to be plunged. When the bathing had been completed I found that the king had stepped on a thorn in the forest, that it had remained in the wound and festered. Opening my surgical case I took lance and tweezers and soon held up the bloody thorn to his approving gaze. He shouted gleefully: 'It is the little devil.'

"After the pain had wholly subsided and the inflammation was gone that big fellow did what no civilized man would have even thought of doing. He sent for the doctor and wanted to settle his bill. Of course I didn't blame him, because I knew that he had never resided in Philadelphia, Washington or any other civilized city. But he made my hair stand on end when he said: 'The Hi Quong Foy Kee shall marry my lovely daughter and rule with me.'

"Oh, my! Think of it! Wasn't the proposed fee, 'for services rendered,' a corker? Sardines in a box are in a pretty tight place; but where, oh where, was I? To decline the honor might mean something serious. Nobody but a citizen of the great and mighty Yankee nation could have squirmed out of the situation; particularly as the 'lovely daughter' was near by, dressed up in her smiles and making goo-goo eyes at me. Talk about flesh creeping; how was I to escape those yawning arms and exuberant lips, and all the honors of royal marriage? I was thinking faster than human was an examination for sophomore honors and preferment. There was only one way out of it. That was, to lie out of it, regardless of all of my early moral and religious instructions.

"I never have been, and now probably never will be, married. I was certainly not then ready for the presidency of the Lohengrin wedding march, which would have sounded to me like the last march in Saul. I asked the interpreter to repeat to me the distinguished honor, saying that it had taken away my breath, and assuring his majesty that 'this is sudden.' I was sparring for wind, playing for time, waiting for an inspiration. It came. Through the interpreter I said:

"'Great Favorite of the Gods, this high honor is not for me. I cannot thus disgrace your noble, royal and exalted family. In my country, the land of the starry flag, when a man has five wives all of his subsequent wives are servants and abject slaves of the first five wives. I am deeply grieved over my inability to accept this great honor, but I cannot subject your daughter, the most beautiful princess, to degradation and servitude. And if I should remain here my great sovereign would send fifty thousand *warships and a thousand million sol*diers and take me forth and feed me to the Chinese devils.'

"That settled it. He wept on my neck and fell sorry for me. But he could not feel like making me so much trouble. And his 'lovely daughter,' the princess, also clasped me in her arms and *slobbered over me ad nau*seam. And, to complete the play, I hugged her and shed a few briny tears myself, of gratification over my escape from this awful dilemma.

"The king insisted upon showing his appreciation, and I asked for a coin from the necklace which festooned his massive neck, a necklace composed of coins, jewelry, teeth and bones of enemies he had killed. Every pendant told a story of murder and savage butchery. He offered me the whole necklace, but I wrenched one of the bangles loose and placed the coin solemnly in my forehead in token that I would ever keep him in memory, to my lips to show that I would ever speak well of him, and then to my heart to indicate that my love for the giver would never die.

"Then I sat down beside his lovely daughter, who was more decollete than any lady with whom I have ever dined; and all of us ate roast pig, with pagan trimmings.

"I have here, you see the coin which I received instead of the lovely princess."

Parrot Rides a Bicycle.

In Berlin a parrot cyclist is drawing great crowds of admirers. The bird conducts itself like an experienced rider, working with its feet the pedals of a diminutive machine whose grooved tire runs along a tight rope. With its beak it manages the handle bar. Although it carries along another parrot hanging in a trapeze beneath, it maintains perfect equilibrium.

THE COMING STYLES.

Will Be Picturesque, Dainty and Abound in Good Taste.

New Dress Fabrics Are Not Only Elegant, But Pleasing to the Eye—Pleated Skirt Resumes Its Reign.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

NEVER were picturesque styles more to the front than at the present moment, and one reason perhaps for this delightful state of affairs is to be found in the fact that the girl of this day and generation is decidedly of the picturesque type. There is no longer the slightest doubt that the girl built on the graceful lines is the one that Dame Fashion has elected to be admired this season, to the absolute exclusion of all others. Later on the plump sister may have her innings, but there is no visible sign to that effect at present.

The quick-sighted woman will also observe that the prettiest fashions of to-day are made up of the modes of *many countries and also of many pe*riods, and that the fashion makers have culled much that is best and pleasing from the old masters; also that modern modistes and milliners are veritable artists and gracefully adapt to present requirements the gauged skirt, the flowing draperies, the Marie Antoinette fichu, the panier and the puffed sleeve of long ago, as well as the loose wraps beloved of orientals even unto this day.

In the minds of many women at the present moment the one paramount question is what kind of dress materials will be the fashion throughout the coming season? I feel, therefore, that everyone will be interested to learn some few details concerning those chic and novel dress fabrics most in demand, many of which have put in an appearance within the week. In every kind of fabric, no matter what its weave, flake effects are to be seen. This is particularly true of the new etamines, which come in soft silver gray and pale pastel greens and blues, delicately splashed with white. Others again have little knobs or knots of silk in very bright shades of blue and green woven into the darker grounds.

Fine soft cashmere will be one of the most popular materials the coming season for street wear as well as for charming house gowns. This ideal fabric comes in all the daintiest and most delightful colorings, but the shades most in demand are blue of rather a bright tone and an ex*quisite tone which in some lights* might almost be called deep cream tinted.

The new canvas cloths are simply irresistible, and the same may be said of the new voiles, which come in the most artistic colorings. A novel and charming combination of pastel green and pale heliotrope is among the Frenchiest-looking patterns to be seen in the new wool-back satins which are just now enjoying a great run of popularity. In fashions, as in all things, the fittest survives, and so, whether small or great, the fash*ionables* are putting themselves into plaited skirts and plaited boleros, as fast as the nimble fingers of the up-to-date modiste and tailor will permit. This *plaited skirt of the mo*ment is really the fishwife skirt of the early '80's, a skirt plaited from a fitted yoke; only to-day the plaits are closely stitched down, whereas the skirts of long ago fell like a Scotch kilt. A plaited skirt needs cumbersome underclothing to the figure, but as a matter of fact it is quite the other way.

In spite of all that has been said and written to the contrary, skirts continue to be close-fitting about the hips. In fact, every skirt, to be fashionable, must fit into the figure what*ever may be* its other pretensions and aims, and even the sunray skirt, which is creating such a furore just at present, is carefully mounted over a well-fitted foundation, which produces the desirable clinging effect. These sunray skirts, by the way, are particularly fetching in a house frock, but somehow they seem out of place in a street gown. These skirts are simply delightful when fashioned of crepe de chine or soft voile or canvas cloth. The day gown of the moment, the one tailor-built and made of cloth, goes in for laces of a most distinct and different order from those seen last season, laces of a bold and highly decorative order, which some critics have been pleased to describe as furniture lace. It seems strange, but these modish adornings are really the laces we have hitherto only used for window blinds and window curtains—these same linen thread laces that look so elegant and so new on our handsome cloth gowns. I saw yesterday a frock of a pretty grape wool stuff, medium brown in color, with trimmings of old-fashioned Yak lace in exactly the same tone, with a bright yellow thread woven into the edge. The wool lace and the crapey material looked so well together that I am sure the modiste who built the gown must have considered it an immense success. Of course, material and lace precisely corresponding in color form a noticeable feature in many new things—frocks, and coats, and even hats, and the effect is distinctly good, where care is taken in selecting the colors.

Does the popularity of the blouse ever mean to subside? Emphatically, no. This season at all events it is more in vogue than ever before. Those who would see it at its best should turn their attention to a French looking model composed of crepe de chine in the new shade called "almond," and trimmed with lace exactly matching in color. The sleeves are prettily tucked and trimmed with lace, with four handkerchief points hanging from the elbows. Another handsome model is made of finely tucked chiffon and lace, with a deep bertha of finely plaited chiffon edged with lace. The effect of the yoke falling from the shoulders is particularly taking, and will prove vastly becoming to some figures.

Some of the new summer shirt waists are already to be seen, and the designs are more pleasing than ever before. The exaggerated waist-line is much moderated, as all extremes are bound to be sooner or later, and instead of the ridiculous point, which in many cases extended four or even more inches below the waist line last year, we have a waist with a prettily rounded point, not exceeding two inches at the very most in depth in front. All sorts of materials enter into the construction of the new shirt waist, as well as every known color and shade, and while there is much to be said in favor of the pretty colored shirt this season, yet after all the pure white shirt waist is the one to buy.

The fur stole is succeeded by the one of soft lace, and fluffy stuffs like plait*ed chiffon, fine net, and tulle and other* materials of like description; belongings of elegance rather than necessity, without which it is the popular and at the same time extravagant idea that no costume is quite complete. However, not even the most indifferent would declare these fal-de-rals of present fashion anything but becoming; so if one can afford the luxury why not indulge?

NOT PLEASANT WORK

Danger in Digging a Tunnel Under a Large River.

How New York Engineers Are Building a Trolley Line in North River Mud — Victims of Compressed Air.

[Special New York Letter.]

DISCOVERIES in all branches of science have been so rapidly made during the last half century that the devotees of medicine and surgery have been compelled to unusual effort in order to keep pace with the new calls upon their resources. The time is long past when the doctor's gig carried everything necessary to seknowledged success in his profession. New processes of construction and new pursuits resulting therefrom have so multiplied the varieties of casualties and diseases to which man is subjected that the use of drugs has been largely superseded by different kinds of apparatus. A phase of suffering known as the "bends" is not familiar to the general public, but it is incident to the pursuits of certain men on whose safety and protection from bad effects of their labor the convenience of millions of people depend. Our large cities have become so congested, the erection of high buildings has enabled so many individuals to live and labor on ground space of such a limited area, that the railroad approaches to large business centers are becoming insufficient for the transportation of the traveling public. Hence has arisen the necessity for the construction of great tunnels for the passage of trains and other traffic. The need for larger sewers has also become apparent, and tunnels for electric wires, pipes and various other things which are darkening the windows and filling the upper strata of the streets, requiring a continuous tearing up of the latter, are needed.

The old tunnels were more or less easily constructed, but a complete revolution of methods has become necessary in the building of the great subterranean arteries which are now destined to connect distant points. Among the agents in use is compressed air, in which laborers are compelled to work during periods usually varying from four to eight hours. A man is sooner exhausted in compressed air than in the atmosphere to which he is accustomed. A workman is usually introduced to his post through several air chambers, in each succeeding one of which the pressure is greater until he reaches his work. The first time a man breathes compressed air his ears seem bursting with roaring sounds, which increase until the highest pressure is reached. He remains in this atmosphere not longer than four hours the first time, but is soon able to endure it for eight hours. A man accustomed to the use of alcohol or whose heart, is not strong should never attempt work in compressed air, and under no circumstances should he walk suddenly into the outer air. In the latter event he is more than likely to succumb to a severe attack of "bends," which, in many cases, has proved fatal. The first symptoms resemble cramps. Intense pain is felt in every joint. The only relief has been found in placing the sufferer in compressed air again until the limbs are entirely relaxed, when the pressure may be gradually reduced. Even then the patient may feel the bad effects of his attack for weeks.

Especial arrangements for the treatment of this comparatively new disease have been made in New Jersey, a compressed air hospital having been established at the top of a shaft leading to the tunnel being constructed under the North river for the use of the New York & New Jersey Railroad company. When a victim of the "bends" is carried into this room, which consists of a steam boiler 30 feet long and eight feet wide, and is divided into two compartments, he is laid on a bench, the door is closed and the compressed air pump raises the pressure, which is regulated by a gauge. The rooms are furnished with electric lights. When the patient, who is constantly watched by a physician, seems to be in a normal condition, the pressure is gradually reduced until the air is like that outside, when he is able to go forth as usual.

The completion of this tunnel, which is expected in about 18 months, will mark an era in engineering. It was first begun about 28 years ago and abandoned, and several attempts since have ended in disaster. At one time 20 men were drowned by the inrush of water. But new methods seem about to render the present enterprise an assured fact. Of all the adverse conditions which tunnel drivers have encountered, none have been worse than those existing under North river. A pressure of 60 feet of water rests on 200 feet of clay silt and about half way across is a granite ledge, which fails to reach the top of the clay stratum. Blasting the granite will add about $300,000 to the cost of the tunnel, which, when completed, will represent an expenditure of about $10,000,000. Sufficient land has been secured for terminals at both ends of the structure. It is a question of the future whether branches will be run out in other directions. The great important feature is the correct and safe construction of the tunnel at the least expense. About 200 feet have been completed on the New York end and all the work is being done at the face. Survey ends, where about 4,000 feet are built. The methods of procedure are wonderful. Within a compressed air-chamber is a shield which consists of a section of steel tubing about 30 feet in diameter, reinforced vertically and horizontally by immense steel webs dividing it into compartments. This shield is a solid bar head across the end of the tunnel. The outer edge is sharp and presses against the silt, which it cuts. The inner surface has steel doors which face the tunnel and through which the silt is removed. The machine weighs about 25 tons. When in operation, hydraulic jacks placed around the edge of the shield, push it forward, the doors are opened and the displaced silt is forced through into the tunnel side, where it falls into iron cars, which are pulled back and dumped at the surface. The forcing power is conducted from hydraulic engines on the Jersey side, through ¾-inch pipes, to the jacks. As the shield goes forward, a ring of cast iron plates is placed in position, within its shelter, and forms a lining for the tunnel. Thus the silt is never exposed and its seems impossible that a cave-in should occur. A machine, independent of the shield, but attached to it, performs this work. As soon a space for a new ring, about three feet, is bored, the shield is stopped, the joints riveted and caulked, rendering the lining permanently secure and water-tight.

The most critical portion of the work is at present reached. The ledge of rock must be blasted ahead of the shield with the greatest care and the smallest possible charges, that the upper crust of silt which is now but 25 feet thick, may not be disturbed. Doors in the diaphragm of the shield are opened and the drilling done. Then the doors are closed, with an electric wire passing through them. After the men retire to the bulkhead, the blast is fired, the doors are opened, the loose material removed and the shield moved forward a little. Hydraulic pressure of about 5,000 pounds is exercised on the shield. To reduce the danger to a minimum, the work is all done in a compressed air chamber, in order that the pressure within may, to some extent, counteract that from above. Two air locks are situated 4,200 feet back, under the Jersey shore. These furnish the chambers between them with hot strong should never attempt work in compressed air, and under no circumstances should he walk suddenly into the outer air. In the latter event pressure between the two equals that of the chambers beyond. Then the other door may be opened, when the workmen proceed to another chamber. When they come out, a reverse process takes place. In the working chamber, the pressure reaches 20 pounds to the square inch, or more, as the work requires. The limit of a man's endurance is 50 pounds to the square inch. Workmen are supposed to remain in the outer lock until the pressure is reduced that they may with safety breathe the outer air. In cases of "bends" the hospital is brought into requisition.

HAS STRANGE POWER

California Woman Who Can Hypnotize the Insane.

The Thrilling Adventure in Which She First Demonstrated Her Influence—Asylum Authorities Solicit Her Assistance.

Mrs. Johanna Gertz, a frail little California woman, living 12 miles from Los Angeles, has discovered that she has a remarkable power over insane persons, and she is using it in an extraordinary way.

Mrs. Gertz lives in a lonely section with only one neighbor, a circumstance that first called into play her strange gift of hypnotism.

Not long ago, about noon, Mrs. Gertz was at the kitchen table preparing luncheon, when the outer door flew open and a wild-eyed, disheveled man rushed in, grabbed her by the arm and shouted: "Make haste! you must be ready to go with me in five minutes!"

"Go where?" calmly inquired Mrs. Gertz, looking squarely into his eyes.

"Through space to the region of pain and sorrow. Hurry; there is not a moment to lose! If we are not off in ten minutes I must kill you."

This was enough to frighten any ordinary woman beyond power of action, but Mrs. Gertz is not an ordinary woman. Besides, she had her three children to think of. Her husband would not return until night; Mrs. Fiske, her only neighbor, was beyond call.

All this flashed through her mind as she stood with her calm eyes fixed on the wild ones of the maniac, who had taken out a block of wood in the shape of a watch and stood as though waiting for the allotted ten minutes to elapse before springing at Mrs. Gertz.

Mrs. Gertz endeavored to divert the madman's thoughts from herself. "Ask for Tom," she suggested.

"Where's Tom?" shrieked the man. "Out in the orchard," Mrs. Gertz replied. "Will you call him?"

Off raced the man toward the orchard, and off flew Mrs. Gertz with her three children, to the home of Mrs. Fiske.

"Lock the children in the house and come over to my house right away!" she yelled. "There is a crazy man there, and I must get him to the asylum before he harms any one. I am going to try hypnotising him, and I believe I can do it!"

Dashing back to her own yard, Mrs. Gertz met the maniac striding toward *her. She raised her hand with a com*manding gesture and, standing perfectly still, said, in a ringing voice: "Peace!"

Instantly the wild look left the maniac's eyes and he stood rigid. Going close to him, her eyes never wavering, she placed her hand upon his forehead, drew it down over his eyes, and commanded him, mentally, to open the front gate and sit outside on the ground until she came.

Wheeling around, the man strode off, obeying her implicitly.

Mrs. Gertz followed him, and when he was seated passed her hand once more over his eyes and suggested that he go to sleep. He fell back in a deep slumber.

In the meantime Mrs. Fiske, by Mrs. Gertz' orders, had harnessed the horse to a double-seat carriage and stood, with a gun cocked, awaiting her friend's next move. Mrs. Gertz took the man by the arm, and her mind ordered him to awake. She then commanded him to get in the carriage and sit on the floor between the seats, all the while suggesting "peace, peace."

With not the slightest resistance, the man did as he was commanded. The two women placed themselves on the front seat, Mrs. Fiske driving and Mrs. Gertz keeping watch of the now thoroughly hypnotized man, ready to put her hand on his forehead at the least sign of violence.

The officials at the Highlands asylum questioned Mrs. Gertz regarding her adventure, and three physicians connected with the institution, specialists in insanity, were called in.

Mrs. Gertz gave an exhibition of her hypnotic power by going through the wards and subduing the violence of the inmates. The New York World says that her assistance was solicited in removing dangerous victims of insanity from their homes to the asylum, and she was also requested to pay daily visits to the institution for the purpose of controlling the most unruly members, and by her wonderful power assisting in the cure of the least hopeless.

ELIMINATE CURVES.

Wednesday night's trolley accident near Cranford demonstrated again the need of altering the present arrangement of tracks at the bridge over the Cranford river. A previous accident happened at the same spot.

The trouble is that there is a reverse curve on either side of the bridge necessitated to get the trolley tracks, which are on one side of the roadway far enough over to cross the bridge. On the bridge, the tracks overlap in order not to occupy too much room. In approaching from the west, there is no trouble but a heavy grade leads to the bridge from the east. Wednesday night and one other occasion a car has gotten beyond the control of the motorman and run away down the hill. But for the sharp reverse curve, the car would have undoubtedly stayed on the track and the accident have been averted.

Some change should be made by the Board of Freeholders either in the bridge or the trolley tracks so that these curves can be eliminated. It will be to the advantage of both county and trolley company to do away with any such conditions that are liable to result seriously.

PLAINFIELD'S HOSPITAL.

Public attention is again attracted to Muhlenberg Hospital by the graduation exercises of the training school connected with the hospital. Two nurses have completed their course at the school and are now ready to actively enter their profession. A number have already graduated from that institution and are now numbered among the most successful of the trained nurses in this city.

Considerable was said at the exercises concerning the new home for the hospital. A portion of the building, as planned, is nearly completed but lack of funds will prevent the erection of all the wards desired. The Women's Auxiliary is making special efforts to raise sufficient money to build a suitable nurses' home, a very necessary adjunct to the hospital.

There is no institution of which Plainfield can be more proud than its hospital. Even in the present quarters, which are admittedly inadequate to answer the demands upon it, it compares favorably with hospitals throughout the State, and can show a higher standard of efficiency than most. The old time prejudice against hospitals has largely died away here and there are hundreds who yearly take advantage of its benefits.

ONE PHASE OF IT.

In the general discussion of the street sprinkling question, it has been suggested that the fire department horses could be used to good advantage in the work, thereby lessening the cost of the street sprinkling to the city. It was suggested as a measure of economy. As a matter of fact, such a course would be far from economy; it would be returning to methods of a decade ago and seriously cripple the efficiency of a fire department that is now one of the best in the State.

In support of this proposition to use the horses of the fire department, it was claimed that it was not necessary or advisible to have the teams go any distance from the engine houses in which they are quartered at present. The fallacy of such a claim is apparent at first glance.

How long would it take a team to be unhitched from a watering cart, say in the vicinity of the Netherwood district, the driver jump on the back of one of the horses and run them down to the engine house on Second street near Watchung avenue, hitch them up to a fire apparatus and then return to the neighborhood of the Netherwood Hotel, or to box No. 89, Front street and Rock avenue, both of which districts either of the hose companies situated in the centre of the city have to answer. This question has been answered in a less degree by the team used on the steamer. This team is not owned by the city, but is hired. It is employed daily in hauling freight about the city in certain limits, outside of which it is not allowed to go. A delay of from five to ten minutes is an ordinary occurrence, and when the team arrives at the fire it is usually unable to do further duty. Several citizens have complained about the way these horses were treated, and have even threatened to have the driver arrested for cruelty to animals.

As to the men in the fire department: They are on duty the entire twenty-four hours, with a leave of absence of one day in ten. Their usual daily duties about the engine houses keep them busy from the time they arise until about noon. This is on the presumption that they have not answered an alarm of fire the night previous. Were such the case, they would, in addition to their regular duties, be compelled to wash up the apparatus and polish all the bright parts, a job consuming from two to four hours for two men. Men thus employed could not be expected to go out and do duty in sprinkling the city streets.

Taking up another argument used in advocacy of the plan, every moment lost at the beginning of a fire may make thousands of dollars difference in the loss. Only the other day a still alarm came in from the Hygeia ice plant in the eastern end of the city, the department answered it immediately without even as much as thirty seconds delay and when they arrived found a fire which, if left for even a minute or two longer, having already burned through a 2x10 inch timber, the building would have been almost, if not totally, consumed; a loss of $15,000. Other instances could easily be given.

Were the insurance underwriters made aware of the fact that the fire department horses were used in sprinkling the streets, we feel quite safe in saying that the insurance rates would be advanced, and the cost to the taxpayer, for sprinkling the streets and the fire department, would be greater by this means than were they to pay directly out of the city funds.

ONE OF THE HEIRS.

Mrs. Zerega, of Park Avenue, Figures in the Famous Bedford Case Causing So Much Talk.

In the sensational story published in the New York papers of yesterday and today, regarding the estate of the late Gunning S. Bedford, of New York, a Plainfield woman figures. She is Mrs. Zerega, of Park avenue, whose husband died recently. She is a second cousin to the late Gunning S. Bedford.

When Mrs. Zerega was seen this morning she refused to talk about the case other than to say that she is one of the contesting heirs and that Comdert Brothers, of New York, represented her.

It was reported that Eugene L. Bushe, a New York lawyer, representing Mrs. Bedford had located in Plainfield for the summer, but a vigilant search failed to reveal any such person here.

SUNDAY GOLF AT HILLSIDE?

Question Will Come Up Again at a Meeting of the Hillside Club Soon.

NOT A NEW QUESTION

Was Defeated Last Year When Put to Vote of Members of Club—Another Meeting Next Saturday Night to Discuss Question—Will Probably Vote on It.

The question of opening the course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Sunday afternoon will be brought up at a meeting of the club members to be held next Saturday evening at the Casino. This is not a new matter by any means, as the question was voted upon last year and defeated. Many of the younger element, as well as a few older members are in favor of having the course open Sunday afternoon simply for the exercise that they can get at no other time.

The motive is not questioned so much, but the conservative members believe that if the course is opened Sunday afternoon it will not be long before these same members will want it open all day, and this might possibly be followed with a desire to have a bar located at the clubhouse. This is the trend of thought in the minds of those who are opposed to the introduction of Sunday golf.

A conservative member in speaking of the matter Saturday, said that he believed that the members who contribute the most money toward the support and maintenance of the club, are opposed to Sunday play. This same member also said that if the Sunday golf is allowed he could see no reason why Sunday baseball would not follow in Plainfield. Aside from the fact that a baseball game attracts a crowd, not the case with golf, he could see no real difference between the two sports.

There is a wide difference of opinion on the subject and the matter will be discussed fully at the coming meeting. No doubt there will be many strong arguments advanced against the proposition and as the members have received notification of the meeting and its object a large attendance is expected.

SPRING AT SHORE.

A Much Favored Place Now is Atlantic City.

In a hundred ways conditions at the sea shore have changed. The time was when one never considered that the shore could be visited until the hot season of July and August, first because of the supposed miserable weather, and because there were no hotel accommodations for those who dared a visit, nor were there any attractions in the amusement line. Of course the southern and Florida resorts were in bloom, but in May and June the weather was far from delightful, and for the busy man who delights in a day or two's outing during these charming months, Florida was out of the question. Then Atlantic City came to the front. A superb climate, magnificent hotels, entertainment galore, and all within three hours of New York, and at the shore too, what more could you ask.

Atlantic City at the present time is the ideal spot, its temperature averaging in the nineties, when overcoats and heavy clothing are unnecessary. The ocean breezes are most exhilarating and tracing, and the board walk is thronged with a happy crowd. Down at the inlet two score of crafts are in commission for delightful pleasure cruises along the shore. The several big ocean piers are alive and entertainment is provided for young and old in the form of theatricals, concerts, cakewalks, basketball games, dancing and like diversions. The beauty on the board walk are all open and from the Inlet to Chelsea there is an incessant liveliness. Atlantic City was made famous by its marvellous hotels, and every one of the beach front hostelries numbering fully a score and accommodating fully 20,000 guests, is open for the reception of visitors. These hotels cater to your every demand, and nothing is left undone which will make you happy and comfortable.

The cuisine in every instance is equal to that of the fashionable metropolitan houses, and when you consider the fact that Atlantic City is but three hours distant from New York by the New Jersey Central, it can be readily imagined that Atlantic City is the leading resort for May and June, as well as the seasons. The New Jersey Central has vestibuled trains with buffet Pullman's from its Liberty Street station, New York, at 9:40 a. m., and 3:40 p. m., and if you want to know about Atlantic City send a postal to C. M. Burt, G. P. A., New Jersey Central, New York City, room 8, for booklet, free for the asking.

WILL BUILD A SYNAGOGUE

Local Hebrew Congregation to Award Contracts at Once for Its Erection.

TO BUILD ON NEW ST.

Estimated Cost Will be $12,000—Memorial Tablet for the Late Mrs. Samuel Dreier—Number of Subscriptions That Have Just Been Received.

The members of the Plainfield Hebrew Congregation have decided to erect a handsome synagogue on the property recently purchased on New street and it is expected that work will be started on the building within a short time. This action has been made possible by the generous contributions of money received by the committee in charge of the matter.

At a recent meeting of the congregation, Morris Abrams, treasurer of the building committee, reported that the plans and specifications for the new synagogue to be erected on the lot belonging to the Congregation on New street had all been prepared and that everything was in readiness to receive estimates for the construction of the same. The treasurer also reported having received the following money since the last meeting:

Samuel Dreier, $1,050; Morris Abrams, $100; Harry Dreier, $30; W. Palmer Smith, $10; contributions received through Mrs Linke, $15; Alex. Gilbert, $26; Capt. J. Frank Hubbard, $35; Dr. P. J. Zeglio, $5; James Clark, $30; J. W. Reinhart, $50, making a total of $1,380.

At the meeting the committee was authorized to give out the specifications for the purpose of receiving estimates. The building is to be 40x60 with a small extension in the rear. There will be a cellar and two stories, and the building is to be of brick. The total estimated cost is $12,000. It was decided that the congregation keep the same name, but a memorial tablet will be erected within in memory of the late Mrs. Samuel Dreier. The congregation feels greatly encouraged with the start made and within a reasonable length of time hope to occupy a commodious house of worship, the first of the kind in Plainfield.

Saturday afternoon saw the opening of the Association Baseball League with two games. Fair crowds witnessed both and the playing in each game was sufficiently close to make it interesting. While all four teams need practice, the game were generally well played and very satisfactory to the management of the new league. The Reform A. A. won its game from the Cuban Giants by heavy batting in the last few innings, the score being 19 to 10. It was nip and tuck between the Orange Field Club and the Clinton Avenues until the latter finally won out 11 to 8.

The Reform A. A.-Cuban Giants game was played on the Arlington avenue grounds. For the first few innings it looked as if the colored lads were having the better of it. Then the heavy batters of the Reform A. A. began to connect with Davis' delivery and five runs began to mount up. Dick Scots and McGinley both scored home runs to the delight of the rooters. In the field, the Reform boys made several clever double plays.

The lineups were, Cuban Giants—Nelson, c; Hatchett, rf; Johnson, 3b; Davis, p; Peterson, cf; Moore, 3b; Hopkins, lf; Perkins, 1b; Simons, ss.

Reform A. A.—O'Loughlin, c; J. Scott, rf; Fitzpatrick, 2b; Degan, 1b; McGinley, 3b; Taylor, ss; Perrin, lf; Higgins, cf; D. Scott, p. Henry Apgar, umpire.

Score by innings:

Cuban Giants... 2 1 0 2 0 0 0 3 2—10
Reform A. A.... 1 0 0 2 3 4 1 6 3—19

A close game was played by the Orange Field Club and the Clinton Avenues on the Clinton avenue field. Clinton Avenue's heavy batters began on Galvin's delivery at once and, with the aid of a few errors, rolled the score up to 6 to 1 in the first two innings. Then the Orange F. C. nine settled down and began a hard uphill fight. While the fight was a plucky one it was not sufficient to win out in the end and, with the aid of some timely batting in the seventh, when three runs were netted, and scattered runs in the fifth and eighth, Clinton Avenue finished in front, 11 to 8.

The lineups of the two teams follow:

Orange Field Club—Emmons, rf; Sherwin, p; Hook, lf; McVoy, cf; (captain) Egan, 3b; Conover, ss; Feiring, 1b; Dowiner, 2b; Herman, c.

Clinton Avenue—Pangborn, 3b; Dodd, ss; Baker, c; Dertlinger, rf; Starbuck, 2b; Saums, 1b; Dwyer, p; Ballmer, cf; and McGee, lf.

The score by innings of the Orange Field Club was as follows:

Orange F. C.... 1 0 1 2 0 1 0 3 0—8
Clinton A..... 2 4 0 0 1 2 1 0 1—11

'PLAINS, 8; S. WORKS, 3.

About a thousand enthusiastic rooters witnessed the defeat Saturday afternoon of the Safe Works nine by Scotch Plains, 6 to 3, on the latter's grounds. The game was one of the prettiest and most exciting of the season, Davis for Scotch Plains served them up hot over the plate and eight men fanned his curves. All of Scotch Plains' runs were scored in the first four innings off Bradley, Breame who succeeded him, allowing only four scattered hits. Scotch Plains did some heavy stick work, with a total of fifteen hits. Summary:

HOPE, 15; ALIS, 7.

The baseball team representing Hope Y. M. A. defeated the Alis team on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, in one of the worst exhibitions of the season.

The Alis team seemed to be thoroughly demoralized and a general bake-up was necessary in the middle of the game. Dupee pitched well for the home team, but he was poorly supported. Time and again the team had opportunities to shut out runs, but that was the time the players went up in the air. Dupee was ably backed up by a new catcher named Wylie, of Arlington. He will continue to play with the team. The Hope's new battery proved a strong one and was largely responsible for the victory. There was no monopoly on errors, as a total of eleven were made by Alis, while Hope made six. Wylie and Cathcart were the only members of Alis to play an errorless game, while Captain Martin, of the Hope team, had a record of three. There was a good attendance at the game.

Dunellen, May 18—The Dunellen A. C. outclassed the Y. M. C. A. team, of Plainfield, at all points Saturday afternoon, and won the game 9 to 1. The locals played a superior game in the field and at the bat.

Ettinger was in fine form and the visitors could do nothing with his delivery, getting but two singles, both of which were made of C. Smith. Interest in the game centered mainly in the good playing of the locals as the Y. M. C. A. went out of form the part. "Dave" Smith at third for the locals up a star game as did Dalley, the new man at first. Giles made a pretty play by pulling down a hot liner and making a double play at first. Brown batted strongly, making a double and two singles. The only notable piece of fielding by the visitors was a stop of a line drive by Squiers, who made a double by tossing the ball to Perrin. TO SPRINKLE? YES, BUT HOW?

A Troublesome Question But Partially Solved by the Common Council.

GIVEN PUBLIC HEARING

Street Committee Authorized to Buy Six Sprinkling Carts if it Deems Such Action Advisable—Routine Business Transacted at Regular Session Following.

It ought to be done, but how? That was the question at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last Monday, when the subject of street sprinkling was introduced. Every one of the six or eight persons who spoke on the matter before the Council conceded the fact that street sprinkling should be done, but not one offered a good solution as to how it should be done. Some of those who spoke on the subject favored the idea, but they do not want to see the tax-rate increased and this seems inevitable if the city takes hold of the problem.

The regular order of business was suspended when the Council meeting was called, for the purpose of giving anyone present an opportunity of speaking for or against street sprinkling by the city. The final result of the hearing was that a resolution was introduced by Councilman Pray authorizing the street committee to buy six sprinkling carts at an expense not to exceed $2,100, if the committee deems it advisable. This resolution was adopted unanimously, all the members with the exception of Councilmen Tolles and Randolph voting for it. The two last named members were absent. As Mr. Pray explained after the meeting, the adoption of the resolution is a step toward the desired end and now the corporation counsel will be consulted for the purpose of ascertaining how certain legal obstacles may be overcome. It is understood that the tax ordinance, having been adopted, cannot now be amended this year.

During the hearing on the subject, there was a communication received from Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis in which he favored sprinkling by the city at the earliest possible moment. Another communication, also favoring the proposition, was received from Horace Cunningham and others, of West Front street, while J. K. Myers wrote a letter in which he suggested the Canadian plan, that of assessing on a basis of so much per front foot for those benefitted. Mr. Myers' letter was referred to the street committee by a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel and the corporation counsel will be consulted concerning it. Mr. Garrigues referred to a letter written to the Council by Miss VanBoskerck, agent for the Organized Aid Association, but which had failed to reach the Council in time for the meeting. Miss VanBoskerck urged for the sprinkling on behalf of the city poor.

Among those who spoke on the subject was F. E. Kinsman. He favored the Canadian plan and objected seriously to any plan whereby those owning property south side of the sprinkling limits should be taxed on that property, when no benefits would be derived. If such a plan is to be adopted he favored retaining the present system. He also argued against an increase in the tax rate.

Salmon C. Baker spoke in favor of municipal sprinkling of the streets, believing that it would save the macadam and the repairs generally made. He argued that persons living in the outlying districts should be willing to pay something of the sprinkling would be a benefit to them and besides it would lessen greatly the labors of the women in the homes who are now obliged to spend much time in keeping their houses clean.

F. W. Runyon claimed to represent three hundred people, who favored the plan of the city sprinkling the streets, that number of having spoken to him about it, and he believed it ought to be done.

Dr. T. C. Ard made a few remarks in favor of the proposition from the standpoint of general health benefits. He believed it would lessen the number of cases of tuberculosis, that disease being carried by germs in dust caused through expectoration on the part of those having this disease.

F. H. Martin did not want to see the tax rate increased, but he argued for the proposition. He said that he had a number of tenants who complained about the almost insufferable dust. However, he said he would be willing to pay his proportionate share of the cost. He said that Plainfield is about twenty years behind such a place as Asbury Park, where they have street sprinkling and the ashes and garbage are collected by the city.

Dr. Ellis W. Hedges also spoke in favor of the plan, claiming benefits along the line of health and the comfort of the people. He believed that the greatest good to the greatest number should be the motto of the Council and he hoped that the city would give the people street sprinkling.

Rev. L. R. Howard, of Hope chapel, spoke in support of the plan in behalf of the people of the city who are in moderate circumstances, claiming that they are entitled to as much consideration as the more wealthy, who can afford such comforts.

This concluded the hearing on the matter, and after a lengthy recess, during which it was decided to adopt the resolution offered by Mr. Pray, the Council returned to the regular order of business.

In the routine business considered an application was received for a liquor license for the Hotel Netherwood during the coming season. The matter was referred to the license committee. A communication received from W. R. Congrove, of Richmond street, in which he stated that he had not paid a poll tax for eight years. He desired to pay the amount if he owed it to the city. The matter was referred.

E. L. Finch stated in a communication that he had already paid taxes on his Arlington avenue property and he objected to paying the tax twice. The matter will be investigated by the proper committee.

Mrs. Elizabeth Apgar and other residents of DeKalb avenue petitioned for an electric light on that avenue and the light committee will consider the petition.

Mr. Daniel offered a resolution affecting the alleged encroachment of the Durlach building on Watchung avenue at the corner of East Front street, the resolution providing that the corporation counsel be consulted regarding the matter and steps being taken to remove the encroachment. The resolution was adopted.

Another resolution by Mr. Daniel called for an appropriation of $900 with which to properly fit up the city vault with files and indexes for the use of the clerk and collector. The resolution was adopted, as was also another one by the same member providing for an appropriation of $200 or any portion of it with which to prepare the school bonds. The sum is to be expended under the direction of the city treasurer.

Mr. Lee introduced a resolution authorizing the fire and building committee to pension the fire horse known as "Doc" and to sell two other fire horses, now unfit for service, and to purchase three new horses at an expense not to exceed $750. The resolution was adopted. It explained that the horse to be pensioned is now twenty years old and has performed twelve years of service.

Mr. Daniel offered a resolution fixing Monday evening, June 15, at 8 o'clock, as the time, when sealed bids will be received for the purchase of the new school bonds, the amount being $60,000, and to be issued by the city. This resolution was adopted.

Before the meeting adjourned, Mr. vanHerwerden moved that a public hearing be granted in behalf of the Central Jersey Telephone Co. to the people of Plainfield on Monday evening, June 1, at 8 o'clock, when arguments for or against the granting of a franchise to this company can be made. This was agreed to and the meeting adjourned.

FIRE HORSE BADLY HURT

New Horse, Frightened by Crowd, Sends Truck Into An Electric Light Pole.

ITS MATE BADLY HURT

Accident Occurs at Corner of Park Avenue and Second Street—Chief Doane, Who Was Right Behind Truck, Exonerates Driver Vail From All Blame.

In turning the corner from East Second street into Park avenue last Tuesday, while answering an alarm from box 34, the hook and ladder truck, driven by Edward Vail, ran full tilt into an iron electric light post on the south corner of the street in front of the building occupied by M. B. Giles' meat market and drove the whiffletree against the horses, the hook catching the off horse in the flank and gashing him terribly. The turn into Park avenue is very sharp, and difficult to make even when going at a slow pace. According to the statement of Chief Doane, who was directly behind the truck at the time and to other reliable testimony, Vail was not driving at a particularly rapid rate, the accident being caused instead by the horses becoming frightened at the crowd on the street.

When the truck turned the corner, there was a throng of 150 gathered on the street and sidewalks, two-thirds of them waving frantically at the driver in a well meaning endeavor to indicate the direction of the fire. Besides this, the driver had his troubles in avoiding a dozen or more carriages and wagons gathered about the corner. The combination proved too much for the nigh horse, an inexperienced animal not yet thoroughly broken in to a knowledge of his duties. The team swerved, and the hook was driven into the haunch of the other horse, an old stager whose name is Jim. George Mehl piloted the rear end of the truck.

The injury to the horse was serious, and for a few minutes it was thought it might have to be shot. A gash fully a foot long was cut, the flesh being torn away clear to the bone, the wound presenting a terrible sight as the animal stood gamely back in the stable. Dr. Lewis S. Pocock, the veterinary surgeon, stitched up the wound. It is not thought that the horse will be permanently maimed, although its usefulness as a fire horse may be impaired for a long time.

The fire itself was comparatively unimportant. It was located in the closet of the house owned and occupied by Richard Lorton, at 517 West Sixth street. The closet, which is next to the dining room on the first floor, was filled with clothes and dishes and was all ablaze when the firemen arrived. The ceiling and walls were damaged and a number of household articles destroyed, the damage amounting to about $90. It was put out without much difficulty by small extinguishers. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Chief Doane exonerates Driver Vail from blame for the accident, stating that he was guiding the horses as carefully as possible and that the whole trouble was caused by the frightening of the inexperienced horse.

THEATRICAL.

Vaudeville of the class that has made Mr. Keith and his houses all over the country famous will be the offering at his Union Square Theatre during the coming week. Prominent as the top of the fun-makers will be found Kerns and Cole, the German comedy stars, in their sketch "Prof. Schlitz." Johnny Williams, the American Li Hung Chang, will be seen in his burlesque novelty "Prof. Herrman Outdone." Miss Mariam Ainsworth, the mystic protean character-artist will make five changes without leaving the stage; while Campbell and Caulfield will provoke many a laugh with their sidewalk conversation.

The distinct marvel of the season in New York is the spontaneous and lasting hit at Wallack's Theatre of George Ade's merry musical satire, "The Sultan of Sulu." Since Sultan Ki-Rans appeared on Broadway with his bewitching wives and hosts of pretty girls the city has gone comic opera mad, as many a shirtless musical shows at one time bidding for favor. Out of this number only one that was there when the "Sultan" arrived is still in the race and it has announced the end of its engagement. Never in the history of American opera has there been a parallel to the phenomenal success of Author Ade's first piece.

WELCOME HIM BACK FOR SEVENTH YEAR

Reception to Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass by His Congregation at First M. E. Church.

PLEASING PROGRAMME

LADIES' AID SOCIETY AND EPWORTH LEAGUE UNITE TO ARRANGE DETAILS.

League Gives Programme, and Society in Charge of Informal Reception After Programme—Cordial Welcome for Pastor.

The members of the First Methodist church welcomed their pastor, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, back to the charge which he has held for six consecutive years, with a reception Friday evening. It was held in Vincent chapel. The fact that Dr. Snodgrass has been appointed for the seventh year is rather unusual. Until recently the longest term which a minister was allowed to hold one charge in a church was four years but in the rule in that case has been changed, allowing a pastor to occupy one pulpit for an unlimited term.

The programme was rendered under the auspices of the Epworth League and was arranged by George A. Horne. Violin solos by Miss Helen M. Schupp were well received. Mrs. B. H. Tugwell sang several vocal selections in a pleasing manner and Miss Bertha Hurst Whitney recited "Sing High; Sing Low." She was loudly applauded. Miss Edith L. Hart delighted those present with a humorous monologue entitled, "Behind the Curtain," while vocal selections were rendered by Elmer D. Cutting in a masterful manner. The programme was really a treat and was one of the pleasant features of the evening.

On behalf of the congregation, Henry A. McGee welcomed the pastor back to his church in an address in which he spoke of the pleasant relations which exist between pastor and congregation. The pastor responded with a few remarks in which he expressed pleasure in returning to the church where he had been associated so long.

The lecture room was decorated with palms about the platform. During the social hour which followed the usual conditions refreshments of ice cream and cake was served by the committee from the Ladies' Aid Society which had charge of that portion of the evening's entertainment. The committee comprised Mrs. N. A. Miller, Mrs. H. A. McGee, Mrs. J. O. Peck and Mrs. L. M. French.

NEW DEPARTMENTS.

Provided for in Sunday-School of Trinity Reformed Church.

The quarterly meeting of the officers of teachers of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school was held last Friday in the church parlors. There was a good attendance, but little of importance was considered, except to make provision for changes to the by-laws which were adopted in 1889. The by-laws will be changed to provide for the several new departments organized since they were drafted and to change the requisite number for a quorum to twelve. The annual excursion of the Sunday-school to Asbury Park will be held on Thursday, July 30, as previously determined upon.

SUBURBAN BOOK.

Jersey Central Has Just Issued a Handsome Advertising Pamphlet.

"Within the Suburban Limits," is the title of a handsome book just issued by the New Jersey Central. The book is finely illustrated and is published with a view of interesting those who are tired of the cramped accommodations afforded by city houses and apartments, and who are desirous of securing for themselves and their families more independent, comfortable and healthful homes. The various towns along the line of road between Greenville and Somerville, as well as on the Amboy branch are pictured in all their natural beauty. Plainfield comes in for a good share of publicity as a place of homes and desirable residence. The various rates of fare are given from Plainfield station, Netherwood, Grant avenue and Clinton avenue, together with a list of the local real estate agents. Several handsome views taken in Plainfield are also shown. The book is attractively gotten up and artistically printed.

In Case of Accident.

Accidents will happen. Mother strains her back lifting a sofa. Father is hurt in the shop. Children are forever falling and bruising themselves. There is no preventing these things, but their serious consequences are averted with Perry Davis' Painkiller. No other remedy approaches it for the relief of sore strained muscles. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'.

SHAKESPEARE CLUB.

Last Meeting of Season Held at the Home of Miss Mabelle Phillips, of Madison Avenue.

At the last meeting of the season of the Shakespeare Club, an organization for several years devoted to a study of the classic drama, at the home of Miss Mabelle Phillips, of Madison avenue, Friday afternoon, a musical programme was added to the usual discussion. There were a number of guests present.

Miss Helen Shupp, accompanied by Miss Elsie Horn, sang two Shakespearian songs, and Miss Helen Phillips performed acceptably on the piano. Miss Mabelle Phillips read a paper on the "Dramatic Importance of Lady Macbeth," and accompanied Miss Shupp who rendered the Morris Dance from Henry VIII on the violin. Miss Phillips also played a piano solo. Refreshments and informal discussions followed on the verandah.

Among those present were the Misses French, Miller, Suffren, Reynolds, Ashbrook, Valiant, Van Deupronan and Mesdames Henry M. Hall, Arthur Crone and S. H. Tugwell.

"THEY HAVE GOT IT."

Oriental Court, No. 14, Initiated Eight Candidates Friday Night.

At the regular meeting of Benevolent Council, No. 256, Jr. O. U. A. M., held Friday evening, one member was elected and five propositions were received. The excursion committee reported that everything was progressing favorably for the trip to Atlantic City on American Day, August 13, and the New Jersey Central had consented to have the excursion train stop at Westfield both going and returning.

After the regular meeting of the Council, Oriental Court, No. 14, convened and initiated eight candidates into the mysteries of the Court. At the conclusion of the business refreshments were served and a good time enjoyed by all "who have got it."

WOMEN ARE FICKLE.

They Do Not Always Marry the Men Who Want Them.

Disappointed Farmer Took the Only Girl He Could Get—Missouri's Champion Fickle Girl—Married in Jail.

When the unexpected occurs in a matrimonial affair it becomes a romance. That seems to be the commonly accepted way of looking at love and marriage. When the young people issue cards and all that, it is simply a wedding. When they do things they are not expected to do, it is a romance.

There are other reasons, of course. Once in awhile conditions force the lovers to adopt strange methods. There is the story of the farmer from North Dakota who went to Bismarck to marry the girl of his choice. He thought he was her choice until he went to her residence with the marriage license, and she told him she had thought it over and had decided she would rather be a sister to him.

Adam Greisher, the farmer concerned, was not the style of man who pesters a woman's wedding merely because the bride has backed down. He took his dismissal with good grace and started away from the house. Near the railroad station he stopped a citizen of Bismarck and asked:

"Do you know of a woman around here who wants to get married?"

"There's only one," replied the stranger, "and she's just taking a train to leave town."

The farmer sought her out. He had ten minutes for love making, but he proved eloquent. She left the train with him. They had the name in the marriage license changed and were married. They left Bismarck that evening behind the farmer's pair of horses bound for his farm.

"What's the name of your new wife?" he was asked as he was leaving.

"Her name is—what did you say your name was?" he asked, turning to her.

She laughed and said:

"It was Marion Hershberger. It's now Marion Gruhler."

They drove away happily and are expected to live happily "ever afterwards."

In Missouri there is a bride who has upheld woman's title to fickleness in a startling fashion. She is, or was, Miss Lizzie Bradley. She should have been made Mrs. Robert Eastin, but she now is Mrs. Charles Lyons. Eastin went to Salisbury to keep his wedding arrangement with the boy girl. He found that she had changed her mind.

She was prepared for the wedding with Eastin when a new suitor appeared in the field. He was a late entry, but Miss Bradley listened to his suit and came to the conclusion that she preferred him to Eastin. It was not considered necessary to inform the bridegroom of the change of heart. Probably no one thought of him. He was allowed to proceed with the wedding preparations while the young girl and her new suitor were married quietly and left town.

When Eastin came to keep the appointment with his fiancee there was no bride to be found. An inquiry was started, and it was finally discovered that she had changed her mind and was already the wife of another man.

To match this story there is one from Muskogee, I. T., relating that Miss Hattie Bennett married William Wright in the county jail and then went on her honeymoon alone, leaving the bridegroom to serve out his sentence, upon which he was entering as she took the train.

Just before the wedding the groom was unfortunate enough to be caught in the act of removing valuables which did not belong to him from a house which was not his. The United States marshal took possession of hi mand he found that he was in closer proximity to a courtroom than he was to the altar.

Miss Bennett, however, is a young woman with decided ideas. She had no intention of abandoning her bridegroom because he was in the grip of the law and she found a way by which the marriage could be performed in the jail. The marshal and the bridegroom consented and after the ceremony had been performed she left on her solitary wedding trip.

THEATRICAL.

It is now understood that "The Sultan of Sulu" will remain in New York straight through the summer season, when it will move thus likely be followed at Wallack's by "Peggy from Paris," now the reigning success in Chicago. Recently advertisements have appeared in papers throughout the west announcing that "Peggy" will not be seen west of Chicago this season. If Mr. Savage should be so fortunate in New York with "Peggy" as with "The Sultan," Mr. Ade's second opera is not likely to be seen west of Chicago next season either.

Grace George's season at the Herald Square Theatre will conclude May 23, when she will have presented "Pretty Peggy" ninety-six times in New York. Miss George will resume her metropolitan run October 4, continuing in "Pretty Peggy" and giving matinee performances of "Twelfth Night." Grace George and her husband-manager, William A. Brady, sail for England May 27. Later they will visit France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Holland and the Netherlands. Mr. Brady will return early to make his production of "The Pit" and Miss George later in season for the resumption of her run in "Pretty Peggy."

There is no difference in the minds of even the most captious New York critics over the beauty and splendor of the new big Casino show, "The Runaways." They are agreed that it is the most gorgeous thing ever dressed for the American stage. They are certain that the production has more and prettier girls than any show ever seen on Broadway. There is no question that there are more genuine song hits in "The Runaways," than in any attraction of recent years. And this means a whole lot when it is considered that the singers of these songs are such talented and popular players as Arthur Dunn, Alexander Clark, VanRensselaer Wheeler, William Gould, Al Fields, William Wolf, Miss Dorothy Dorr, Miss Amelia Stone, Miss Helen Lord, and the pretty and winsome Hengler sister, Misses Flora and May.

The attraction at Proctor's Fifth Avenue next week will be another comedy drama from the fluent pen of Joseph Arthur, whose several successful plays have been seen on and off during the season at Mr. Proctor's various houses. "On the Wabash" is the play and it was first produced at Wallack's some years ago under the title of "The Salt of the Earth," with Miss Annie Russell in the leading rule. Next week the leading part will be played by Miss Florence Reed. Down at Proctor's Twenty-third Street a good all round vaudeville bill will be the attraction, headed by Mr. and Mrs. Hene Hughes, in a brilliant comedy sketch entitled "A Matrimonial Substitute." Julian Rose, "Our Hebrew Friend," will play this theatre for the first time in two years. In Harlem at Proctor's 125th Street, a splendid revival will be made of "The Still Alarm," the ever popular local melodrama. Proctor's playhouse at Newark will have another good bill next week, headed by Madam Redan and company, and real novelty just procured by Mr. Proctor. Waterbury Brothers and Tenny, musical comedians, Jones and Walters, rural comedy sketch artists; J. Francis Dooley, black face comedian; Luletta, wire artist and numerous other specialties will complete the show.

Colonel John S. Flaherty, manager of the "New Majestic Theatre," New York, has concentrated his attention the past fortnight upon a new ventilating system whereby he is confident in the belief that the Majestic will be the coolest, most comfortable and best ventilated playhouse in the metropolis this summer. The natural advantages of the location of the Majestic Theatre situated as it is at the opening of Central Park would alone suffice to make it a cooler and more comfortable place of entertainment than any of the downtown houses facing the torrid Broadway pavements. What with so comfortable an auditorium and so seasonable diversion as "The Wizard of Oz," there is no likelihood that the Majestic's doors will be closed this summer.

COW ATE BANKNOTES.

Belfast Cat Slept on Jewelry Worth a Thousand Dollars.

Stories of Animals That Ruined Their Owners—Men Betrayed by Dogs Are Quite Numerous — Plague of Collies.

A Belfast woman named Watkins was suspected of having stolen and hidden in her house a quantity of jewelry valued at £200. Detectives called, says London Answers, and made a thorough search, but failed to find the missing property.

Just as they were leaving the last room, having given up their task in despair, a cat which had been sitting with her kittens in a basket in the corner, got up, stretched herself and mewed. One of the officers turned back, looked into the basket, and there discovered the jewelry, hidden by the hay which formed the cat's bed. The cat's owner is now expiating her crime in jail.

Another curious case of an animal unwittingly delivering its master up to justice comes from Wednesbury. An iron worker of that town was cruel enough to throw his dog down a disused pit 60 feet deep. The poor creature's moans were heard by passers-by, and one of them named William Jeavons pluckily went down and rescued the unfortunate beast, which was badly injured. It was taken to the police station and well looked after, and shortly recovered. But, as it was not known to whom it belonged, no steps could be taken to punish the person responsible for the outrage.

A week or two later the dog was accompanying one of the policemen through the streets, when it suddenly ran into the house and began to play with the children. The officer entered, and the master of the house confessed that the dog belonged to him, and that he had thrown it down the pit. He was at once arrested and very heavily fined for his brutal conduct.

A very peculiar case was recently recorded of such a harmless creature as a cow inflicting very serious loss upon its owner. A farmer in Lanark county, near Ottawa, in Canada, had £29 in notes of the Bank of Ottawa. These he placed in the pocket of his coat, which he hung on a fence while he worked. When he came back he found that the wind had blown his coat to the ground, the notes had fallen out and the cow was quietly chewing up the last of them.

A hawker was recently before the magistrates at Nottingham on a charge of poaching. The keepers had suspected him for a long time, but invariably failed to catch him. On this occasion, however, they had secured his dog, which was brought into court. The moment the poor faithful beast saw its master it sprang out of the arms of the policeman and rushed toward him. The evidence was held to be complete and the man was fined.

A most curious case of involuntary damage done by an animal comes from Worcestershire. During a heavy thunderstorm last August a valuable horse got terribly frightened, and, galloping up from the field toward the farm, got wedged in its blind panic between a wire fence and a barn containing a quantity of hay and valuable agricultural implements. Lightning struck the fence, and, passing through the body of the horse, killed it, afterward setting fire to the barn, which burned until it was completely gutted and all its contents destroyed beyond the possibility recognition.

But the most utter ruin ever inflicted upon human beings by domestic animals was in Patagonia, four or five years ago. A number of Scotch crofters emigrated to north Patagonia and began sheep farming, at which they were very successful. They brought out with them several valuable collies, and these for a time did good work.

But one winter one of these farmers died suddenly. His dogs, left without food, began to devour the sheep. They ran away, took to the hills and became the progenitors of a race of wild dogs which came down in packs and killed the sheep by hundreds.

So serious have matters become that a bounty of £2 a head is offered for these wild collies. If there are not soon exterminated it is said that the settlement must be given up, owing to the ravages of these animals.

Cheap Funerals in Berlin.

The officials of Berlin contemplate the establishing of a city undertaker's shop, which will supply funeral paraphernalia at cost prices.

A BLAZE AT ICE PLANT

STARTED IN BARN AS MEN WERE ABOUT TO QUIT FOR THE NIGHT.

Fire Department Called by 'Phone and Answered in Time to Extinguish Flames.

A serious conflagration was narrowly averted Wednesday about 5 o'clock in Frank T. Ostrom's stables at the Hygeia Ice Company plant on North avenue.

The men were about ready to quit work for the night, when Alfred De-Nise noticed a spark dropping from the haymow in the stable to a manger below. DeNise rushed into the stable and quickly extinguished the spark. He then went to the haymow and discovered the mow filled with smoke and in one corner considerable fire. He then called to Chief Engineer Frederick Schreiner, Wm. Ackor and Henry Peterson, who were nearby and they all went to work with hand extinguishers. Later a hose was run in the building and the hay was thoroughly soaked.

In the meantime a telephone call was sent to fire headquarters and the chemical engine was sent to the scene. The men of the firemen effectually extinguished the fire.

It was fortunate that the fire was discovered early, for if it had occurred during the night in all probability the barn, as well as the seven horses and other contents, would have been destroyed and the ice plant might have been endangered. As it was the extent of the damage was the scorching of one bale of hay.

The Champion Husband.

The champion married man and ex-widower is Fritz Kottman, a citizen of Cregligen in the kingdom of Wurtemberg. He has been married 11 times, and he has only just turned 50. Fritz is simply an honest fellow who had hard lines with wives and they, in turn, had the hardest of luck. The entire batch died more or less dramatically. Each one of his first three died after only months of honeymoon. His two following wives were drowned accidentally. Two more met their deaths in an avalanche. The next one dropped dead at a dance. Her successor committed suicide. The tenth was torn to pieces by a mad bull, and the eleventh, his present wife, has only one arm and one leg, the missing limbs having been carried away by a railroad train.—N. Y. Sun.

Mrs. Lot Was Too Fresh.

A little Danville (Pa.) maiden only four years old and whose first name is Grace, belongs to the infant class in a Sunday school in that place. The teacher had told the children the story of Lot's wife to inculcate a lesson in obedience. Having finished the story, she asked: "Now, then, who can tell me why Lot's wife was turned into a pillar of salt?" The question was asked several times, the teacher expecting some child to answer that she was punished for disobedience. At last Grace said: "Pleathe, Mith Skimmer, I know." "Well," said the teacher, "you tell us, Gracie." "I think it wath becauth she wath too fresh."

Applying the Lesson.

A little four-year-old boy being taught politness at meal time was told that he was not to expect to be helped first, and particularly that ladies were always served before gentlemen. Soon after, when it was all being digested in his little mind, he said to his mother, who was undressing him at night:

"Mother, you are going to die first."

"What in the world do you mean by that?" his mother asked.

"You will die before I do."

"And what makes you think I will?"

"Why, you know ladies always before gentlemen."—N. Y. Times.

Advertising Did It.

He didn't have a dollar; he didn't have a dime. His clothes and shoes were looking just as though they'd served their time. He didn't try to kill himself to dodge misfortune's whacks. Instead, he got some ashes and he filled five dozen sacks. Then, next he begged a dollar. In the paper in the morn he advertised tin polish that would put the sun to scorn. He kept on advertising, and, just now, suffice to say, he's out in California at his cottage on the bay.—Lyre.

She Had to Surrender.

"I've refused George twice," she said, "but it's no use."

"No use!"

"Not a bit. He believes in predestination."

"What has that to do with it?"

"Why, he thinks I'm predestined to be his wife, and of course, if that is so, I'll simply have to give in, no matter what papa says. He can't expect me to defy fate."—Chicago Post.

Hard on Little Hermann.

Hermann Piefke was "kept in" after schoolhours for his want of proficiency in mental arithmetic. A note to this effect was given him to take home and bring back the next morning with his father's signature. The father is an honest tin plate worker, a citizen of Pittsburg, and a strict disciplinarian. Hermann returned the note to his teacher with downcast eyes. It was signed as follows: "Read and walloped. C. Piefke."

NURSES GRADUATE AT MUHLENBERG'S SCHOOL

Graduation Exercises Held at Chapel of Crescent Avenue Church Thursday.

TWO RECEIVE DIPLOMAS

PRINCIPAL ADDRESS OF EVENING MADE BY REV. E. V. STEVENSON.

Eighth Anniversary and Graduation Exercises of Training School at Muhlenberg Hospital—Diplomas and Class Pins for Graduates.

The eighth anniversary and graduation exercises under the auspices of the Muhlenberg Hospital Training School for nurses was held last Thursday in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church, where a large number of friends of the hospital gathered to enjoy the exercises.

The chapel was prettily decorated with flowers and flags, a unique and appropriate decoration being the draping of American and Canadian flags in honor of Miss Clara M. Rhoads, an American, and Miss Nina Kier, a Canadian, who were the two graduates. During the evening frequent reference was made to this fact and at the close of the exercises, W. R. Cock, who was in charge of the programme presented each graduate with a small flag of her country. The trustees and volunteers and pupil nurses occupied seats on the platform as usual.

There was great regret that Charles J. Fisk, president of the Board of Governors, could not be present owing to illness. This was alluded to in the opening words by Mr. Cock, who spoke after Rev. C. L. Goodrich offered prayer. Mr. Cock spoke of the growth of the new hospital and the desire to erect a home for the nurses near its present site. He said that it is now impossible to complete one of the wards planned for, but that the Woman's Auxiliary had been doing grand work in securing money for the home for the nurses and plans are now being prepared for the home. He incidentally paid the nurses high praise for their earnest and untiring zeal in their work, and mentioned the fact that including this year nineteen trained nurses have been graduated from the training school.

Mr. Cock then introduced Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Episcopal church, who made one of the addresses of the evening. After speaking in a humorous vein for a few minutes, Mr. Stevenson referred eloquently to the excellent record made by the hospital in its twenty years' existence. He mentioned the fact that during the past year 405 cases had been cared for and of this number over 50 per cent. were surgical cases. In the clinic department 559 cases were treated and 3,147 visits were made to the hospital. He also referred to the night of January 27 last, when such valiant work was performed by those at the hospital and recalled the value of the hospital in an emergency.

Mr. Stevenson extended his best wishes to the graduates as they enter upon their life work. He asked the graduates to think highly of their profession, but not to allow professionalism even to overshadow or lead them to forget that they are women in the truest sense and he urged them to use the power of woman's life for good.

Following the address, Mrs. Edward LeRoy Mack, accompanied by Miss Hyatt on the piano, sang two soprano solos, and after Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, as a member of the hospital staff, made a few pleasant remarks to the graduates in which he complimented them for their achievement, Mrs. Mack again favored the audience with two more solos.

George H. Goddard, a member of the Board of Governors, in presenting the diplomas to the graduates, continued the happy vein of thought. The exercises closed with the presentation of the class pins to the graduates. The presentation was made by Charles E. Brooks, secretary to the Board of Governors.

The graduates in addition to receiving diplomas and class pins, also received many choice flowers from their friends. After the exercises they were showered with congratulations at an informal reception held in the Sunday-school room of the chapel, where refreshments were served by members of the Woman's Auxiliary, assisted by F. H. Andrews and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges.

Dog Poisoner at Work.

There was a noticeable depletion in the ranks of Plainfield canines last night, there being a suspicion that a dog poisoner has been getting in some evil work. Six or eight street dogs were the victims, none of them of any considerable value. The police have been investigating.

Matthew Johnson, of Plainfield, has returned from a visit with friends in Raritan.

FAST FREIGHT DEALS DEATH

Frank VanBergen Meets Instant Death in Rescuing a Transit Pole from Tracks.

NEAR CLINTON AVENUE

VanBergen on Central Engineer Corps, Working Near Clinton Ave. Station—Left His Transit Pole on Tracks—Steam Chest Strikes Him—Was Warned of Danger.

Frank VanBergen, aged twenty-one years, a student of civil engineering employed by the New Jersey Central, was instantly killed Thursday afternoon about 2:45 o'clock a hundred yards west of the Clinton Avenue station. He was struck by a fast westbound freight train before he could get out of its way. His neck was broken, the skull fractured and the body otherwise mangled.

For some time past, the civil engineering department of the company has been engaged in re-surveying the railroad property between Jersey City and Easton, Pa., there being several parties doing the work. VanBergen was with one of these doing the work in this city. Thursday afternoon the men were in the vicinity of the Clinton Avenue station. VanBergen was used as what is known as a "pole man." The transit pole was standing on track four, while VanBergen was engaged in a conversation with Phillip L. McGuire, an agent representing the O'Halloran Publishing Company, 86 Walker street, New York. The two men were sitting near the station, when the fast freight was noticed.

According to the story told by Mr. McGuire, who saw the accident, he told VanBergen that he could not remove the pole before the train reached that point and to let it go. The latter thought he could get the pole and started after it. He had just taken up the pole and was stepping off the tracks, when the steam chest of the engine struck him in the back. The blow hurled the body at least seven feet into the air in a horizontal position. The next instant the cab of the engine struck VanBergen's head, causing the body to be tossed about like a pin-wheel. It afterward fell besides the tracks. Mr. McGuire signaled to a brakeman on the train and the train was stopped.

Mr. McGuire, in company with some employes of the road, went to where the body lay and carried it near the Pedderick-Ayer works. It was learned by examination that the scalp of the left side of the head was taken off and blood was flowing profusely from the opening. There is no doubt but death was instant.

Mr. VanBergen's home was on Reed street, Elizabeth, where his parents reside. He intended to make civil engineering his life work. In an examination of the dead man's clothes there was found $9 in money, two tickets for the Lyceum Theatre, Elizabeth, Monday night, a watch, still running, and a railroad pass. The remains were taken to Soler's undertaking parlors, where they were viewed by County Physician Westcott. Later Undertaker Higgins, of Elizabeth, came to Plainfield and removed the remains to the home of the dead man's parents.

MUSIC AT SOCIAL.

Principal Feature of Sociable at First Presbyterian Church.

An attractive programme for the Ladies' Aid Society social at the First Presbyterian church last Thursday, called out a large attendance. A feature of the entertainment was a piano trio by the Misses Waterbury, Remsen and VanFleet. The three performed a difficult selection with excellent precision.

Mandolin solos by R. Wilson Derby were received with enthusiastic encores and selections by Mrs. Charlotte M. Ross were well rendered. A piano duet by the Misses Waterbury and Remsen, and a recitation by Miss Gertrude Abbott completed the programme. The various numbers were announced by the pastor, Rev. Charles E. Herring.

Mrs. A. R. Bond was at the head of the committee in charge of the entertainment, and was assisted in presiding over the tea table by Mrs. Alvin R. Hoagland, Mrs. Harry Williams and Mrs. Charlotte M. Ross.

FIFTEEN YEARS ENDEAVOR

SOCIETY AT WARREN CHAPEL CELEBRATES ITS ANNIVERSARY.

Special Programme of Music and Addresses, Which Was Followed by Refreshments.

In celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel, an elaborate programme was rendered Thursday.

Following an address of welcome by the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, reports of the secretary, treasurer and from the Junior Society showed that the society was in a healthy condition both in point of membership and financially. Martin A. Korff, accompanied by L. A. Hummer on the piano, rendered several pleasing selections on the violin, and was loudly applauded.

The speaker of the evening was Rev. J. H. Sproul, of Dunellen. He told interestingly of the work being done for "Christ and the Church" throughout the country.

Noteworthy was the singing by the choir. Those in the choir were: Charles Wheeler, organist; Miss Nora Schenck, Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, Miss Adele Kirby, Mrs. Stiglitz, Miss Dora Bennet, Miss Florence Smith, Arthur Drake and Charles Bryan.

The rooms were very attractively decorated in the society's colors, blue and white. After the programme had been rendered refreshments were served.

FAREWELL GATHERING.

Lewis H. Morgan Entertained Friends Before His Departure.

Lewis H. Morgan, now of New Market, but formerly of this city, entertained a number of his friends at his delightful home recently, prior to his removal to Ridgway, Pa., where he has accepted the superintendency of the Ridgway Machine Company. Mr. Morgan has for a number of years been a trustee of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, and for many years its treasurer, and those who were fortunate enough to accept the hospitality of himself and Mrs. Morgan, were closely identified with the parish work. The evening was devoted to musical selections by members of the church's well known choir, after which refreshments were served. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Jonah A. Babcock, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin K. Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Brown, the Misses Forster, Miss Jennie E. Wenzel, Miss Grace M. Phillips, G. T. Dunham, John Thompson and William W. Moore.

AFTER SLOT MACHINES.

Prosecutor Voorhees, of Middlesex, to Waging War Against Them.

A war is being waged in New Brunswick against the numerous slot machines now in use in many of the liquor stores in that city. Prosecutor John S. Voorhees has confiscated twenty-five and is still keeping at the work. Many of the saloons have recently installed machines where a nickel is dropped into the slot and if the wheel turns in the proper place 50 cents or a $1 will fall out. This is the only class of machine against which the war is being waged, as the slot machines in which cigars are offered for prizes are not molested.

The X-Rays.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 24—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Power and prayer.—Acts i, 12 26; ii, 1-4, 41.

That there is an intimate relation between power and prayer cannot for a single moment be doubted or denied. The one that moves the world is the arm of God, and the human agency that reaches the arm of God is prayer. "Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you." Thus we have God's emphatic promise through His Son that He will answer prayer, and prayer thus becomes the means of our obtaining power from God.

The topical references in a striking manner illustrate the relation of power and prayer. In them we see the cause and the effect. Like links in a chain of consequences, they follow each other until their relation is manifest. They begin with prayer and end with power. "These [the apostles and the women] all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication," praying undoubtedly for the Holy Ghost, who had been promised. And as a result of their prayers, "when the day of Pentecost was fully come, * * * they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." Peter under the power of the Holy Spirit preached to the people, and "then they that gladly received his word were baptized, and the same day there were added unto them about 3,000 souls." Thus we have the story of the great Pentecostal revival: First, prayer; second, the Holy Ghost as a result of prayer; third, 3,000 conversions as a result of the presence and power of the Holy Ghost.

Power and prayer go together in our personal lives. If as individuals we want spiritual power—power with God, power with ourselves and power with others—it must be obtained at the throne of grace. Prayer was the secret of Jacob's power. Persistent and earnest in prayer, he would not let the angel of the Lord go without his blessing and receive the name of "Israel," for as a prince thou hast power with God and hast prevailed." Prayer was the secret of Elijah's power. By believing prayer he controlled the very elements, causing the rain to be sent or to be delayed. The Master Himself spent much time in prayer and especially when unusual manifestations of His power were desired. The throne of grace is our source of strength. If we would grow in grace, increase in love, resist all temptation and be of personal efficient service for Christ, we must spend much time in prayer.

Prayer and power are also associated in our church life. It was the church that prayed that received the Holy Ghost and power. The church's power today comes from the same source and in the same way. "It is not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts." And God's spirit, as on Pentecost, comes in answer to united, earnest prayer.

The "tour of the state" plan, which embraced an official visit to every county union in the state, was originated by Mr. Kinports.

Two Quiet Hour Thoughts.

Let us get away from the idea that the Quiet Hour is to fit us only for the other world. Let us rather think of it as a time to acquire power for the daily duties and ability for common service.—Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., at Troy Convention.

Untold possibilities of power lie open before us if by faith we appropriate the provision of our Savior, Jesus King to enter into habitual heart fellowship with Him in the secret of His presence.—David McConaughy.

A Missionary Revival.

The way to get a missionary revival is to have a revival here at home. President Harrison once said, "The greatest need of the foreign fields is a revivified, reconsecrated and unified home church." We are helping missions in a very real way when we do anything to revive our own church.

NOT TAXED FOR ELEVEN YEARS

Lehigh Valley Coal Yards at South Plainfield Overlooked by Township Assessor.

SUPPOSED STATE DID IT

Remarkable State of Affairs Alleged to Exist in Piscataway Township—Coal Plant Worth More Than All Rest of Township—Assessor Investigating.

A most peculiar state of affairs is said to have come to light in South Plainfield. The fact has developed recently that the extensive coal yards of the Lehigh Valley Coal and Navigation Company have escaped the eagle eye of the tax assessor for the past eleven years, an error of omission that has probably cost the tax payers of Piscataway township dear.

Enormous quantities of coal are stored in the yards of the company, and to state that the property is worth half a million dollars would probably not be an exaggeration of the fact. The yards are more valuable, it is said, than all the rest of the township combined, and had they been properly assessed the tax rate of the township for the last eleven years would have been out in half.

The mistake occurred probably from the belief of the local assessor that the State Board of Assessors was levying upon the property, whereas it did not come within the jurisdiction of the State board.

*Tax Assessor Bunting, of Piscata*way township, is investigating the matter. If he finds the conditions as stated, he will attempt to make the company pay all arrears for the entire period concerned.

MARRIED A SENATOR.

Widow of Elizabeth's Former Mayor Wedded at Home of Her Son in This City Last Night.

Mrs. W. A. M. Mack, widow of the former mayor of Elizabeth, was married last evening to United States Senator Wallace Orton Drake, of Florida, at the home of Mrs. Mack's son, LeRoy Mack, of 834 Third place. The wedding was a quiet one, only the im*mediate family of the bride being* present. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. John Ellson, pastor of the East Presbyterian church at Elizabeth.

Immediately after the ceremony had been performed Senator and Mrs. Drake left for New York where they will reside. Mrs. Mack has been a widow for two years.

FUNERAL OF R. W. SCHLERETH.

Services From West Second Street Home Last Evening.

Funeral services of Robert W. Schlereth were held at his late home on West Second street, last evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, conducted the exercises which were simple and impressive. The burial was this morning at Hillside cemetery. The bearers were Jacob Blimm, Jr., Herman Keller, Charles Debele, George Mehl, Jr., and the two nephews of the deceased, Robert O. Schlereth and George N. Schlereth. The floral tributes were exceptionally beautiful and included set pieces from many of the orders with which Mr. Schlereth was connected.

CONCLUDED SEASON.

Fortnightly Whist Club Held Last Meeting Until Fall.

The last meeting for the season of the Fortnightly Whist Club was held last evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hollingsworth, of West Fourth street, entertained. The full membership was present and all had a jolly good time. Miss Mary Griswold won the prize for the women, and H. H. Coward for the men. Frank H. Smith was presented with the third prize. After the play refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

The Waste of the Body.

Every seven days the blood, muscles and bones of a man of average size loses two pounds of wornout tissue. This waste cannot be replenished and the health and strength kept up without perfect digestion. When the stomach and digestive organs fail to perform their functions, the strength lets down, health gives way, and disease sets up. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure enables the stomach and digestive organs to digest and assimilate all of the wholesome food that may be eaten into the kind of blood that rebuilds the tissues and protects the health and strength of the mind and body. Kodol cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. It is an ideal spring tonic. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 24, "Attendance on the Means of Grace"—Text, Mark xii, 28-34.

"Not forsaking our own assembling together." Piety in isolation rarely makes a sturdy growth. Times of quiet are needed, to be sure, when the soul can be alone with God and think and feel the influence of the divine spirit in meditation and prayer. But the religious life is not best cultivated by this means only. The social element has large influence in the human life and cannot be neglected without serious loss.

In religious thought it is much the same as in other departments of human knowledge. There is great value in the interchange of opinion. No one knows it all. The ideas of others and their experiences often are most helpful in giving light on matters that had appeared dark to us. The stimulus to action is sensibly felt as we unite with others who have aims like our own. When our zeal lags and we grow tired of the monotony and routine of life, then the association with others gives fresh interest and zest as new phases of the work are brought out in their conversation and planning. The ability in suggestion and ingenuity in arranging how best to do the work come through consultation. It is not always what others have said that leads up to the new views, but as people talk our own thoughts are quickened to new activity and we have keener perception of moral and religious truth, and in surprising ways we find ourselves looking at matters from a new point of view. We see and feel differently. Suggestions come to new and original ways of working, new possibilities and propositions arise as we had not imagined possible when thinking by ourselves alone.

Then, again, we unconsciously forming estimates of other people, their character, ability, motives, worth and opinions in many varying shades and details. The more we think the more convinced we become that our estimates are accurate. When we meet others we can see their actions, hear their words and catch their inner spirit, we almost invariably correct our opinions and arrive at different conclusions. We need to see and study people at short range in prayer if we know and appreciate them. We also come to know ourselves better as we meet and talk with others. We inevitably compare ourselves in larner and outer life with them and change our ways of doing when we find others doing better than ourselves.

We arrive at broader conceptions of God and His kingdom; we get new ideas of our relation to Him and His work. Our duties and privileges take new shape and larger proportions as we find how others feel and think. God's grace becomes more precious as our horizons recede and our world grows. Hearts glow more fervently with devotion; fellowship with God and His children is richer and more precious. Surely if we are to grow in grace we must meet often with God's people!

Infinite Joy and Fruitfulness.

In every life that is opened up to the divine purpose God sows the seeds of infinite joy and fruitfulness. If care and sorrow make deep furrows, the seed falls into richer soil, and the harvest is the more abundant. God's gifts come under divine culture, but this is because they are sent to the very highest that is in us, and we must grow into their use before they reveal themselves. That which seems to hold us back from peace and joy is the very thing that makes it possible to attain these precious possessions. The bird would find his wings useless were there no resisting atmosphere to bear him in his heavenward flight, and the soul that had never known the throb of sorrow, the agony of conflict, the weariness of disappointment, would find its aspirations powerless to lift it upward. It is not strength of wing alone, but strength of wing and resistance of air, that makes possible the skyward flight. —Lyman Abbott, D. D.

The Wrong Thought.

It is not thought that is to be condemned as dangerous, but wrong thought. Many men get into trouble not because they think, but because they do not think far enough. It is this half way, superficial thinking that lands men in the network of superstition or in the dreary fog of agnosticism. We think clearly and logically to drink Godward. Reason does not lead to rationalism, but beyond rationalism, to the point whence faith completes the journey to the threnceroom of the Eternal.—Lutheran Observer.

The Needle and the Lightning.

Then note that this inward witness of Christ's depth and preciousness is the true weapon and stay against a hostile world. A little candle in a room will make the lightning outside almost invisible, and if I have burning in my heart the inward experience and conviction of what Jesus Christ is and what He has done and will do for me—oh, all the storm without will rage, and it will not trouble us.—Christian Endeavor World.

All to Thee.

God knows all and yet is the God of hope. Bless him that He was the Lord of Jacob and the Friend of Peter. He is my friend too. God is all to thee. If thou be hungry, He is bread; if thirsty, He is water; if in darkness, He is light; if naked, He is a robe of immortality.—St. Augustine.

The Need of Reverence.

Reverence is the soul of religion. When that is gone, there is little left with which God can be pleased. When nothing is sacred everything becomes common, even God himself.—Lutheran

CORNER STONE.

Nothing Done About Having Formal Exercises at the Borough Engine House.

There has been considerable talk in certain quarters lately regarding a corner stone to be laid when the foundation walls of the new engine house in the borough has been completed.

Chief J. J. Stahl, of the borough fire department, when asked by a reporter of this paper what there was in the reports circulated, said that while a corner stone laying was desired by some of the members of the two borough fire companies it has not taken any definite shape so far. He said that a suitable block of stone could be secured and used as a corner stone, but as to getting a fine granite block, such as has been suggested, he thought that it was merely talk so far.

A tablet will be placed in front of the building on which the year and the names of the chief engineer and assistant, the Mayor and the fire committee will be inscribed.

BLOWS RANGE TO FRAGMENTS

Explosion of "Water Back" at Home of M. H. Evart, Fairview Ave., Wrecks Kitchen.

ALL ESCAPE INJURY

Water Pipes Burst a Moment Later and Flood Kitchen and Cellar—Blazing Coals in Range Start Fire—Prompt Action by Mrs. Preble, Nurse.

Through the accumulation of lime in the pipes in the water heating compartment of a kitchen stove in the home of Matthew H. Evart, at 44 Fairview avenue, Wednesday afternoon, an explosion occurred which not only set fire to the kitchen but reduced the stove to a thousand bits of iron and wrecked the interior of the kitchen, narrowly escaping killing the cook and shaking the house to its foundations. Water and flood added terrors to the explosion and great excitement followed among the inmates of the house.

The accident happened at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon when the servants were finishing the ironing for the day. Mrs. Evart and her infant child, about three weeks old, were upstairs with Mrs. Caroline C. Preble, a trained nurse, when the entire block was thrown into a panic by the terrific noise. Mrs. Preble, with rare presence of mind, calmed the excited servants in the house and saw that her patients were taken to an adjoining house. She then returned to the house and assisted in putting out the fire which had ignited the flooring of the room in a hundred places where the burning coals from the stove had fallen.

While engaged at this work the water pipes burst in the boiler and water poured out into the room in great volumes. The water extinguished the flames in a few minutes and then soaked through to the cellar. Mrs. Preble started a search for the colored cook who had disappeared. At first it was thought that the unfortunate woman had been blown to atoms but after a search had been in progress for some time Miss Martha Johnson, cook, was found in the cellar shaking with fright and watching the rapidly rising flood.

Cheney, Mrs. Arthur Otterson, Mrs. Marburg Mellor, Mrs. James C. Peck, Miss Mary Martine, Mrs. J. Gilmore Drayton, Mrs. Middleton O'Malley Knott, of this city, and Mrs. Howard Otterhondt, of Utica, N. Y.

Secure Absolute Divorce.

An effort will be made to get other merchants, now keeping open late, to close early.

A Little Loss of flesh and strength, little barking, obstinate cough and a little pain in the chest may not mean galloping consumption, but they are signs that prudence will not neglect. A few doses of Allen's Lung Balsam cause a free discharge of mucus and so loosen the cough. In both the inflamed air passages and all its beneficent work is accomplished without a grain of opium.

STORY OF HER CAPTURE

MME. TSILKA TELLS OF HER MEMORABLE TRIP WITH MISS STONE.

How They Were Captured by Turkish Brigands—Talks at the Congregational Church.

At the Congregational church last Sunday, Mme. Tsilka, the famous Macedonian missionary whose capture by brigands last year with Miss Helen M. Stone caused such general interest and sympathy, recounted her adventures most interestingly before a congregation which crowded the church to the doors.

The well-known story of her capture, long imprisonment, sufferings and final ransom was made doubly thrilling by reason of the personal note with which she was able to invest it. The human note in all Mme. Tsilka's stories, told at first hand, of terrible cruelties practised towards Christians; of her own trials and anxieties; of the hardships she suffered together with Miss Stone; of the birth of her child and its softening influence upon her captors; and of her release; appealed strongly to the listeners. And through it all ran the lesson that this was for the Christian church and the broadening and deepening of its influence.

Mme. Tsilka's talk was of peculiar interest from the fact that members of the Congregational church have assisted her in her labors, and that, earlier in her life, she was closely associated with them and with Plainfield.

SEWING CIRCLE FAIR.

GAS IN A BLAZING ROOM

FOR SOME REASON IT FAILED TO IGNITE FROM LAMP OR BLAZE.

The Firemen Could Hardly Breathe When They Ventured Into Room to Extinguish the Flames.

What came near being a serious explosion with consequent loss to life and limb was narrowly averted last Sunday at the fire in the three story brick building owned by Frank H. Smith on 314 Park avenue. The blaze caught on the third floor in the rooms occupied by Raphael Zoppy, the Italian tailor.

When the firemen forced their way into the rooms, they noticed a peculiar odor and found it impossible to breath. After throwing open the windows, investigation showed that one of the blind cups of a gas pipe had been removed, and in addition a short section of the pipe itself had been unscrewed, thereby admitting an inch of gas forcing its way into the room in consequence. How the jet came to be removed and what was the immediate cause of ignition are not known. That there was no explosion, especially considering the fact that a lamp was brought into the room shortly after the discovery of the blaze, seems almost miraculous.

The chemical engine extinguished the flames. The damage amounted to about $100, the rooms being insured for $400. The alarm was from box 13, rung in at about 8:20 o'clock.

FLAMES ARE MASTER

Conditions In Adirondacks Are Very Much Worse.

FISHERS AND CAMPERS CARELESS.

One Fire Has Burned Over Six Miles of Territory, and Loss to Lumber Traders Has Been Very Serious.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., May 20.—Reports received at the offices of lumber companies here who are heavy Adirondack landholders say that the conditions throughout the woods is critical by reason of the extended drought. There is hardly a township in the heavily wooded sections of Warren, Hamilton and Essex but that is ablaze. The state is a heavier loser than the lumber companies, for the reason that the latter's fire fighting force is better organized. The fire wardens are heavily handicapped in securing men.

A large portion of the population of the woods where the fires are burning the fiercest is a roving one, and as the money to pay for fighting fire is not available until next February it is difficult to secure the force that is needed, and in many instances the wardens make but little effort to stop the fires. One of the worst fires that has been reported so far this season started on Baird mountain northeast of Luzerne and has already burned over a track of country six miles long and a mile wide. Fire wardens of the towns are directing the fight, but it has passed practically out of their control.

George R. Finch of Finch, Pruin & Co., who are one of the heaviest holders in Adirondack lands, says that fishermen and campers are responsible for half of the fires that devastate the north woods yearly. "It takes an expert to put out a camp fire in the woods," said Mr. Finch. "The ground is covered with a thick blanket of decayed vegetation that resembles punk. A man may think his camp fire is out, and a few days later it will work up perhaps a couple of hundred yards from the place where it started."

The Hudson river is the lowest that it has been in years. A half dozen of the big lumber drives are hung up on the shoals between the Boreas river and Glens Falls. The supply of logs in the big boom which is used as storage for the lumber and paper companies is low, and unless the drought is soon ended the paper and lumber mills will be seriously handicapped in their operations.

The Drought In New York State.

KINGSTON, N. Y., May 20.—Tuesday was the warmest day known here at this season in many years, the thermometer registering 95 in the shade. Farmers and fruit growers are complaining of the weather. All crops are greatly retarded, and without rain soon the loss will be heavy. The dry weather has caused many forest fires which have driven many snakes out of the brush. In some instances they have taken refuge in farmers' houses.

Thirty Fires In Maine Woods.

AUGUSTA, Me., May 20.—Forest Commissioner Ring, just returned from a trip to the northern part of the state, reports that there are thirty different forest fires now in progress in the Maine woods, extending from Oxford county to the St. John river. The woods are extremely dry, and the danger of additional fires is growing more serious each day. Vast areas of timber lands have been burned over.

Accident Was Due to Liquor.

MONCTON, N. B., May 20.—The government has dismissed Engineer Nelson Copeland, a conductor, and another employee of the Intercolonial railway, as they were largely responsible for the collision between Copeland's train, a fast freight, and a Canadian Pacific express at Winslow Junction. In the wreck half a dozen persons were killed, a dozen injured and twenty-five cars destroyed. The official investigation attributes the mistake to the use of intoxicating liquor, and it is understood prosecution against Copeland has been ordered.

New Bedford City Hall a Refuge.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., May 20.—The New Bedford city hall was converted to one of the strangest uses in its whole history when its doors were opened to receive 400 Boer immigrants from the bark Vera Cruz VII., which went ashore at Ocracoke inlet. The immigrants arrived here from Newbern, N. C., in a special train and were transported in barges to the city hall, there to be held until relatives or friends come forward with assurances that they will not become public charges.

Cincinnati Track Opens Today.

CINCINNATI, O., May 20.—The prospects are most flattering for a fine day and a fast track for the opening of the spring meeting of the Latonia Jockey club today. The Derby, at a mile and a half, will be the feature of the card. There will be nine starters, the largest field in years, with Bad News the most fancied by the talent. Judge Hines and Tancred are next in choice. The meeting will last sixteen days.

Atlantic Wreck Recalled.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., May 20.—Gordon Cassidy, one of the few survivors of the steamship Atlantic, wrecked on Meagher rock, Nova Scotia, in 1873, when upward of 500 perished, has just died in the insane asylum here.

First Boat For Alaska.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 20.—The steamship Portland has put to sea for Nome, being the first boat of the season to carry passengers north.

VETERANS REUNITE

Great Gathering of Ex-Confederates at New Orleans.

A NOTABLE SPEECH BY GORDON.

Commander in Chief In Opening Address Says the Day of Bitterness and Animosity Has Ended Forever.

NEW ORLEANS, May 20.—The United Confederate Veterans opened their thirteenth annual reunion under the most favorable auspices. The great auditorium erected in the center of the race track at the fair grounds was filled with a cheering, enthusiastic multitude long before the hour set for the formal opening, and when at noon General J. B. Levert, commanding the Louisiana division, called the convention to order there was not a vacant seat in the hall, which easily holds 10,000 people.

As the commander in chief of the Veterans, General John B. Gordon, came to the front of the rostrum the delegates rose en masse and gave him cheer after cheer. The general repeatedly bowed his acknowledgments of the loyal and affectionate greeting and when the tumult had subsided he replied as follows:

"To my thought it is most fitting that this proud and patriotic organization should again meet in this historic city which gave it birth. The meeting of such men as you welcome today, whose past deeds will remain forever an inspiration to American valor and to future sacrifices for constitutional freedom, is an auspicious event in the country's history whenever and wherever it may occur, but how peculiarly inspiring is this reunion in Louisiana on this one hundredth anniversary of her new birth into governmental alliance with American states!

"A Roman eye would have discovered in a meeting of such men at such time an omen of good to the cause of liberty, and American eyes should see in it nothing but good to the whole republic. It must of necessity be benefi cent and only beneficent. We will not indulge on this centennial, this political millennial morning, nor at other times, in any bitterness. We feel none. We pity those who do. We have long since drawn the curtain of oblivion over the regretful and unseemly things of the past, and we cherish as Americans the valor and noble deeds of both armies and of all sections. We are satisfied with our record, and the power that would attempt to make us blush for it would be both stupid and blind.

"We are heirs, joint heirs, with the republic's children in the inheritance of freedom left by our sires. We are proud of all the past. Moreover, we are now facing a future pregnant with tremendous possibilities, but we face it with a strength of hope and assurance borne of an unswerving purpose to discharge our every duty to all races and to the whole country. We are growing old, but we still stand firmly on the narrow strip of land which separates us from a boundless ocean."

To Remove Patrick Henry's Body.

RICHMOND, Va., May 20.—A strong movement has begun in Richmond for the removal of the body of Patrick Henry from its present grave in Charlotte county to St. John's church yard in this city and the erection of a marble mausoleum to the memory of orator and leader of the Revolution. It was in St. John's church that Henry made his famous speech ending, "Give me liberty or give me death."

Little Bay, N. F., Devastated.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., May 20.—Fire has devastated the mining town of Little Bay, where a large copper mine is being worked. Two hundred and fifty persons are homeless, and relief is being forwarded by the authorities.

UNUSUAL HONOR.

Won by Art Work of Miss Caroline M. Hall at Paris.

Miss Caroline Minturn Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Prescott Hall, of this city, has just won the first prize for drawing, a silver medal, at the Delecluse Academy in Paris. Miss Hall is treasurer and secretary of the American Woman's Art Association of Paris. Her work was shown at the exhibition of this society, held recently in Paris, and the New York Herald (Paris edition) spoke thus of it:

HAS BEEN WORKING TWENTY-EIGHT YEARS

Anniversary of Ladies' Christian Work Society Observed at Trinity Ref. Church.

REPORTS WERE READ

SHOWED THE SOCIETY TO BE IN A FLOURISHING CONDITION.

Address of Evening Made by Rev. Mr. Barney, Returned Missionary From Arabia—He Told of the Work Done There.

The twenty-eighth anniversary of the Ladies' Christian Work Society, of Trinity Reformed church, was appropriately observed at the service in the church, Sunday evening.

The reports of the secretary, Mrs. T. R. VanZands, and the treasurer, Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., were read by Robert Clark, Jr. The secretary's report showed that there are fifty-four active and ten honorary members. Ten meetings were held during the year with an average attendance of twenty-five. The missionary committee collected $74.20 during the year which was equally divided between the Foreign and Domestic Boards. There were special offerings for Indian Missions, Arabian Hospital Society, Mountain Whiter, Student Volunteers, Arapahoe parsonage, Oklahoma and the W. C. T. U. Clothing and other donations were made to the Schofield School in South Carolina and a pledge of $10 a year for five years to help support a missionary in India, has been kept, making a total for all missionary purposes during the year of $208.87. The society also sent clothing to the various mission fields. The Needlework Guild received twenty-two articles and the visiting committee made 139 calls during the year.

The reports of the committee realized $36.26 from a "shoe social." In place of the usual January turkey supper, which was abandoned on account of the Westfield disaster, the society collected $93.38. At a tea given by the missionary league in the church parlor $5.72 was received. During the year two new members were added to the society roll.

The report of the treasurer showed the receipts for the missionary fund to be $90.20 and the expenditures the same. In the general fund there was a balance of $55.56 at the last report and the receipts for the year were $223.33. The expenditures were $196.06, leaving a balance of $97.27. This was divided as follows: Pastor's gown fund, $61.26; balance in general fund, $36.01.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor, congratulated the society on its excellent achievements during the year.

Following these remarks there was a selection by Miss Derby, Miss Clark and J. C. Martin, of the quartette choir, and Miss Derby sang the offertory selection, all of which was well given.

The address of the evening was made by Rev. Mr. Barney, returned missionary from Arabia, who told briefly of the work he is doing in that far off land. During the course of his remarks he attired himself in the native costume. His remarks were of an encouraging nature and he told of the success of the work as well as the discouragements.

MORE PROOF IN ANALYSIS

Daily Press' Statements Substantiated by Analysis Made by H. P. Reynolds.

REGARDING THE DRAIN

Former Mayor Wm. L. Saunders Took Sample and Had Analysis Made—Sent Same to Board With Pertinent Letter—What Board Claims.

Considerable interest has been taken in the facts made public in The Daily Press several weeks ago concerning the existence of a drain on the lowlands in the rear of the residence of E. S. Hooley, of Rockview avenue. Although the North Plainfield Board of Health did not appear to give credence to the facts, as told in The Daily Press, that an ill-smelling liquid resembling sewerage flowed from it, many boroughites were impressed with the reliability of the statements made in The Daily Press. As a result, the Board of Health has received several communications from residents of that portion of the borough relative to the subject.

Of particular importance was the communication of Former Mayor William L. Saunders, a resident of the borough for many years and one who has shown himself particularly interested in its welfare. Finding no facts to substantiate the flat denials of the board, he has investigated a little on his own account in order to ascertain just how near right the claims of The Daily Press were. Securing a sample of the liquid from the drain in question one day when the catch basin and the stream about it were perfectly dry, and had been for some time, Mr. Saunders submitted it to H. P. Reynolds, of Washington avenue, whose ability as a chemist is unquestioned. This sample was analysed by Mr. Reynolds and the following report made:

Report Upon Sample of Water Received From W. L. Saunder, Esq., May 9, 1903.

The sample was delivered in an ordinary dark wine bottle having a cork stopper.

A portion of the water was set aside in a test-tube for examination as to physical characteristics and general appearance; and thus noted, was seen to be quite turbid with ropy and flocculent matter, and of a grayish-green cast. After standing quietly twenty-four hours, the body of this sample became almost clear, bearing at the surface a considerable "scum," shown by its low specific gravity and its (so-called) "greasy" appearance, to be of animal and vegetable origin. At the bottom of the glass was found a sediment of moderate amount, consisting of earthy and silicious particles, such as may occur in water from any natural source. The "scum" first mentioned, however, is significant of actual foulness, consisting of insoluble foreign substance of wholly organic derivation, which might be closely determined by microscopic examination, if that be desired.

Chemical Examination.

The following chemical tests were applied: (The test an oxidising agent).

First—For miscellaneous organic matter:

The reaction was prompt and emphatic, showing a very large proportion of organic matter of both animal and vegetable origin, a proportion far in excess of that which may be found in water from natural sources, such as springs or streams other than those contaminated by sewage or similar waste discharges (or even in pond or still water).

Second—For ammonia: Again the reaction was almost immediate; ammonia—free and combined—being present in abundance. (The test sol. was iodo-mercurial "Nessler's").

Third—For nitrites: As before, the result was decisive and showed a large percentage of nitrogen derivatives.

Fourth—For chlorides and chlorine derivatives: (The Chromo - Silver Test): This reaction was chemically interesting because of its energy, demonstrating the presence of chlorine compounds in quite unusual proportions, such as might be due to the admixture of urine or other excrement carrying chlorine salts.

It was thought unnecessary to apply further tests, since those described above, taken together with the physical characteristics first noted, plainly indicate a kind and degree of contamination that can hardly be accounted for otherwise than by the presence of animal excrement.

The inflow and accumulation of such water would soon render a quiet pond a public nuisance and danger; while its effect in a running stream would be injurious only in less degree.

Very respectfully yours,
(Signed) Howard P. Reynolds.

A copy of this report was sent to Andrew Love, president of the Borough Board of Health, with the accompanying letter:

North Plainfield, N. J.,
May 19, 1903.

The Board of Health,
Mr. Andrew Love, Sr., Pres.,
North Plainfield, N. J.

Dear Sirs:—I have noted with interest the recent newspaper controversy involving the action of the Board of Health in respect to the discharge of noxious matter into Stony brook. This brook being entirely within the limits of the borough is subject, so far as its contamination is concerned, to the control of the local Board of Health. The water has been supposed to be potable, and as it passes through considerable pasture land the cows drink it and at times in the summer it serves as a bathing pool for children. Edwin S. Hooley recently called my attention to two conduits above my property through which liquid matter was being discharged into the brook. Your attention was evidently called to the case, as I notice in the newspapers that you visited the points referred to and communicated with the newspapers in respect to the matter, claiming, as I understand it, that nothing hurtful was discharged through these pipes, and seeking to defend yourselves against the charge of neleet. I am not aware of the fact that you have taken any steps to analyze this discharge, but that you apparently satisfied your own minds by a personal inspection. The published report of your conclusions seemed to me to be so incongruous and at variance with the facts that I have taken upon myself the duty of having this liquid discharge analyzed. You are credited in the newspapers with saying that the large pipe in the McCutchen lot discharges only street surface water and that from your personal inspection you find nothing obnoxious about it. I find the facts quite to the contrary. The discharge in the McCutchen lot is obnoxious to the smell, is apparently foul to the sight, and when looking into the orifice of the pipe the effect is quite the same as that when looking into a common cesspool. Furthermore there has not been a rain in the borough of North Plainfield for some weeks and yet there is a discharge from this pipe amounting to apparently one gallon per minute. On May 9 last, a clear, dry day, with no water in the streets, I collected some of this liquid in a clean bottle and requested Dr. Reynolds to analyze it for me. He has done so and his report you will please find herewith enclosed. Dr. Reynolds in his letter to me accompanying this report uses the following words:

"Your sample of May 9 is such as might be expected if taken from the outflow of a common sewer pipe under common conditions."

You, gentlemen, are charged with the responsibility of the health of this borough, a more serious duty than that which rests upon the shoulders of any other official Through your neglect human lives might be sacrificed. In the summer of the year 1899 my cow pastured in this McCutchen lot and I was stricken with typhoid fever. That you should permit a discharge of sewage matter to be led through a street drain into Stony brook within the borough limits, and that after visiting the spot you should take no action to stop it, and, as far as I know, make no analysis of the discharge, but that you should indulge in newspaper controversies, attacking a neighboring city which is seeking to provide health and prosperity to its people by a system of sewers; that you should stand before the public as experts in reference to what the city of Plainfield discharges into Green brook, when right here at our doors Dr. Reynolds' analysis proves that there is being discharged into Stony brook that which "might be expected if taken from the outflow of a common sewer pipe," all this forms an impeachment of your fitness to hold the office of custodian of the public health.

Yours truly,
(Signed) W. L. Saunders.

Mr. Love, president of the board, and Dr. W. M. Honeyman, secretary of it, were interviewed by a Press reporter concerning the report and the letters they had received regarding the subject. They did not care to give out these communications at the present time. Dr. Honeyman explained that they had taken a sample of the

ARMED WITH PENKNIFE FACED THE MONSTER

Thrilling Experience of Three Plainfield Fishermen With a Live Bear.

IN A TROUT STREAM

BUT THE ANIMAL FINALLY DEPARTED WITHOUT EATING THEM.

Plainfielders Were Fishing in the Neighborhood of Deansing, Ulster County, New York—Fred Sandford Saved the Day.

It is seldom that Plainfielders ever encounter a real live bear in their travels, but such an experience of three men from this city will linger quite long in their memory as the most exciting in their short lives. Three men—Fred Sandford, Fred Metcalf and J. A. Staats, all true followers of Izaak Walton, left Plainfield Sunday night, May 17, for an outing at a place called Deansing, Ulster county, New York. The place is thirty-five miles inland from the station on the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad, and the country is very wild and rugged. The trio found a genial host in Joseph H. Erne, who keeps a hotel and who is an expert guide for trout fishermen.

After fishing on Tuesday and Wednesday with great success, the party catching many speckled beauties, the members started out Thursday morning for a beautiful trout stream at the foot of Slide Mountain, located on the east branch of the Navesink. After arriving at their destination the party commenced fishing. The trio, with Mr. Metcalf in the lead, started down stream. They had gone but a short distance, when the advance guard returned at a two-forty gait. His eyes were as large as saucers and he was waving his hands hysterically.

"By the great horn spoon," said Mr. Staats, "what is the trouble?"

"For gracious sake," replied Mr. Metcalf, "get out of the stream." Just at that moment the three looked up and there sat a large bear quietly resting himself on a stump. Mr. Metcalf and Mr. Staats wanted to come home right away. They could feel their hair gradually ascending, while they were not quite sure that they were standing on their feet or their heads. Mr. Sandford, who has frequently met bears, used his utmost powers to calm his colleagues, but it was all he could do to persuade them to remain. The point of vantage occupied by the bear had to be passed and the stream was so rapid that to turn back was impossible.

It was finally agreed that Mr. Sandford should take the lead for the others knew that if Bruno should swallow him up he would certainly have a square meal for one day, at least. Mr. Sandford very boldly advanced and in deep tones gave a call which would frighten most any sort of a wild animal. The bear recognizing his peril took to the woods and disappeared. It was some time afterward when the fears of the members of the party were quieted and they were willing to continue fishing. The woods at that point are frequented by deer and the slightest rustle or crackling of wood caused a return of genuine fear.

The party's only weapon of defence was a small jack-knife and the thoughts of a tussel with live bears were anything but pleasant. Both Mr. Metcalf and Mr. Staats admitted that they had experienced enough of Slide Mountain for one season, and when Mr. Staats was called home on account of business, the other members of the party sought more quiet quarters at DeBruce, Sullivan county, where they are still angling for the wily trout.

Mr. Staats returned home Saturday evening, well posted on the subject of bear and how to escape them. It might be well to add that the country visited by the trio is known for bear, these animals being attracted to the maple sugar camps. They are quite tame and are seldom known to trouble any one.

ERNER DENIES KILLING DRIFF

The Defendant in Somerset County Murder Trial Goes on the Witness Stand.

TELLS STRAIGHT STORY

Claims He Was Home and Asleep When Murder Was Committed—Michael Wiss, Who Claimed to Have Seen Murder, Is Under Cross-Examination.

Somerville, May 27—Michael Wiss, the star witness for the State in the trial of Joseph Erner for the murder of John Driff at Bound Brook on December 25 last, was put on the rack for about two hours yesterday morning by Nelson Y. Dungan, counsel for the defense, and the witness was forced to admit that what he had told the lawyers shortly after the crime was committed was partly false. Wiss said he had at that time made the statements he did then for a purpose and that no one coached him so to do. He declared the story that he had just told on the stand about seeing Erner strike Drift and the latter falling was perfectly true. "I am telling the truth now," he asserted.

As Wiss and many of his ilk could not understand English, an interpreter was used and Edwin Seil was selected to do the work. Both the State and defense became suspicious about the putting of the questions and soon each had interpreters of their own to watch the proceedings.

The case is a long-drawn out one, but is being done in apple-pie order. There are six or eight stenographers and typewriters and as soon as several pages of evidence are taken they are translated and typewritten so that the justice and lawyers on both sides can have them for reference.

Joseph Bellisle, who is employed as a trackwalker by the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Bound Brook told of his starting to walk as usual on Christmas morning last at 5 o'clock. He went past Joseph Erner's house and saw a man lying on the sidewalk. He went to Erner's and woke him up. They took a lamp and went out to see the man. When the light was reflected in his face Erner at once said: "John Driff is killed." They then stood about fifteen inches away from the body. He told Erner to notify Driff's friends. Erner did not display any particular emotion.

County Detective Totten, who arrested Erner, testified that when he was at Bound Brook trying to get a clue as to the murder and was working up the case Erner followed him all around. He could not keep out of Erner's sight so vigilant was Erner's watchfulness.

Several other witnesses then gave testimony of a more or less important nature and at about noon yesterday the State rested its case.

Mr. Dungan then opened his side, the defense. He related the facts about the crime being committed, told where the man had been found, etc. He said he did not mean to deny that Erner had shown much sentiment at Driff's funeral. That was no more than natural since they had been close friends and Driff was Erner's godfather.

Joseph Erner then took the witness chair in his own behalf. Erner, unlike a good many of his countrymen, could speak the English language fluently, and he made a capital witness. He told a straightforward story of his doings on the night in question, and it is the opinion of many that he cut a big swath for himself.

He testified that he had been in this country twenty-one years. On Christmas eve last he was at Stavish's saloon in company of John Driff and a number of his friends. He had a merry battle with Valedgas Zelakoski over their respective incomes, but did not strike him. Zelakoski started to leave the house and pinched his finger in the crack of the door. Later on the men all met at Faszkas and having heard that Zelakoski was blaming him for his injured digit he approached him about the matter, but they did not quarrel. The whole crowd had a good time, after which Erner alleged that he went home and went to bed. He did not know anything about Driff being dead until he was called out of bed and told of the affair.

The prisoner broke down in tone the story Wiss told about his striking Driff with the club, which he said he had never seen until after the body was found.

Erner was not troubled much by the cross-examination.

Several other witnesses were examined and then court closed for the day.

ANNUAL RECEPTION OF MISS JACKSON'S CLASS

Clever Programme Presented at the Casino Before Audience of Parents and Friends.

WERE WELL PLEASED

PROGRAMME INCLUDED DRILLS, RECITATIONS, SKETCHES AND FARCE.

Those Who Took Part in the Several Numbers on the Programme—A Gift to Miss Jackson From Members of Her Classes.

Miss Addie Parker Jackson' s classes in physical culture and rendering gave a reception last Tuesday at the Casino, manifesting a high degree of skill both in elocution and calisthenics. The programme consisted of drills, monologues, recitations, character sketches and a cleverly enacted farce. The hall at the Casino was crowded.

The first number on the list was a flower drill, "Spring Garlands," a most fascinating set of exercises, performed by fourteen beautifully costumed, rose-garlanded young women as follows: The Misses Lucie Bedlong, Gertrude Abbott, Aimee Conant, Fannie Carr, Ella Case, Hazel Grant, Anna Conant, Alice Conant, Janet Carter, Mildred Spicer, Dorothy Hoar, Gladys Biglow, Helen Adams and Stephanie Krom. Following this, a series of five physical culture drills illustrated correct methods of carrying and developing the body. The exercises were performed with an easy grace that attested a careful training. They were led by the Misses Carolyn Wells and Marion Taylor, and Edward Abbott, Charles Orth and Arthur Robinson.

Miss Hazel Grant's monologue, "A Musicale," revealed no little talent on the part of the performer and was received with much approval. Miss Fannie Carr recited "The Family Clock" and won deserved applause. Miss Gladys Biglow had an excellent opportunity for displaying her histrionic ability in a monologue entitled "A Before Dinner Scene at the House of the Montagues," and she used it to the best advantage.

The Misses Helen Robinson and Janet Carter recited entertaining numbers with an eye to their dramatic possibilities, and Arthur Robinson's monologue was delivered with a skillful touch that proclaimed him a ready pupil. The first half of the programme was brought to a close by a charmingly rendered musical recitation, "3 Dreams," by Miss Stephanie Krom.

An amusing monologue, "Bargain Day in a Modern Department Store" by Miss Alice Conant opened the second part of the entertainment, and the clever presentation was thoroughly appreciated. "The Queen of Fairyland" was beautifully pictured by Miss Marian Robinson, and "The Book Canvasser," a monologue by Miss Anna L. Conant, elicited shouts of laughter. Two delightful character parts were taken by the Misses Ella Case and Mildred Spicer. The last selection on the list was a farce with a number of laughable situations entered in a fashionable boarding school near New York City. The performers, etc. He said he did not mean to deny considering their youth, did remarkable work. The characters were taken by the following: Misses Helen Adams, Margery Dohrman, Marion Taylor, Gertrude Abbott, Aimee Conant and Dorothy Hoar, and Masters Edward Abbott and Charles Orth. Miss Louise Davis was the accompanist and the ushers were Gordon Abbott, William Schoonmaker, Harold Dollner and Lucius H. Biglow, 3d.

Following the performance, Miss Jackson was presented with a large and beautiful painting of a Venetian scene, contributed by the pupils. The presentation speech was made by Miss Stephanie Krom and Miss Jackson, in reply expressed her gratitude in a charming speech.

FISTS VERSUS STILETTO

UNSEEMLY FRACAS WHICH ENDED IN ARREST OF TWO.

Michael Readington and Tony Barletto Arraigned in City Court Yesterday.

Michael Readington and Tony Barletto, representatives respectively of Erin and the land of sunshine and stilettoes, engaged in an unseemly fracas last Tuesday at 6:10 o'clock, which resulted in Tony's knifing the Irishman in the jaw. The men were waiting for a car at the end of the Plainfield trolley line just this side of Dunellen. Mike said that he remonstrated with the Italian for stepping upon his toe. Tony asserted through the interpreter that Readington annoyed him persistently without cause, and the rest of the testimony bore out the truth of Tony's words. City Judge Runyon charged Barletto $3 for carrying concealed weapons, the Italian preferring this to laying off for ten days in jail. Readington, found guilty of being drunk and disorderly, couldn't produce $10 and was remanded to the county jail for twenty days.

Santillo Ballerello paid the court $3 for surreptitiously abstracting a bag of coal from a freight car. Sergeant Frederickson discovered the man.

TO SPRINKLE THE STREETS

THE STREET COMMITTEE DECIDES TO START WORK JULY 1.

Will Purchase Six Wagons and Cover as Much Territory as Possible.

Municipal street sprinkling will soon be a fact. At a meeting of the street committee from the Common Council, last Tuesday, it was decided to buy six Studebaker sprinkling carts at an expense of $235 each and it is believed that the sprinkling will be started by July 1. The committee will hire teams and drivers to do the work.

It is the purpose of the committee to cover as much territory as possible with the six wagons and there will be no discrimination in the work, that is the fashionable part of the city will not be treated any better than other portions. In arriving at the above decision, the committee considered the question of preserving the streets and this, together with the question of general health, entered largely into the matter of sprinkling by the city.

MANY PRIZES.

Seventy-Eight Contested for at Big Euchre of St. Joseph's Church Tuesday Evening.

Seventy-eight prizes were won last Tuesday at the euchre given by the members of the St. Joseph's R. C. church in Saengerbund Hall. The euchre was very successful, there being 400 people present and the church will clear as a result over $300. The principal prize winners were Mrs. Robert Green, John P. Owens, Miss Mamie Callahan and John Fitzpatrick. The consolation prizes were won by William Hammond and Miss Catherine Daly.

Charles Sehr's full orchestra provided the music for dancing which followed the card playing and refreshments were served. The committee, A. E. LaPorte, chairman, assisted by the members of the choir and ushers as follows: James F. Daly, William Daly, James Hurley, William and John McCullough, J. E Bailey, Jerry Callahan, Miss Tina Smith, Miss Helen Gill, Miss Kate Duffey, Misses Mary and Katherine Leahey, Miss Agnes Bailley and Mrs. Lillian Staff.

WOULDN'T LEAVE.

Spirit Level, It Is Said, Was Used With Effect on John Leahy by D. J. Galbraith.

John Leahy is nursing a badly injured head because he refused to go out of the store of Daniel J. Galbraith Tuesday when ordered. Leahy, it is said, demanded back wages which he claimed were due him. An argument followed. Galbraith finally telling Leahy to leave the store. When the latter declined, Galbraith, it is alleged, struck him over the head with a spirit level and inflicted a severe scalp wound.

Justice Hand heard the case this morning, and held Galbraith in $100 bonds to await action by the Grand Jury. Galbraith was his own bondsman. S. S. Sprackhamer appeared for the plaintiff.

BULLET ENDS LITTLE LIFE

Theresea Watson Finally Succumbs at Muhlenberg Hospital to Fatal Injuries.

SHE DIES AT MIDNIGHT

Hazardous Operation Performed As Only Possible Means of Saving Her Life—Her Father Reaches Bedside in Time to Say Good-Bye—The Details.

Neither skilled medical attendance nor the careful work of the surgeon could save the life of little Theresea Watson who all day Tuesday lay at Muhlenberg Hospital struggling for life against great odds. She is the little girl who was shot in the abdomen by Willis James while tramping through the woods Monday morning. Physicians held out little hope of saving the little one's life as the child had almost bled to death internally before she reached the hospital. The little spark of life that yet remained when her father was called out of his bed late Tuesday sufficed to give her strength to smile at her parent ere she closed her eyelids in the sleep that brings eternal rest. The end came at 11:45 Tuesday evening.

The operation, which was performed by Drs. Buchanan and Endicott, assisted by Dr. Pittis, was done only as a last resort. The physicians saw that there had been eleven perforations in the intestines which could be reached to be sewed. After penetrating the intestines the bullet found lodgement in the lower part of the abdomen. Owing to her condition when she was placed under the influence of anaesthetics it was almost certain that operation would be unsuccessful in saving her life but it was one chance in a thousand against certain death and the skillful surgeons took that chance. Tuesday the child rested very comfortably but at about 9 o'clock she began to fail. As a last resort a saline composition was injected into the veins but death conquered at last just after the father arrived at the bed side.

The funeral will be held Friday morning at 8:30 o'clock from the house and at 9 o'clock from St. Joseph's church where Rev. Father Miller will officiate. The pallbearers will be little playmates of the dead child: Joseph Neuman, Vincent Meaney, Frank Casline and Christopher Mobus.

PIANO RECITAL.

Given by Pupils of Miss Minnie S. Marsh at Her Madison Avenue Home.

A piano recital given by the pupils of Miss Minnie S. Marsh at her home, 915 Madison avenue, Tuesday afternoon, attracted a large number of guests, including the parents and friends of the pupils. The programme as one of special merit and the performance of the pupils called forth hearty applause, while Miss Marsh received many flattering compliments for her excellent work with the young people.

Special mention should be made of a piano solo by Miss Baldee Mae Howell and a duet by Miss Howell and Miss Marian H. McCutcheon. Miss Howell was a former pupil of Miss Marsh and her work yesterday was of the highest order.

The pupils who appeared on the programme were the Misses Anna Scott Yerkes, Madeline Read, Katherine H. McCutcheon, Alice Elizabeth McGee, Gladys Peck, Marguerite Lee, May F. Cogan, Margaret Townsend, Marian H. McCutcheon, Helen W. Stevens and George B. Yerkes.

Must Obey the Law.

Spencer Conway violated the health ordinance yesterday by allowing his driver to dump a load of refuse in Martine's dump. City Judge Runyon read him a warning this morning in court.

—The regular monthly business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church will be held this evening at the close of the prayer meeting. All members are urged to be present.

WHAT IS WORN.

Afternoon Frocks of Muslin—Attempt to Revive the Bonnet.

A fascinating little afternoon frock seen recently was of pompadour muslin on a ground-work of pale green. It had a layer of pale green chiffon underneath over a foundation of still deeper green silk. This skirt was finished with a deep hem and no flounces, but was caught up slightly on the hips with some suggestion of fullness which reminded one of a pannier. It was cut slightly decollete at the neck with a vest of point d'alencon and a fichu of net edged with same lace. The sleeves were fairly tight to the elbow, whence came a deep turned back gauntlet of lace. With this were worn a pointed band of narrow black velvet and an odd enameled clasp.

There is an effort made to revive the bonnet, but this is not proving popular, because no woman can afford to add years to her age, and this is the effect even of the prettiest bonnet.

For young girls there are dainty ball gowns of white china silk made up with shirrings and gaugings to give curves to the otherwise angular forms of many debutantes.

The rage is all for beige colored costumes with a pelerine covered with coarse guipure dyed to match.

The tailor made of the summer will clear the ground and will be made in fancy soft effects such as blouses with tucks and collars of embroidery. One of these suits seen recently was of deep blue cheviot trimmed with a collar of Persian work in red, blue and yellow. The sleeves and body were tucked and the skirt was made into a yoke with a becoming plaited flare.

Linens of all kinds are much used with macrame lace or coarse embroidery.

Abroad they are very enthusiastic over the sun plaited skirt, which looks charming with a big collar and a blouse bodice.

The illustration shows a coffee coat of cream lace over pale blue chiffon.

SMART WRAPS.

Pelerines and Shawl Shaped Collars of Silk and Lace.

The pelerine is a decorative feature which forms a useful adjunct to summer frocks. This can be made by the amateur who has only to arrange a fichu-like piece composed of a lace foundation with loops of wide pompadour taffeta ribbon edged with black, finished with stole-like ends of lace and taffeta, clasping them at the waist with an odd buckle.

Shawl shaped collars are much in vogue. Those people who possess by nature sloping shoulders should square the sleeves beneath these collars. The cunning of tailors and dressmakers nowadays makes these things easy.

Some charming afternoon gowns are made in spotted voile. Very smart was one in a dull shade of red with a great silk spot thereon, the bodice finished with a shawl-like collar of Irish crochet lace held together with red and gray taffeta strappings and tiny tags.

Muslins and painted chiffons will be much used for dainty evening gowns. Besides in the new silky weaves are used and mingled with lace appliques and embroideries.

The cut shows a pretty fancy blouse of china silk and lace. It buttons down the back.

DAINTY EFFECTS.

Louis XVI. Styles Popular In This Summer Gowns.

Shadowy effects are much sought after, these being frequently obtained by means of china silks veiled in transparencies, or a more emphatically patterned muslin will be tempered by a similar veiling.

The prevailing styles tend toward the Louis XVI. order with draped flounces and twisted garlands of ribbon. The corsage is principally fichu and a deep pointed corselet.

Scotch straw is the leading millinery fad of the moment. This, as its name implies, is plaided with a predominating tone of blue, green or red, intermingled with a dozen secondary shades. The straw is treated with exceptional lightness and, on close inspection, reveals a series of tiny loops, while the arrangement of the many colors is very tasteful.

Fuchsia flowers and fuchsia shades are all the vogue and are seen both on gowns and on hats.

The straight front corset still prevails, worn looser than ever. It is made in as many instances as possible of fine, flexible material.

A chic gown of dotted veiling is shown in the illustration. It is of deep red over silk of a lighter shade.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR STREET WEAR.

The Kilted Skirt—Grass Lawn Is Being Revived.

The kilted skirt is rapidly gaining ground, especially in figured fabrics, and linens, both plain and spotted, is extremely effective when treated in this wise.

Grass lawn is also being revived. Last season an effort was made to put it in vogue, but it never succeeded. Now, however, Parisians have copied all sorts of beautiful oriental embroideries on grass lawn foundations, and this relief to the somewhat somber hues of the latter fabric has produced the desired smart effect. Grass lawn trimmed with eastern embroideries will therefore be a decided feature of the season.

Taffeta tags and bobs are also much used in close proximity to the old fashioned silken chenille fringe. In fact, trimmings alone offer a fair field to the amateur.

There is a distinct fancy for hems of embroidery on frocks—that is to say, embroidery bought by the yard or woven into the material.

Hats with cherries are very smart when the straw is of a light cream color.

Many hats are trimmed only on the underside.

The flat sailor trimmed with wings laid on flat or loops of ribbon brought up from under the brim is always smart and in good taste. Such hats are prettiest in pure white, with an edge of color in velvet.

The little toque bearing the single aigret is seen so much on all sides that it has fallen from popularity with smartly dressed women.

It seems to be one of the necessary conditions of the summer hat of 1903 that it shall tilt up in the front. These shapes are very simply trimmed with a quill and a loop of ribbon or a couple of wings.

The use of all black and all white costumes is increasing.

The cut shows a picturesque hat of black straw.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

THE NEW STYLES.

Walking and Traveling Costumes. Some Long Coats.

The walking and the traveling costume cleans the ground by an inch. It is considered very bad form to wear a trailing skirt on any but a dressy occasion.

For summer nothing can be more useful than a suit of navy blue cheviot made with a plaited skirt held into a yoke around the hips, the jacket a blouse with slightly puffed sleeves and a cape effect.

Long coats will not be worn so much except for motoring and traveling. The three-quarter length is considered smarter and more dressy.

Coats of silk are made unlined, and the weaves include peau de sole, peau de cygne, both plain and dotted, as well as grosgrain, louisine and soft makes of taffeta.

Moire is not in vogue, as it was last year.

A ball gown seen recently was of crepe de chine with the bodice laid in crosswise folds and the skirt treated in the same fashion. The sleeves were merely short ruffles, and the decolletage was encircled with a bertha of lace, while a panel of the same ran down the front of the skirt by way of completing a pointed bip yoke, also of the lace.

The popularity of red seems to increase. Red serge, red foulard and voile, spotted for preference, red hopsack and red linen cleverly intermingled with white or ecru abound on every side.

The cut shows a very smart chiffon ruffle with an inner band of black velvet and an edging of the same.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR SUMMER WEAR.

Red Muslin Useful and Chic—Practical Blue Serge Frocks.

There is a fancy for red, especially in muslin. This color stands a good deal of wear without looking soiled. It is always difficult to lay down hard and fast rules in the matter of colors. In the early part of the season people declared it would be a black and white one. It is always so more or less, because there is something very chic about black and white mixtures, but the choice of colors will be unlimited.

The majority of women-remain faithful of somber hues in cloth and cotton in bright shades where muslins, linens and such fabrics are concerned.

A dark blue serge frock made recently for morning wear had a skirt which cleared the ground all the way around and was arranged in small kilts. The little coat was tight at the back, finished with a wide band of blue taffeta. The front fell loosely over a plain waistcoat, with a chemisette of muslin, completed by a very wide butterfly bow. The three cornered hat of blue straw was trimmed with a curiously striped blue taffeta ribbon.

The plain skirt has certainly fallen from popular favor. The very smart models seem to show tuckings and plaitings. These plaited skirts are confined around the hips by means of a yoke or rows of stitches, and they are allowed to flare from the knees outward. The newest fashion is to have the held in effect, made shorter in the back than it is in the front.

The skirts in the illustration are both chic and pretty.

Something About Cooks And Kitchens

INTO a great downtown restaurant I know of luncheons throng by the hundred at the noon hour, largely because of the exquisite cleanliness of the place. Patrons are free to go through the kitchen at any time and witness the broiling of steaks, the brewing of coffee, the making of omelets and puddings. If the proprietors of that restaurant allow this as an advertising device, they could hit on nothing better. The wooden tables shine with cleanliness, the cooks are clean and bright, with spotless white aprons and caps. Some of them are women, others are men. It gives one an appetite to look into that kitchen.

The shiny, spotless restaurant kitchen gives a hint of a new occupation opening to women; if college women, all the better. The new occupation needs all the intelligence and refinement possessed by the most highly developed human specimen. In brief, the new profession is the superintendence of kitchens in asylums and sanitariums—yes, and prisons, too, and all public institutions. The culinary and sanitary arrangements of all colleges and boarding schools should be directed by the woman professor of dietetics. If they were, we should not have the epidemics of typhoid and other dangerous diseases in so many colleges.

We shall have, in time, a college where women may learn such superintendence, also dietetics for sickness and health, for everyday life and for extra occasions, but such a school is not yet. The only present way for the professor of dietetics to acquire her learning is to attend an approved cooking school, then piece out her culinary learning with a thorough knowledge of chemistry, physiology and hygiene. A woman capable of superintending public kitchens may be absolutely certain of getting paying employment at once. Already a young lady has been put in charge of one of the great poorhouses of New York city. The Minnesota board of control has appointed Mrs. Mary B. James to look after the cookery of all the state institutions. Mrs. James will have her hands full. In Massachusetts women are employed in the same capacity in charitable institutions and hospitals. The demand is almost inexhaustible and the supply is not there. From all over the land at once comes a second cry, "Give us the woman professor of dietetics!"

Civilized peoples have developed to that point where their stomachs refuse the ailment of the days when mankind knew not bathrooms. The sensitive digestive organs repel at uncleanliness and unaesthetic culinary arrangements, even when the victim himself does not know it. It is probable that a considerable number of the ailments that attack us with no known cause are due to unclean bake shops.

Tiled floors and walls, marble slab tables and white enameled kitchen sinks should characterize the place where human food is prepared; absolute, spotless cleanliness, refinement and good temper should characterize those who cook it. The kitchen ought to be the brightest, prettiest room in a house. An awful bowl would be raised if the surgeons in a hospital should be ignorant, unclean and careless in their dress and coarse and disagreeable in their manners. Well, ten times more important and vital is it that operator and operating room where human food is prepared should be perfect. Food is the thing that goes inside of us and touches the very root of life. If pure air, immaculate cleanliness and daintiness are necessary to fight and conquer the microbes of disease in hospitals, how absolutely vital it is to prevent these microbes so far as possible from getting into us in the first place. And yet much of the food we swallow is actually prepared in human pigsties!

The woman sex naturally represents cleanliness and refinement. As in the eating sex, woman the cooking sex, according to the division of our fathers. Let the division stand, but raise the woman's share to its highest and best. Let the woman professor of dietetics rank socially with the professors of mathematics and languages. Her work is enough more important than theirs. Send her forth to introduce air, cleanliness, sweetness and sunshine into the civilized kitchen!

METAL WORK FOR WOMEN.

A New Craft Which Offers a Fair Income.

Metal repousse work is a craft which has developed marvelously in the past few years, and it is particularly adapted to women of an artistic turn of mind. Several women already have studios, and they take orders for the designing, execution and mounting of fireplaces, overmantels, fenders, mirrors, picture and photograph frames, boxes of every description, from a coal bunker to a silver toilet box; also trays of all sorts, name plates, signs, door decoration, friezes, dadoes and paneling, fire screens, bellows, etc.

There are two ways of executing the work. You may either simply work a design on the metal and then have the metal made up into a box frame or you may make up your own work yourself.

To learn the repousse work takes six months, but to learn the mounting depends upon how many branches of the craft are taken up.

In six months a girl can learn to execute good work and to be capable of mounting one branch—fenders, for example. Repousse work is executed on zinc, brass, copper, lead, pewter, silver or gold. The metal may be laid on a board and worked with nails, which are filed to the shape required. For this method nothing is required save the board, some nails, a file, hammer, a pair of shears and some small nails for fixing the metal to the wood. Zinc should be used for practicing, as it is so much cheaper than the other metals.

Metal work offers a very good means of livelihood to a woman with artistic and original ideas. A girl can be apprenticed to a metal worker on the understanding that when proficient she will be retained at a progressive salary or on piece work, or she can apprentice herself to a metal worker with a view to learning thoroughly the work and eventually setting up for herself. Very often firms give out employment piece work, and in this manner a respectable income may be made.

The illustration shows a mantel of copper and green oak which has lately been designed, furnished in a woman metal worker's studio.

NOTES ABOUT WOMEN.

What They Are Doing and What They Are Wearing.

Never indulge in the deadly poisonous entertainment of pitying yourself. What it does is to intensify and clinch the ills that already apparently afflict you.

Mrs. McKostle of Minnesota confesses to a natural womanly liking for cows. She has ten cows and sells milk and cream, getting therefrom $70 a month. When improved machinery is used, Mrs. McKostle finds dairying no harder than poultry keeping, and she also finds cow keeping more profitable than chicken keeping.

I have lately seen the picture of a comely, spry old lady who danced a minuet and sang the sweet songs of her youth at the age of ninety-seven. There is lying on my desk a picture of King Edward's oldest subject—111 years of age the 12th of this May. She is Mrs. Margaret Ann Neve, and she lives in the pretty isle of Guernsey. She is sweet faced, gentle and fair, looking like a handsome old lady of seventy. Brave old girls! Very aged women need no longer look like hideous old mummies.

I saw a beautiful parasol the other day. It was part of a trousseau for a recent wedding of importance. The parasol was of ivory white surah, with a deep ruffle of chiffon set on very full and with a tiny ruching at the edge to give it still more flare. On the silk there were four lace medallions on each section in graduated sizes. All around the edge was a row of cream silk chenille fringe just as long as the ruffle was deep. A bow of cream satin ribbon was fastened to the top and another to the carved ivory handle.

Aside from the ridiculous aigrets, the new millinery is in the main pretty and sensible, though some of the hats are extremely large—ponderous, one might call them. Still they seem to please the wearers, who look pretty in them; so there is no more to be said. The coarse straws with almost severe trimming seem to be greatly affected by the smart set, and the coarser and rougher the straw the better they like it.

One of the best things for the general health, also for the shapeliness of the feet, is to go barefoot. Country children who were permitted in the old time to run barefoot in summer rarely had corns and misshapen feet when they were grown.

DRESSY TOILETS.

Reception Gowns of White Crepe de Chine—Pale Gray Costumes.

Very pretty are the reception gowns in white crepe de chine or any soft material tucked to the knees and finished with a voluminous flounce put on with some wonderful embroidery or trimming. A pale gray crepe de chine treated in this fashion had a bolero effect with a deep beautifully cut band of black satin. The former was finished with some silver and gray embroidery and opened over a chemisette of finely tucked and embroidered lawn, with a suggestion of black bobs on it by way of a trimming. The undersleeve was of lawn.

Pale gray, champagne color and apple green, sometimes mixed with parma violet, seem to form the prettiest of the early summer toilets. There is a decided fancy for black toilets as well. The wearing of black is always in favor with the smart woman who has to dress on a limited allowance of pin money, and by trimming it with lace, a fichu, etc., all somberness is removed.

Brown is being used a great deal both in linen and cloth.

Linen gowns are relieved with bright embroidery.

The tailor made shown in the cut is of blue cloth, trimmed with Persian embroidery.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Enormous Lace Collars—Taffeta Back In Favor.

Enormous lace collars, both round and pointed, are now worn on fashionable coats.

Taffeta has regained favor. It is very chic for summer carriage wraps and summer reception gowns. Parisians are remaining faithful to it, and it is an excellent material for resisting the dust. It is ever so much smarter than foulard, although there is a fancy for the latter in very large patterns or abnormally big spots. Such a fashion is not for the million, but for the individual woman who can afford to have a number of dresses each season.

A dark blue, brown or black taffeta gown is very useful for the woman who cannot afford many. The wearing properties are good, and it has a particular chic which is very suggestive of Paris.

A pretty dark blood red taffeta gown seen recently was arranged in gaugings around the hips and then had a deep flounce put on below the hips.

Patent leather shoes will be used more than ever this season, and the light, supple qualities wear very well.

The cut shows a dainty gown for a young girl. It is of blue taffeta with ecru lace.

CURIOUS INVENTION.

It Consists of a Portable Stove Which Is Strapped on the Back and Heated with Oil.

In many portions of this country the cold in winter is intense enough to make one prefer a warm fireside to exposure in the open air, no matter how much we may talk about the "bracing" effect of this kind of weather. For those who are compelled to face the cold under conditions where the natural heat of the blood is not sufficient to keep the body comfortable an Oregon inventor has produced a portable foot and body warmer, which he thinks will at least prevent the extremities from freezing.

It is well known, says the Chicago News, that when a person is overcome by the cold the numbness first starts in the hands and feet, chilling the blood until the circulation is reduced to such an extent that it no longer carries the heat from the heart and lungs to the surface to fight the cold. The use of this invention is to maintain the warmth of the extremities artificially by circulating a continuous stream of warm water from the miniature stove through a series of pipes leading to warming pads in contact with the hands and feet or other parts of the body.

READY FOR AN OUTING.
(Portable Stove, Heated by Oil, Strapped to the Back.)

The stove, which is strapped on the back, is provided with oil for fuel and the flame maintains a comparatively high temperature inside the adjacent boiler, through which the liquid passes in its circuit of the pipes. These pipes are of rubber and can be easily adjusted inside the clothing. While it is not expected this novelty will come into general use, there is little question that it is capable of overcoming the effects of the intense cold of a northern winter and its introduction will make extreme low temperature easier for the body to withstand.

He is also a leading politician in his county and is quite a fraternal man, being a member of all the leading fraternal organizations of importance. He is married and has a happy family, composed of wife, two sons and a daughter.

A Mother to the Girl.

The woman who had lost her maid at the moment that she was expecting visitors went to the janitor in her distress, hoping that he might be able to find some one to help her out. He was Hibernian and effusively sympathetic. "Shure an' it's too bad," he assured her, "an' you aither bein' a mither to that girrl!" As he got to be as black as a negro could be, the woman took the compliment with reservations.

WHY I WENT TO THE FOOT.

Was ever a maiden so worried?
I'll admit I am partial to Jim,
For Jimmie has promised to wed me
When I'm old enough to wed him;

But then I love teacher, too, dearly,
She's always so lovely to me,
And she's pretty and kind and sweet-tempered,
And gentle as gentle can be.

I wouldn't for worlds hurt Jim's feelings,
For he never would like me again—
But there was my dearest, sweetest teacher,
And I'd die if my words gave her pain.

"Two plus two equals what?" was the problem,
And I knew teacher thought it made "Four;"
But Jimmie said "six," and maintained it
As long as he stood on the floor.

And I saw I must soon choose between them,
For I was the next in the line.
Should I side with my teacher or Jimmie?
What a sad situation was mine!

And just as my heart with that problem
Of course was so sorely vexed,
I was called on to answer the subject
For teacher had said, sharply: "Next!"

It was then that the brilliant thought struck me,
That by compromise I could contrive
To part neither teacher nor Jimmie,
And that's how I came to say "five."

The Wind and the Whirlwind

By R. B. HILL.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

ON THAT terrible night of Sept. 8th, 1900, at Galveston, I chanced to be the means of saving the life of Dr. Pierre Mallieur, an old and prominent physician of New Orleans, who had been called to Galveston the day before in consultation. I was a resident of the Crescent City myself, and the striking face and figure of the old gentleman were familiar to me.

"Well, young man," he said to me the next day, "what can I do to show my appreciation for your heroism last night?"

"Nothing whatever, doctor," I replied, "unless, as far as the ethics of your profession will allow, you will relate to me the strangest incident connected with your practice."

After a silence of several moments he said, "As it happens I can do that very thing, as all those immediately concerned therewith are dead.

"When the war began I had, though only a graduate of four years' standing, largely lifted the burden of practice from my father's shoulders; but the war fever entered my blood, and I went forth as surgeon in a New Orleans regiment, the colonel of which was Henry Lespard.

"It is not worth while for me to go into details regarding that cruel struggle. Suffice it to say that no regiment on either side made a more brilliant record than did the one under Lespard's command. Before the close of '63 he had been made a general officer, his old regiment forming a part of his division.

"One dark night, with the enemy close in front and the battle imminent, a young man dressed in citizen's clothes was captured within our lines; but in one of his pockets were found cards bearing the name 'Capt. Francisco Lanera, with U. S. Cavalry.' When charged with being a spy he vehemently denied it, but refused to say what brought him there, and requested to be carried before the general. Gen. Lespard refused to see him and ordered him to be shot the following morning unless he gave a satisfactory account of his presence within our lines. That night the young man wrote Lespard a note, but the general had gone with his wife and daughter some miles to the rear and the messenger failed to find him until too late, and the supposed spy met death as a brave man should as the beams of the rising sun kissed the tree tops. His last request was that his body be sent to his mother who was near by with the Union forces, and this the general granted.

"Gen. Lespard occupied a room in a farm house near the end of our lines, lying on losing that across the passage. Soon after daybreak on the morning following that on which Capt. Lanera was shot, old Timothy, Gen. Lespard's body servant, rushed in upon me, his eyes bulging in their sockets and stammered forth that his master was dead. In a moment I was beside the bed and found that the negro had spoken but too truly. As I bent over the dead man in the uncertain light I observed a small piece of paper upon his breast. Removing it and finding it to be a note I carried it to the window and read:

"'The young officer who was shot yesterday, at this man's order, was his son by an octoroon slave girl. He would not help his father! He was avenged by his mother!'

"I placed the note in my pocket and returning to the bedside discovered and removed the dagger with which Gen. Lespard's heart had been pierced.

"'Timothy,' I said to the negro, who had been watching my movements, 'some Yankee has managed to get inside our lines in some way and killed your master, I suppose because of that young man shot. But it would be best that no one should know how he died; and so you and I will keep the secret between us. We will remove every evidence of the way in which he was killed. I will announce that he had heart disease, and we will bury the secret too deep to dig up.'

"I have looked upon many a dead face, but never one on which was stamped such an expression of startled horror as fixed that of Gen. Lespard. He must have waked just as the blade was driven home and looking up recognized who struck.

"Not long after I secured a month's furlough and returned home. While there I showed my father the fatal note and explained to him the true circumstances surrounding the general's death. Then he told me his story, which was this:

"About three years before Lespard's wedding his father, a wealthy sugar planter and real estate owner of New Orleans, had died, leaving the bulk of his estate to his son. Not long afterward the young man purchased a beautiful octoroon slave girl and installed her in a pretty cottage in the suburbs. For nearly two years he was very devoted, the girl during that time presenting him with a son. At length, however, he began to weary of her, and when he met Lucile Mallieu and fell in love with her, he cast about for the best means of getting rid of Celesta. Quietly he made arrangements to send her and the child to Cuba. He purchased a home for her in Havana, placed money to her credit in bank and employed a man to keep an eye upon her.

"Then he told Celeste. In vain she implored, then threatened. He was inexorable. She refused to go. He told her he would separate her and the child. She yielded, but for weeks was prostrated. My father was called in, and 'never,' he said to me, 'have I seen so great a transformation in a human being as took place in her upon my last visit. All along she had hoped against hope, but realizing at last that she had been hugging a shadow, her dark eyes flamed ominously, and she exclaimed, "As I have loved him will my fiber of my being so now I hate him and will live for revenge!" Poor soul! She has had her revenge at last, but not until he had added immeasurably to the heavy debt already due her!'

"Shortly after Celeste and child reached Cuba, Lespard received a letter from his agent in which he stated that both mother and child had died of yellow fever. Celeste, it appears, won the agent over and returned to this country with her child.'

"We were both deeply interested in the matter and I determined to find out more about it. Having at last located Lespard's former agent in Havana I acquainted him with that officer's death to whom he gave him an account of the movements of Celeste during her stay in Cuba and afterward. For months, as a young widow, she remained closely at home. Then she put off her mourning garb and extended the circle of her acquaintances. Among these was a wealthy Cuban named Lanera. When, later, he offered himself she accepted him, and not long after their marriage she persuaded him to make his wedding tour during the summer months in Baltimore.

"Here for a time I was at a loss, but persisted and finally my efforts were rewarded. Lucile Lespard, as I have said, was at that time in Baltimore. She had a sister living at the old home, and when her daughter—the only child living—was old enough she sent her to that sister that the girl might be educated at the convent there to which most girls go to finish. It was during this period that she met Francisco Lanera and they fell in love with each other. The young people kept their love a secret, because Lanera had already selected a sweetheart for him, and she because her father had promised her to a man named Gwaltney, older than Lespard himself, but wealthy; and, as developed later, holding a mortgage on most of Lespard's property, which he had invested by gambling and speculating.

"When hostilities commenced young Lanera entered the northern army and his mother, who always kept as near him as possible, was less than a mile away when he was wounded. Lucile evidently informed her lover of her movements and must have secured and communicated to him in some way the password; and on that fatal night he had entered our lines for the purpose of seeing her. As it chanced, however, Gen. Lespard had sent her mother and herself several miles to the rear that very day, a battle being expected at any time. The young officer had preferred death to the alternative of making public the reason of his presence among us; and fate overruled that his written explanation should not reach Lespard in time. Whether he had given his mother the password before going forth on his ill-fated errand, or whether she eluded our sentries, I never knew, as I made no inquiries; but she accomplished her purpose and escaped in the darkness as she had come.

"Lucile Lespard died a few years ago, having never married. Celeste disappeared."

When the Shah's Wives Stroll.

The shah of Persia does not wish the public to feast their eyes on the beauty of his wives. When his numerous spouses go out for a walk or a stroll a dozen attendants precede them at a distance of a few hundred feet, shouting: "Run and hide yourselves!" Pedestrians and all others then scamper indoors.—Chicago Chronicle.

His Finish.

"What ever became of that professor who was always arguing that mind was only matter?" asked the person who did not take the papers regularly.

"What became of him?" says the individual who has time to read about things. "Why, they found out that there was something the matter with his mind."

In northern Spain many women work in the fields at 12 to 18 cents a day.

THE TRUCK PATCH.

You may head your heads to listen to the whisper of the trees,
You can lib a'feelin' dopey I'm the drowsin' of the bees,
You can talk of mornin' glories hangin' aweigh'nt on their stems,
An' of violets a-noddin' crowded with dewy diadems—
All of 'em may be sweet, I grant you—awayin' bloom and dromin' bee,
But the little truck patch yonder sings a glory song to me!

I jest like ter sink my face in the sweet crinkly lettuce rows,
Till I rise red-cheeked an' smilin' with the dew-drops in my nose;
But I love the fresh sweet lettuce with its crisp and crinkly ways,
But 'tain't them things that bring the springtime an' my green an' salad days,
When I putter 'mongst the trellises to coax the climbin' peas,
Bet that little ol' truck garden sings a glory song to me!

Like to fumble where strawberries are jes' sorter hidin' out,
An' where the big, red bellied cabbages are whisperin' of kraut,
An' the little ol' "prize" radishes an' onions sneakin' down,
There's a poem in potatoes when their tops are withered brown!
I could almost sing an anthem to the luscious black-eyed pea,
An' the roastin' ear's springtime—bet they all appeal to me!

Bet the larkspur an' the violet are pretty things and sweet,
But they simply aren't in it when you're talkin' of truck patch stuff or eat,
An' the perfumed breeze stirs sweetly in the knee-deep prairie grass,
But that's nothin' to the ways my heartstrings like a patch o' garden sass!
You kin prance across the prairie singin' loud an' jubilee,
But they's nothing but a truck patch sings half glad enough for me.

HIS FIRST WATCH

By W. L. WATSON

IT did not come from his mother. Oh, no. Mummy was not a present-giver except on birthdays and Christmas time. In fact Mummy was not associated in his mind with presents at all. He rather thought of Mummy as the person who very often did not give him the things he wanted. But she was Mummy, just Mummy, and a hundred presents could not alter that fact. His little life was made up of Mummy and his meals, with his father as a very irregular, but on the whole rather nice, if not very understanding, playfellow thrown in. Sunday was Daddy's day. He had a vague idea that Daddy had made Sunday to rest in, and although nurse and Mummy said it was another Person's day, he considered that his father had a hand in it, and had to do with the arranging of it. As for Auntie, she who gave him the presents and never found fault with him, he figured her forth as a lady bountiful, who, fortunately, did not know how good he could be at times. It was clear to him that Mother never told her about his punishments. Mother's own boy, the boy of the tears, and the penitence, and the promises to be good in the future, and the kiss to be cuddle on the pillow, and the last good-night, ten times repeated when the light went out and he was left alone—Mother's own boy reckoned on secrecy. Of course, Daddy was told occasionally; for he got a hint, and observed without any of the threatened evil consequences; and Daddy took strange views of things which Mummy and her boy saw very well only showed how little he knew of their world.

When Mother was away on a visit, she took home with her, and the house seemed empty. His voice echoed when Mummy's ears were not there to catch it; the doors creaked strangely, and at night the stars stared in upon him mysteriously, saying: "We've got you alone." No one else was of use against these stars. He felt it would be wise really to pray to God till Mother came back. It was at one of these times that Auntie got herself put down for a present. She let slip a hint with what he should say, and as she had promised him something special soon, he added to his nightly list: "Keep Auntie good." She kissed him, bunched the pillow all wrong, and left him for the long night. No toy that he could think of would save him from the silence, and the stars, and the echoes in the house. When Mother came back, and home returned, then he began to reckon the days till Auntie's present was due. It was to be given to him after tea on a Friday. On Tuesday he plunged deep into knowledge and philosophy. There were 24 hours in each day, out of which he slept ten.

"If I am a good boy, Mummy, and go to bed always at nine, and never tell you back, the time will pass quick, won't it?"

"And if I sleep an hour longer in the morning and don't make a noise to waken Daddy, there will be less time, won't there?"

"Could I sleep a whole day if I lay still and just forgot?"

"There is no fear of the clock stopping, is there, Mummy?"

On the Wednesday he said: "I hope Auntie is quite well. If she was ill I suppose she would send the present, but it would be very awkward if she hasn't bought it. Could we not take tea before we go? I am sure I shan't be hungry."

On Thursday, Auntie called and told him the present was bought, and that she had been bored to it every night. A cold fear broke over him. Was it a dog? He did not want a dog. Was it a cat? He hated cats.

"Couldn't I go with you, Auntie, and stay with you till to-morrow, just to make sure?"

"Well, couldn't I have a peep at it, so that I shall not be so very much surprised when I see it? Susan says when she got a ring you could have knocked her down with a feather."

On Thursday night he could not sleep for a long time. Mummy's footsteps through the wall died away, and the house fell into silence. But he lay still, bravely struggling through strange dreams. He thought God had brought him a steam engine that was so good that it would not go fast. The great cat came into the room and turned out his pockets, examined the heels of his stockings, and looked to see if his nails were clean. He wiped his nose with the sheet and lay quiet. Suddenly the great cat jumped and saw the new cannon Auntie had brought him shivered into a thousand bits before he had even touched it: it was the postman's knock—Friday!

He was dressed for tea immediately after breakfast. "If you worry any more, I shan't take you," said Mummy; "what a fuss about a rocking horse."

"A rocking horse! Well, if it had stirrups, and a bridle, and went itself! Auntie said it was something special."

What a tea! The bread and butter would not go down his throat, and the cake merely went round and round the roof of his mouth. He never knew his father to eat so much and so slowly before.

"Can you tell the time by the clock?" Auntie asked him. Were they going to start these silly questions again?

"No," said he, "no!"

"Oh, well, I'm afraid I've made a mistake. There," she said, and passed a paper parcel to him. "Open it."

He took off the paper and found a box. He opened the lid and found a round thing in paper. He undid the paper, and there was his present before he knew it—a big, blue, ticking watch, and a chain. It fairly laughed at him; the great figures glowered solemnly: 12, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5; and then a little hand that ran faster the more he looked at it. He held it to his ear, and it chuckled with joy. He put it in his pocket and it seemed to go out, so he brought it forth again and proposed to wear it hanging down outside, like the ladies. Finally he set it down on the table, gazing at it and fingering the bulge he ate his cake and drank sweet tea voraciously.

His first really proud moment was when the nurse wished she had a watch. In the future he was only to go to bed by his own watch. By Mummy's direction he left it under his pillow. The nightly programme of tucking in and kisses was duly performed and Mummy gone away, when she was called back by loud alarm: "Mummy, I can't hear it." So it was tied to the rail of the bed where the brass stair shone upon it in wonder and envy. "I suppose," he thought, "the angels have gold watches."

At midday on Saturday, Lucy Brown passed the garden with her doll in the perambulator. He rushed down to the gate and thrust his chained bosom before Lucy Brown. She affected to see nothing. After giving her ample time without effect he pulled out the watch. "Look," he said: "You're late this morning."

"Oh," said she, "Bertie has a gold one."

"You're a story-teller," said he, "isn't she, Mary?" Mary, whose notice was running out, answered: "Awful."

For two days the watch was wound every hour. On Monday there was dire disappointment because he was not permitted to take it to school. "Couldn't I just take it to show the boys and put it out of sight then?" A compromise was arrived at. There would be a tea-party, but one of the conditions insisted upon was that no boy known to possess a watch was to be invited.

One day a big boy friend stopped him with a firm hand and mockingly asked the time. The watch-owner took it out mechanically, then with a flash of inspiration held it up to the big boy and said: "I didn't think it was so late!" and rushed off for home.

After all a watch is a very quiet sort of toy, and requires to be left alone too much. At the end of the first week this one suffered from over-winding and for a time showed evident shaking. When everybody knew he had a watch it became necessary for the bearer of it to assure himself of its possession occasionally by swinging it round and round in its chain. One day in the middle of this performance it flew off the swivel and landed in the conservatory by way of a pane of glass.

It is now supposed to be at the watchmaker's undergoing [illegible]—London Outlook.

ARTISTS INTERESTED.

Americans Heartily Support the Plan for a Permanent Salon in Paris.

American and French artists in Paris are much interested in a midwinter salon to be established at Antibes. Ground has already been donated for the purpose, and a permanent palace is to be erected. The salon is especially designed to attract winter dwellers on the Rivie Riviera, thus bringing artists and amateurs together on a more satisfactory footing than even in the big salons of Paris. A number of prominent Americans have already given their allegiance.

Substitute for Cake Walk.

Popular though the cake walk is in Parisian ballrooms, it has many enemies, who object to its rowdiness and seek a new dance. As a substitute Mlle. Jane Xielout, a ballerina of the opera, advocates the "veil dance." Girls wrap themselves in a veil, the ends of which float behind like wings, and dance alternately with a partner and alone. It is full of statuesque poses and graceful attitudes.

A man that is young in years may be old in hours, if he have lost no time.—Bacon.

ALONE.

How awful still it seems to be since mother's went away;
The sun looks lonesome, and the bird ain't got a word to say;
The clock's the only thing that keeps agoin' as before,
It makes the only noise except the creakin' of the door;
When I come in the house-alone it kind of seems almost
As though wherever I would look I might see her ghost.

Her knittin's layin' there just where she put it on the shelf;
The broom stands in the corner where she used to her herself;
It's all just as it was the day she left me here alone,
The kittle on the stand there with my picture and her own,
Her Bible's where she left it, marked where she was readin' last,
And I set here and think how slow the time's a-draggin' past.

I feel as though, somehow, I'd got on some The lonesomeness was thick enough to see it in the air!
The days are very long and when I go to bed at night,
It seems a week or so before it starts to get daylight—
But won't her tongue be busy when she's To tellin' of our relatives, their blessin's and their woes!

The Mystery of Number 406

By W. M. TALMADGE

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

THE first floor of No. 406 Evergreen Terrace was occupied by Mr. Benjamin Grittles, a gentleman of family, of reasonably ample fortune, of determined and not entirely gracious disposition, and a wife and one daughter, which daughter was exceedingly fair and unchangeable age.

The second floor was occupied by a trio of gentlemen in the strictest meaning of the term. Doverling, who had the front room, directly over the Grittles door, was a bookkeeper, and he had been observed on more than one occasion to wink at Dolly Grittles when she ascended the steps.

Klingman, who had the other front room, was a newspaper young man, and he never winked; he cleared his throat with much zeal, and when Dolly glanced at him, as she sometimes did, I am sorry to say, even after she had penetrated his design, he waved his hand and smiled. Once, emboldened by an answering smile, he had rapped upon the Grittles door, his mind fully set upon inviting the winning creature to a stroll. Mr. Grittles had opened the door, and had closed it again—bang!

These young men were a source of great disquietude to Mr. Grittles. His plans for the future of Dolly were made, and he did not propose to have them interefered with. A friend of his, by name Goldberg, by occupation stock broker, was to be the young woman's husband. True, Dolly did not love Goldberg, who was neither witty nor young. But he was rich as mud, and his wife would wear diamonds. When her father had broached the subject to her, she had shed fewer tears than he had anticipated. She had acceded to the proposition with a readiness which, had there been another suitor visible, would have aroused the old gentleman's suspicions. As it was, he awkwardly dabbed a kiss upon her forehead, and called her a good and dutiful girl.

But he did not relax his vigilance for an instant. A state prisoner could have been no more carefully guarded, and it was astonishing to note how the girl lived under it all. Her letters were examined before she received them. Her steps were dogged. Yet the roses deepened in her cheeks, and her eyes shone with a greater luster, and a song was upon her red lips from morning until night.

This was somewhat mystifying to Mr. Grittles.

Had he been in the confidence of the second floor he might have learned something. Mullane, an artist, who occupied the back room, was in possession of information which would have made the whole matter clear as day. But Mr. Grittles was not in the second floor's confidence.

When the sound of Mullane's piano filtered through the ceiling of the back parlor, in which room the family was accustomed to spend its evenings, he delivered himself of remarks both ill natured and unjust. He referred to Mullane as a penniless pauper's daughter as a spindle-legged idiot, whereas, as a matter of fact, Mullane was neither penniless nor a dauber nor spindle-legged nor an idiot; he was in receipt of a comfortable income, and the house like a tornado. But his coming was expected and had been prepared for. Dolly threw her arms about his neck before he could say a word. The gentleman mighty in the financial world had good naturedly permitted himself to be retained for the occasion, patted him gently upon the back, uttering words which, coming from that source, were soothing to his hearing. Mullane's emotions changed. He stopped his hand firmly and shook it. Mrs. Grittles gazed at him imploringly.

Two minutes passed and the tableau still held. Then, after a most tremendous explosion of breath, Mr. Grittles spoke.

"I did not know that you were acquainted with—with him," he said, pointing at Mullane with his disengaged hand and looking at Dolly.

"O, yes, papa, I've known him for—months," replied Dolly, blushing.

"But—but how in the—how did you manage it?" he gasped.

And then Dolly confessed and the mystery was solved.

"We telegraphed to each other on our pianos," she said; "we learned the Morse alphabet, and—and we telegraphed, that is all."

"Well, I'll be hanged!" ejaculated Mr. Grittles. "Right before my face and eyes—humph!"

Then, to his credit, be it said, he burst into a hoarse laugh, and the company joined in uproariously.

Good Use of Charitable Gifts.

During their visits to Russia the late Felix Faure and President Loubet each presented $200,000 to be distributed among the poor. These gifts are about to assume a desirable form in the shape of two asylums for the poor, called respectively Faure and Loubet asylums. The czar's gift to the poor of France was distributed by a committee in spite of each effort of the "disinherited" of the city of Paris.

Of 90,000 European emigrants to Argentina last year 58,000 were Italians.

HISTORIC LANDMARK.

Old Capitol of Northwest Territory Still Standing in the City of Vincennes, Ind.

Within a short time the most historic building in Vincennes, Ind., will be torn down to make room for a modern home, unless some action is taken toward buying it as a relic, or as an ornament for a city park. The building is one which for about seven years was also the capitol building for the northwest territory. It stands near the heart of the city, but did not originally stand there. The building was erected, so far as can be learned, in 1806, and consisted of two rooms upstairs and two down.

No nails were used in its construction, it being put together by wooden pegs. Since that time improvements have been made on it which have changed its appearance, but it is still the old capitol building in the eyes of Vincennes people, and efforts are making to interest the city or state to buy it and transform it into a museum, placing it in one of the parks.

The building is now used as a residence and unless it gets some attention it will soon begin to decay. It is owned by Thomas Kilfoil. It could be bought, it is believed, for about $300. For many years it stood in the principal street in the city and has been used as a business house, as well as a home for numerous families. Much history was made in the old building while it was the meeting place of the legislature of Indiana Territory, which was formed from a part of the Northwest territory.

Gen. William Henry Harrison read his first message in the old building, and in the message he worked for the passage of a measure that would prevent the sale of intoxicants to the Indians. The measure, it is said, was never passed.

At the session of the legislature in this building in 1807, laws were made attaching the death penalty for crimes of treason, murder, arson and horse stealing. Before that robbery were made punishable by whipping, fine and imprisonment. Larceny was made punishable by fine or whipping; stealing by fine and whipping; bigamy by fine, whipping and disfranchisement. Stringent laws were also passed for the punishment of children and servants who refused to obey their parents or masters.

Between August 12 and 22, 1810, the Indian chief Tecumseh, with 400 warriors appeared daily before Gov. Harrison in the old building, and it was in that building that Tecumseh lost his temper and gave the Be to the governor.

Hundreds of historic instances occurred in the old building, and almost every prominent man in the country at that time set his foot inside of it. The last session of the legislature ended in it on March 15, 1813, and it is said that the last vote passed in it was that which required the capitol to be moved to Corydon, Ind.

PORTRAIT BY SULTAN.

Ruler of Morocco Is a Failure as an Artist Just as He Is a Failure as Monarch.

Funny, isn't it, and very like the scrawl of a five-year-old? Any American school boy of ten would be ashamed to own such work; but the artist is no less a notable than his royal highness the sultan of Morocco. In November of 1900 Arthur Schneider went to Morocco to act as the sultan's instructor in drawing, and found his new pupil an impatient, willful, grown-up child, who regarded the American artist as something of a magician, able to impart the power to paint without any long course of drudgery if only he would. The drawing here shown, reproduced from the Century, was a sketch portrait of the artist-teacher made during one of the lessons; and, it is to be inferred, does not flatter an American citizen. Mr. Schneider remained in Morocco until March of 1902, and his royal pupil, all adverse conditions considered, really made surprising progress.

BAND CONCERTS.

The agitation for open air band concerts in Plainfield has been started this year and it is to be hoped that it will be successful. Two years ago, such concerts were held in this city and proved very satisfactory. Thousands of people turned out to hear them and they proved to be wonderfully pleasant features of the heated period. The bills were met by public subscription.

Last year, the subject was discussed considerably but came to naught and the Plainfielders who, through force of circumstances, were compelled to remain here throughout all the summer months without any vacation lost something which might have materially assisted in making the time pass more pleasantly. The agitation was late in starting last year which may have accounted in some measure for its failure.

There is now plenty of time in which to get this summer concerts well under way. Benj. LaVere has agreed to arrange a series of ten concerts if the necessary funds are forthcoming. He should have the co-operation of every citizen in his effort and subscriptions for that end will be well given.

NEW JERSEY'S BEACH SAVED.

The jury's decision on Wednesday at Freehold, N. J., in the damage suit brought by Miss W. D. Atterbury, of Seabright, against Edward and Veronica Pannaci for the removal of 26,000 yards of beach sand from a point near her property, will save New Jersey's beach. According to this decision not even an individual owning the property abutting the beach can remove the sand.

The case has been hotly contested by five lawyers on each side. The jury brought in a verdict of $800 in favor of the plaintiff after hearing the testimony of several witnesses.

Judge J. Franklin Fort said no similar case had ever been tried in the New Jersey courts and the decision would stop the disfigurement of the beach by arguing the question of the sea making inroads into the abutting grounds from the removal of the sand, an effort was made to prove by experts that the action of the ocean caused the damage. Judge Fort ruled out all such testimony, holding that "there could no be experts in the works of the Almighty."

CENTRAL'S IMPROVEMENTS.

Another improvement on the part of the Jersey Central is to be noted in the plan to equip the Newark-New York line with the block signals of the latest pattern. This follows comparatively closely on the announcement of plans to extend the system of block signals out the Long Branch division. It shows that the Central is anxious to make its service the safest and best in the country.

While self interest undoubtedly plays an important part in the action of the Central in putting its road and equipment in the best possible condition, it is just as advantageous to Plainfield and its residents as to the railroad itself. There is no doubt that the well-equipped road soon becomes known. Reports concerning its condition travel fast. The result is invariable. People who have to travel anyway, would rather travel on the best and safest and so the Jersey Central and the cities and towns along its line get the benefit.

No one can doubt for a moment that Plainfield is one of the most ideal spots in the neighborhood of New York and that it forms an ideal residence for the New York business man of moderate or well-to-do circumstances. The only question is that of transportation. With these palatial ferry-boats which the Central has recently added to its service, and the fast expresses, composed of comfortable cars, Plainfield offers great advantages to the tired New Yorker and he gressly prefers the trip here to fighting for a strap in a crowded elevated or surface car.

NO SUNDAY GOLF.

All Plainfield must view with satisfaction the action taken on the meeting of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Saturday evening when the project to open the links of that club on Sunday afternoons was voted down. This is the second time that this proposition has met a like fate and it is sincerely to be hoped that this defeat will be the means of routing the project for good.

Clergy and laymen united in denouncing the suggested opening of the golf course. The fact that the club, when established, was strongly supported by many who would not have countenanced it had there been any possibility then of Sunday playing. Out of regard to them and to the community, it was the duty of the club to continue the prohibition against Sunday golf. And it was continued and there is general satisfaction expressed that such was the case.

Somerset county is having another murder trial. Despite the fact that it is one of the smallest counties in the State in point of population, Somerset manages to have more thrilling experiences than many of the large counties.

The Association League is making a good start. Its second series of game Saturday were highly satisfactory to the management of the new league.

Committee to Investigate.

Lee, chairman of the committee, has requested all eyewitnesses of the accident to report to him at once with the idea apparently of ascertaining whether or not the accident was avoidable.

Name Omitted.

Through some error the name of Miss Florence B. Conroy, one of the four year pupils of the North Plainfield High School, was omitted from the invitations prepared by the committee in charge of the Senior class day exercises. There were only a few of the invitations issued and these will be recalled and others will be printed.

SMALL BOY'S FATAL JUMP

Sprang From Swiftly Moving Trolley Car and Received Fatal Injuries.

ON HIS WAY TO CIRCUS

Landed on His Head—Concussion of Brain Followed—Serious Injuries Not Realized at First—Became Worse During Night and Died in the Morning.

While going to the I. C. T. Club circus Saturday evening in company with a number of other companions Louis DeCamp, the ten-year-old son of Franklin DeCamp, of 32 Linden avenue, jumped from a rapidly moving trolley car at the corner of Plainfield avenue and West Front street and received injuries from which he died yesterday morning at 5 o'clock.

The boy had boarded the car in company with Joseph Neuman, Charles Hurst and Claude Hann, playmates, and not having the fare he jumped from the car at the approach of the conductor He landed on his head and was rendered temporarily unconscious but soon recovered and was able to continue on his way to the circus. While there listening to the man calling out the wonders of the show inside the tents he became dizzy and his companions had to assist him to a seat by box where he sat. His brother came along and he took him home.

It was soon apparent to the boy's mother that the boy was injured seriously and put him to bed. He became delirious and Dr. D. C. Adams was called. He worked over the boy for several hours but at 5 o'clock he passed away. Death was said to be due to concussion of the brain.

The lad was a member of the Sunday-school of Grace M. E. church and attended the Somerset street school. The funeral was held from the home of his parents on Linden avenue Tuesday afernoon at 2 o'clock and the services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp.

SHOT BECAUSE SHE CRIED

Serious Ending of Runaway Trip By Four Little Tots From the Borough.

MISSING TWO DAYS

Little Theresa Watson Brought Home Shot in Stomach and Hand by Small Willie James—Disappeared Saturday—Were Found on Monday.

Four children in the borough mysteriously disappeared Saturday morning. A thorough search of the city was made and not until this morning was their whereabouts discovered.

The missing children were Theresa Watson, the ten-year-old daughter of Henry B. Watson, of 92 Manning avenue, and Willie, Ethel and Orville James, whose parents reside on Belmont avenue. The last seen of the children Saturday was when they were going toward Liberty Corner by a man fishing in the pond near Watchung.

Mrs. James said that she supposed that they had gone to the home of a Mrs. Baldwin, who, she said, lived one mile this side of Liberty Corner. Willie at one time worked there and has been up there on several occasions having walked the entire distance. She thought the children had gone there.

Asked next evening if he had any idea as to who could have had any motive in taking the children Mr. Watson said that his wife disappeared last year with his brother and was living somewhere near Philadelphia. She went away without her six children and he thought that it was barely possible that she might have been the means of spiriting his little child away as the James people were acquainted with his wife.

A number of borough citizens dragged the lake at Watchung on Monday thinking they might have accidentally fallen in and been drowned.

No trace of the children was found until Monday when Walter Watson, the eldest son of Mr. Watson, started out for Liberty Corner for the missing children. He found them at the home of Mrs. Sachs, where all four children were eating luncheon. It was noticed that Theresa Watson was injured in the stomach. William Sachs hitched up a carriage and at once brought back the children and the Watson boy who had traveled the entire distance on foot.

The girl was taken to her home and Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan was called He said the child was in a serious condition. The little James boy said that his sister took the gun from Mrs. Baldwin at Liberty Corner and he shot the Watson girl because she cried because he began shooting at the ground. He shot twice at her, striking her once in the stomach and once in the thumb. It was a rifle of small calibre.

The James boy was arrested by Chief Marshal Campbell. The children are all under ten years of age.

TO CLOSE SATURDAY.

Grocers Decide to Keep Open Until Noon—Other Merchants to be Closed All Day.

An effort on the part of many local merchants toward closing their stores on Memorial Day is meeting with considerable success. It is understood that the dry goods merchants and clothiers have agreed to keep their stores open Friday evening until 11 o'clock and then close all day Saturday. As for the grocers, they will close at noon on Saturday. It is argued that inasmuch as there is so much going on that day it will be better to generally observe the day than to try and keep open, as usual.

Found Its Parents.

A large number of Saturday night shoppers on West Front street were attracted by a small boy crying loudly at the corner of Front and Somerset streets. When Officer Vanderveg came along the people turned the lad over to the officer who learned that the little fellow had become lost from his parents. The child was found by his father at the police station later.

Building Summer House.

Lester B. Harris, of Mt. Pleasant, is having a fine summer house built on his property. It is 12x12 feet square and it is expected that it will be finished by June 1. A large flag pole has been placed in front of the house and yesterday for the first a flag was floated to the breeze.

Troubled His Head.

Robert Morley, of South Second street, caught a big woodchuck in his chicken coop the other day, after the animal had wrought considerable damage among his hens. He sold his captive to Wm. Klein the taxidermist.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Defeats Amendment for Sunday Golf.

AT A LIVELY MEETING

Considerable Feeling Evidenced on Both Sides in Speeches Which Preceded Vote on Question—

The Vote Stood 91 to 93 Against

There is to be no Sunday golf on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course for the present. That was the decision at a very large meeting of the club held in the Casino, Saturday evening. The amendment to open the course Sunday afternoon from 2 o'clock on was lost by a vote of 93 to 91. A two-thirds vote was required to pass it. As the vote shows there were 184 active members present who cast a vote for or against the amendment. In addition there were a number of associate and honorary members present, while not a few women, active members, were present and voted. The meeting was one of the most exciting ever held and the arguments for and against the amendment were forcibly presented.

George P. Mellick, president of the club, occupied the chair. After the president stated the object of the meeting and it was decided by a vote to have a secret ballot, O. T. Waring introduced the proposed amendment, which was that the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and course should be closed until 2 o'clock on Sunday. The fact that this did not specify morning or afternoon led C. C. Burke to take exception and through his efforts, the letters "P. M." were inserted after the bear.

George A. Chapman, former president of the club, was the first speaker against the proposition. He presented a strong argument in behalf of the moral effect of such a proposition, claiming that if the course should be open on Sunday it would lower the moral and religious standing of the community and this he did not believe to be wise in view of the high standing of the club.

William G. Wright followed with remarks in favor of the amendment. He did not believe that Plainfield contained all the piety and religious principles of the State and he did not believe that the city would be greatly damaged if the course should be opened. He expressed regret that those who favored the opening should have so ruthlessly disturbed the feelings of those who have conscientious scruples on the subject, but declared emphatically that so sure as the sun would rise on the morrow the golf course would be opened on Sunday. He said that the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club is the only club of importance in the State that does not permit Sunday play and he thought it time that the club moved forward and become more progressive.

Craig A. Marsh, coporation counsel of Plainfield, was the next speaker. He dwelt at some length on the moral and legal aspect of the proposition. He cited the fact that Sunday golf is a violation of the State laws and there would be every reason to believe that the authorities of Middlesex county would make arrests if the members played on Sunday. He referred to the possibility of arraigning class against class, that is, if the members played golf on Sunday and those of a poorer class desired to play baseball on Sunday and could not, it would make bitter feeling and it would at once raise a feeling of class legislation. Mr. Marsh said that he did not argue against the proposition in his own behalf, but in behalf of those who have a right to have conscientious scruples on the matter. He believed that Sunday play would lower the morals generally of the city and would tend to a breaking of the other Ten Commandments.

A. H. Atterbury talked at great length for the amendment. He did not believe it to be any worse to play golf on Sunday than to spend the time riding horseback, in an automobile, on a bicycle or reading a Sunday newspaper. As a matter of fact, he said that he had heard that the most liberal supporters of the club were opposed to the opening. To offset this he cited that last year the club closed the season with a deficit of $800. This would have to be made up this year. He also said that the club had lost nearly fifty members because the course was not opened on Sunday. He believed that the opening would be a great benefit. He did not believe that any policeman had a right to stop Sunday baseball if permission to use a field was obtained.

After George A. Strong made a strong plea against the opening from a purely religious view, Mr. Chapman read a letter from G. W. McCutchen, in which the latter urged strongly the defeat of the amendment. This concluded the speeches and a vote on the question was called for.

The vote was secretly by ballot, the members walking up to the ballot box as their names were called by the secretary. It did not take long to take the vote and count it and when the result was known, there was general applause. In fact throughout the meeting there was applause first on the part of those for the amendment and then by those against it, while in the private boxes were a number of society women who favored the amendment and applauded every point made in support of it.

DUNELLEN LOSES ONE OF LEADING CITIZENS

Former Mayor R. J. Swackhamer Passes Away at His Home Sunday.

FROM HEART FAILURE

VALUED EMPLOYE OF JERSEY CENTRAL FOR HALF A CENTURY.

One of Foremost Men of Dunellen —Having Been Mayor and Held Other Important Offices — A Sketch of His Life.

Dunellen, May 25—In the death of Ralliff J. Swackhamer, former mayor of this borough, which occurred from heart failure at his home yesterday morning, following a long illness, one of the best citizens of this place is removed. Mr. Swackhamer was known from one end of the New Jersey Central to the other and every one had the highest respect and esteem for him. He was a valued employe of the New Jersey Central for a half century.

Mr. Swackhamer comes from sturdy Dutch stock, his ancestors coming from Holland. He was born at Whitehouse, Hunterdon county, November 21, 1836, as were his parents, John and Anna Swackhamer. Young Ralliff assisted on his father's farm and during the winter months only was he able to study. He remained on the farm until he was twenty-one years old, when he married Huldah T. Oakes, of Lubeck, Me. They had four children, three of whom are now living, but Mrs. Swackhamer died in 1868. The three living are Mrs. Calvin H. Rugg, of Plainfield; Mrs. J. D. Smith, of Somerville, and John Swackhamer, of Phillipsburg.

Mr. Swackhamer joined the engineer corps of the New Jersey Central in 1847, then running the line from Somerville to Whitehouse and subsequently was employed by the contractors. From 1853 to 1863, he was in the bridge gang of the road and in the latter year was made superintendent of bridges, remaining until 1890. He lived in Phillipsburg and Somerville, from which place he moved to Dunellen in 1876, where he has resided ever since. In 1864 he was married a second time, to Mrs. Rebecca E. Burr, of Joliet, Ill. By this marriage four children are living, Mrs. John Wehrley, of Somerville; Mrs. Clarence Oakley, of New Brunswick; Harry J. Swackhamer, and Mrs. Wilson S. Fredericks, of this place.

While in Warren county he was a freeholder for four years, from 1872 to 1874, the last three being director of the board. He was also Dunellen's first borough commissioners and in 1895 was elected mayor of the borough. He was connected with the First Presbyterian church, and served as an elder.

Mr. Swackhamer was a member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., of Plainfield, and a past master of Delaware Lodge, No. 52, F. and A. M., of Phillipsburg. He lived in this place thirty years.

The funeral services will be held from the Presbyterian church Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, and will be attended by members of the Masonic fraternity.

Mrs. Bedford's Confession.

By the confession of Mrs. Gunning S. Bedford that the child she had brought forward as the heiress to her husband's property was not her own child but was adopted, the Bedford estates valued at between $300,000 and $400,000, will be distributed among the heirs, of which there are five, Mrs. Zaregs, of this city, being one of them. The property consists of the most part of the real estate in New York City, on Washington Heights and the lower Greenwich street. Mrs. Bedford was fined $750, but if she had failed to confess and the case had been carried to the higher courts, a penalty of seven years imprisonment could have been inflicted.

Electricians Figuring.

Five electricians are now figuring on re-wiring the First Baptist church. The contract will be awarded within a short time. All of the electric light wires will have to be replaced with new wire.

The second games of the season for the Association League were played Saturday afternoon, the winning teams being the Reform Club and the Clinton Avenues. These two teams won the preceding Saturday giving them two victories so far this season.

REFORM A. A., 6; O. F. C., 5.

The Reform A. A.-Orange F. C. game was played Saturday afternoon on the field on South Second street grounds. The game was a close one and showed that the teams were evenly matched and the work on both was as good as any seen in this city this year. It was difficult to say which did the best pitching, Scott or Sherman. Good work was done in the field and on the diamond alike by both teams.

The lineups of the two teams was as follows: Reform Club—J. Scott, p; Brady, 1b; R. Scott, 2b; McGinley, 3b; Taylor, ss; O'Loughlin, c; Parent, rf; Higgins, lf; O'Neal, cf.

ALIS, 13; HOPE, 3.

The Alis baseball team redeemed itself Saturday afternoon, in its second game of the season with the Hope Y. M. A. team, when the latter was defeated by a score of 13 to 3. The game was played on Hope Common before a large crowd.

The Alis management strengthened the team; Hope, a young man from Brooklyn, occupying the box for Alis. His opponents only got two hits off him, while Barnes, who caught him, put up one of his old-time games, injecting plenty of "ginger" into the team. The other new men were Holzerst at short and Cox, of the Star A. C., of Newark, on third. After the first inning, Alis was invincible, and the three runs secured by Hope in that inning was all that they got. Alis played with snap and special mention should be made of fine playing of George Dupee, William Schoonmaker and Lederer.

In the absences of "Brit" Martin, who is laid up with a sore knee, Enright, of the Sate Works team, played second base on Hope.

CLINTON A., 11; C. GIANTS, 2.

On the Clinton avenue grounds the Clinton Avenues and Cuban Giants fought out a one sided battle Saturday afternoon. The Cuban Giants, although working under a disadvantage in lack of practice, put up a plucky fight. They were defeated by a score of 11 to 2. Nelson Davis and Brokaw surpassed themselves but were not strongly supported by their team] Dwyer, as pitcher for the Clinton Avenues, made the star points. He was strong at the bat and his curves kept the Cubans in a constant state of worry. Agpar was especially strong at right field and was later placed at third base. There were a number of changes in the positions of the men during the game as the following lineups will show:

Clinton Avenue—Pangborn, 3b and c; Dodd, ss; Bolmer, rf; Baker, c; Starbuck, cf; Fox, 2b; Hamilton and Sauns, 1b; Magus, lf; Dwyer, p; Apgar, rf and 3b.

The locals hammered Dodge at will, two and three base hits being numerous.

Following is the lineup and score by innings:

ST. MARY'S 21; ST. PETR, 2.

An avalanche of hits by St. Mary's and a lot of loose fielding by St. Peter's, of Newark, in the last three innings of Saturday's game on Crescent Oval, resulted in the swamping of the latter nine by a score of 21 to 2.

Up to the sixth, the score was 2 to 1 in favor of the visitors, and the playing was fast and exciting. In their half of the sixth, seventh and eighth innings, St. Mary's played tag on the bases at the expense of Stark, the opposing pitcher. Keefe, for St. Mary's, struck out ten men and allowed only five hits. The scores:

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS PUBLICLY AT SCHOOL

Borough School Board Includes That in the Revised Rules Approved Monday.

THE ROUTINE BUSINESS

RICHARD M'DONALD REAPPOINTED JANITOR ON OLD SALARY.

Coal Supply Ordered to Save Money —Some New Teachers—School Reopens for the Fall Term September 8.

Besides revising the rules draughted by the committee on rules which comprises Samuel Townsend and John Valiant, nothing else of importance occupying routine business was transacted at Monday's meeting of the Borough Board of Education when all the members were present.

Many essential changes were made in the rules relating to the purchase of supplies, and many other matters including the words in the first rule changing the place of meeting, as stated in the old rules, to the Somerset Street School building instead of "in the supervising principal's room;" and making the meeting public excepting in cases where the board desires to go into executive session or when the board decides to hold a private session.

In the routine business which came up before the board there were several matters of moment.

It was stated by the President that Miss French has been re-engaged as assistant teacher at the Watchung School. Dr. Cooley, as chairman of the building and grounds committee, reported that he has ordered the supply of coal for the coming year. One hundred tons have been ordered which will mean a saving of a dollar a ton in the coal bill.

After considerable discussion it was decided to re-appoint the janitor, Richard McDonald, for another year at the same salary as heretofore beginning July 1, but with the understanding that if his work is not satisfactory upon notice of thirty days he shall be removed. Henry DeMott, of Somerset street, made a proposition to the board, offering to keep a man at the school continually for the sum of $75 a month and offered his services whenever they were needed. His proposition was laid upon the table.

Chairman, Dr. Cooley, of the building and grounds committee, reported that he had received a communication from the committee in charge of the commencement day exercises of the senior class asking that that class be permitted to hold its exercises in the chapel. The matter was not considered as the board, at a previous meeting, decided that it would necessitate the removal of the seats in the room causing damage to the flooring.

Chairman Woodruff, of the supplies committee, reported thus the cost of supplies this year would amount to $1,086.36 with $264.21 for manual training, making the total cost $1,350.57. The appropriation for expenses outside of the manual training department, provided at the last election was $1,200. A bid was received by Mr. Woodruff from a publishing house bidding on the work of supplying the books etc., which will mean a saving of from $150 to $200 on the bill with a discount if the order is placed before June 15 and a further discount if the bill is paid in cash. The chairman was authorized to purchase the supplies at an amount not to exceed the amount stated.

Samuel Townsend, as chairman of the truancy committee, reported that that work was well in hand and he was able to report very favorably. The attendance at the school as a result of the crusade was much better.

President of the Board James B. Joy announced that Miss E. M. Van Plank and Miss E. M. Richards have accepted positions as teachers for the coming year. This completes the list of teachers for the opening term.

On motion of Chairman John Valiant, of the finance and auditing committee, the President and clerk were authorized to issue warrants for $1,436.53 for which $1,274.39 is for the general fund and $224.14 is for the manual training department.

Superintendent Homer J. Wightman made a suggestion that the school term open on September 8, which was agreed upon by the members. Mr. Valiant stated that the insurance on the school building would expire in July. The policy will be renewed at 40 cents. $15 were voted by the board for the senior class day exercises as has been the custom of the board for a number of years. It was announced that the class day speaker would be Rev. Dr. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut.

A report from the district collector was read showing that there was $8,-234.30 in the treasury.

Before the meeting adjourned it was decided to approve the revised rules and the committee on rules was authorized to have 300 copies printed in book form.

A matter was brought up outside of the regular business of the meeting of the board when the question as to whether or not to allow a fair to be held on the school grounds was discussed. It was stated that the class of '04 was in no way connected with the banner and the use of the grounds was denied Henry C. Brose, who arranged the affair.

AUTHORITY ON BIRDS TALKS TO WORKERS

Audubon Society Holds Its Annual Meeting in Crescent Ave. Church—New Officers.

DR. W. DUTCHER SPOKE

DETAILS OF PROGRESS OF THE SOCIETY IN OTHER STATES.

Discussion of Ways and Means of Protecting Feathered Flocks—Agreement With Milliners' Association for Bird Protection.

The annual meeting of the Audobon Society of New Jersey, at the Crescent Avenue church last Monday, was addressed by Dr. William Dutcher, of New York City, the treasurer of the American Ornithological Society, and the highest authority in the world on the birds of Long Island. President Alexander Gilbert presided.

Dr. Dutcher spoke of the work of the association during the past year, referring to the agreement with the Millinery Merchants Protective Association as the most important achievement. By this agreement, made with the New York Audobon Society, the Milliners Association bound itself not to deal in or import a specified number of song birds and other harmless and useful birds. Eight States, during the past year, have added to their statutes laws prohibiting the slaughter of birds, and progress in safeguarding their preservation is reported in nearly every State of the Union.

Dr. Dutcher spoke of the necessity of insisting upon a legislature and a governor in New Jersey who should be pledged to favor laws encouraging the preservation of birds. He concluded by references to the educational work of the Audobon Society, which is preparing a series of pamphlets designed to inculcate a love for birds and a knowledge of their habits.

The society adopted resolutions concerning in the agreement with the Millinery Association. The following officers were re-elected to serve for another year:

AMATEURS IN CIRCUS ARENA

Grand and Glorious Was the Opening Performance of the I. C. T. Club Circus.

PROFESSIONALS THERE

Stunts by Local Young Men and Professional Talent Were Highly Entertaining and Very Clever —Mayor Smalley Made a Great Ringmaster.

Local young men in the saw dust arena as clowns, jockeys and star entertainers kept two hundred people amused Friday night at the opening of the I. C. T. Club circus on St. Mary's baseball field, West Fourth street and Darrow avenue.

Barkers fresh from Coney Island announced from tall pedestals that it was the greatest aggregation of trapeze performers, tight-rope walkers, acrobats and clowns that ever came down the pike. And the performance bore out the truth of their words. From the time Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, clad in a pair of gorgeous, skin tight trousers, with dress coat and vest and tall silk hat, appeared, whip in hand, in the saw dust ring and announced that the big show would now commence, until the last act of the grand concert following, the audience realized that they were up against the real thing.

In the big exhibition parade, wherein the entire troupe of performers, professional and amateur, did stunts around the ring, there were many Plainfield youths hardly recognizable in their cleverly comical make-ups. They were a circus in themselves and kept the assemblage in "one continuous round of laughter." The feats performed by the professional talent inspired the audience with wonderment and admiration.

The side show was one of the main attractions, and before the big show commenced, large numbers accepted the invitations extended them by Thomas M. Muir and Matthew D. Sweeney, who were the leading lights as bosses of "the greatest and most gigantic exhibition on earth." Freaks of every shape and condition excited the enthusiasm of hundreds, who rejoiced in the aggregation of wonders represented in the fat man and the skeleton, the giant and the dwarf, and the stupendous curiosities as seen exemplified in the dog-faced boy and the bearded lady.

Mat Sweeney and Tom Muir were themselves well worth the price of admission. As barkers their flow of eloquence went the limit of professional skill, and they talked it up like old timers, with a vocabulary of astonishing size and richness. In the galaxy of human wonders constituting the side show, no one feature can be specially mentioned. All the freaks were the "original and only" as witness the following list: Living skeleton, Lewis Vroom; tiger, Wallie Arnold; Chinese giant, Howard Drake; bearded lady, Charles Hurdle; dog-faced boy, Teddy Howes; Albino lady, Jerry Griffen; leopard boy, William Hicky; fat man, C. H. Bilyea; human bull frog, Grover Marsh. The fat man, Chinese giant and dog-faced boy were particular subjects of awe. The clowns, who performed in the big show itself, were Tom. Muir, Mat. Sweeney, William Harsell and Don. Bechtelle, and their antics kept the spectators in roars of merriment.

The local cast, of which all the members were able to inspire "the smiles that won't come off," consisted of the following artists: Bare back rider, Mlle. Leonce Texier; lecturer, Matthew D. Sweeney; rubes, H. Bitzan and George Cose; strong man, W. L. Holbert; Buffalo Bill, E. J. Texier; Happy Hooligan, J. Robinson; Alkali Mike, Charles Heartle; Foxy Grandpa, A. Springer; jockeys, J. Sweeney, Paul Overbaugh, A. Caleen, A. Marsh, William Firstbrook, M. Squier. The rubes were C. M. Dolliver and Allen E. Beal. Holbert's toying with the weights, as Signor Dublin Stout, and his wonderful shape brought down the house.

The professional side of the performance was unusually good. The horseback riding of Victor Bedini, Mlle. Flora and Mlle. Osang is not surpassed even in Barnum & Bailey's "greater show on earth." George Barnard has a jaw that would do credit to a popular orator or an outraged mother-in-law, and he used it to perform feats of strength that were seemingly impossible. The acrobatic feats of the Bedini family and the three Bartellis were out of the ordinary, and the funny act of Johnny Farris and his donkey, together with the gymnicus on the wire of Mlle. Adele added variety. The most novel act of all was that of Diva, the monkey, who looped the loop in an automobile.

Greatest credit for the success of the undertaking belongs to the manager and chairman of the I. C. T. committee, V. W. Nash, Jr. Mr. Nash labored long and at considerable self-sacrifice in the interests of the show, and was well supported by the following, who composed the rest of the committee: Leonce Texier, George L. Apgar, William Waters, John Kelly, Charles Bahr, Joseph Robinson, Irving Mills, Edward Texier and Charles Hurtle.

VALUABLE HORSE INJURED

CAUGHT ITS FOOT IN SIDE OF CAR DURING SHIPMENT.

Bloodied Equine, Shipped to a Local Dealer, Badly Hurt in the Car.

A carload of horses arrived in this city Wednesday afternoon consigned from the west to Stonewall Jackson, of this borough. There were twenty horses in the car, which was a large one but somehow the horses got loose on the way up.

When the car arrived one horse was found to have been crowded into one corner and in some manner managed to kick a small portion of the side of the car out and one of its feet and a leg was protruding from the side of the car about two feet. How long the horse was a prisoner in that manner will not be known but when the animal was released it was found that the flesh on that leg had been torn off in several places and to the bone. Dr. Herbert, the veterinary surgeon, was called in and bandaged the injured limb. Mr. Jackson says that the horse will recover although it will be permanently injured.

The animal was a blooded horse and was brought here for a local horse fancier who saw the animal in a horse show in Philadelphia and had it sent here on trial, Mr. Jackson having had the animal consigned to him by its owners in Philadelphia.

To Render the "Messiah."

Arthur G. Drake, the organist of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and leader of the New Brunswick Choral Society, will give an orchestral rendition of the "Messiah" in New Brunswick on the evening of June 10. He was in New York recently and secured twenty members of the New York Philharmonic Society to play the parts. The musicians are the best that can be obtained as they played under Walter Damrosh and Emile Paur recently.

JOHN BROWN'S BODY.

Authentic Story of Origin of the Famous War Song.

Oshkosh (Wis.) Banker, Who Was One of the Original Quartette That Sang It in 1861, Talks About Its Composition.

Efforts by veterans of the great civil war to discover the authors of "John Brown's Body" from the ash heap of time, have brought to light the history of the stirring song.

A man in Oshkosh is able to tell the story, for he was one of the original quartette that sang it over 40 years ago, and he assisted in the evolution of the song. This modest veteran of the rebellion, who was one of the men who made the memorable escape from the tunnel at Libbey prison, is James Howard Jenkins, president of the German national bank of Oshkosh.

This is how Mr. Jenkins tells of the birth of the song: In the early spring of 1861 the Boston light infantry, a battalion of three companies, under command of Maj. Rogers, of the Boston Journal, was sent to Fort Warren, in Boston harbor, for drill and garrison duty. This battalion was made up largely of the better class of city boys and was to Boston what the Seventh regiment was to New York.

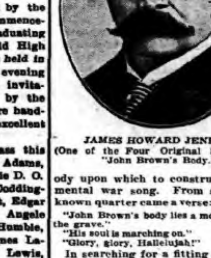
When the call for troops became pressing the battalion offered its services, which, however, could not be accepted, save as it could be incorporated in one of the regiments then forming. Accordingly the battalion disbanded and a rush was made by its members to enlist in the Twelfth and Thirteenth regiments. The Twelfth was completed first and was sent to Fort Warren for organization and drill.

Among its members were many excellent singers. One of the male quartettes was composed of four sergeants —Jenkins, Brown, Edgerley and Eldredge—who were continually on the lookout for a good marching melody upon which to construct a regimental war song. From some unknown quarter came a verse: '

"John Brown's body lies a-moulering in the grave."

"His soul is marching on."

"Glory, glory, Hallelujah!"



JAMES HOWARD JENKINS.
(One of the Four Original Singers of "John Brown's Body.")

In searching for a fitting tune they adapted an old camp meeting melody sung by the colored Methodists at the Martha's Vineyard camp meetings to the words: "Come, brothers, will you meet us?"

The song "took" at once, and the simplicity of the chorus, with its swing and lilt, made it at once popular. The verses that followed were improved from time to time. The death of Col. Ellsworth, which occurred at that time, occasioned the verse:

"We lament the death of Col. Ellsworth,
And his pets (his Zouaves) will meet him on the way."

The second tenor of the quartette was a short, broad-shouldered Scotchman named John Brown. When he put on his knapsack for the first time, with his red-lined overcoat rolled up its top, he looked so topheavy that the boys laughed at him. But quick witted and good-natured, he retorted by marching up and down, singing:

"John Brown's knapsack is strapped upon his back."

This was straightway added to the list of verses. "We'll hang Jeff Davis to a sour apple tree" was the natural expression of a rampant Massachusetts man.

On Saturday afternoons Gilmore's band came to the fort to play at dress parade, and large numbers of visitors were also present. One Saturday the quartette went with Gilmore into one of the casemates and sang the song to him, he following with his cornet till he had fixed the air in his memory. On his return to Boston he had it arranged for his band. The following Saturday it was played for the first time in front of the Twelfth Massachusetts regiment infantry at dress parade at Fort Warren, Boston harbor.

On its way to the front the regiment passed through New York and dined on City Hall square. On the march down Broadway the men formed to march down Broadway to the ferry the band struck up "John Brown," and the regiment sang it to the cheers and shouting and excitement of the thousands that lined the street.

Of the original quartette, John Brown was drowned while crossing a swollen stream near Fort Royal. Eldredge died some years ago. Edgerley at last accounts was living in Boston. The fourth member of the quartette, J. H. Jenkins, has lived in Oshkosh since 1865, and has presented the foregoing as what he conceives to be the correct version of the origin of the most famous of the northern battle songs of the civil war.

THEATRICAL.

Grace George's performance of "Pretty Peggy" has provided the chief sensation of the dramatic season in New York. Miss George's success is such that when the Herald Square Theatre, at which she is appearing, passes into other hands in May the run will be continued elsewhere on Broadway. Grace George will continue her next season's tour in "Pretty Peggy" to Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Pittsburg. Return engagements will be played in Chicago and New York, where the actress is now appearing at the Herald Square Theatre.

"The Earl of Pawtucket" at the Manhattan Theatre, New York, is nearing the fifth month of its run with attendance just as large and the indications for its continuance just as strong as during the early weeks of its career. This comedy has been the talk of the town from its beginning. Theatre parties comprising the very best class of people and ranging anywhere in numbers from ten to one hundred have grown to be the custom at the Manhattan. The merits of the comedy require no better indorsement than the fact that some of the most noble statesmen, literateurs and artists as well as the throng of fashion have seen it and continue among its audiences.

After its preliminary sprint of two weeks, "The Runaway" at the cool, pretty and popular Casino, has set a pace which will be hard for all succeeding musical plays to follow. The two weeks have been just enough to show the enterprising management where the elaborate production would be still further improved and enlivened and this has been done to such an extent that the show is going livelier and more tunefully than ever. Arthur Dunn, Alexander Clark, Van Rensselaer Wheeler, William Gould, Al. Fields, William Wolf, Miss Dorothy Dorr, Miss Amelia Stone, Miss Helen Lord, Miss May Heugler, Miss Flora Heugler, Miss Susanne Halpren, Miss Mabel Carrier, Miss Florence Worden, Miss Miriam Falconer, Miss Margaret Rohe and the others in the big company of 160 are doing their share to deserve the vast amount of praise being accorded to them from all sides for clever and conscientious work.

The Herald Square Theatre Monday evening, and undoubtedly for many weeks to follow, will be the means for all lovers of stage fun who live in New York, or who visit that city. Klaw & Erlanger will then present for the first time in New York the new American farce by George V. Hobart and Edward E. Rose, founded on the former's comic stories of "John Henry," in which Dan Daly plays the title role, supported by a large company of the most talented artists in farcical comedy on the American stage. The story of "John Henry" is told in three acts with scenes representing the rotunda of one of the most fashionable hotels in New York, Dove's Nest Villa at Ruraldene, a suburb of New York, and the railroad station at that place. It is unusually well developed in its humorous interest, the situations are very effective from the comic standpoint, the dialogue is bright and fairly teems with piquant originality of expression, especially in the lines of "John Henry," and it is told with a snap that makes it very entertaining.

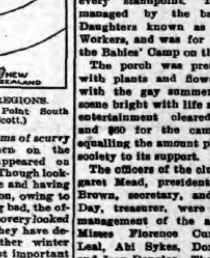
NEAR TO SOUTH POLE

Borchgrevink's Record Broken by "Discovery" Expedition.

Commander Scott Succeeded in Getting Three and One-Half Degrees Further South Than Norwegian Explorer.

The Morning, the relief vessel to the British antarctic ship Discovery, has returned to Lyttelton, New Zealand, and reports that she found the Discovery on January 23 in McMurdo bay, Victoria Land. From the record of the expedition brought back it appears that the Discovery, which left Lyttelton about Christmas, 1901, made Cape Adare on January 9, and coasted along the great ice barrier which runs eastward from Cape Crozier as far as longitude 152.30, where an extensive glacial land with lofty peaks was discovered. Returning westward good winter quarters were found near Mounts Erebus and Terror, and the ship was frozen in on March 24. When winter had passed sleighing began on September 2, 1902, and a number of sledge journeys were undertaken in various directions, the most important being made by Commander Scott, Dr. Wilson and Lieut. Shackleton, who traveled south until they reached latitude 82.17 and longitude 153 west, and established a world's record for the farthest point south. The trip was made under very trying conditions, and the party had to drag the sledges back to the ship, the dogs having died on the the outward journey. Lieut Shackleton burst a blood vessel in one of his lungs, and almost died from exposure. He returned on board the Morning. Another party, which included Lieut. Royds and Mr. Skelton, visited Mount Terror, and traveled along the ice barrier, which is believed to be southern, though fed from the land ice. Lieut. Armitage made a sledge journey to the westward, and attained an altitude of 9,000 feet. On the return journey he fell into a crevasse, and if he had not been roped to the others would have fallen 2,000 feet. Symptoms of scurvy appeared among the men on the sledge journeys, but disappeared on their return to the ship. Though looking aged by the hard life and having experienced some privation, owing to part of the supplies being bad, the officers and crew of the Discovery looked well and cheerful, and they have determined to spend another winter among the ice. The most important geographical discovery made by the expedition is that Victoria Land has been found to extend at least as far as latitude 78.20 south, and it is thought that the greater part of that region is a vast continent which stretches away to the pole in a series of lofty mountains. The lowest temperature recorded by the expedition was 62 degrees below zero.



THE SOUTH POLAR REGIONS.
(Map Showing Furthest Point South Reached by Capt. Scott.)

Almost nothing was known of the south polar regions until 130 years ago, when Capt. Cook circumnavigated the earth in latitude 50 degrees, and proved the absence of the great southern continent, which, until then, had been supposed to exist. The antarctic circle was crossed for the first time by Cook in 1773, when he succeeded in penetrating to latitude 71 degrees ten minutes, a point which was not broken until 1822, when Weddell attained to latitude 74.15. In 1842 Sir James Ross penetrated to latitude 78.10, and this remained the highest southern point ever reached until 1900, when Borchgrevink pushed his way to latitude 78.40, and constituted another record, which has now been broken by Commander Scott, who succeeded in getting three and a half degrees further south, or to a point only 250 miles more distant from the south pole than Nansen's furthest point was from the north pole.

Woman Has Money to Burn.

Mrs. Ann Law, of Spring street, Trenton, N. J., cooked a 30-cent steak the other morning with a roll of greenbacks worth $300. Mrs. Law was going to Philadelphia on a shopping tour and drew $200 from the bank. She had the money, which was inclosed in an envelope, on a table in the sitting room. She decided to breakfast on steak before leaving home, and, gathering a handful of paper, kindled a fire in the kitchen stove. The steak was soon cooked it dawned on Mrs. Law's mind that she had used the greenbacks for kindling. She gathered the ashes and took them to the mint in Philadelphia to find out if she could get her money back.

Fresh Air in Tablet Form.

Fresh air in tablet form is a preparation discovered by a French scientist. While experimenting in his laboratory he discovered that he could combine certain chemicals into a tablet, which, on being dropped into water, dissolved and gave forth pure oxygen. These tablets will be exceedingly useful in the closed carriage, a submarine boat, a mine or anywhere else where the air has become vitiated.

A PRETTY PORCH PARTY

GIVEN BY CHEERFUL WORKERS, LOCAL BAND OF KING'S DAUGHTERS.

At Residence of Mrs. Frederick G. Mead—Those in Charge of the Sale.

A porch party at the residence of Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, of East Front street, Friday afternoon, was largely attended and successful from every standpoint. The party was managed by the band of King's Daughters known as the Cheerful Workers, and was for the benefit of the Babies' Camp on the mountain.

The porch was prettily decorated with plants and flowers, and those with the gay summer gowns made a scene bright with life and color. The entertainment cleared between $50 and $60 for the camp, more than equalling the amount pledged by the society to its support.

The officers of the club, Miss Margaret Mead, president; Miss Edith Brown, secretary, and Miss Maysie Day, treasurer, were assisted in the management of the affair by the Misses Florence Curtis, Margaret Leal, Abi Sykes, Dorothy Fleming and Jean Douglas. The young women dispensed cake, candy and lemonade from different tables, and ice cream was served afterwards. A fancy work table completed the list. The receipts were augmented by offerings at the door.

FAREWELL GATHERING.

Friends of Alex. Muir Assembled to Bid Him Good-Bye.

Miss Mary McCann, entertained a few friends, Thursday night, at her home on West Fourth street. Twenty people were present. The affair was entirely informal and was in the nature of a farewell to Alex. Muir, who is to take up new duties in Waterbury, Conn. An impromptu programme consisted of piano selections by Miss Helen Squiers, vocal numbers by Matthew Sweeney, and selections on the phonograph with Alex. Muir in charge. Dancing and refreshments followed, and the company broke up at about 1 o'clock.

FINGER IN WRINGER.

Little Dorothy Keller Nearly Lost a Finger by Accident.

Dorothy, the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Keller, of Harrison avenue, had the end of her finger badly crushed Wednesday afternoon while romping about the yard. In some way she got her finger between the cogwheels of a clothes wringer while it was being operated by another person. The child's finger was lacerated terribly and Dr. Pittis was called upon to dress the wound. He secured the child's parents that it would not be necessary to amputate the member.

UNION COUNTY HAS MADE GREAT RECORD

Its Prosperity Summed Up in Editorial Columns of the Elizabeth Journal.

PRAISE FOR DIRECTOR

GREATEST OF ITS IMPROVEMENTS IS ITS MACADAM ROADS.

Praise for Director J. Frank Hubbard and Collector Wood, Who Have Done Their Work Well—Full Text of Editorial.

During the recent agitation for the annexation of the borough of Plainfield to Union county, a great deal was said about this county which was far from the truth. The enemies of the plan, many of them, tried to paint Union county as a horrible place. On the occasion of the annual meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders, the Elizabeth Journal summarized the situation in the county and pointed out what a record the county had made. This editorial from the Journal is copied in full as it is well worth reading, particularly to every citizen of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

The Journal says:

"The Board of Chosen Freeholders has done well in re-electing J. Frank Hubbard as its director and Edward M. Wood as the county collector. Mr. Hubbard has been director for sixteen years and a member of the board for more than twice that number of years. As director he has had great responsibilities and he has shown high executive ability. The weight of years is upon him, but unless energy has been marked in his faithful attention to public service. Even during the past few months when illness has prevented him from doing outdoor service he has been the counsellor of his colleagues and the duties of his office have been performed in accordance with his wise judgment. Physically feeble, but with his mind vigorous, his interest in the duties of office continued, and from his sick room came advice and direction of great value. It was a great satisfaction to his colleagues to greet him at the board meeting yesterday and there was sincerity in the wishes expressed for continual improvement in his health and strength.

"County Collector Wood was re-elected for the eighth time. The term is for three years. He has served as county collector for thirteen years, which were successive, with the exception of two years when the office was held by William M. Oliver. The election of Mr. Wood was an expression of confidence and an reward due one who has served the public with such signal ability. To his fidelity and conscientious work the county owes much of its splendid financial standing.

"The duties of the office of county collector have grown more and more onerous, and it was just to increase the annual salary as the board did when it honored Mr. Wood by re-electing him.

"The financial standing of Union county, and the achievement under the present management reflect great credit on Director Hubbard, Mr. Wood and their associates—the Board of Freeholders. Since Mr. Wood was first elected collector the county has made great progress. In 1888, fifteen years ago, the total receipts were $398,000. The total for the year was over $751,000. During this period the war bonds outstanding have been reduced from $260,000 to $96,000, and the freshet bonds to the amount of $96,000 have been paid off. The county in 15 years has paid off bonds to the amount of $260,000. There was raised by taxes in 1888 on an assessed valuation of $27,000,000, the sum of $280,000. In 1903 the total taxable valuation was $45,000,000, and the amount raised by taxation $290,000. This shows that all has been achieved and at the same time with the tax rate decreasing each year.

"There have been in this period great improvements, conspicuously the construction of the fifty-three miles or more of the finest county roads in the country. This great improvement cost $600,000, of which amount $30,000 was paid by taxation. The Freeholders have handled all these immense sums of money and not a dollar has been misapplied. The administration has been economical, and yet with sufficient spirit of liberality to keep the county affairs up with the times. The county is now building a court house, to cost half a million dollars, and the record of the past are to manage this great enterprise. It would be folly at this time to make changes in the county administration."

COMIC OPERA BY AMATEURS

'Pirates of Penzance" at the Casino Last Thursday Was a Complete Success.

HOUSE WAS CROWDED

Splendid Chorus Work Reflected Great Credit on Wm. Holmes—Miss Aimee Delanoix Made a Decided Hit—Good Work by Other Members of Cast.

Gilbert's and Sullivan's "Pirates of Penzance," which has attained very nearly the dignity of a comic opera classic, was given by local talent last Thursday, at the Casino, before a crowded house. To state that the performance was highly successful and creditable is putting the case mildly.

William Holmes, under whose direction and stage management the production was prepared, had trained his company to a degree of excellence bound professional. Indeed, there are professional companies on the present day stage that would be quite incapable of the facile interpretation of the parts given last night by amateur performers. Particularly to be noted indicating the character of Mr. Holmes' work, his care and attention to detail, was the singing and stage during of a well balanced, skillfully drilled chorus, which far surpassed in the usual professional chorus in Canada.

First honors of the evening belonged early, though not overwhelmingly, to Miss Aimee Delanoix, who sang in the role of "Mabel." Miss Delanoix has a remarkable soprano voice, clear, full of expression, capable of delicate shadings in color and sentiment, compassing the highest notes with strength and ease. Her stage presence was admirable. Mrs. Fernando M. Ward made a highly satisfactory "Ruth." She used a charming voice to the best advantage, and her acting was no less deserving of praise than her singing.

Raymond A. McGee, with a pleasing bearing and a voice of splendid power, was a notable pirate chief. William Holmes scored a hit as Major-General Stanley," and Wilson N. Runyon acquitted himself (to phrase it used advisedly) nobly, using much humor into his interpretation of the part of police sergeant. George H. Smith was in excellent voice, although his stage presence left something to be desired. The orchestration was good, excellent in fact; and it was a pleasure to note that mistake, so frequently made in amateur theatricals, of allowing the orchestra to drown out the solo parts was avoided. Howard M. Case wielded the baton and cleverly directed the chorus. The cast was as follows:

Richard, a Pirate chief, Raymond A. McGee; Samuel, his lieutenant, Fred't J. Page; Frederick, a Pirate apprentice, George H. Smith; Major-General Stanley, William Holmes; Edward, sergeant of police, William N. Runyon; Mabel, General Stanley's youngest daughter, Miss Aimee Delanoix; Gen. Stanley's daughters, Kate, Miss Grace M. Phillips; Edith, Miss Cornelia Miller; Isabel, Miss Ada M. Dunham; Ruth, a Piratical "maid-of-all-work," Mrs. Fernando M. Ward; chorus of General Stanley's daughters, pirates, policemen, etc.

The chorus consisted of the Misses Ida Boice, Mae Brouwer, Emma Craig, Bessie Giles, Elsie Giles, Daisy Hatton, Marjorie Phillips, May E. Pound, Susan M. Pound, Etta Randolph, Lou F. Randolph, Elizabeth Sears, L. W. Stafford, Ida M. Tilney, Mildred Ulrich, Ada Van Arsdale; Meadames Clayton M. Nagle, Beatrice Runyon, Wm. Townsend; Bert R. Apgar, Charles Belknap, Jas. H. Bertheiser, A. S. Brouwer, Sidney Craig, William B. Gilbert, Wesley S. Hall, R. R. Hampston, W. Jeffery, Jr., Albert I. Littell, Irving Martin, Joseph C. Martin, William M. Miner, Harry J. Northrop, Willard Rosencrantz, Clarence Stephen, Louis V. Tallamy, Harry S. Vandusen, Paul Whitall, Harry C. Yeager.

COACHMEN AID HOSPITAL

GIVE BENEFIT DANCE AT SAENGER-BUND HALL.

Proves Great Success—Guests There From Many Other Towns—The Committee.

One of the largest dances given in Saengerbund Hall this spring was that given Thursday by the Coachmen's Benovolent Society for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital. It was a success from start to finish.

It was not until late in the evening that the crowd began to gather. At 11 o'clock the floor was well filled with many young people from this city as well as from Elizabeth, Bound Brook, Westfield, Morristown and New York. Representatives of Coachman's Union No. 2, of New York, were here to the number of twenty-five. The decorations in the hall were most appropriate to the affair and the new electric lights in the main hall were used for the first time.

The dance was arranged by the following committee: John Harley, chairman; William Barry, secretary and floor manager; Joseph Strapp, assistant floor manager; and Joseph Sweeney; assisted by the officers of the society: President, Augustus Keading; vice president, James Wierenga; secretary and treasurer, James Fraser; and financial secretary, James G. Kyle.

The music for the dance was provided by Professor O'Reilly's full orchestra. The tickets at the door were collected by George Gunther and the *patrons were received by the re*ception committee: Patrick McLaughlin, Patrick Sullivan, John Donnelley, Geo. Ball and William Hines.

This is the first time the Coachman's Society has given a dance of any kind.

LAKE GEORGE.

Major Coughlin Told Y. M. C. A. Something of It.

An instructive and interesting illustrated lecture was given at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday on "Lake George," by Major W. H. Coughlin, of Brooklyn, under the auspices of the association. A large number of very fine views were thrown on the canvas in showing the beautiful scenery to the found at this famous summer resort. It is at this place that the Y. M. C. A. holds its annual conference and the lecture was given for the purpose of interesting persons in the place thereby securing their promise to spend their vacation there this season.

All the views were colored and they gave a most realistic idea of that delightful place in the mountains. Major Coughlin is thoroughly acquainted with Lake George and is well qualified to describe its beauties. After the lecture a number signified their intention of going to Lake George this summer.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 31, "Missionary Meetings Work Among Heathen Women."

The moral character of any people is determined by its estimate of woman.

There is no surer clew in the historical study of human advancement than the regard for womanhood. Christian womanhood stands worldwide apart from and above heathen womanhood in any age or in any nation. The respect in which womankind are now held in Christian lands is not the same among all nationalities, but is alike in this—a far higher place is accorded them than in any pagan or Mohammedan communities.

Probably the lowest place in the scale of womanhood is reached in some parts of Africa, on the east coast and back to the interior in the Portuguese possessions. Here her value is computed in cows, if she chances to be daughter of a chief. She is a slave, to be bought and sold at the caprice of her father or husband. She builds the hut, cultivates the soil with hard labor and cooks the meals for the man who owns her and to whom she bears children. The number he may own like her is limited only by his power to purchase. Sin-rot, polygamy and witchcraft preside in her world and make it a living hell when compared with the lot of Christian women in homes of love and purity.

The condition of woman in more civilized lands has no brighter features and yet is most pathetic in many particulars. Romantic love in those regions has no part in family life, and there is no conception of home as it is understood in the Christian lands. There are many details of family life which appear in China and Japan and India and other lands which are valuable and should be preserved and adopted everywhere, but the foundations as a whole are inadequate to the fullest and highest development of womanly virtue and worth. The reverence for parents and influence of motherhood in the Chinese family, the unvarying politeness and patient obedience of Japan, *the deep religiousness of the wo*men of India are all admirable.

The work of Christian women for their heathen sisters, though but recently begun in any systematic manner, is an advancement. It takes several forms. As important as any work is that of the medical mis*sionaries. No such thing as medical* science exists in any heathen country except as introduced by Christian physicians. Crudest quackery and superstition prevail among native practitioners. No male doctor is allowed in the orient to visit and examine a female patient. The medical woman missionary, with curse which is active minds and a truly miraculous, finds welcome everywhere and is able with medicines for bodily ills to also carry the good tidings for sin cursed souls.

Next to the curse of disease lies the cruel ignorance of heathendom. These prevail in all heathendom. Education gives occupation to the idle mind, fills life with new and higher ideals and incentives. The school of all grades, from kindergarten to college, is leading heathen womanhood into a new world of being.

Greater than either of these agencies, however, is the direct preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ, which for the first time in ages gives to the human idea of future blessedness for woman and a life of love and happiness on earth. God speed the holy work for purer womanhood!

Christianity.

The thing Christianity is here to do is to make men right in their feelings. It may not always make people wise. It may not give them correct understanding of things nor attempt to. That quality of heart that Christianity alone can produce is something that correct understanding has almost nothing to do with. We know how much a child can love his mother without understanding his mother, without having ever in any way thought nicely and accurately about her. Indeed, it is his love for her that helps him to understand her a great deal more than it is his understanding of her that makes him love her.—Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D.

Tomorrow.

Tomorrow is not for us to rejoice in or to fear. It may never come to us, and if it comes its bringings may be very different from our thought. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof and the good thereof. However trying today may be it can be endured for today, and tomorrow may be without trials. However joyous may be today tomorrow may be far better.—Sunday School Times.

When.

When I can do so more.
I always can do this:
I can look upon and implore
Strength for my helplessness.

When shadows cloud my way,
I clasp the hand of One
Who safely leads, by night or day;
I never am alone.

When my own wisdom fails,
I ask and am taught;
With wisdom which avails;
My Saviour is my Guide.

When in some rugged road
I tread with bleeding feet
And faint underneath my load,
My Helper there I meet.

When driven to despair
By wild or sudden grief,
My Comforter is always there
With succor and relief.

When tempted by the love
Of some seductive sin,
Escape is promised and made sure;
My Keeper is within.

When fade my treasure here,
When gain and loss befall,
Oh, then my Keeper, Comforter,
Shall be my all in all!

FIGHTING AGAINST DRINK

TEMPERANCE EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY HOLDS ENTERTAINMENT.

Remarks on Subject of Temperance and Musical Programme Given.

An interesting entertainment was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms last evening under the auspices of the Temperance Educational Society. The object of these affairs is to promote temperance and prohibition. William Langer is the president and under his direction an excellent programme was presented last evening.

After the introductory remarks by Mr. Langer, a stirring temperance address was delivered by Charles M. Rayburn, who told of the evils of intemperance and of ways to stop it. The next speaker was Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, who expounded the principles of temperance and graphically portrayed the great harm attendant upon the drink habit.

After the addresses there were vo*cal selections by the Watchung quar*tette, George, Edward and Henry Spier and Ephraim Acker; soprano solos by Miss Florence Acker; piano solos by Miss Matilda Edgar and violin solos by George Spier, accompanied on the piano by Edward Spier.

At the close of the entertainment, Mr. Langer urged all to give earnest support to the movement. He announced that plans were being made for an oratorical contest for the next meeting the latter part of June.

DEATH OF AMOS HETFIELD.

Followed a Severe Coughing Spell Thursday Morning.

Amos Hetfield, ninety-one years of age, a brother of the late Levi and Squire Hetfield, of this city, died at his home in Rahway Thursday morning after a severe coughing spell. He was a carriage maker but lived a retired life at the time of his death. He was born in Westfield but at an early age moved to Rahway where he had resided ever since.

He was an uncle to Walter L. Hetfield, of this city, and is survived by a daughter. He was the oldest living member of the Hetfield family, the next oldest being Squire Hetfield, of this city, who is eighty-nine years of age.

The funeral was held Saturday afternoon from the Baptist church at Rahway where the interment took place in the Baptist cemetery.

JERSEY FLOODS.

Discussed at Length in Annual Report of State Geologist.

The annual report of the State Geologist of New Jersey, Dr. Henry B. Kummel, contains an interesting and valuable discussion of the great floods of March, 1902, which were investigated by C. C. Vermeule, of Orange, the well-known water expert. His studies show that on the Delaware at Easton the flood was as high as any ever known, while on the Passaic at Paterson it exceeded any flood since 1810. He estimates that the amount flowing over Dundee dam during the eight days of the freshet would have filled a square reservoir measuring a mile on each side and 266 feet deep.

Fears have been expressed that if the plans of the Passaic Drainage Commission are carried out at Little Falls, the height of great floods at Paterson and Passaic would be greatly increased. Mr. Vermeule discusses this question exhaustively, and shows that these fears are groundless, since the height of the flood is not controlled by the height of the dam at Little Falls, but by the size of the channel above the falls. Copies of his report can be obtained by application to the State Geologist at Trenton.

EXPELL WALKING DELEGATE

Trouble in Trades and Labor Federation of New Brunswick.

The Trades and Labor Federation of New Brunswick, has expelled Wesley H. Pollard, as walking delegate of the Plainsboro Paperhangers and Decorators Union for having made the statement that Janeway & Company's wall paper was not on the unfair list and for having handled the paper of that company. Pollard claims that he was justified in the stand he took and will carry the matter up to the International body of Paperhangers' Union. He will make a fight for re-instatement.

Pollard is well-known in this city as a walking delegate among the painters and paperhangers, with whom he has had dealings in the course of his business.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 31—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Missions in the island world.—Isa. xlii. 10-12; lx. 4, 5.

In connection with his prophecies concerning the extension of Christianity throughout the world Isaiah makes frequent reference to the island world. In the topical references he calls upon the isles and the inhabitants thereof" to "sing unto the Lord a new song" and declares "surely the isles shall wait for me and the ships of Tarshish first to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them, unto the name of the Lord thy God and to the Holy One of Israel, because He hath glorified thee." These and similar passages illustrate the fact that in the Christianization of the world its islands were to bear an important part.

The history of Christian missions has fulfilled the predictions of the prophet. Island missions have been prominent from the beginning. Christianity obtained its earliest and most enduring triumphs in the islands of the Mediterranean and all through its history island missions have been conspicuous. Paul's first stopping place on his first great missionary journey was on the island of Cyprus, and here he won his first distinguished convert to Christianity, Sergius Paulus, a Roman deputy. Since then Christian missions have ex*tended throughout the island world*, to the British isles, where they have been most successful in their history; to "Greenland's icy mountains," the East Indies, the West Indies, to Japan, to the New Hebrides, the Sandwich Islands, the Philippines, Madagascar, and the isles of every sea.

Missions in the island world have been unusually successful. They have had much to contend with. Nowhere have men become more degenerate than in the islands of the world. Here superstition, idolatry and very often cannibalism have existed. Morality has scarcely been known, and the standard of living has been the lowest, yet in spite of such conditions conspicuous success has been achieved. "The isles and the inhabitants thereof" seem to have been waiting for Christianity. The Christian missionary went to England and transformed the islands that have played such a part in the world's history. In less than fifty years Christian missions completely transformed the Sandwich Islands. From a barbarous, superstitious, idolatrous people, without any of the blessings and comforts of civilization, they were developed into a people with a Christian civilization to be envied of. The entire population was won for Christ, and mission work in the islands today is among the foreign and not the native population, and among the oriental nations Christianity is rapidly succeeding to the call of Christianity as the island empire of Japan. Looking back through the centuries of the past, we can see how truthfully the prophet spoke when he said, "Surely the isles wait for me."

But mission work in the island world is not all done. All the isles of the sea have not yet learned to sing the new song. They are waiting, they are calling, and to American Christians a part of the island world is calling particularly today. Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands are looking to us for the true gospel. Millions of islanders are waiting expectantly for us to send them the Saviour. What shall our answer be? It should be Paul's answer to Cyprus, Augustine's to England. We should send them the gospel, so that the isles and the inhabitants thereof can "sing unto the Lord a new song and His praise unto the end of the earth."

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. lxxii, 10; Isa. xli, 1-5; xlii, 1-4; li, 5; lii, 7; Matt. xxviii. 19, 20; Acts i, 8; xiii, 1-12; Rev. xxii, 17.

Bible Study.

Christian Endeavor has always laid great stress on the necessity of systematic Bible study. The Bible study committee will find the following utterance of Rev. Dr. Chapman a help and an inspiration:

"It has been my privilege during the past nine years to be closely identified with a great company of men, both in evangelistic work and in the regular service of the church. I have by that time been brought in contact with many who, while they were Christians, were living far away from Christ, were not growing and were having an experience with which they were thoroughly dissatisfied, and in every case, when I have investigated the cause, I found that it was due to the fact that they were not students of the word of God. If it should be objected that so much time ought not to be given by business and its attendant responsibilities, my answer would be that those who have been most proficient in their knowledge of the Scriptures have become so because they have made time for consecutive study. I have in mind men early hours of the day, or even the late hours of the night, and it has not infrequently been by the sacrifice of some special pleasure."

A Basis For the Best.

Let us every one work for new members and work for souls and we shall make this the best year Christian Endeavor has ever seen.—Rev. Edwin Forrest Hallenbeck, D. D.

SUMMER BAND CONCERTS

TALK OF A SERIES OF TEN HERE THIS SUMMER.

Benj. LaVere Ready to Take Charge If the Necessary Support Is Forthcoming.

Now that the days and nights are warm, the subject of open air band concerts again comes to the fore. Everybody knows how popular these concerts have been in the past and how well they were enjoyed by all who heard them. Their success is therefore a foregone conclusion. It all depends on the generosity of the public in supporting them.

Benj. LaVere, who conducted them in the past with so much success, is willing to take charge this year if the people will give him the proper support. His friends have been urging him to take the initiative in the subject and he is inclined to look well on the idea if there is any show of carrying the plan through to a successful culmination.

His plan, as now outlined, is to have a series of ten concerts during the summer by a band composed of talented musicians from New York with Mr. LaVere as leader. The latest music will be played and a programme of variety, embodying classical and popular selections given. He figures that the cost of each concert will amount to $70. If the total $700 can be raised, he is confident that the season will be one not to be forgotten.

It all depends now how the project is received by those on whom the burden of the expense will fall. If the people of wealth and those in moderate circumstances will contribute according to their means, there will be no doubt as to the success of the plan. The people, who are compelled to remain in Plainfield all summer and cannot leave for mountains and sea shore during the heated term, will be the chief beneficiaries and there is no doubt that they would enjoy the concerts to their fullest extent.

YOUTH, BEAUTY, WEALTH, WEDS

New York and Plainfield Society in Attendance at the Hagedorn-Arens Marriage.

HELD AT GRACE CHURCH

Nuptials at 5 o'Clock Followed by Reception at Bride's Home—A Fairyland of Flowers—Beautiful Gowns, Costly Gifts—Will Reside on Rahway Road.

A picture of loveliness in her beautiful bridal gown, Miss Edith Arens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Arens, of Rahway road, was wedded May 21, in Grace Episcopal church, to Adolph Gunther Hagedorn, of New York City. The event was one of the brilliant social features of the season, the most select society of Plainfield and New York City being in attendance at the marriage and the wedding reception following. The ceremony was performed at 5 o'clock, by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of the Grace Protestant Episcopal church, assisted by Rev. Erskine M. Redman, rector emeritus.

The organ pealed out the familiar, stirring strains from "Lohengrin" as the bride approached the altar on the arm of her father. She was met at the foot of the altar by the groom accompanied by the best man, Albrecht Pagenstecher, of New York City. A brief betrothal service was held at the foot of the altar, preceding the formal marriage ceremony. The church was lavishly decorated with flowers and potted plants, palms and smilax predominating, and the altar itself was a vision of beauty. The bride was given away by her father, following the service the bridal couple passed down the aisle, with the organ playing Mendelssohn's wedding march. H. H. Joy, formerly of the Crescent Avenue church, now of Brooklyn, was the organist.

The bride was gowned in white crepe de chine, trimmed with beautiful lace. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor, Mrs. John F. Milner, of Connecticut, wore a striking gown of lemon liberty silk and a white plume in her picture hat. She carried a bouquet of white sweet peas.

The bridesmaids were Miss Josephine Wupperman and the two Misses Hagedorn, sisters of the groom, of New York, Miss Louise Coleman, of Plainfield, and Miss Eleanor Cushman, of New York, the last two being cousins of the bride. The bridesmaids looked bewitching in gowns of lace grenadine, white and carried hats, carrying large bouquets of daisies.

The ushers were Siegfried Arens, the bride's brother, and E. C. Kirchhoff, of Plainfield, Oscar Tennant and Charles Woodruff, of New York, J. F. Milner, of Connecticut, and William Hagedorn, the groom's cousin, of New York.

Mrs. Otto Arens, the mother of the bride, wore an exceedingly handsome gown of black lace over white satin. Mrs. Adolph Gunther Hagedorn, Mrs. H. Hagedorn, appeared in ecru lace, trimmed with pink panne velvet.

The wedding reception followed the ceremony immediately, the beautiful Arens estate, on Rahway road, being in gala attire for the occasion. The newly married couple received their friends in the library, which presented a scene of rare beauty. Palms, smilax and gray, southern moss furnished a delightful foil for profusion of white roses and pinks. Hidden away in a room banked by flowers, a band of twelve musicians from the steamer, Kaiser Wilhelm II, discoursed music. Captain Hogeman, of the Kaiser Wilhelm, being present at the ceremony. There were 200 invited guests at the reception, and the church at the ceremony itself was crowded with the friends of the couple. Most of the guests were from Plainfield and New York.

The bride was the recipient of countless presents, most of them costly examples of the jeweler's art. The groom's gift to the bride was a magnificent diamond pin. Each of the bridesmaids was presented by the bride with a gold pin, set with pearls. The ushers were also ushered over cuff cutters, inscribed with their monograms and the date of the wedding. E. H. Hagedorn, father of the groom, presented his daughter-in-law with a large and beautiful chest of silver and cut glass.

Dinner for the bridal party followed the reception.

After a bridal tour of a few weeks, Mr. and Mrs. Hagedorn will reside on Rahway road, in a home adjoining that of the bride's parents. The home has been furnished throughout by Mr. Arens, and is given to the couple as a wedding gift.

One of the charming features of the reception was the four heralds stationed at the entrance to the house, and who announced the guests, with German and American flags.

CIVIL WAR VETERANS AT DIVINE SERVICE

Members of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R. and Woman's Relief Corps Attend.

AT ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH

REV. FATHER MILLER DELIVERS A PATRIOTIC ADDRESS.

Candles on Altar Arranged to Represent G. A. R. Badge—A Programme of Special Music Was Given During the Service.

In accordance with the annual custom, Winfield Scott Post, No. 72, G. A. R., and the Woman's Relief Corps attended divine services, last Sunday, at St. Joseph's church in the borough, when the pastor, Rev. Father Miller, delivered a patriotic discourse and there was a programme of special music. A unique feature of the service was the arrangement of the candles on the altar. When lighted they plainly represented the G. A. R. badge. Nearly seventy veterans, in charge of Commander H. C. Smith, and a large number of members from the Women's Relief Corps attended and the church was filled to the limit.

Mrs. A. E. LaPorte, organist, presided and rendered the opening selection, "Entrance March," Militaire. After the singing of "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean," there was a very pretty trio, "Ave Maria," Gounod, "Come Holy Ghost," by Miss Justina Smith, A. E. LaPorte and John Bailey, with Mrs. LaPorte at the organ.

Rev. Father Miller briefly reviewed past history as regards the Civil War, in which he referred to the patriotism, sacrifice and devotion to country shown by the grand old veterans. He praised the veterans for the loyal way in which they fought to preserve the country and its institutions and the glorious flag and said that he was glad to realize that peace reigns once more throughout the country and he hoped it would continue.

In the benediction which followed, Rev. Father Egan, of St. Mary's church, took charge, assisted by Father Miller and the altar boys. In connection with this the hymns, "O Salutaris," "Tantum Ergo," and "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name," were sung by the choir and congregation.

The report of Rev. Geo. H. The syndicate will immediately form a corporation with a capital stock of $450,000. This purchase terminates all connection of the Plainfield Banana Growers Company with the enterprise, and the Plainfield company will be dissolved. A limited amount of stock of the new corporation will be set aside for the Plainfield subscribers to take or not, as they desire, at the discount originally offered.

TO WHITEWASH THE ROCK

AFTER SUBSCRIPTIONS TO PAY THE EXPENSE OF IT.

The Residents of Borough Want to Give Rock a Coat Before Memorial Day.

William N. Pangborn, of the borough, is quietly at work getting subscriptions among the people of this city which a number of citizens in the borough will use to re-whitewash Washington Rock before Decoration Day. The rocks are badly in need of a coat of lime as it is now nearly two years since they have received any attention in that line, and what lime still clings to the rocks is only in protected niches.

A permit has been secured by Mr. Pangborn from property owners near the rocks to chop down some of the trees which hide the face of the stones from Dunellen and Plainfield. About $12 is necessary to carry out the work and already small contributions have been received. Money for this purpose may be left at this office.

When John W. Laing was proprietor of the Laing Hotel at the corner of Madison avenue and West Front street, where the Babcock building now stands, he used to look after this work every year at his own expense but since his death no one has done the work and the rocks have been neglected.

PLANS FOR HIGH SCHOOL

COMPETITION TO BE ARRANGED WITH PRIZES FOR BEST WORK.

Best Architects Are to Try for the Design for the New City High School Building.

At the April meeting, the City Board of Education appointed a committee to arrange for the submission of competitive plans for the new High School. This committee has decided to endeavor to get into the competition the highest talent among the architects that it is possible to enlist, and to that end, it has decided that while the first prize in the competition should be the erection of the building, there should be a second prize of $400 and a third prize of $200 for the second and third best plans. Since the best talent is unwilling to enter an unlimited competition, it was decided that the number of competitors should be limited to fifteen.

The board has engaged Walter Cook, the eminent architect of New York, as consulting architect and the action taken was in accordance with his advice. An advertisement will be placed in the American Architect and Building News and, in the course of three or four weeks, the names obtained will be submitted to Mr. Cook and from them sixteen competitors will be selected, this selection being based largely on the advice of Mr. Cook. The competitors will then be given about two months to prepare plans which will be signed with a fictitious name and left with the Clerk of the board of education, day. The plans will be examined by the consulting architect and discussed before the board by him.

The board will then select the plans which seem to be the best suited to the needs of the city. The makers of none of the plans will be known by any one until after the selection has been made, since the real names will be submitted in a sealed envelope which will remain unbroken until after the award has been made.

The consulting architect has already prepared the programme for the competition.

WORLD METROPOLIS

Birthday of New York Receives Eloquent Tributes.

TEN MILLIONS OF LIGHTS BLAZE.

Two Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary Celebrated in Regal Style. Greater New York Covered With Flags and Bunting.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Eloquent tributes to the city of New York were paid by men prominent in the nation at the celebration of the city's two hundred and fiftieth anniversary held at the city hall, and much was said about the future of the place destined to become the metropolis of the world.

The aldermanic chamber, where the celebration was held, was crowded with distinguished citizens who showed their patriotism by eagerly applauding the words which told of the city's greatness and its growth outrivaling that of any city in the history of the world. Festoons of national colors and the city emblem gave a holiday appearance to the chamber, and the city hall outside was in gay attire of flags and bunting.

It was 5 o'clock when the celebration was closed with the benediction by Archbishop John M. Farley. Before this an address was given by the Rev. H. Pereira Mendes.

Mayor Low, General James Grant Wilson, who delivered the oration; Secretary of War Root, Governor Odell and Judge John Clinton Gray were the principal speakers, and the impressive occasion also included the presence of many notable clergymen.

School exercises and concerts were held and in the evening elaborate views were displayed, and there were lectures and band concerts in City Hall park, Mount Morris park, Manhattan square and Crotona park and similar exhibitions in the boroughs of Queens, Brooklyn and Richmond.

Windows in houses, public and national buildings, hotels, department stores and other buildings, in accordance with Mayor Low's proclamation, were brilliantly illuminated at night, and it is estimated that at least 10,000,-000 gas and electric lights were blazing brightly in the greater city. The view from the Brooklyn bridge and from the decks of ferryboats was a spectacular one. Never before has the general lighting up of all the sky scraping structures been suggested as a fitting wind up to a grand patriotic display. The general post office for the first time in its history was aglow from cellar to dome. This was done by orders from the federal authorities in Washington.

Expedition Into Mindoro.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Manila newspapers which have just reached the war department contain an interesting account of an expedition that has gone into Mindoro, "ostensibly," one paper puts it, "to explore the country, but in reality to search for a white man who it is said has been claimed lives in the interior of the island." According to this same account, "numerous statements have been made by reliable persons, most of whom are officers in the service, that the white colony does exist, and that they have evidence to prove the same." They are characterized further as a roving band which does not remain in one place. The expedition is headed by Governor Otley and is accompanied by a detachment of constabulary. A previous expedition failed to penetrate the interior of Mindoro and was obliged to turn back.

Cuba to Have Isle of Pines.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Although Minister Squiers is extremely anxious to complete the negotiations to give effect to the Platt amendment, these have come to a standstill through the absence from Havana of Senor Sabla, the Cuban minister for foreign affairs, who was summoned to New York by the serious illness of his daughter. Mr. Squiers had prepared the way for a treaty defining the status of the Isle of Pines, and this would have completed the work of treaty making. It is believed that this last treaty will confer the right of Cuba to the Isle of Pines, although it will provide safeguards for the considerable American interests there.

Severe Gale on Grand Banks.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., May 27.—The severe gale which swept the coast here last Sunday did much damage to the fishing vessels on the Grand banks. One vessel, the Peerless of Lunenburg, N. S., has run into this port and reports having lost twelve men during the storm. Other fishing boats report smaller losses. It is feared that the fatalities will reach a large total.

Frank Kennedy's Body Found.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., May 27.—The body of Frank Kennedy, the only American workman who lost his life in the Spuyten Duyvil disaster April 7, was recovered in Little bay. Kennedy came from Proctor, Vt., and was a skilled stone mason. This is the eleventh body to be recovered.

Heavy Frost and Drought.

HOOSICK FALLS, N. Y., May 27.—Hoosick Falls has had another heavy frost. The drought continues. The Hoosick river is at the lowest point in years and many tributaries are entirely dried up.

Heavy Rain at Last.

BUFFALO, May 27.—The drought which has prevailed in western New York for a month was broken by a heavy rain. The downpour continued for over an hour and covered a large area.

Weather Probabilities.

Showers; fresh southeast winds.

LAKEPORT IN RUINS

Suburb of Laconia, N. H., Swept by Fire.

THE GREATEST EVER EXPERIENCED.

Covers About One Hundred and Fifty Acres—Loss Estimated at $250,-000 to $400,000—Fire Brigade Lost Control.

LACONIA, N. H., May 27.—Nearly 100 buildings burned, 250 persons made homeless and a loss of between $250,-000 and $400,000 is the story in short of the greatest fire this city ever experienced, if not the state of New Hampshire.

The burned district in the Lakeport section covers about 150 acres. The fire caught from an insignificant blaze in the boiler room of the H. H. Wood Hosiery mill in the afternoon. In fifteen minutes the flames had got beyond control of the men who had started to extinguish them, and in a very short time, under the influence of a brisk southeast wind, the entire structure was wrapped in the destroying element. Next it went to the finished lumber plant of the Boulia & Gorrell company and then to the works of the Laconia Electric Light company.

In less than an hour both these plants were flat. The city fire department not only was unable to check the flames at this point, but could do nothing to put out small fires which had begun to show themselves on buildings on the west side of the Winnipesaukee river. The result was that as burning brands began to fall on houses even some distance away street after street became a locality for bad fires. By 4 o'clock the conflagration was acres in extent.

The work of destruction went on until the fire actually burned itself out for want of material, having reached the outside of what is known as the fire district.

Help had been summoned from Concord, Franklin and Meredith, but the combined forces of apparatus and firemen were absolutely powerless.

One reason for the quick spread of the fire over such an area was the dryness of all woodwork, for only half an inch of rain has fallen over this section in the last forty days.

It is unnecessary to state that the scenes as the fire jumped from building to building were harrowing in the extreme. Householders did their best to save their effects and in a great many cases had removed a portion of their goods out of what they supposed would be the fire zone, but the flames came down upon them and licked up the stocks as fast as they piled in the city streets. Some people would have saved their goods but there been transportation facilities, but men with horses did not dare to venture into the zone of the flames.

Although the city has an abundance of water, the drain on it was so heavy that it decreased the pressure until it reached that point where it became of very little help. The heat was intense, and without pressure in the hose the firemen were unable to fight at close quarters.

Mayor Melcher early took steps to provide food and lodging for the homeless, and his efforts were ably seconded by the entire population, shelter being provided in Odd Fellows' hall, in several churches, private citizens also opening their houses and caring for people.

Salina's Greatest Flood.

SALINA, Kan., May 27.—This city is the scene of the worst flood in its history. Fully 200 families have been driven from their homes, and the extent of the damage is estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars. There has been four inches of rain within the last twenty-four hours. The northwestern portion of the city is entirely submerged, and women and children were rescued from their homes in boats. The Missouri Pacific grade on the west is holding back a large and threatening body of water. If the water crosses the tracks the entire western portion of the town will be under water.

Ten Injured in a Train Wreck.

NEW BALTIMORE, Mich., May 27.—Ten people were injured in a collision between a Rapid railway electric passenger car and a steam freight train that was running on the company's tracks hauling freight during the night and early morning. The tender of the freight engine was driven half way through the passenger car. A mistake in orders is said to have caused the accident.

Rodriguez's Body Lying In State.

HAVANA, May 27.—The remains of General Mayia Rodriguez, the distinguished revolutionary officer who died here, were conveyed to the hall of the Ayuntamiento, where they are now lying in state, en camon in Fort Cabanas and many bands will honor. The funeral, with military honors, will take place today.

Four Killed in Mine Explosion.

PITTSBURG, May 27.—Four men were killed and two badly burned by an explosion of gas in the mines of the Charriers Coal and Coke company at Federal, a mining town near Bridgeville, on the [illegible] railroad. Fourblacksmiths [illegible] but slightly injured.

A HUMORIST ON BASEBALL

CAREER OF PHILADELPHIA NORTH AMERICAN'S STAR SPORTING WRITER.

Gives Destruction to That Department—Has Been Sailor, Angler, Moulder and War Correspondent.

Among the special writers who give The North American's sporting department its distinction none is better known than Charles Dryden.

Mr. Dryden has been called the George Ade of baseball. His humor is as fresh and spontaneous as that of the famous author of Fables in Slang. His inimitable reports of baseball games are entirely characteristic. Nobody writes like him, nobody gets the same infectious twists and turns of merriment, and none of his imitators have succeeded in reproducing the entirely unforced effect. For the last thirteen years Dryden has classed by himself in this particular branch of newspaper writing.

In 1889 he made his first essay as a baseball writ. This was in Chicago. He wrote up a game in imitation of the stilted, archaic phrase of Bible language.

It scored an intense hit, and in a short time all the prominent papers of the west were bidding for his services. For seven years he stayed west, changing between San Francisco and Tacoma. In 1896 when W. R. Hearst bought the New York Journal, he secured the services of Dryden. When he had been less than a year in the metropolis he had his memorable quarrel with Andrew Freedman. He was shot out of the New York grounds, but kept up a long-distance fire or raillery on the eccentric owner of the Giants and kept not only New York but the entire country convulsed by his clever quips.

In 1900 The North American took a notion that it wanted Dryden to round out the strong staff. Hearst was averse to parting with his crack sporting writer, and made him exceptional offers to stay.

But the proprietor of the Journal was outbid, and Dryden came to Philadelphia. He came back in 1901, and is now under contract for the present season of 1903.

Mr. Dryden is a newspaper writer of wide experience. He has had a varied career, having from time to time been a sailor, an iron moulder, fisherman and war correspondent. He represented a San Francisco paper in Samoa, when the rival kings were fighting for the throne.

The other branches of sport are looked after by an able corps of specialists. A particular effort is made to get the fullest reports of amateur baseball games.

On opening days and important events special writers and photographers are sent from the office, and the contests are covered with the same care that is given to reports of major league games.

MORE BLOCK SIGNALS.

System on Jersey Central Will be Extended to the Newark and New York Branch This Summer.

Plans have been prepared and accepted by the New Jersey Central for equipping the Newark and New York branch with block signals of the latest approved pattern. This branch is being laid with heavy steel and the roadbed, rock-ballasted throughout. It is reported that when all improvements are completed the company proposes to operate trains under twenty minutes' headway, during the rush hours between Newark and New York, the expenses covering the distance between Jersey City and Newark in ten minutes.

The New Jersey Central is paying special attention to the signal features of its service. All old-type signals have been taken out and replaced with signals of the latest improved type and today the road is equipped with the most modern and up-to-date style of signal apparatus known.

LOCAL BAKER'S CART MEETS ICE WAGON

Boy in Baker's Wagon Jumps in Time to Save Himself From Serious Injury.

THE HORSE RUNS AWAY

BRISK DASH ON SOMERSET STREET EARLY SATURDAY MORNING.

Many Vehicles on That Thoroughfare—Horse Pulls Bridle Off Its Head and Becomes Frightened —Only Small Boy in Wagon.

David Allen, Jr., son of David Allen, of Harrison avenue, had a narrow escape last Saturday from being killed in a runaway on Somerset street when a horse belonging to Herman Klinsman, the baker, bolted in front of Graceley's Manhattan Hotel and dashed at a made gallop down the thoroughfare to Lincoln place where a collision occurred between the baker's wagon and an ice cart.

The accident happened at about 8 o'clock when the street was filled with fashionable equipages. The horse which he was driving, had been left hitched to the post in front of the hotel by the driver, a son of Herman Klinsman. The horse in some manner got the bridle off and becoming frightened at the sight of the wagon behind it started on a run. The boy in the wagon tried to check the horse but was not able to control it. When a collision with the ice wagon seemed unavoidable, the lad jumped from the vehicle and although he was rolled over and over on the street he escaped serious injury.

Pies, cake and bread were strewn about the street for blocks and the people along that street gathered them up in trays and took them in the stores and houses to keep for the baker.

The baker's wagon was demolished but the ice wagon was not injured. The horse continued his mad race down Somerset street and was finally caught at the corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue.

MAY LIGHT ROADS.

Piscataway Township Committee Meets to Discuss the Matter.

It is possible that the roads in Piscataway will be lighted with electricity. This has been a long time want and on Wednesday afternoon the Township Committee met at North Market for the purpose of considering the matter. No action has been taken yet.

The roads in that township are considerably after dark and early accidents have been many accidents have been narrowly averted through the lack of necessary lights. The roads which are nearly all macadamized are used extensively by automobiles which make proper lighting very necessary in order to avoid collisions.

Another meeting will be held later when the matter will again be brought up and some action taken.

DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR DRAWS LARGE CROWD

A Recital by Mrs. Charles Haseltine's Pupils at the Casino Last Tuesday.

LENGTHY PROGRAMME

RECITATIONS, MONOLOGUES, PLAYS, POSES AND DRILLS.

One of the Pleasant Events of the Season—Teacher and Pupils Receive Praise for Their Work.

A delighted audience at the Casino last evening gave enthusiastic evidence of their approval of the recital by the pupils of Mrs. Charles Haseltine, loading the performers with flowers, books and other tokens of appreciation for their remarkably clever work. The occasion was made a social event, and the hall was crowded to the doors with the friends of the class. The affair was one of the finest ambitions of the kind yet attempted at the Casino. Recitations, monologues, plays, poses and drills gave variety to the attractive programme.

A minuet fan drill by the Misses Davis, Dewey, Hanford, James, Lambert, Pound, Serrell and Weeks introduced the first half of the entertainment. The graceful movements of the exercise were executed with the precision of long practice. A stirring recitation by Miss Ursula Krewson, assisted by the Saterpen Quartette, won the approbation of all. It was followed by humorous recitations by the Misses Frances Rittenhouse and Louise Davis. Miss Davis in particular made a laughing hit of "Miss Maloney on the Chinese Question." Miss Margery Hart recited "The Little Fairy" with the skill of a practised speaker.

A comedy sketch enacted by the Misses Edna Randolph, Bessie VanArsdale and Ursula Krewson was interpreted with dramatic finish. Miss Grace Weeks won a recall by her unconventional rendering of "The Tramp Musician," and "That Picture," delivered by Miss Grace Stephenson, provoked outbursts of merriment. Miss Elizabeth Pound, by her artistic interpretation of "Aunt Hetty's Visit," won the audience completely and made one of the distinctive hits of the evening. She was one of the many recipients of a magnificent bouquet, presented by an admirer.

Miss Mabel Dewey, in "The Coming Out of Miss Cummings," held the sympathies of her audience throughout, winning golden opinions for her carefully prepared work. Her monologue was one of the best numbers presented and deserved all the commendation it received. Master Wallace Doying's violin obligato added much to the performance.

A beautiful floral fantasy opened the second half of the programme, followed by amusing and capably rendered selections by the Misses Laura James and Ruth Wean. A laughter-producing monologue by Miss Mabel Pound gave much pleasure, and a Grecian drill by Miss Mabel Dewey interested everybody. Miss Caroline Lambert recited "The Theatre Party" most acceptably and Miss Bessie Stephenson was equally good in another of Eugene Field's clever sketches, "The Night Wind."

The last two numbers on the programme were statue posing and a play entitled "The Hartville Shakespearean Club" and they made a fit climax to the entertainment. The statues, Greek and Roman subjects, were posed by Misses Krewson, Pound, Dewey, Randolph and VanArsdale. The characters in the play were taken by the Misses Marguerite Serrell, Elizabeth Pound, Louise Davis, Edith Haniford, Caroline Lambert, Edna Randolph and Grace Weeks. All the performers reflected high credit upon their instructor, Mrs. Haseltine.

The ushers were H. L. Lucky, A. N. Haseltine, F. K. Armstrong, E. W. Adams, F. B. Haseltine and Charles Haseltine. Calcium light effects were produced under the direction of A. V. Searing, Jr.

BIDS REJECTED.

Trouble Over Arrangements for Erection of Girard Avenue Bridge.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met the bridge committee from the Union County Board, yesterday afternoon, at the Girard avenue bridge, when all bids for the construction of the new bridge at that point were rejected. Proposals for new bids will be advertised. This action was taken owing to a technicality regarding one of the bids. The members will meet in the near future to receive the new bids. At that time arrangements will be made *to commence the erection of the much-*needed structure.

THEIR OWN HOUSES.

Iron and Steel Company to Erect Cottages at High Bridge for Workingmen.

For the purpose of furthering the best interests of their workingmen the officers of the Taylor Iron and Steel Company, of High Bridge, have decided to erect a number of cottages at High Bridge for the occupancy of the men and their families. The work will begin as soon as plans and specifications can be made. This is partially made necessary by reason of the fact that the new houses are desired to accommodate the extra workmen required at the plant. It is claimed that High Bridge lost the plant of the Manganese Steel Safe Company, because there were not *enough vacant houses there to accom-*modate the workingmen.

New York Society Folk.

In its Saturday issue The Commercial Advertiser, of New York, said: "N. Pendleton Rogers, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers, will enter the West Point Military Academy June 15, having passed a most creditable examination. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, who live at Plainfield, N. J., were prominent in New York society before their marriage and during their early married life."

A Fish Story.

A huge species of fish hawk, it is said, has been seen flying over some of the swamps in South Plainfield. The bird had a fish in its talons, when it was seen and frightened by a small boy. The boy still has the fish which he offers as proof of the accuracy of his story.

A member of the Forward Movement Club of the Y. M. C. A. has presented that organization with a missionary library. The present is quite an addition to the club and will greatly assist in the work of the society.

THE CONDITION OF SCHOOL FINANCES

Statement of Board of Education Committee Showing Expenditures.

THE YEARLY ESTIMATE

EXPENSES HAVE BEEN INCREASED SOMEWHAT THIS YEAR.

Detailed Report—What Has Been Done During the Past Year and What Is Needed—Amount of Expenses This Year $89,745.62.

The finance committee of the Board of Education has made this report:

Board of Education,

Gentlemen:—The committee on finance respectfully submit the itemized statement of the amount of money estimated to be necessary for the current expenses of and for repairing and furnishing the public schools of this district for the ensuing school year commencing July 1, 1903.

It will be seen by the statement, that there is an increase in expenditures of $2,556 35 this year. The total expenditure last year was $87,189 27, and this year it is $89,745.62. On some of the items it has been reduced, but the increase exceeds the reductions the amount stated.

Taking such items where changes have been made it would be as follows: The salary account is increased $1,845, due to the natural increase each year of $25 each to those teachers who are on the permanent list, and entitled to it under the rules of the board, and the apportionment for new teachers being $1,700. The janitors account has been increased $600 over last year, due to the employment of two new janitors, and an apportionment of $180 for any increase that the board might deem it wise to make.

The lighting account has been increased $135, and the figure fixed last year, $175, will be insufficient to meet the increase of expense, should the board decide to wire the Irving Assembly Hall and place fixtures on the ceiling. It has been suggested that the board rent this hall for educational purposes, thus deriving an income from it that will soon pay for the improvement. The insurance account is increased $200, which is necessary to meet the premiums falling due in October. When the division of insurance into three parts, (making a certain amount come due each year), was made some three or more years since, this division was the larger of the three.

The furniture account has been put at $1,300, an increase of $550: It is necessary that one new set of furniture be placed in the Franklin School, two sets in the Washington School, and two extra sets not yet assigned, besides four new teachers desks, and new assembly hall settees to fill out where the seating capacity is inadequate. The incidental account has been reduced $300 this year making it $800. This seems a safe figure to allow for this account. The repair account has been increased $500. Last year it was $4,000 and will be absorbed by the end of the present school year. It is necessary that the Franklin and Bryant schools should be thoroughly looked at on the outside, pointing up and painting them three coats of the best lead and oil paint. The class rooms of the Bryant *also the cloak rooms, should be pre-*pared for and decorated with oil color and lead. The assembly room at the Irving School needs to be decorated this year. This with the wiring of the assembly room, and the ordinary repairs made each year will use up the appropriation.

The interest account on indebtedness will be reduced $205. The water service account has been increased $100, owing to the installation of drinking fountains at the Irving School, also two new basins for use of pupils, one at the Irving and one at the Bryant. The rental account has been increased $310. Last year only an estimate of $300 was allowed for the Epworth House, the board thinking that it could be rented for that amount, but $500 was the lowest sum that the trustees would consent to.

Bank interest for notes discounted has been reduced $50. Perhaps it would be well to leave it at last year's figure, $400 which would not change the total materially. The fuel account has been reduced $100, this will allow but a small margin at the pre-vailing prices of coal, but if prices are reduced the margin will be ample. The tuition account appears this year separate and distinct. Last year it was put into the incidental account. This is for the payment of tuition fees, of pupils attending out-side districts, and too far removed to attend the schools nearest these districts.

The Whittier betterment account has been liquidated, by the payment of the note held by bank. This account was part of the indebtedness incurred some six years ago to transform the old Seventh-Day Baptist Church into class rooms. The balance was taken from our general fund account. The committee would recommend that the board adopt the itemized statement as made up, and request the Board of School Estimate to fix and determine the sum of $54,000, to be raised by the city, for the aforesaid purposes, which, with the $25,700 estimated receipts from the State tax, and tuition fees, will amount to $89,745.62. The committee is pleased to state that only two notes of the board are now outstanding, amounting to the sum of $5,013.78, chargeable as follows: General fund $4,634.60, and Martin net account, $391.18. The balance with the Custodian of School Moneys on the 31st day of March, 1903, is $21,109.60.

Last year at this time, outstanding notes were $16,450.75, and cash balance with the Custodian of School Moneys, $22,937.68. The fixed indebtedness to April 1, 1903, is: Bonds, $36,000; mortgage, $21,000; making a total of $57,000. There is only $1,000 to pay on account of Lincoln mortgage, due April 6th of this month, when all of the bond account for this school year will have been paid.

The committee hopes to liquidate the two outstanding notes amounting to $5,013.78, before the close of the present school year, July 1, 1903, and begin the new year without any floating indebtedness, which will be the first time since the year 1897.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) L. N. Lovell,
C. F. Abbott,
H. M. Cave,
Committee on finance.

Benjamin LeVere, who has been making an active canvass for funds to defray the expense of conducting open air concerts in this city during the summer months reports that he has recently secured $5 each from the following people: W. B. Wadsworth, John Bechtell, Miss W. Tyler, J. Frank Hubbard and George H. Frost. The amount on hand to date is $130.

Although $800 is needed from the people here to secure the talent promised by Mr. LeVere he is confident of securing it before July 8 when the first of the concerts will be held. Mr. LeVere has been soliciting contributions for one a week and the manner in which his requests have been responded to give encouragement. Any person desiring to assist may send a contribution to Mr. LeVere, Bank place, or to the office of The Daily Press.

Mr. LeVere has arranged with several musicians to appear in this city at some of his concerts. Among those who have consented to come here are Alfred C. Sweet, a clever cornet soloist; Edward Nash, a well-known baritone soloist; Gus Edwards, one of the soloists of the Edison Record Company and Charles Egany, a xylophone player.

At the concert fifteen men will compose the band and instead of holding the concerts on Friday evenings the time has been changed to Wednesday evenings.

Settled Amicably.

The case of Brown against the Equitable Life Insurance Company has been satisfactorily settled out of court. William DeMeza was the counsel for the plaintiffs. The case was to have been tried in Justice Mosher's court.

CITY FAIRLY FREE FROM WINGED PESTS

Mosquito Problem Investigated by Board of Health Meeting Yesterday.

IS AVOIDING TROUBLE

CONDITIONS OF FISH MARKETS AND BAKERIES REPORTED.

Excellent Health Conditions Generally Prevail—The Milk Supply Guarded—Few Cases of Contagious Disease in City.

The mosquito problem as it affects Plainfield was reported upon Tuesday afternoon at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Health.

During the month a thoroughly in-vestigation has been made into the problem. Through the kindness of Prof. John B. Smith, State entomologist, the natural waters about Plainfield and the rain barrels and cesspools within the city limits have been investigated with the following results: That from the mosquito standpoint Plainfield is, in itself, a clean city. The natural water surroundings are not especially dangerous, and except when mosquitoes come from the salt marshes along the coast, the city should be tolerably free from all those species which are bred within the limits of the city. This latter specie is bred principally in rain barrels.

The mosquitoes now flying in Plainfield come principally from the salt marshes along the coast; Plainfield is not responsible for them nor can they in any way be avoided. This special invasion of the last few weeks is due to the abnormal climatic conditions.

Rain barrels and cesspools cause most of the trouble in Plainfield. One rain barrel was discovered on Cottage place which was alive with wrigglers that would in a few days have developed into a small army of mosquitoes. With the rain barrels and cesspools out of the way, the number of mosquitoes in Plainfield would be greatly diminished and there would be little difficulty with them. Cesspools should be protected by wire mosquito netting and better by a double thickness, because some mosquitoes are very persistent when it comes to a matter of laying eggs. Rain barrels should be protected in the same way and the larger barrels of hogshead size should be supplied with two or three gold fishes.

One more set of places which needs attention are the sewer catch basins. *It has been found that these are proli-*fic breeding places and a round should be made of all such basins once every two weeks and the contents of the basin oiled so as to kill whatever may be breeding there. Because of the danger lurking in contaminated shellfish a thorough inspection was made of all the fish markets. Especial attention was paid to the cleanliness of the market, the methods of cleaning and storing the fish, and to the places where the fish, clams and oysters were bought. The majority of the markets were found in fairly good condition but a few were in great need of attention.

While the enforcement of the State law in regard to bakeries does not come within the province of the Board of Health, the bread is widely distributed about Plainfield and can be produced under such very unwholesome conditions that it is well the Board should know the exact condition of each bakery. In order that this information could be obtained an inspection was made on the evenings of May 15 and 19. Some of the bakeries were in poor condition and required attention. The majority needed whitewashing. Notices were served in the several cases where the plumbing did not conform to the ordinances of the board.

The work of issuing the milk permits is nearly completed. Notices have been served on those whose permits were refused because of the unsanitary condition of their dairies, prohibiting them from selling milk in Plainfield. Those who received the permits are fast complying with the ordinances of the Board of Health. Thirty-five dairies were visited during the month, all but one of which were found in good condition. This one will show improvement soon or sell his milk elsewhere.

On account of having no sterilizer for a part of the month, but few samples of milk, fifteen in all, were analyzed, two of which were poor; unless these two show immediate improvement, the permits of the dealers

BEATS CHANGED.

Customary Shifting of Patrolmen Makes Some Changes—Those Effected by Order.

The periodical shakeup in the police department went into effect last evening, and the officers who have been patroling beats in the West End find themselves treading the flags up in the winding walks of Netherwood, and a few who have been doing night duty find themselves working while the sun shines.

James Totten and Charles Flynn, who have been doing day work, have been placed on night beats in the business district while "Nick" Myers, who has been on day duty along Park avenue, has been shifted to night work. Moses Quaze, who has been a night man, will now do day work, while John Huff has been placed on the Boulevard in place of Matthew Vanderweg. George Lunger, who has been in the West End, has been stationed in Netherwood and Arthur McGinley has been moved to the West End.

The place was decided upon at the last meeting of the Alumni Association. It was at first planned to hold the reception in the chapel of the school but as it would necessitate the removal of the seats and desks the use of the room was denied the association by the Board of Education.

DEAD WOMAN'S BODY FOUND IN WOODS

Belief That She Was Foully Murdered and Hidden Away in Bushes.

CORONER VIEWS BODY

THE SKULL IS DENTED IN AND THE BODY DECONPOSED.

No Clue to Her Identity—Thomas Brantingham and Thomas Bohl of South Plainfield Make Grewsome Discovery.

Behind a clump of bushes in what is known as Hogan's Woods near South Plainfield, Thomas Bohl, night yardmaster of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., Tuesday, discovered the remains of a woman with an indenture in the skull which appears to have been inflicted with a blunt instrument. There are indications that the woman was foully murdered and the body was taken to the secluded spot in the woods where it has lain unnoticed for three months. The discovery was made while Bohl and a friend named Thomas Brantingham, a butcher, were out in the woods gathering ferns, last evening at 8 o'clock. Corner Hubbard, of Middlesex County, was notified and shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon, viewed the remains. Up to noon time they were still at the spot where they were discovered.

The remains are evidently those of a woman about forty-five years of age and very tall. Her hair was evidently brown streaked with gray. She lies in a twisted position, partly on her side and partly on her face. Her arm was twisted about in a most peculiar position. Her hair lay about on the ground in tangled masses.

POLICE NEWS.

Changes Planned in Arrangements at Headquarters—Working on Alarms.

The new Gamewell system of police alarm, it is expected, to be in operation within three weeks. Other changes in the police department will be inaugurated at the same time. New steel cages at the city court will take the place of the present wooden cells. The Chief's office will be removed up stairs over his present quarters, which will be occupied by the Gamewell switching board. The room directly over the Chief's present office will be occupied by patrolmen, several of whom will be present at the station night and day. Besides the sleeping rooms there will be a reading room for the use of the police.

WEDDED SECRETLY.

The marriage of Miss Bessie Ross, of Bound Brook, to Vernon Waters, of East Third street, son of J. Erwin Waters, has been announced. The ceremony was performed last September by the late Rev. Dr. Crantford, of the Episcopal Church. The announcement was very much of a surprise to the friends of the couple. Mrs. Waters, who is employed at Woodbull & Mar-tin's store, has been living at Bound Brook, and Mr. Waters at his home in this city. Mrs. Waters is the daughter of a wealthy farmer living on the Watchung mountain.

DEAL IN BUFFALOES.

Largest Herd in the World, Consisting of 75 Animals, Has Just Changed Owners.

The largest herd of buffaloes in the world has just changed hands. There are 75 of the animals in the bunch, the greatest of which was the five small buffalo calves in 1892, when they were caught on the great plains and placed in captivity. At that time the Dupree family were hunting and capturing the calves. They were with an immense herd on the Little Missouri river and after being taken were hauled in a wagon to the Dupree ranch. They were carefully reared, and after the first five years the increase has been very heavy. At different times animals have been sold to menageries and zoological gardens throughout the country, but in the main they have been allowed to roam at will over the 1,000-acre tract upon which they are confined, and consequently have lost some of their shyness where man is concerned.

"OLD MONARCH."

James W. Phillips, a wealthy rancher man, has purchased the entire herd and has removed them to his ranch in South Dakota. He has enclosed an immense tract of fine grazing land with a fence 12 feet high and very strong. The posts are placed three feet from each other, and every precaution made to properly care for the big animals.

Phillips, the new owner, is himself one of the unique characters of South Dakota. Coming to Dakota when a boy of 16 with nothing but the clothes on his back, he is now a millionaire several times over and has made a success of the cattle business. He has been a resident of this country almost 30 years and knows every man, woman and child in it. His early life was replete with adventures with Indians and outlaws, and while still a young man he has seen much of life.

Just what he intends to do with his new purchases is not clear. It is reported that he intends to take the entire herd to the Louisiana Purchase exposition at St. Louis, that being his scheme to attract attention to South Dakota. From this it is said he expects to sell thousands of acres of land which he owns but for which there is no market at present.

This is by far the largest herd of buffalo in existence, says the New York Herald, the second largest being that owned by Buffalo Bill in the Big Horn basin of Wyoming. Here Col. Cody has a herd of about 40 buffaloes, six or eight of which he takes with him with his Wild West show.

In the foot-hills of Montana is located the only herd of wild buffaloes known. The band contains only 20 or 25 animals and is slowly decreasing. There is a strict rule against killing them, and they are not molested by hunters, but occasionally a mountain wolf succeeds in pulling down a calf or a heifer. In this way the herd is gradually losing ground, and within a few years will have disappeared.

But the Dupree herd is fast gaining in number, and within a few years Mr. Phillips will have more buffaloes than he knows what to do with.

GOING THE ENTIRE LIMIT.

Massachusetts Banker Gives the Champion Illustration of Genuine Yankee Thrift.

The proverbial Yankee thrift shows up big in a story now going the rounds reminiscent of a western Massachusetts banker who died during the past year. He believed in the maxim that "a saved is a penny earned" with a vengeance, says the New York Commercial. His clerks were denied the luxury of pads of paper, and were required to figure on the backs of old envelopes that had been carefully prepared by the office boy in his leisure moments. The banker had a son-in-law who builded wisely by inviting his father-in-law to spend a few weeks with him at the seashore. The close-fisted banker decided to unloosen to the extent of having the daily newspapers that the bank had subscribed for sent to him after the quotations had been inspected. He left explicit instructions that the advertising pages were to be cut out, and the edges trimmed, so as to save postage.

The papers, which were sent every other day, were too heavy for the one-cent limit, though considerably inside the weight allowed for two cents. It was a matter of facetious comment in the bank that the "old man" was not getting full value for his two-cent expenditure for postage. The margin in favor of Uncle Sam, however, diminished appreciably after the third installment of literature had been forwarded. The cashier received a postal card that bore the following request:

"Mail papers in single wrapper every four days, and they will require but three cents postage."

CORN-COB SIDEWALKS.

Man from Iowa Tells of a Novel Scheme Adopted by Grain-Shipping Towns.

"Because of the cob-pipe industry Missouri has the reputation of being the greatest corn-cob state in the union, but Iowa does not let its southern neighbor beat when it comes to putting cobs to novel uses," said a man from Keokuk the other day, according to a Chicago paper. "Did you ever hear of corn-cob sidewalks? Never? Well, you take a trip through out a big part of the state of Iowa recently, and I found several grain-shipping towns that had corn-cob sidewalks.

"In spite of what one would think about it cobs make a pretty good walk. They are a little rough at first, but when the cobs become trampled down the walk is smooth. It is more springy than a cinder path and water will not stand in little pools in the low places.

"From some of the little railroad towns hundreds of thousands of bushels of corn are shipped each year. The grain is shelled at the local elevators and as there is little demand for the cobs for fuel they are carried in a spout to a place some distance from the elevator and allowed to form in a huge pile. In order to get rid of them they are generally burned. A year or two ago somebody discovered that they made a pretty good walk and now they are being utilized in many places."

CROW WITH VOCABULARY.

Tame Bird in New York Town That Talks as Plainly as Some Parrots.

Samuel Seager, of Bolivar, N. Y., has a tame crow named Jim, that can talk as plainly as some parrots. Jim is only 16 months old, but few children of that age can excel him in making remarks, says the New York Tribune. Jim was caught in a hollow tree on top of a hill near Bolivar. With him was his sister, and both of them were sold into bondage, Mr. Seager buying Jim. Now he is so tame that he sits on the piano and criticises when Mr. Seager's daughter plays coon songs. Everyone who knows him wishes he could meet Ernest Thompson Seton.

The crow first began to talk last winter. He started in by calling "dad" and "boo-book." Later "papa" and "mamma" were distinctly made out. Now he has advanced so far that when Mr. Seager asks him if he wants his breakfast Jim replies: "Well, I should smile." He also says quite distinctly "Good morning" and "Good night." He will fly straight to a person who asks him if he wants his head scratched, if the person has been formally introduced to him. Otherwise Jim will cut him dead. He is an impersonator, and can make any schoolboy answer his whistle.

Something Hovering Over Jupiter.

A discovery of considerable importance in astronomical circles has recently been made, which is arousing much interest among astronomers, says the Toronto Globe. The planet Jupiter is the body upon which the discovery has been made. Several peculiar pyramid-shaped spots have been observed on Jupiter, and the astronomers who have been watching them have noticed that, as they revolved with great velocity toward the object known to astronomers as the Great Red Spot, they disappear and reappear at the other side of the Great Red Spot. This seems to indicate that the Great Red Spot is hollow, or something which was not known before.

POLE WILL BE REACHED.

Explorer Peary Tells How the Often-Essayed Feat May Be Accomplished.

So far am I from considering the general proposition of advance over the polar pack impracticable that I have no hesitation in saying I believe that the man who, with the proper party, the proper equipment, and proper experience, can secure a base on the northern shore of Grinnell Land, and can begin his work with the earliest returning light in February, will hold the pole in his grasp, writes Robert E. Peary, in McClure's Magazine.

The proper method for an effective attack upon the pole may be summed up in a paragraph, viz.:

A strongly built ship of maximum power; a minimum party, utilizing the Eskimos exclusively for the rank and file; the establishment of a permanent station or sub-base at Sabine; the formation of a chain of caches from Sabine to Hecla; the establishment of a main base somewhere on the North Grinnell Land coast; forcing the ship to winter quarters there; the redistribution of the entire tribe of Whale sound Eskimos, taking the picked men of the tribe on the ship, and distributing the others in a series of settlements along the Grinnell Land coast, with the rear on perennial walrus grounds at Sonntag bay and the head of certain summer navigation at Sabine, and the van at Hecla; and, finally, an advance, in the earliest returning light of February, from Hecla northward over the polar pack, with a small, light pioneer party, followed by a large, heavy, main party, from which at intervals two or three sledges would drop out, and return until on the last stage there would be but two or three sledges left.

VERMONT WRESTLERS.

To State in the Union Has Furnished More Square-Build and Side-Hold Good Ones.

"When I was a boy in Vermont," said Representative Cy. Sulloway, of New Hampshire, reports the Washington Star, "it was my ambition and that of nearly every farmer's boy in the state, as far as I knew, to be considered a champion wrestler. Probably no state in the union has furnished as many good square-hold and side-hold wrestlers as the Green Mountain state. Most of us boys learned wrestling at school, the wrestling bouts usually taking place at recess. Even the schoolmaster took a hand in the game and would try his skill against the larger boys, and if he happened to be thrown he lost prestige among his scholars. But it was at town meetings that the greatest exhibitions of skill and strength took place. The best wrestlers in the townships rallied at these gatherings, and the people seemed to take more interest in the outcome of the bouts than in the results at the polls. The science of square-hold and side-hold wrestling has almost died out in the state nowadays. Boys and young men seem to fancy football, golf and baseball, but there are some fine specimens of manhood yet in the state, and it takes a pretty good man to lay even a modern Vermonter on his back."

ELUSIVE BACILLI.

Scientists Find Much Difficulty in Destroying Germs of Typhoid Tuberculosis.

It is one of the disappointments of the medical profession since the bacteria theory of many diseases has been fully established that all efforts to find an antidote for the tubercule typhoid bacillus have failed, says a special to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. An antitoxin has been provided for the diphtheria bacillus, because the person of this bacillus passes out of its cell and is soluble. The person of typhoid tuberculosis is intracellular and remains there, and cannot be reached under ordinary conditions. Recent experiments by bacteriologists, with the assistance of Prof. Dewar, of the effects of extreme cold upon the bacilli show that they survive at the lowest temperature attainable. It was discovered, however, that when frozen in liquid air the bacilli became extremely brittle, so that they could be triturated into exceedingly fine powder and their cellular character thus destroyed. It is possible to experiment with antidotes upon their poisonous contents, and it is hoped before long that this method will lead to the discovery of a treatment which will destroy the germs of typhoid tuberculosis in the human body.

Alaska's Great Mountain.

The claim of Mount McKinley, the culminating peak of the Alaskan range, to be the highest on the loftiest point in North America is sustained by the report of an exploring party, made by one of its members, Mr. A. H. Brooks. The party made a journey of 600 miles on foot in the spring and summer season just passed. Mr. D. L. Rabburn, the topographer of the expedition, believes that the measurements of mountain heights which were made have a probable error not exceeding 100 feet. Among the three measurements Mount McKinley's elevation definitely exceeds 20,000 feet; that of Mount Forsker is 17,000 feet.

Electricity in Germany.

In Germany, electricity, among other curious results, has rehabilitated the discarded windmill. At Neresheim a windmill supplies current for 36 incandescent lamps that light a large woolen factory. Another in Seitenweg-Holstein keeps up a steady current of 50 volts. At Duesseldorf a windmill works up a factory, while at Ilmenau the current works a powerful dynamo.

LEADING FABRICS.

Voile Is Very Popular—Spots and Stripes All the Rage.

Voile takes the leading place in fabrics, for it is now produced in all kinds of different makes, and, above all, it is no longer stiff and wiry. The voile of the moment is distinctly of a silky texture and very transparent, lending itself admirably to the manipulation of folds, gaugings and tucks.

Spots and stripes are all the rage in Paris, and they seem to be particularly charming in thin summery materials. Some of these spots are shaded and suggestive of two or three tones.

Then there are muslins, mousseline de sole, crepe de chines and new soft satins of many kinds, all of which are used for accordion plaited skirts, for the plaited skirt has again become the fashion, as was predicted some months ago.

Taffeta is as much used as ever, and the old striped taffeta has been revived.

All the new sets will be pressed into the service of this plaited skirt.

The costume in the cut is of all over lace, with an automobile coat of silk trimmed with lace and fringe.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

Pale Green Voile With White Appliqué All the Rage.

There is a pretty shade of pale green voile which looks well made up with embroideries of white taffeta.

A charming model seen recently was of this pale green voile. It had a gauged skirt, with strappings down each side of white taffeta held together with gilt filigree buttons and a simple baby bodice trested in the same way and further decorated with a collar of taffeta and gold thread. The chemisette and neck were softened with some plaited India muslin and some old d'alencon lace.

The white tulle bow at the neck is always a dainty fashion, if an expensive one, for it must be renewed almost every time it is worn.

Pale gray with taffeta appliques is very smart when combined with cream white lace and dashes of burnt orange.

The thing of the moment is the cape collar worn to take the place of the bolero, and on cool days it is very useful. It is made of the same cloth as the goods of the dress, and it is trimmed handsomely with lace and appliqué.

The illustration shows a suit of white canvas trimmed with scarlet silk.

HOUSE FURNISHINGS.

They Have Attained a Daintiness Never Before Known.

What would the world be without variety?

Soon half would die from sameness or satiety.

That is what the poet says, and it is true of things to have in one's house as well as of the clothes we wear. We would soon weary of ourselves if we were obliged to appear always in exactly the same kind of garments, and fortunately for us and our reason we are permitted to have changes in the fashions of our home decorations and furnishings too. I can remember when white marseilles bedspreads and ruffled pillow shams were considered absolutely necessary to the peace and happiness of the woman of the house, and now see what has entirely displaced them. A round roll has made the old pillow hide in some forgotten closet, while a lace spread lined with satin of some preferred color covers the bed. This lace cover is not very strong and is everlastingly being sewed up, but it is the style. When one has a country house rooms are furnished with hangings of cretonne or chintz, and the bedspread and pillow roll and the cushions, bureau covers and dressing table covers—in fact, everything which in times gone by was furnished with other fancies is now made to match with beruffled and lace edged chints or whatever the material is. Each room is done in one tone, and to assist in carrying out this color scheme there are handsome fiber rugs of the different hues. Red and white, blue and white, green and white, in fact, all the colors are represented. Table covers are shown to match the rugs

NEW STYLES IN JARDINIERES.

In bedrooms, parlors, dining rooms and libraries there are from two to half a dozen jardinieres, some on small tables and some on their own stands. There is less effort made to cultivate flowers around country houses than heretofore, so plants are set in these to lend their grace and freshness to the rooms. I do not know but this is a good plan for some reasons, but—well, I love to fuss around flowers too well to be a dispassionate counselor.

There is a new thing in jardinieres and such things made of pottery. They are now oxidized with a dull brown finish and are particularly cool looking and pleasing when filled with green things. Ferns, which are set close and so planted that they hang over the outer edge a little, make beautiful ornaments for the table, the dark silver harmonizing admirably with the tender green of the ferns. The jardinieres are made in many sizes, so that they may be filled with any preferred plant. They may be left outside quite without injury. Some of the jardinieres are so large that, with the pedestal, they can almost make a shade—with the proper plant, that is—and thus they are just what women have been wanting for porches. Some are bronzed, others are painted and still others are glazed. There is something for every one. But all are marked by soft and harmonious colors.

It is unprofitable to speak of the china for these luncheons, for each woman has her own, but I may say a word about the unusual amount of glassware that is added to all country services, to say nothing of the city requirements. Glassware has had two drawbacks—the cut glass is so very clear and, unfortunately, so fragile, and the pressed glass has been so clumsy and ugly. There is a new process of annealing and working the glass, so that now the pressed glass is as handsome as the finest cut glass and has a tougher quality, which makes it desirable from every point of view, and some of it is quite as elegant and artistic as cut glass, like tall vases for cut roses, great lemonade bowls and so many other things that I cannot mention them. But it seems to me a move in the right direction that fashionable women have taken to the general use of this glassware in view of the fact that it is so superior from the hygienic view point. Glass cups and other vessels do not crack like china to admit the dreaded microbes. Clear glass is beautiful to set out a luncheon, tea or dinner table, but colored side dishes for small matters are too pretty to leave aside.

There are fat, straw berry, chrysanthemum and thistle designs in annealed pressed glass, besides spoon trays, punch cups, coffee mugs (quite new these), nappies and drinking glasses of every kind, and as they cost little in comparison with the cut glass we can see why women have seized upon them for country use.

FASHION HINTS.

The Chief Feature of the Short Skirt. The Plain Peasant.

The chief feature of the short skirt of the moment is that the back is shorter than the front, and the tendency is still toward a very short waist at the back and a long pointed one in front.

Some of the prettiest hats are very simple, and, despite all efforts to the contrary, they are very flat, but this appearance is somewhat modified by the wide bandeau, and the way in which they are worn off the face is a distinct innovation with Parisians.

The parasol of the moment is very plain, with an abnormally long handle, the shade often decorated with spots or a wide border.

Somehow all the smart morning frocks seem to be worn without ruffles or even boas, but with a very neat turn over muslin collar. This style is becoming to some and certainly suitable for the short skirts, but for smarter gowns certainly the softening ruffle at the neck is more becoming.

White linen shirt waists are made with skirts to match.

Shirred effects are quite the mode and very becoming to tall people. Skirts and jackets are made in this fashion of thin veiling and have linings of lustrous silk, sometimes of a contrasting shade.

Gowns of white d'esprit are smart for young girls. These are always pretty trimmed with ribbon shirred or lace medallions.

The illustration shows a simple and at the same time picturesque evening gown of white silk.

PRETTY COSTUMES.

Rose Pink and Pale Green Linen Gowns—Sack Coats.

Rose pink and pale green are leading shades for linen gowns, and these are always dainty and cool looking in summer.

A smart fashion is that of little waistcoats of kid embroidery or old brocade for morning wear over blue or black serge skirts in company of a short sack coat or bolero. These are cut low to admit of a folded scarf or chemisette of soft plaited muslin or chiffon, which comes right up to the neck. The softening effect at the neck takes off any idea of hardness from the brocade or cloth underneath.

The attractive little loose sack or bolero in black net and taffeta has not disappeared. It is such a welcome addition in town for wearing over blouses with ordinary black skirts that few of us with a limited number of toilets can afford to dispense with this smart and useful garment.

Very dressy hats are made of satin straw, trimmed with ostrich feathers. Tulle and chiffon hats are not so much used, but are mingled with straw.

Foulard dresses are useful as well as pretty if made in a simple blouse and skirt fashion with fagoting for sole trimming or a little embroidery. The extremely ornate, fussy foulard has given way to the veiling or crepe de chine dress and the foulard is now considered a material for the general utility gown.

Elbow sleeves will not be seen for street wear this season, but will still be popular for dressy occasions.

The turban in the sketch is of rough straw trimmed with red flounces.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

The Wholesome Woman Is a Blessing to Man

"OH, who admires her?" remarked the youthful critic.

The woman of experience laughed. "That's where you make your mistake, my dear girl," she said.

"Oh, men like girls who are sophisticated," the other retorted, with a wise air. "Girls who don't always say what they think, who are mysterious and elusive and hard to make out and—yes, perhaps a little wicked—it lends such a charm—the subtle air of wickedness."

"The mistake of the very young—appreciated only by the very young man," went on the older woman, with her relentless little smile, "and it usually takes them several years to get over it. It belongs to the age when a girl thinks no one can understand her, when she deals in isms and wonders if she has the making of a genius in her because she is so unlike other girls. I don't know why it is, but the simple, admirable virtues are not appreciated by the very young and ambitious girl who wants to be termed attractive—more than that, fascinating. I dare say it is because she has been having an overdose of them during her recent childhood, just as she now enjoys late hours and highly spiced food because she has been brought up simply. Anyway, it usually takes her from one to two seasons to get over the idea, and during that time she usually loses a good man or two just by way of convincing her that her tactics are wrong."

"But do you mean to say"—

"I mean to say this: Men—the men worth while, the men of the world of experience—don't care for half and half things. They admire a woman who does not pose, who has certain well defined ideas and who sticks to them, who is frank, who will not stoop to trickery and who is wholesome. Those are the women who count for something in the world and who win in the long run, although the others may seem to score for a time."

"Well, but just what do you mean by a wholesome woman—a woman who washes her face with soap and goes about with it shiny?"

"Oh, dear, no! Powder is not inconsistent with wholesomeness if it is not carried to extremes. The wholesome woman, by her walk, by her frank, sunny smile, by her dress even, shows the beauty and truth of her character and makes you glad there are such women in the world."

LOVE OF HOME.

"But how can she show her mental qualities by her dress?"

"Very easily. She avoids loudness and sloppiness; in fact, she can be capable of neither. She doesn't fuss and fret and worry over her dress, because she doesn't need to. It is simple and within her means. Rather than have three gowns over which she must scrimp and save, not to speak of sacrificing other things, she will have one perfect in every detail, useful, smart and appropriate. Her shirt waists will be few and simple, if she cannot afford elaborate ones, but they will be snowy and immaculate. In a word, her very clothes will be proof that she does not live under a pretense or a sham trying to make out that she is other than what she can afford to be. But it is by her sweet, sunny disposition, her patience, her constancy and her love of home that the wholesome woman can be distinguished from her morbid, affected, neurotic sisters. She is a blessing and a constant delight to the man she marries, and she is the woman who is loved and admired by the best kind of man."

Waists For Summer.

Some unusually nice waists are made of silk in fine checks and trimmed with a line of lace and insertion, through which is run narrow black velvet ribbon. Tussore silks and pongees in white, in colors and black make up into elegant waists, and skirts can also be made to match. Taffetas, plain and with stripes made of a heavy cord combining two or three colors, are lovely for these blouses. One had a white ground, with the cords showing green, pink and heliotrope at intervals. This is trimmed with shirrings and medallions of lace and a belt of velvet of the darkest shade.

RIVALS FOR DANCER

Emperors of Germany and Austria Admire Same American Girl.

Miss Isador Duncan's Career from Western Music Halls to the Favorite of the Crowned Heads of Europe.

Recently another American girl has risen to the role of favorite on the American stage; even to such an extent that two of the most popular monarchs of Europe contended for the privilege of showering honors and riches upon her. Lole Fuller captured Paris, and held the gay capital entranced by her graceful dancing. What that American girl did in France Isador Duncan is to-day doing in Germany, and has done in Austria.

The story of Isador Duncan's rise to fame reads almost like a chapter from one of the old fairy tales. She is a California girl, seemingly a product of its sunshine, and began her stage career as a dancer in the music halls of San Francisco and other California cities. From there she went to New York, where she undertook to teach the children of a number of wealthy families her style of dancing, and succeeded for a time. It was while she was in New York that the Windsor hotel burned. It was here that she held her classes, and had a number of children in the building at the time of the fire, but by the exercise of judgment she got them all safely to the street.

From New York she went to Europe, and appeared in a number of European capitals, achieving a popular success. At her first appearance in Berlin her performance was witnessed by Emperor William, who was charmed by her "poetry of motion," and who made her a flattering offer of a permanent engagement at the court theater. Other engagements prevented her accepting this offer at that time, but she promised to return at a later date. Then she went to Vienna and danced before Emperor Francis Joseph, who also made her alluring offers to remain in his capital, and proposed to make her the court dancer at an almost fabulous salary.

The artists and musicians of Vienna took up the question and begged her to remain there, promising to spread her fame in song and picture if she would do so. This would in all probability have decided the question had not a number of wealthy women of Berlin proposed to erect a theater for her if she would return.

So, in Berlin this charming western American girl will remain permanently. The theater which is being built for her is of a distinctly classical type of architecture, fashioned after the models of the old Greek temples. This is in keeping with her dancing, which is severely classical. She believes that every musical sound has its echo in movement, and it is in the interpretation of this echo that gives charm to her dances, which in reality are but a series of artistic poses, depicting joy, sorrow, grief and shame, passing in rapid review with the changes of the music.

Miss Duncan imitates the ancient Greeks in her dress upon the stage. She does not wear gowns, but draperies. Her feet and arms are entirely bare, and the drapery so light that every outline of her figure can be distinctly seen, but no one has ever chided her as being immodest in any way. Her modesty was noted even while a performer in the music halls of the west.

Miss Duncan believes in her art. While her dancing is almost a religion, and she believes that "poetry of motion" should be studied by all. It is her art that makes her attractive, and she believes that graceful movements will make any woman beautiful. She is not beautiful in the accepted meaning of the word, though she has thoughtful, reflective eyes which give to her face a decided charm.

With so distinguished a person as the German emperor a patron, Miss Duncan cannot help but secure even greater success and popularity than has already fallen to her lot. While she will make Berlin her future home, she has in no way renounced her allegiance to America, and says that her plans for the future include a return to its shores for a time at least.

THE ASTROLOGER.

LIGHTNING ROD MAN.

That Is What His Friends Call Charles G. Bennett.

Has Been Struck Fourteen Times Without Receiving Serious Injury—Attracts Electric Fluid on Slight Provocation.

Wanted—By Charles G. Bennett, of Ilion, N. Y., a place where lightning is unknown and where the sun's rays fail to penetrate.

Mr. Bennett, who is searching for this curious clime, is called by his friends "the lightning-rod man." He has the remarkable distinction of having been struck 14 times without injury. Physicians tell him that he is so charged with magnetism that he attracts the lightning in the same way as the rods on barns and houses.

Mr. Bennett is also unusually affected by the sun's rays, and has suffered from sunstroke many times.

It has been a little more than two years since Mr. Bennett discovered that he was not quite like other men. He was at that time employed as caterer in one of the big hotels in the Adirondacks, and while superintending a picnic dinner was suddenly laid low. "A sunstroke" was the verdict, and great was the amazement of all his friends when, after lying prone on his back for a few moments, he arose and went about his work as chipper as though nothing had occurred.

The following summer he was again stricken, and the day succeeding this second stroke marked his first adventure with the lightning. This was serious enough to send him to a noted physician, who, after a rigid examination, told him that he had more electricity in his system than ten ordinary men, and warned him against venturing out in a thunderstorm.

At first he ridiculed this statement and scoffed at the advice, but he soon found to his sorrow that it was all too true. This was in the summer of 1901, and that year the electric storms were many and heavy. Nine times in succession was Mr. Bennett struck, and he suffered from four sun-strokes. The following year he was struck by lightning five times and sun-struck three times.

Mr. Bennett says that he has always experienced most annoying "creeping" sensations during a thunderstorm, but it was only two years ago that he realized what a powerful magnet he was.

This was while driving through a country lane during a heavy shower. The day was oppressive, and the storm gathered in force until the sky was livid. Suddenly the horse dropped dead, struck to the earth by a bolt, which also laid low the driver. Bennett declares that he was not unconscious more than ten minutes, and when he came back to the world again he felt not a whit worse for his shock.

What was, perhaps, the most serious of all this strange man's experience occurred last summer. He was at the clubhouse, in the midst of elaborate preparations for a big spread, when the sky darkened and a storm came quickly up. When the first rain fell Mr. Bennett was sharpening an ice pick, and the caterers forced him to a window. A vivid flash of lightning illuminated the place, and a big elm just outside went crashing to the ground. The bolt followed the tree to the veranda of the clubhouse, and, plunging on the roof, the bolt took an irregular course and flashed through part of the dining-room, passing through that apartment without doing any particular harm, thence to the hallway where Mr. Bennett was standing.

He was at once enveloped in light. He rushed outside and sitting on the porch he clapped both hands to his ears as though to shut out the sound. Suddenly he swayed and fell unconscious. By this time a number of the members had rushed to the scene, and a physician was soon obtained. They worked over Bennett for half an hour and then sent him to the hospital, where he lay as though lifeless for several days.

A flutter of the eyelids, a deep sigh, and Bennett sat up, declaring that, except for a slight headache, he felt perfectly well.

Never had he remained so long unconscious from a shock, and the doctors feared that he would possibly in a week or so succumb to the after effects. But he showed no subsequent sign of weakness or disorder.

Sewage Affects Vegetables.

A law in France prohibits the cultivation, on sewage farms, of all vegetables intended to be eaten raw. It is believed that the sewage used for manure carries disease microbes, and that these microbes are destroyed when the vegetables are cooked.

CANAL IMPROVEMENTS

Electric Traction Engines Being Installed on German Waterways.

The Results of a Series of Exclusive Tests for the Towing of Boats on the New Teltow Canal.

It is perhaps one of the compensations incident to government ownership of railways, that it does not exclude or prevent due consideration of other methods of transportation. Notwithstanding the overshadowing interest of Prussia in her state railways, there is, especially in imperial government circles at Berlin, a keen and intelligent interest in all that relates to the improvement of internal water routes, for it is recognized that under existing conditions really cheap freights for raw materials and other coarse, heavy merchandise can only come from canal and river transportation.

In deference to the general demand for improvement in this direction, the government, early last year, formulated a plan for the employment of electric traction engines for towing boats on the Teltow canal, a new work now in process of construction, which will connect the Havel with the River Spree just south of Berlin. The canal is to be 23 miles in length, with one lock, and passes for a short distance through a lake where tugs instead of towing engines will have to be used. It is to be completed some time during next year, and is expected to have an annual traffic of about 1,500,000 tons. For obvious reasons, this new canal will offer an admirable opportunity for the employment of the most improved method of towing, and accordingly bids were solicited for an electric installation to comply with certain prescribed conditions, the motors being adapted to towing boats ranging from 175 to 600 tons, loaded to 70 per cent. of their capacity, and to be worked with a three-phase current of 8,000 volts and 50 periods.

With characteristic forethought, the government placed at the disposal of the competitors for preliminary experiments a section of the Finow canal, which connects the Havel and the Oder rivers at Oderburg, some distance north of Berlin, and there during the summer of 1902 a series of tests were made which attracted great attention from engineers and traction experts throughout Europe. The system of Messrs. Siemens & Halske appears to have been similar in general design to that of Richard Lamb, which was tested several years ago on the Delaware and Raritan canal and later on the Erie canal in the United States. The motor—which was little more than a working model—weighed 1,900 pounds, and with a continuous current of 500 volts developed five horsepower. The stretch chosen for the tests included a curved channel, bridge crossings, and the usual difficulties that would be encountered in actual practice. It was found that rounding a curve the light motor was derailed, and the experiment showed that for actual service the motor should be large and heavy enough to have at least eight to ten horsepower. To enable the towline to clear moored boats and other obstructions along the shore, the line was attached to the top of a mast 15 to 20 feet high and located centrally in the forward section of the boat.

Another example of the several proposed installations is thus described: The locomotive is relatively light and has two pairs of wheels, which are set at a convergent angle, so that both pairs run on the same rail, the balance of the machine being maintained by a pair of trail wheels running along the adjacent railway. Almost the entire weight, however, is borne by the inclined wheels on the rail, and the arrangement enables such that the heavier the resistance load created by the boat, the tighter the grip of the wheels upon the rail.

For an estimated annual traffic of 1,500,000 tons, it is proposed to equip one shore of the canal, and the service will require 23 locomotives capable of towing one boat of 600 tons or two of 300 tons each, besides six tugs to tow the boats across the lake. Whichever of the various competing systems may be adopted, it is certain that the Teltow canal, when completed and equipped, will furnish a convenient object lesson of the latest and most improved application of electric traction to canal

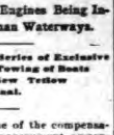
SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Handball Contests.

Upon the result of a series of handball games to be played in Jersey



Mike Egan.

City next June depends the summer vacations of a number of Irish devotees of the wholesome and healthy athletic game. Mike Egan, American champion, who recently took eight straight games from the western expert, Louis F. Keegan, in the Jersey City series and followed this by clinching the United States championship by winning the decisive game in the west from the same opponent, has a match with Tim Twohill, Irish champion.

Under the articles just signed, the first contests will be played between Twohill and Egan, in America. Of course, if the Irish expert takes a majority of the games, there will be little incentive for the small army of Egan's Irish-American friends to pay their way to Ireland to see the concluding games. It is certain, however, that if Egan has a fighting chance to take the world's championship from Twohill, after the American series is concluded, a delegation of his friends will take their vacations in the form of a trip to Ireland.

College Athletics.

Recently elected president of the Intercollegiate Conference Athletic association managing committee, A. D. Mayo, of the University of Minnesota, is one of the best known college graduates in western athletics. Upon his efforts depends a great deal the success of the annual college meet scheduled for May 30 at Marshall field. There is no more loyal "Gopher" than Mayo, and he has been known to make a trip of 500 miles to see the Minnesota football giants play a game with a college that was doomed to defeat before the gridiron contest began. Yet every athlete in every "Big Nine" college understands that Mr. Mayo would rather drop out of sight than make any arrangement for the annual meet that would give Minnesota a "shade the best" of any other varsity.

ball club faced Pitcher Currie in the opening game of the season in St. Louis he had no big league hitting record. No hit had been made, and the thousands of followers of the game who annually keep track of the men who make the first hit, the first run and the first error were anxiously awaiting information as to what players would go into their "hall of fame" for 1903. "Such a mite of a fellow," "Can he make a hit at any time?" "Well, he's as large as Jack Cardinale" pitted many caustic expressions were heard. A moment later and the diminutive player had made the hit.

More than that, he gathered in that game just one-half of all the hits credited to his team, and fielded his position like a Dahlen. Strangely enough, it was given to us extra man —an infielder who may not be seen in many games for this club—to capture this honor. His side partner, Joe Tinker, playing in strange territory—third base—made the first run of the season.

Minor Sporting Notes.

Sir Liang, the new Chinese minister at Washington, has a special claim for popularity with the American people —he is a ball player and a lover of the national game. Sir Liang learned to play ball while a student at Phillips academy, in Andover, Mass.,—he was educated in this country. He mastered the curve in pitching by watching the games of the Hartford Nationals, and when the college team was in need of a pitcher insisted upon being given a chance to show his worth in the box. No one was aware of his ability and great was their astonishment when he struck out one after another of those who came to bat. From that day Liang took first place among the athletes of the academy. He has never lost his interest in the game.

Abe Attell, the clever Pacific coast featherweight, is in Buffalo, where he will do his training for his coming 20-round bout with Terry McGovern before the International A. C. of Fort Erie, May 30. The fight is to take place in the afternoon, and the lads have agreed to weigh 126 pounds at 10 o'clock on the morning of the fight. Eddie McBride will referee.

H. Thurman Chapman, of Drake university, in Des Moines, broke the world's pole vault record at the home field meet there recently, making a vault of 12 feet. The world's record was 11 feet 10½ inches, held by Clapp, of Yale. Chapman is physical instructor at the Keokuk, Ia., Y. M. C. A. for two years.

PASSING OF SANKEY

The Famous Singing Evangelist Is Threatened with Blindness.

Has Been Forced to Give Up All Work and Retire to the Home of His Son at Eastport, Long Island.

The sad news has recently become known that Ira D. Sankey, the most famous of all singing evangelists, has been stricken with blindness. For some time the fact has been kept a secret through his earnest desire for the sake of his friends, but it has at last leaked out. The sight of one eye is absolutely gone, but there are hopes that the other may be partly restored.

In the religious history of the entire civilized world there are no two personages who have been more prominently identified with it than have

MR. SANKEY'S HOME AT EASTPORT.
The Long Island Resort Where He Is Resting at Present.

Dwight L. Moody and Ira D. Sankey. In December of 1899 the former was called from this earth and the recent sad news concerning the latter retires him from the field of active workers.

During his evangelistic work Mr. Sankey has written hundreds of Gospel hymns, and it is estimated that no fewer than 75,000,000 copies of these have been sold in the last 30 years. His famous "Ninety and Nine" has echoed around the world and he himself has sung it thousands of times. This was his favorite song, and he always believed it accomplished the most good. Next to "The Ninety and Nine" he ranked "Faith Is Victory" among his own compositions. Of course the royalties on the enormous sale of his songs was considerable, but it is a fact that is known to but few people that he never kept for himself a penny of these, believing that it was not right that he should profit by them. He established a trust for the collection of his share of the royalties and every cent of them was turned over to the Northfield schools founded by Mr. Moody. These royalties have amounted to more than half a million dollars.

The little old organ here shown has been Mr. Sankey's constant companion in all his evangelistic work. Its ivory keys are almost worn through from the thousands of times he has fingered them while leading song services. Mr. Sankey played on this organ long before he thought of taking up his religious work. He was always a lover of music and a good singer, and he bought the organ soon after his return from the civil war, when he settled down to the pursuit of banking in Pennsylvania. It was in 1870 that Mr. Sankey met Mr. Moody in Indianapolis and six months later the famous duo started on their work accompanied by the little organ. Two or three years later they went to England, where they made their great reputation.

The primary cause of Mr. Sankey's affliction is overwork. Although he was a man of powerful physique, six feet tall and of robust build, he would never rest. He has been a prodigious worker all his life and the strain has finally told on him. The death of Mr. Moody was a great blow to him and he tried to take up the noble work himself. His family saw his gradual breaking down, but he refused to listen to their pleadings and he continued in his work until illness compelled him to seek retirement, though it was much against his will that he did so. He would much have preferred to continue his active life so long as he lived. He so loved the work he was doing much more than he loved rest.

Although Mr. Sankey's knowledge of music was but rudimentary, he was a wonderful singer and could appeal directly to the emotions of his audience. He was also a powerful voice and it is an authenticated fact that once he was heard singing a hymn and a quarter away by a man who was converted by the song.

But now his days of labor are over and he has retired to his home at Eastport, L. I., where he is with his children and grandchildren and his old organ he will spend the remainder of his days in peace and quiet.

IN THE YELLOWSTONE

The Tame "Wild" Animals That Are Found There.

President Roosevelt Had Many Opportunities to Study Bears—Measures for the Protection of the Animals There.

President Roosevelt saw very few bears when he went to Mississippi last winter to shoot a few if they came his way, but on his recent trip through the Yellowstone National park, with no intention of shooting them, there were bears a-plenty to be seen. The wild game of the park are hardly "wild" in the usual meaning of that term. They are, as a lawyer might say, but technically wild,—that is, they are free to roam where they will. The law says, however, that the hand of man shall not molest them in any way. Two of the park bears were seen not long since rooting around in a rubbish heap for all the world like a pair of goats. A visitor approached within a few feet of them and the bears took not the slightest notice. It shows how many (possibly most) of nature's creatures would act upon the approach of man if man himself were not their enemy. It is related that last summer a bruin thought he recognized an old friend in one of the tourists. The bear threw his fore paws around the man's neck and gave him a hug merely as an act of courtesy. But that hug, while affectionate, was a long-drawn-out affair, and the ammonia bottle had to be brought to bruin's nose before he would let go.

A curious thing going to show how tame the larger game animals of the park are is the regulation forbidding dogs to roam at large. In a recent government report the superintendent said that it was a "well-known fact that one small dog running at large, while it will do no harm to the large game, will drive it so far back from the roads that none will be seen by the average tourist."

The deer in the park are quite numerous and also very tame. They roam around the posts, hotels and clearings as though they owned them. A little herd settled one day, while the president was in the park, in front of the army officers' quarters. Not a person was to be seen. Just then some of the president's party, for whom a local character was acting as guide, hove in sight.

"What's become of the officers," asked the visitor.

"The deer are holding the fort," replied the local character, "and the officers are afraid to come out. Its against the law to shoot 'em, and if anyone tries to drive 'em away with a broom they're something awful."

Elk, as well as deer, are numerous. The antelope are seen less frequently. In fact, it was feared a few years ago that they were becoming gradually extinct. They were killed in great numbers in the state of Montana. That state, however, about two years ago passed a law which absolutely prohibits the killing of these beautiful animals.

Of the smaller game the beaver have probably increased more rapidly in recent years than anything else, and their dams and houses are now found in almost all the smaller streams of the park.

There is scarcely any feature of the Yellowstone park which tourists enjoy more than the trout fishing. It is especially interesting to the true sportsmen for the reason that the different species of trout can be taken within the limits of the park. These are the native or black trout, the rainbow, the Von Behr, the Loch Leven, and the eastern brook trout. There is no restriction on the fishing except that fish cannot be caught and sold for the market. It can safely be said that there are few places where better sport can be had.

CASTLES FOR ASTOR

He Owns Two of the Most Famous Places in All England.

His Most Recent Purchase, Hever Castle, Has Most Romantic History—The Birthplace of Anne Boleyn.

William Waldorf Astor, the expatriated American, who after receiving from his native land many political honors, turned his back upon the shores which had given to the family the great wealth it possessed and sought the company of dukes and earls, princes and kings in England, has found some favor in England because of his lavish expenditures for entertaining the nobility and royalty of his adopted country.

Astor has purchased two of England's most historic palaces. He may now be said to own three historic homes in England, a town house in London on Carlton House terrace, which formerly belonged to the earl of Granville; Cliveden on the Thames, and his most recent acquisition, Hever castle, one of the most famous castles in all England.

Cliveden, the country seat of Astor, cost him more than $1,000,000. For that sum he expected to buy more than the estate—he hoped that some of the renown and social standing of its former owners would go with the house and grounds. The present mansion at Cliveden dates back only to 1830, but it is but a reproduction of the one built by the duke of Buckingham during the reign of Charles II., which was destroyed by fire at the end of the eighteenth century. In the old mansion there resided no less a character than Frederick, prince of Wales, the father of George III., and many other men noted in English history. Around it clusters many interesting incidents in English history, and there for the first time, on August 1, 1740, Britain's national song, "Rule Britannia," was first rendered. The English people rather presented the purchase of the famous estate by Astor, and for a time it was considered more of a bar than a help in achieving the social success dreamed of by the family.

Hever castle, Astor's latest purchase, for which he paid nearly $200,000 only, is one of the most ancient in England. In it is supposed to be the birthplace of the unhappy Queen Anne, second of the six wives of Henry VIII., and was her home for a number of years. The story of Anne Boleyn is so intimately connected with this old castle that the history of her life is but the history of the castle while she lived. Here she is supposed to have been born in 1507, and here she lived until she was seven years of age, when she was sent to France to the court of Lewis XII. When she returned again to England it was as one of the queen's maids of honor, and she was a favorite with the English court. Henry VIII. was infatuated with her remarkable beauty, and when he found her love belonged to a Hotspur, he banished her from court and sent her back to Hever castle until he could dispose of the lady whom he had aspired for as a hand the king wanted. When she returned to court again it was to become the wife of Henry, and as such she went to her death on the scaffold in London Tower.

The old castle stands to-day as it did in the days of Anne Boleyn. Its moat, portcullus, drawbridge and round towers have never been changed. Its ancient windows bear the shields of many generations dating from the time of the old Norman baron, who built it in the time of Edward III. The castle still contains much of the furniture which was used there in the time of the Boleyns. The room that has always been most popular for visitors is the bedroom of Anne, which is beautifully panelled and contains Anne Boleyn's bed. Here there are still a massive pair of arbaleses bearing the royal initials, H. A., and surmounted with crowns.

BETTER TROLLEY SERVICE?

It looks as if there was something better in view for the local trolley service. With a little boosting from the local Board of Trade, this promise may be brought to a successful fulfillment. Elizabeth sent a delegation from its Board of Trade to see President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service Corporation, which has taken over the control of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company, together with a number of other trolley and gas companies. A definite promise of improvements was given to the citizens from the county seat.

Among the things that the Elizabethans asked for was sprinkling of the city streets. Plainfield has that already and another request was for a uniform use of transfers good on all lines in the city. Plainfield already has that as all its trolley lines have always been controlled by one company which is not the case in Elizabeth. What Plainfield does want, however, is a number of new and properly equipped cars. Then it wants better service on the Arlington avenue line. There are a number of minor changes that would greatly improve the local service.

But greatest of all the needs of Plainfield, as far as its trolley service is concerned, is a proper transfer station on private property. No matter what arrangements are made, it will never be satisfactory as long as the trolley company appropriates the middle of one of the principal thoroughfares and compels its passengers to either plow through the dust or wade through mud and water. No matter whether the cars meet every five minutes or every fifteen, the usefulness of Watchung avenue as a public thoroughfare is essentially injured so long as they use the roadway for a waiting station. By running a loop in on private property and erecting a platform and waiting shed, the interests of the company's patrons and those of the city as well would be far better looked after.

MEMORIAL DAY.

While it is well to see the American people enjoy themselves on a holiday, one cannot help but feel that the significance of Memorial Day should not be allowed to fall too far into the background. It will not be forgotten by the veterans, those who passed unscathed through the dangers of battle and the more peaceful days following. But one by one, they are answering the summons of the Great Captain and the little band grows fewer and fewer as the years roll by. Those that remain gather together and deck the graves of those who have gone before and hold appropriate services.

In customary fashion, the local Grand Army men observed the day in Plainfield Saturday. They were assisted by many who played no part in the great conflict but who honored the memory of those who did. While there were many Plainfielders who did not take any part in the observation of the day save to enjoy themselves in one fashion or another, it does not signify that they did not respect or honor the men who fought and bled for their country. The opposite is really the case. The attractions of the immediate present occupy the minds of many to the exclusion of other things which are not called prominently to the fore. We are a forgetful nation, perhaps, but not an ungrateful one and there is not an American who fails to honor the memory of those who fought for their country and either met death at that time or in the years that have followed.

THEATRICAL.

Coney Island, long the Mecca almost exclusively, of the summer fakir, shows surprising transformation this year, thanks to the civic spirit of some of its best citizens and the vigilance of a reform administration. Foremost among the Island's legitimate amusements this year and emphasizing to a marked degree the wholesome character of the resort's regeneration is the presence there, now at Sea Beach Palace, of Frank C. Bostock, the animal king, with his amazing concert of familiar and strange beasts and zoological marvels. First, perhaps, of the magnets of these assemblies is Captain Bonavita, the lion tamer and his twenty-seven lions. To the layman the daring of Bonavita simply baffles comprehension. Bonavita's daring, while matchless in its spectacular attractiveness, has an equally awe inspiring rival in the performance of Mme. Morelli, who enters a cage of leopards, the boldest and most treacherous of the feline family. Herman Woodon, a slight youth, engages the courage and ferocity of a strangely mixed group of wild beasts, including Goldie, a tiger who never enters the arena without showing fight.

William Sutton, of East Front street, has left Muhlenberg Hospital, after undergoing an operation for cancer on the face. He is entirely cured.

DECK GRAVES OF COMRADES

The Veterans of Grand Army Celebrate Memorial Day in Its Truest Sense.

A PARADE IN MORNING

Visit Local Cemeteries and Parade Through City and Borough—Exercises in Reform Hall in Afternoon—Address By Former Mayor Randolph.

Memorial Day in its true sense was appropriately observed by the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 75, G. A. R., assisted by the Woman's Relief Corps. Following the annual custom, the veterans gathered early Saturday morning and visited the various cemeteries in Plainfield and vicinity.

After returning from the cemeteries, where the graves of the soldier dead were decorated with flowers, the Post assembled for the parade. Past Commander I. L. McVoy was marshal of the day and was assisted by Past Department Commander W. C. Smith, followed by the Raritan Brass Band. There came the members of Company K, in charge of Lieut. John M. Lewis, escorting the veterans. It was expected that the Plainfield High School cadets would turn out, but through a misunderstanding the school boys failed to appear.

Along the line of march the homes and stores were decorated with American flags. The veterans visited the North Plainfield Cemetery and Plainfield Avenue Cemetery, where special services were held at the graves of the late E. G. Morse and Isaac Brokaw, according to former custom. These services were in charge of the officers of the Post.

Early in the afternoon, the Post reassembled and marched to Reform Hall, where special services were held. On the platform there was a large chorus of children and patriotic songs were rendered. These children were drilled by members of the Woman's Relief Corps, who were in charge. There was also the grave on the platform to represent the unknown soldier dead, over which there was a special service in which the veterans took part. A feature of this service was the reading of President Lincoln's address at Gettysburg and the general orders issued annually by the National Commander of the G. A. R. Included in the musical programme were appropriate soprano solos by Miss Mears, accompanied on the piano by Andrew G. Carpenter.

The address of the afternoon was delivered by Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, who gave a soul stirring talk to his fellow-veterans. Mr. Randolph reviewed the history of the past years and during the Civil War, of the sacrifice and devotion on the part of those who fought for their country. The speaker also referred to the development of the country since the Civil War, showing how wonderful it all has been.

In addition to the singing by the chorus of children there was also a solo by Arthur Manley, who rendered patriotic airs. He was accompanied on the piano by his mother.

There is much praise due to the members of the Woman's Relief Corps for their assistance in the general observance. They made nearly two hundred beautiful bouquets and presented them to the veterans and members of Company K. Patriotic literature was also distributed.

The services were concluded with the benediction by Rev. W. E. Honeyman, after which the children adjourned to the basement, where ice cream and cake were served to them.

OTHER GAMES.

WESTFIELD, 5; ALIS, 3.

BROOKLYN F. C., 5; ALIS, 2.

While the two games of baseball played by the Alis Club on Saturday were not won by that team, the means gave two fine exhibitions. In the morning the team lost to Westfield in a hard fought battle by a score of 5 to 3. "Jimmie" Montross pitched a good game against Alis, although he was touched for ten hits, while Westfield only got five off Alis.

In the afternoon with a somewhat changed team, Alis lost to the Brooklyn Field Club, 5 to 2. Geo. Dupee pitched. He held his opponents down in clever fashion, but the six errors made by Alis cost them the game. Below will be found the line-up and score by innings of the two games:

Alis—Flynn, 3b; Barnes, c; Cox, ss; Richardson, 1b; Hope, p; Hemmingar, 2b; Dupee, rf; Lederer, cf; Pond, lf; Friedburg.

'PLAINS, 13; X. MUTTS, 7.

'PLAINS, 3; CELLULOID, 1.

Scotch Plains' crack team added two more victories to their list Decoration Day by defeating the Xavier Deaf Mutes, of New York, in the morning and taking the strong Celluloids, of Newark, into camp in the afternoon. The morning game was a threecone contest from a spectators point of view. The locals seemed to know that they had the visitors beaten from the start and played listlessly. The game finally came right to a close, the score being 13 to 7 in favor of the locals. The afternoon game proved to be one of the prettiest contests a lover of the game could ask for. Davis occupied the box for the locals and pitched a great game, striking out seven of the visitors. The support given him was glit-edged, only one error being made. The visitors presented Parker, one of Newark's cracker-jack pitchers, against the home team but they had but little trouble in finding him, only one man fanning the air, but the support given him, especially in the outfield, when two and three base hits were pulled down so regularly that it was enough to break the hearts of the lusty rooters, kept the score down so as to make it one of the closest and snappiest games of the season. When the dust of battle had cleared away victory was found perched upon the banner of the home team to the tune of 3 to 1. Following is the lineup of the teams:

Celluloids—Rahm, cf; Sweeney, 3b; Babe, 1b; Allerton, 2b; Thorber, ss; Berger, rf; Cleavy, lf; Conroy, c; Parker, p.

TRIBUTE TO P. H. S.

Pupils of Local Institution to be Admitted to Lehigh With Examination.

Superintendent Henry M. Maxson, of the city schools, has received word from Lehigh University that hereafter graduates of the Plainfield High School will be admitted to the University without examination.

Lehigh is one of the universities that does not ordinarily admit students without examination, but the record of G. L. Hallock, P. H. S., 1902, who is now a member of the freshman class, has been so very creditable to himself and to the High School that the authorities of the University have given the local institution the privilege of having its pupils, who desire to enter the University, exempted from the entrance examination.

Miss Addie Carney, who has been spending several days with Plainfield relatives, has returned to Bayonne.

SCHOOL APPROPRIATION

NO EXTRA PAY FOR ELECTION OFFICERS UNTIL DECISION.

Hospital Wants Randolph Road From Park to Woodland Avenue Graded—Report of Building Inspector—Other Business.

An unusual amount of business of more or less importance was considered at the June meeting of the Common Council, last Monday, after a public hearing had been had against the granting of a franchise to the Central New Jersey Telephone Company, was concluded. All of the members, except Mr. Tolles, were present.

The first business was the presentation of the report of the Board of School Estimate fixing $64,000, exclusive of the sum apportioned by the county superintendent of schools, as the sum necessary for the maintenance of the public schools for the coming year. Accordingly an ordinance was introduced by Mr. Daniel fixing that sum to be assessed and collected as other taxes for the purposes named. The ordinance was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised.

A communication was received from the trustees of the First M. E. Church asking that an appropriation of more than $30 be made for the proper keeping of the burial plot in the Plainfield Avenue Cemetery used for the interment of the city poor. The keeper of the cemetery, offered to clean the plot of weeds, etc., and put it in good condition for the sum of $30 and then keep it in condition for $10 a year thereafter. The communication was referred to the alms committee.

The New Jersey Telephone Company made application for the right to open South avenue from Richmond street to Netherwood avenue, for the purpose of continuing its system of underground work. The application was referred to the street committee.

The resignation of Alex. Muir, as a call-man in the city fire department, was accepted, and the appointment by Mayor Jenkins of Sylvanus Hoffman to fill the vacancy, was referred to the fire and building committee.

D. C. Ivins & Company made application to the Council for permission to build an addition to the firm's office on Watchung avenue, and on motion of Mr. Lee, of the fire and building committee, permission was granted.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital petitioned to have Randolph road, from Park to Woodland avenues, graded and the petition was referred to the street committee. Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that during May twenty permits for new buildings were granted, and Street Commissioner Gavett reported that during the same time twenty-four permits for sewer connections were granted.

Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh reported on the claim of Armstrong Mulford and other members of the City Board of Registry and Elections regarding their claim for extra money account of work performed in connection with their official duties. He suggested that a decision from the highest court be secured before any further action be taken. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

Mr. Marsh also reported on the matter referred to him at the last meeting as to what rights the Council has to adopt municipal street sprinkling similar to the system in use in Ottawa, Canada. Mr. Marsh stated that while the State laws do not give the Council any specific rights, the members are given wide scope of action and he believed that if in the judgment of the Council the sprinkling of streets is considered wise for the best health of the city, this can be done and provision be made for it in an appropriation from the general fund. Later in the evening in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Pray, a sum not to exceed $6,500 was appropriated for the purpose of street sprinkling. This resolution was adopted. The sum mentioned will undoubtedly cover the cost of the work this season, as another sum was appropriated at the last meeting for the purchase of six sprinkling carts. It is the purpose of the city to cover just as many streets as possible with the six carts.

Mr. Daniel reported on a petition received from Herbert L. Moody, asking that certain taxes be remitted on his property on Belvidere avenue, and moved that the request be granted as the assessment was a double one and in error. The motion was adopted. A resolution offered by Mr. Daniel and providing for an increase in the salary of Jacob Dunham, janitor of the Council rooms and city offices, from $16 to $25 per month, was adopted, the increase to commence June 1.

Regarding the petition received from the Board of Trade asking that a committee of three be appointed from the Council to confer with a similar committee from the Board to ascertain the best means to secure consolidation of the city and borough, Mr. Daniel moved that the petition be laid on the table so that it can be taken up at a future meeting.

Mr. Daniel offered a resolution providing for the acceptance of the $8 poll tax owing the city by J. S. Cosgrove and the placing of the sum in the general fund. At the last meeting Mr. Cosgrove communicated with the Council, stating that the assessor had failed to assess him for poll tax and that he desired to pay the sum to the city.

The petition of the Board of Health for $1,286.18 to provide for certain necessary expenses, was granted on motion of Mr. Daniel, and resolutions by the same members provided for the transfer of $1,500 from the general fund to the fire fund and the borrowing of $4,000 on account of sewer improvements. These resolutions were adopted. Monday evening, June 15, was the time fixed for receiving bids for the purchase of the new school bonds, which has already been advertised.

Mr. Lee informed the Council that the contract for furnishing the fire department with coal for the coming season had been awarded to D. C. Ivins & Company, at $5.65 per ton. This price is ten cents less than that paid by the Board of Education. Incidentally, Mr. Lee remarked that he was anxious that all eye-witnesses of the accident at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, when one of the fire department horses was injured, be furnished to him as soon as possible so that the investigation now in progress can be completed.

Mr. Randolph offered a resolution which provided for the leasing of the Camera Club rooms, as additional room for the use of the police department, at an annual rental of $300. This is the second floor over police headquarters. The extra room is needed very much and the police committee has had the matter under consideration for some time past. The resolution was adopted.

The first step toward taking advantage of the new law providing for the election of a tax collector by the Council instead of by the people, was taken in the introduction of an ordinance offered by Mr. Murphy. This ordinance provides that by a three-fourths vote a collector shall be elected on January 1 next for a term of three years and thereafter triennially. The ordinance further provides that the former way of electing the collector be abolished in accordance with the State law, which was introduced by Assemblyman Newcorn and adopted. The ordinance was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised. All the members, except Mr. Daniel voted for its adoption. The latter voted in the negative on a principal of technicality.

Mr. Pray introduced a new ordinance providing for the macadamizing of certain streets in the city, the ordinance being intended to take the place of one offered at the last meeting and adopted on second reading. The original ordinance was killed and the new one was advanced to first and second readings and ordered advertised. The only changes in the ordinance are that Sycamore street is omitted and Prospect avenue is included from Park to Woodland avenue instead of Hillside avenue. The ordinance provides for the issuance of sixteen registered municipal bonds of $1,000 denomination each, bearing 5 per cent. interest, the same to run three years from date. It further provides for the appointment of commissioners and a public hearing on the matter was set for Monday evening, July 6. After the auditing of bills, Council adjourned.

Before the meeting adjourned the ordinance for accepting West Fifth street, from Grant avenue to Monroe avenue, and the ordinance for amending the building ordinance were passed on third reading.

in question will be revoked. There are only a few cases of contagious disease in the city at the present time, and those are of light form. Sixty-two visits were made to houses with contagious disease during the month. The sewer connections ordered by the Board at the April meeting, covering North and South avenues, in the vicinity of the water company's wells, have, with a few exceptions, all been made and closets put in. It was decided on motion to place the matter in Mr. Marsh's hands to begin prosecution against those who failed to comply with the notices.

The work done on the Harburger dump was reviewed and it was decided that in the fall all dumps be kept closed unless proper provisions were made for caring for the papers and to prevent fires.

AN IMPROVEMENT TO BE MADE IN NORTH PLAINFIELD SOON.

Surface Water on Willow and Myrtle Avenues and Other Thoroughfares to be Carried Off.

Plans have been completed for a storm sewer to be laid on Willow and Myrtle avenues, in the borough, which will carry off all surface water in that locality. As soon as the pipe, which has been ordered, arrives the work will be commenced. This will probably be in a week or ten days.

The storm sewer as planned will run from Mercer avenue and Sycamore avenue, connecting with a catch basin at the corner of Myrtle and Willow avenues and from thence to the brook. Pipe has been ordered for the Grove street storm sewer and for the sewer which is to run along Jackson avenue connecting with the Somerset street catch basin.

LAMP EXPLODED.

$250 Blaze in Residence of LeGrand Fulton, of Grant Avenue, Last Monday.

A lamp explosion in the house of LeGrand Fulton, of Grant avenue and West Third street, at 10:30 o'clock last Monday caused a lively fire, damaging the kitchen and residence to the extent of $250. The wick of a lamp in the kitchen, turned too high, caused the explosion of the chimney and the ignition of the oil. The walls and ceilings of the kitchen were ruined, and a number of articles of clothing burned including a valuable uniform of a secret order. A sideboard was also destroyed.

The fire provided the department with its first opportunity of putting the chemical satisfactorily into action, and the test proved entirely successful.

COUNTY BOARD FIXES ITS APPROPRIATIONS

Establishment of a Sinking Fund and Increased Cost of Elections Raise Them.

THE INCREASE IS $12,000

COUNTY HAS TO PURCHASE NEARLY 250 EXTRA BALLOT BOXES.

Company K Gets $300 for Maintenance of Armory—$17,000 for County Roads — Other Items Fixed.

The Union County Board of Freeholders met Thursday and among other important things transacted was the fixing of the several amounts which make up the general sum to be raised during the year for the running of the county. The amount will show an increase of about $10,000 or $12,000, due to the fact that a sinking fund of $8,000 was established. It is estimated that by saving this sum each year in forty years, the bonded indebtedness can be liquidated.

Another cause for an increase is the new primary election law, compelling the county to purchase nearly 250 extra ballot boxes at an expense of $35 each. The law provides that at each primary, as well as election, each party must have a separate ballot box. This will necessitate five boxes at each polling place. The several amounts appropriated for this is $14,000. For the maintenance of courts, $3,000 more is appropriated and for the maintenance of the county jail $4,000 additional is appropriated.

The several amounts are as follows:

Company I and Company C, of Elizabeth, each receive an appropriation of $350, and Company K, of Plainfield, $300, for maintenance of armory, etc. courts, $40,000; county jail, $8,000; lunatics, $32,000; compensation and salaries, $13,000; coroner's fees, $600; elections, $26,000; stationery, $2,000; advertising, publishing and printing, $2,000; incidental expenses, schools, burial soldiers and monuments, $18,000; children's guardian account, $1,000; payment principal on bonded debt, $5,000; payment of interest on bonded debt, $37,000; payment temporary loans, $1,000; sinking fund, $8,000; permanent improvement public buildings and grounds, $6,000; erection and repair culverts and bridges, $28,000; repairs county roads, $17,000; hospitals, $10,000; less assets of the county, $40,000.

The County Board of Assessors will meet at Elizabeth on Monday morning, July 30, at 10 o'clock, to fix the county rate.

BRIDE FROM THE BOROUGH

PRETTY HOME WEDDING ON MANNING AVENUE THURSDAY.

Miss Edith May Finney Becomes Wife of Berton Chapman, of Bound Brook.

In the presence of a few friends and relatives, Miss Edith May Finney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Finney, of Manning avenue, was united in marriage last Thursday to Berton Chapman, of Bound Brook, at the bride's home on Manning avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, and took place at 8 o'clock.

The parlors of the house where the nuptial knot was tied were decorated tastefully with flowers, including roses, carnations and greens. The bride was attired in a gown of white Persian lawn with trimmings of silk. She carried a bouquet of roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Carrie Krewson, wore a gown of blue of the same material. Wesley Sackett, of Bound Brook, was the best man.

After a supper had been served to the bridal party Mr. and Mrs. Chapman left for a short honeymoon and upon their return they will reside in Bound Brook where the groom is employed in the Ideal Cash Register Company.

LITERARY.

There are eight short stories in the June Leslie, ranging from a most original baby story, the "Gymkhana at Milkville," which is illuminated by Miss Cory's drawings, to a dreamy tale of an old bishop in a peaceful little town in Spain, by S. R. Crockett. The best story of a college boat race that has appeared for a long time, one thoroughly American in its quality, and the account of the business stratagem of a real estate man, possessed of a sense of humor and a love of dogs, together with a true yarn of a noted band of Western desperadoes, make up a variety of choice in the fiction.

The article called "Life Ashore" is the second paper on the life of the modern sailor, and takes up the most unknown, but one of the most interesting sides of a sailor's life, and that on "Our Farmer Presidents" tells much about those of our Chiefs of State who were farmers as well as statesmen, though not always so successfully. A dramatic sketch of E. S. Willard, a good deal of verse, and the usual light stories and rhymes in Marginalia and "Men, Women and Books," round out the number.

PROMOTED BY POPE.

Mgr. O'Connell Made Rector of Catholic University.

Was in Retirement for Eight Years, But Is Again High in Favor With His Holiness and the Propaganda.

The appointment of Mgr. Dennis O'Connell to the rectorship of the Catholic university at Washington will bring back into prominence a man who for the past eight years had, through the once powerful influence of certain American prelates, backed by that of still more powerful dignitaries in Rome, been in retirement.

In 1883 Mgr. (then Father) O'Connell was Cardinal (or rather Archbishop) Gibbons' private secretary. He accompanied the archbishop to Rome on the occasion of the memorable council of the American episcopate which had been summoned by the propaganda at the pope's order. Soon after he was installed with the responsible position of rector of the American college, in the Via Umilta, where until 1892 or 1894 he was an active, albeit not an obtrusive, factor in the great struggles between the Irish and the conservative parties in the church. Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishop Ireland honored him with their confidence, and in their absence he was generally recognized, both at the vatican and the propaganda, as their interpreter, if not nejally their representative.

Circumstances at that stage of his career unfortunately compelled Mgr. O'Connell more than once, and at crucial moments in ecclesiastical politics, to incur the displeasure of the advocates of Cahenseiyism and the opponents of the views then identified with Archbishop Ireland.

Thanks to his prudence, intelligence and skill, Mgr. O'Connell gradually rose in the good graces of the pope, to whom he had the privilege of free access, and was repeatedly consulted on matters of the most vital interest to the church in America.

It is a fact not known beyond the inner circles of Catholicism, says the New York World, that at a time when the creation of the delegation was in doubt the discreet but frank intervention of Mgr. O'Connell largely helped to determine the papal decision. Certain American prelates and Italian cardinals who were bitterly antagonistic to the appointment of the delegation could not forgive him for his attitude in the matter and a favorable pretense occurring some time later, through their influence Mgr. O'Connell was deprived of his office and temporarily forced into the innocuous desuetude from which his proved piety, his character and the assistance of his friends have at last rescued him.

Mgr. O'Connell is personally acquainted with almost every man prominent in Europe for ability in the world of letters, and has maintained a constant correspondence with the heads of the great universities. He is a man of great personal magnetism, but not a great preacher. His voice and delivery in the pulpit are bad, and detract from the simplicity and erudition of his discourses. He has, however the faculty of clothing great ideas in such simple language that a child may understand the meaning.

His advent to the Catholic university is hailed as a certain sign that the institution will be lifted to high rank. He is not averse to association with men who dissent from his religious views, and, as he is well equipped in general scholarship, it is expected that the great body of savants connected with the government will be naturally attracted to closer intimacy with the Catholic university.

Mgr. O'Connell was born in Columbia, S. C., and is a member of one of the most prominent southern Catholic families. Three of his uncles were respectively the president and professor of Hebrew and the vice president of the University of Columbia. Mgr. O'Connell received his education at St. Charles college, Ellicott City, Md., and after graduation was sent to Rome where he left the American college with the degree of Doctor of Divinity. He was ordained priest in the Church of St. John Lateran, at Rome.

MASTER MECHANICS' ANNUAL BANQUET

Plates Were Laid for Seventy-Five Guests at Hotel Rosell Last Wednesday.

AN ELABORATE MENU

LEMUEL B. WOOLSTON WAS THE MASTER OF CEREMONIES.

Tables Handsomely Decorated—Health Inspector Wm. Addis Read Original Poem—What Some of the Other Guests Said.

Plates were laid for seventy-five guests at the Hotel Rosell Wednesday for the annual banquet of the Master Mechanics Association. The tables were handsomely decorated and an elaborate menu was discussed. At the head of the table was seated the master of ceremonies, Lemuel B. Woolston, who was also the toastmaster. On his right was Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, and on his other hand President J. P. Buckle of the City Council, acting mayor.

When the cigars were aglow and the punch bowl flowing, the toastmaster introduced the speakers of the evening with a few well chosen remarks. President Buckle and Mayor Smalley made witty speeches and William Smith, of the board of mechanics, explained the reasons for organizing the association and the work that it is accomplishing. He laid stress upon the importance of insisting that workmen on strike should seek for employment in their own towns rather than look for it elsewhere. Health Inspector William Addis read an original poem in which the names of local plumbers were wittily introduced. Mr. Hennessey, of New York City, detailed the history of his connection with trade unions in New York.

James E. Martine spoke at some length in favor of trade unions, stating that the continual clashing between capital and labor was due to the discontent resulting from a condition of unfairness fostered by a lack of proper regulation of trusts. The inordinate fortunes made through the trusts and protected by legislation make the fight between capital and labor unequal. The remedy, which should be considered by an economic rather than a political standpoint, lies in the abolition of protective tariffs.

L. W. RANDOLPH.

SIMPLE STONE SLAB.

Marks the Exact Center of United States Population.

It Lies in a Barnyard, and Indiana Man Who Owns the Place Is Very Proud of His Unique Distinction.

J. Pierpont Morgan, the main shaft of the world's financial machinery, or Andrew Carnegie, the sponsor of millions of people who are receiving the benefits of his philanthropy, could not feel prouder of their respective distinctions than does Henry Marr, just a plain farmer, who resides near Columbus, Bartholomew County, Ind.

By referring to a bulletin issued by the census department it is found that the exact center of population is located at latitude 39 degrees 9 minutes and 36 seconds north, longitude 85 degrees 48 minutes and 54 seconds west. If a person is desirous of visiting the spot a better idea of its location can be secured by asking any resident of Columbus. Almost invariably the answer to such a question will be: "Five miles southwest of Columbus, in Hen' Marr's barn lot."

Marr is the person who enjoys the prominence of being the center man of population of the whole United States. It is quite a distinction, too, and, according to the Cincinnati Enquirer, Marr fully appreciates it. The pivotal stone is merely a small, flat slab sunk into the ground in the barn lot, leaving only the top surface exposed to the central atmosphere. On it is carved the simple inscription "1900." The marker, while not extraordinarily pretentious, is a more elaborate affair. Several hundred farmers and other visitors were present the day the stones were placed in position.

Once inside the inclosure no trouble is experienced in finding the monument. It is planted in the ground about 18 feet from the corner of the huge red barn, which occupies the center of the barnyard. With measured strides and a feeling of awe one advances in respectful silence to the spot. The first impulse to betray one's curiosity is evident in a force which invariably compels one to step upon the stone. Not until then does a person realize that he has been paid for taking the trip, for the instant the feet are planted solidly upon the monument the curiosity seeker is suddenly made to fully appreciate the novel inward sensation of imagining 18,650,000 the same number to the west, to the north and to the south.

Many persons from different parts of the United States have already visited the spot, and all have been more or less courteously treated by Farmer Marr and his wife. Tourists happening around the Marr home about meal time will more than likely have an opportunity of finding out what a good cook is Mrs. Marr.

Marr was born 40 years ago and for the last 17 years has resided on the farm on which are located the monuments. The comfortable country home was built a few years ago at a cost of about $8,000. It stands out enticingly on an estate containing 500 acres. The Marr domicile is a model of completeness. It would do credit in appearance to most likely have an opportunity of finding out what a good cook is Mrs. Marr.

The family receives its mail daily by rural carrier. Incidentally it might be mentioned that the Marrs were beneficiaries of the first rural delivery route instituted in the United States, the initial route having ramified through Bartholomew county as an experiment from the little town of Hope, near there.

CAPTAIN MARTIN'S RECORD

ON ALL-AMERICAN RIFLE TEAM FOR THREE SUCCESSIVE YEARS.

Shooting at Sea Girt Last Week Was Best That Has Been Done in Twenty Years.

Shooting last week in practice at Sea Girt for place on the American team was the best that has been done in twenty years by an American team, according to the records. International matches, with the much praised match rifle, never came up to last week's records. The shooting is now done with the military rifle and is little short of remarkable. Major Gullifoyle says the American team which has been selected to go to England after the Palma prize were better shots than any he had ever seen with any kind of rifle. Some individual scores have been better, but nothing as good in team shooting.

The Palma prize is a trophy that was put up for international competition during the centennial of 1876, to represent the championship of the world. It is inscribed, "United States of America to riflemen of the world." It was in annual competition up to 1882, when competition for it dropped. America has always held it until 1901, when the Canadian team defeated the Americans and took it home. Last year the American team went after it, but was again defeated. The trophy went to England, and shither the recently-picked team will go after it next month. If the twelve who form the team this year shoot in England as they did at Sea Girt in practice, there will be no question about bringing back the trophy.

Captain W. B. Martin, of Company K, this city, is the only one of this year's team who has been on the team the past three years.

RUN OVER.

Two Boys On One Wheel Came to Grief Passing Horses.

Ray Hart and a young son of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram G. Woodruff, both of Fairview avenue, had an exciting experience Thursday afternoon while riding a wheel along Doer street, toward Plainfield. Young Hart was riding the wheel and his companion was standing on the step. Approaching them was a team of horses and carriage in charge of a coachman. Just as the boys were about to pass the rig, the seat on the bicycle turned, throwing both lads under the horses' feet. The carriage passed over Hart's back, while young Woodruff sustained several scratches and bruises about the face. Otherwise they were not injured. They do not know the owner of the rig or who was driving the horses.

Very enjoyable was the informal dance given Thursday in Woodhull & Martin's new building under the auspices of the clerks in the store. Charles Suhr's Imperial Orchestra furnished excellent music. The dance was given on the second floor in what will be the carpet department. Shortly before midnight ice cream and cake were served by the young men and women, after which the dancing was continued. The company was honored with the presence of F. T. Woodhull and E. C. Martin and their families.

SOCIETY THRONGS TO BIG CHURCH WEDDING

Marriage of Miss Harriet Efner Strong to Thomas Leighton McCready.

AN AFTERNOON EVENT

FOLLOWED BY RECEPTION AT HOME OF THE BRIDE'S PARENTS.

Beautiful Floral Decorations at Church and House—Those Who Attended Young Couple—Lovely Gowns.

In the presence of a throng of admiring relatives and friends from this city and New York, the marriage of Miss Harriet Efner Strong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Strong, of Central avenue, and Thomas Leighton McCready, of New York, was solemnized in the Crescent Avenue church, Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. It was a society event of the season, attracting those who are prominent in the social circles. The fashionable church was a scene of perfect beauty, the decorations being unusually pretty. There was a profusion of stately palms, peonies and ferns, banked about the pulpit platform.

The bride waspichly gowned in lace and chiffon. She wore a tulle veil and carried a shower bouquet. Attending her was her sister, Miss Agnes Strong, who wore a gown of white crepe de chine, trimmed with lace. Her hat was trimmed in pink and she carried pink roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Ayune McCready and Miss Cornelia H. Merrill, of New York; Miss Emily F. Letebworth, of Buffalo; Miss Ruth Peckham, of Westfield, and Miss Ethel Bowen, of Plainfield. Their gowns were of nile green liberty silk, trimmed with lace and ribbons. Their hats were white, trimmed with pink roses and they carried pale pink roses. The groom was attended by McCready Sykes, of New York, as best man. The ushers were George G. Mc Cracken, Hervey Studdiford, Jay Clarkson, of New York; Henry C. Wells, James M. Middledith and George T. VanBoakerck, of Plainfield.

As the bridal patry entered the church, the wedding march was played by Frank J. Smith, a former organist of the church. At the altar the party was met by Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, of the Brick Presbyterian church, who performed the ceremony, and Rev. Percy S. Grant, of the Church of Ascension, New York, who assisted. The bride was given away in marriage by her father.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where three hundred guests assembled to extend their best wishes to the popular young couple. The home was beautifully decorated for the reception, white and pink roses and carnations, southern smilax and palms, being used chiefly about the parlors and hallway. During the reception, an elaborate supper was served by an out-of-town caterer, and early in the evening Mr. and Mrs. McCready left Plainfield to enjoy a honeymoon. Their plans for the future have not yet been made and their place of residence for the summer not yet determined upon.

The gifts received by the bride include many costly and beautiful articles, showing the high esteem in which she and her husband are held by a host of friends.

JURY SAID NOT GUILTY

Joseph Erner, Charged With Murder of John Driff, Was Dischargerd.

VICTORY FOR DUNGAN

Justice Garretson's Charge to Jury Was Impartial—Jury Out Only Two Hours—Wife and Three Children in Court—Prisoner Was Very Nervous.

Somerville, May 28—After being out only about two hours the jury in the case of Joseph Erner, charged with the murder of John Driff at Bound Brook on Christmas morning last, came in at 7 o'clock last night with a verdict in favor of the defendant. "Not guilty," the jurors said. Justice Garretson received the result.

The prisoner was in court and he was very nervous. His wife and three little children were also there. She was almost overcome. Erner shook hands with the jurymen and left the court room soon after, catching the 7:45 trolley for his home in Bound Brook. This is a great victory for his able counsel, Nelson Y. Dungan.

It is understood that the jury discredited the story of Wiza, who swore that he saw Erner deal the fatal blow. He admitted, however, that a story he had told the lawyer for the defense before the trial was false.

The trial yesterday dragged along slowly. Nearly all the time was taken in rebuttal by the State. The lawyers made their pleas and then the Judge charged the jury. He was quite impartial.

The verdict meets the general opinion of those who heard the trial.

NEW SWITCH.

Will Permit Easier Operation of Arlington Avenue Line.

The arrangement of switches on the Arlington avenue trolley line has always been a source of annoyance and prevented the operation of cars in a satisfactory manner. Several interested citizens have been making an effort to have the company place a switch on Randolph road. This would make it possible to operate extra cars without any hitch. The street committee from the Council has consented to the extra switch and it is likely that it will be installed soon.

GAVE STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL

SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR GIVEN BY HOLY CROSS CHURCH WOMEN.

As Effort to Raise Interest on the Mortgage on Rectory—Supper in the Evening.

In an effort to raise the interest on the mortgage on the rectory of the Church of the Holy Cross the women of the Guild of that church gave a strawberry festival Wednesday afternoon and a New England supper in the evening. Both were a great success as the patronage was large at both functions.

The affair in the afternoon was given for the benefit of the children, when the little people conducted a fair. Between the hours of 6 and 8 o'clock the supper was served and a better supper was never served in the guild room of that church. It is estimated that 120 suppers were served.

The committee in charge of the arrangements comprised: Mrs. A. E. Faber, chairman; Mrs. W. Montgomery Downey, Mrs. John H. Carman, Mrs. J. O. Stevens, Miss Nettie Davis, Mrs. Hannigan, Mrs. William Westphal and Mrs. Berry. Those who had charge of the various tables were Mrs. Berry, lemonade; Miss Helen Phillips, stocks table; Mrs. Samuel Townsend, salad table, and Mrs. Irene Murray, cake table. The young women of the church assisted in waiting upon the tables.

RACE NOT ON PROGRAMME

IRATE MOTHER CHASED DAUGHTER ABOUT SHOW TENT.

Much Excitement at "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Performance Tuesday Evening.

There was an act at "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Tuesday evening that was not down on the programme. Annie Campbell, a colored girl of about fourteen, who works on Sherman avenue, wanted to see the show, and she absented herself from work all day Tuesday in order to feast her eyes upon its marvels.

When the evening performance came around, unluckily for the girl she was seen by her mother, and the irate colored woman promptly chased her offending offspring all around the tent with the commendable idea of correcting her child for her idleness and disobedience. The race was fast and exciting and was viewed with delight by the assembled concourse, who shouted encouragement and then derision now to one and now to the other of the contestants.

Amid an indescribable uproar, the girl was finally captured and soundly pummeled by her wrathful parent, the punishment being inflicted with no soft hearted notions evident of sparing the child. The pair were finally quieted by Patrolman McCarthy and sent home. Mrs. Campbell threatens to send the child to the Reform School.

Doing the Right Thing.

The trouble begins with a tickling in the throat and a nagging little cough. Soreness in the chest follows and the patient wonders if he is going to have an all winter cold. Probably. If he does the wrong thing or nothing. Certainly not if he uses Parry Davis' Painkiller, the staunch old remedy that cures a cold in twenty-four hours. There is but one Painkiller, Parry Davis.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning June 2—Lessons by Rev. S. B. Doyle.

Topic.—Modern lessons from the Rechabites.—Jer. xxxv. 1-4, 18, 19. (Temperance.)

The Rechabites were a section of the Henites, a Midianitish tribe, who, with the Israelites, had come into Canaan. The real founder of the tribe was Jonadab, a son or descendant of Rechab. They were worshipers of Jehovah, though the Israelites, with the worship of Baal was very offensive to them. To guard them against apostacy and to insure the preservation of their peculiar tribal life Jonadab bound them to abstemiousness and to a nomadic life. They were to drink no wine," neither were they to build house nor sow seed nor plant vineyard, nor have any, but all your days ye shall dwell in tents." The Rechabites were faithful to the demands of their founder for two centuries and a half. The invasion of Nebuchadnezzar drove them into Jerusalem, where they still resisted the temptations to break their vows. It is claimed that about 60,000 of their descendants still remain. They live near Mecca, in the mountain country northeast of Medina, and still adhere to the old rules of their tribe.

1. The Rechabites teach total abstinence. They did not take a vow to drink but moderately, but to totally abstain from wine. It was an absolute command and embraced every member of the tribe. "Our father commanded us, saying, Ye shall drink no wine, neither ye nor your sons, forever." Under the conditions of life in their day this was their only safe attitude toward intoxicating drinks. Any other course would have been dangerous. They would have been in danger of succumbing to enervating forms of life about them. In total abstinence from strong drink lies our only safety today. The first glass is never taken, the second cannot be, but if the first is no one can predict the result.

2. The Rechabites teach the possibility of total abstinence. Many people believe that abstinence is impossible. Surrounded on all sides by temptations their claim is that they cannot refuse to drink. Many honestly believe this, although they would personally prefer not to touch intoxicating drinks. But all temptations by the power of God can be overcome. Look at the Rechabites. They had been surrounded by the general debauchery of Jerusalem and yet were untouched, and when they were brought face to face with temptation, under the circumstances they courageously replied, "We will drink no wine." What they did bluntly Daniel under somewhat similar circumstances did more suavely, yet neither suffered for the stand taken. Daniel, like the Rechabites, lived holily, but firmly, declined all invitations to drink wine or other intoxicating drinks. The world honors and admires the man who has convictions and stands by them rather than the one who weakly yields to its temptations against his convictions.

3. The Rechabites teach the value of total abstinence. The Rechabites lived as they did to preserve their tribal character and to prolong their lives. That gave many the sixty days in the land where ye are strangers." For national preservation and a long and happy life they took and kept the Rechabite vows, and they were amply repaid. Intemperance is one of our national sins, and the nation's welfare the American people need to become more abstemious. And nothing today does more to assure happiness, health and longevity to the individual than temperance in all things. God also blessed the Rechabites for their faithfulness to the rules of their fathers, and in so doing He placed the stamp of His approval upon temperance. That He has stamped intemperance with His disapproval is evidenced by the evils it brings upon us. Let us therefore follow the example of the Rechabites. Let us decide to totally abstain from intoxicating drinks, and when the tempter says, "Drink ye wine," let us like them courageously reply, "We will drink no wine."

FOR CITY UNION KING'S DAUGHTERS

Lawn Fete Given at the Home of Mrs. Frank Sprague Martin.

THE PROFITS OVER $100

UNDER AUSPICES OF BENEVOLENT BAND, KING'S DAUGHTERS.

Lawn and Porch Unusually Attractive—Ping-Pong and Croquet An Extra Attraction —The New Officers.

One of the most successful social affairs of the season was the lawn fete given Wednesday p. m. at the home of Mrs. Frank Sprague Martin, of Hillside avenue, under the auspices of Benevolent Band, of King's Daughters. The event was given for the purpose of raising the amount of money pledged by the Band toward the support of the City Union King's Daughters' nurse. The sum realized as profit will be over $100 and the members of the Band are delighted with the success attending their efforts.

The lawn and front porch at Mrs. Martin's home presented a scene of unusual attractiveness. The cake, candy and fancy goods table were placed on the wide veranda in front of the house, while a decidedly unique feature was a flower table, sixteen feet long, placed on the lawn. This table was completely covered with beautiful flowers and proved a centre of attraction for all. The lemonade well, as well as the strawberry and ice cream tables, were also on the lawn. In the decorations, there was a profusion of flowers.

Throughout the afternoon the lawn and porch were crowded with patrons and they were all generous in their expenditures. Everything on sale was disposed of at good prices, thus enabling the members of the Band to make a satisfactory sum of money. As extra attractions, ping-pong and croquet proved just the right thing for the young folks, and some older ones, too.

The officers of the Band, recently elected, are: President, Mrs. Frank Sprague Martin; vice president, Mrs. Electa S. Craft; secretary and treasurer, Miss Mary Storrs. These officers, together with all the members of the Band, took charge of the affair and assisted at the various tables. With this successful commencement, the members will have no trouble whatever in meeting its obligation.

CHOICE FOR PRESIDENCY

L. V. F. RANDOLPH NAMED TO HEAD CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

New Honor for Plainfielder Who Recently Retired From Atlantic Trust Company.

The nominating committee of the New York Consolidated Exchange today presented the name of Lewis V. F. Randolph for the presidency of this Exchange. Each year a nominating committee is selected at the annual election whose duty it is to present to the Exchange the names of the officers to be elected to serve during the following year. At the last annual meeting these members were elected as this nominating committee: George W. Hoagland, chairman; D. E. Young, G. H. Cornwall, A. E. Parker, C. E. King, David J. Gould and Thomas J. Dorrance. The presentation of Mr. Randolph's name practically secures his election. This takes place Monday, June 8.

January 1, Mr. Randolph retired from the presidency of the Atlantic Trust Company, of New York, after serving in that capacity for eight years. The trust company directors then made a handsome testimonial of their regard, presenting him with resolutions of high praise, handsomely engrossed, and accompanied by a check of generous figures. Previous to his connection with the Atlantic Trust Company, Mr. Randolph was a trustee in several large estates.

He was for about a dozen years treasurer of the Illinois Central Railroad, and held this position of trust in various enterprises. That he is best fitted for the presidency of the Consolidated Exchange seems to be the unanimous opinion of the Exchange.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning June 7, "Keep the Vision of Christ Clear"—Text, Acts vii, 55, 56; xxvii, 22.

What is seen depends as much on the one looking as upon the object viewed. It is less a matter of eyesight than of insight. Some are capable of seeing only the outer shell of a thing, while others look far beyond the husk and view all the inner meaning and power wrapped up in the kernel. One reads only words and never reaches the depth of thought which words are adapted to reveal. One looks on a picture and sees only a beautiful scene and the skill with which the colors are laid on the canvas, while another standing by is all unconscious of the technique and is absorbed in the passionate life, the tragedy of existence, which throbs through every brush stroke and cries out for recognition by some human heart struggling upward into light and freedom.

Here lies the measureless difference between the two groups of men given in the pictures of the texts. Stephen in the council saw what his listeners could not see. He was the soberest reasoner of all the company. His penetration was the most discerning. He recognized the trend and significance of all Israelitish history from Moses to Jesus of Nazareth. He clearly saw the real spirit of his listeners and judges was in nature the same as that which had in all previous ages led their fathers to oppress the prophets sent to bring from the fermentation. If this does not result successfully, it is promised that further and more drastic measures will be taken. The property is owned by Mrs. Mary E. Harberger, of West Front street.

WEDDED AT WESTFIELD

MISS ADA SERGEANT BECOMES WIFE OF FREDERICK G. SMITH.

Groom Formerly Lived in Plainfield—150 Guests Present—Will Reside in Westfield.

Westfield, May 28—Society was agog here yesterday over the wedding of Miss Ada Sergeant, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Sergeant, of this place, to Frederick Green Smith, formerly of Plainfield, but now of New York. The wedding took place at 7:30 o'clock when the officiating clergymen were Rev. E. Oscar Jarvis, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, of Westfield, and Rev. Harry Gilchrist, of Roselle, a cousin of the groom. There were fully 150 guests present at the reception which followed the wedding although the wedding itself was private, there being only the immediate members of the family present.

The bride was attired in a gown of white tanne crepe with duchesse foulards with trimmings of Brussels white glace. A veil of the same material was caught at the hair with a cluster of orange blossoms. She was attended by her maid-of-honor, Miss Jeane F. Clark, of Brooklyn, and two attendants, the Misses Marjorie and Elsie Phillips, nieces of the bride. Both the maid-of-honor and attendants were attired in gowns of white liberty silk. The best man was George Smith, a brother of the groom.

The reception was held from 8 until 10 o'clock during which time music was rendered by Westervelt's orchestra, of Newark, and a supper was served by Russ, of Elizabeth. After the receiving the bride and groom left for a honeymoon of two weeks and upon their return they will reside in Westfield.

PUPIL SUSPENDED.

Trouble Over Fair Which Borough School Boy Wanted Under Class Auspices.

Henry C. Brose, one of the pupils of the North Plainfield High School, has been suspended from that school. The trouble has arisen over his action in having posters printed advertising a fair which was to have been held by the pupils of the class of '04 of the school which class, it seems, had nothing to do with the affair.

A hearing was to have been given him by the school board Monday evening but he did not put in an appearance. Brose was a special pupil and not a member of the class of '04.

Young Timber Scorched.

Some time Monday night some boys set fire to a heap of brush on the property of H. Perrine, of Westfield, and before the flames could be brought under control much valuable young timber was scorched.

IS A GREAT ANNOYANCE

PUBLIC DUMP ON WEST FRONT STREET IS BEING COMPLAINED OF.

Officer L. R. Thurlow Investigated and Some Improvement is Noted—To Pump Water on It.

The public dump on West Front street and Girard avenue has been a source of great annoyance to the families living in the immediate vicinity for the past few months and numerous complaints have been made regarding it. For several weeks in the early spring, the rubbish in the dump was burning continuously, and the constant smoke and odor was anything but a delight to those who were forced to endure it. After the smoke nuisance was abated, the situation became, if anything, worse than before. The rubbish, retaining its heat from the long continued fires, began to ferment and became a menace to health.

As a result of complaints, Health Officer L. R. Thurlow investigated the matter and, through his conscientious labors, much has been done in the way of improvement. It has been decided to have the fire department play upon the rubbish heaps for several hours within a day or two, with the idea of drowning out the odor resulting from the fermentation. If this does not result successfully, it is promised that further and more drastic measures will be taken. The property is owned by Mrs. Mary E. Harberger, of West Front street.

CALLED PASTOR LAST WEDNESDAY

Unanimous Call Was Extended to Rev. John Sheridan Zelie.

CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH

Comes From Schenectady, N. Y.—Salary $5,000 a Year, Including Use of Parsonage—Want Him As Soon After Sept. 1st As Possible.

The members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and congregation, at a meeting held Wednesday, extended a unanimous call to Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, of Schenectady, N.Y., to become pastor of the church, succeeding Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, at a salary of $5,000 a year, including the use of a parsonage. The action was taken, following the report of the committee of fifteen appointed a year ago for the purpose of securing a pastor for the church, and the committee of seven as well as the church was unanimous in the matter.

Rev. J. C. McKelvey, of Warren chapel, as moderator of the Session, was in charge of the meeting, and the first business was the presentation of the report of the committee of fifteen by Charles Place, a member of it. This report stated that the committee had been deliberate in performing its duties, had visited a number of States and had sent out sub-committees to hear various preachers. It further set forth that entire harmony prevailed in the seven of the committee, that the idea of getting a preacher and pastor was uppermost. In the choice of Mr. Zelie, the report stated that eleven members of the committee had had personal interviews with him, and last Tuesday evening, Dr. E. W. Hedges, W. D. Murray and Henry C. Squires visited Mr. Zelie at his home to inform him of the action of the committee. They received assurances that if a formal call should be extended to him that he would give it very serious consideration. The committee then recommended that a call be extended to Rev. John Sheridan Zelie at once.

A resolution was then offered by Phillip Swain and adopted unanimously, that the report of the committee be accepted and that a call be extended to Mr. Zelie to become the pastor of the church at a salary of $5,000 a year, including the use of the parsonage, and that he arrange to assume the pastorate of the church as soon after September 1 as convenient for him.

Rev. John Sheridan Zelie is a native of Maine and is thirty-six years of age. He is married and has two children. He was recommended to the committee of fifteen by Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, formerly of Hope chapel, he and Mr. Newell having been classmates in college. They are exactly the same age, both being born on the same day in the same year. At present Mr. Zelie is the pastor of the First Reformed church at Schenectady, N. Y., having held that pastorate for four years. He was graduated from Williams College, after which he spent two years at Union Theological Seminary and one year in Yale Theological Seminary.

After leaving Yale he accepted his first call to a small church in Connecticut, remaining there two years. From there he took charge of a Presbyterian mission church at Cleveland, Ohio, remaining there seven years. From Cleveland he went to Schenectady, where he has been ever since. He is spoken of as a fine speaker of pleasing voice and distinctly a preacher. His sermons are delivered from notes. The committee heard Mr. Zelie preach ten sermons and every member was unanimous in the selection. He is a warm personal friend of Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, president of Union Theological Seminary.

The committee of fifteen is composed of the following from the various departments of the church. Session—L. N. Lovell, John Leal, Dr. E. W. Hedges, Henry C. Squires; trustees—Charles Place, W. D. Murray, Jr.; deacons—W. H. Whitney, J. D. Miller; congregation—W. D. Murray, C. F. Abbott, John F. Harman and T. B. Golding.

After the adoption of the resolution offered by Mr. Swain there was a unanimous vote electing Mr. Zelie pastor of the church and in accordance with a suggestion by Mr. McKelvey, a motion was offered and adopted that the committee sign the call which was extended. The church seems to be exceedingly well pleased with the work of the committee and a vote of thanks was given to that body.

HOUSEHOLD EFFECTS WRECKED EN-ROUTE

But New Pastor Arrived Safely in Time to Preach at Sunday's Services.

VAN STRUCK BY A CAR

FURNITURE AND OTHER PROPERTY SCATTERED ABOUT STREET.

Accident Happened Thursday Night When Van Was in Elizabeth Going From Union Hill to Plainfield.

Rev. John Justin, who preached his first sermons Sunday in the German Reformed church, met with considerable difficulty in moving his household effects from Union Hill, N. J., to the borough Thursday night.

All his household belongings were loaded onto a van and the start was made. At Elizabeth, about midnight, a trolley car collided with the van, killing one of the horses instantly and fatally injuring another, wrecking the van and the car besides ruining a large quality of furniture within the truck.

In consequence of the accident Mr. Justin's household effects did not arrive in this city until late Saturday night with the result that he is still unsettled and is minus some of his furniture and valuable books.

Friday afternoon the claims agent of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Railway Company called upon Mr. Justin with a view of effecting a settlement for the damage. The company offered the pastor $70 for the damages to the furniture and paid the van owner $80 for the injury to his wagon and team.

Rev. and Mrs. Justin have taken the house at 20 Duer street, owned by Mrs. Brokaw, of the borough and will make that their residence for the present.

TO MEET INCREASE.

Whole Pennsylvania Railroad System to be Duplicated—Shorter Line From Pittsburg to Baltimore.

It is stated on good authority that the whole Pennsylvania Railroad system is to be duplicated to meet the large increase in the company's business. President Cassatt's statement was made recently to a well-known business man of this city. The serious need of an enlarged system first became apparent to Mr. Cassatt when he visited Pittsburg last winter and witnessed the great freight blockade at that point. In addition to providing double accommodations for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company Mr. Cassatt has also entered heartily into the plans of Mr. Loree, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, for the extension of that system and for the enlargement of its facilities.

Among the latest of these projects is said to include the passing of the old South Pennsylvania route over to the Baltimore and Ohio, by which it will be possible for the Baltimore and Ohio to have a shorter line from Pittsburg to Baltimore.

PALMER PAID.

An Attachment Served as the Milk Dealer Was Moving Out of Town.

But he reckoned without his former employe, John McNiff, when through Justice Hand issued an attachment upon his property for $70 back wages. Palmer was caught as he was moving out of town, and paid the claim Saturday night. Hetfield & Hetfield acted for McNiff, and William Newcorn for the defendant.

HOSIERY MILLS JOIN

Fully Eight Thousand Now In Idle Army.

FIFTY-EIGHT FIRMS HAVE CONCEDED

The Fifty-five Hour Week to the United Workers at Philadelphia's Great Textile and Hosiery Mills.

PHILADELPHIA, June 3.—The strike of the textile workers of Philadelphia for a fifty-five hour week spread to the hosiery mills, tying up the textile industry tighter than it has been since the great suspension was inaugurated. Fully 8,000 persons joined the already large army of idle workers. Most of these were women and children employed in the hosiery mills in the Kensington district.

This class of workers are unorganized, but they decided to join the ranks of the unionists in other branches of the textile trade when they saw the magnitude of the movement for a shorter week. It is probable that most of the women and children will be organized into unions, and efforts will be made to bring out the workers in other hosiery plants.

It was given out by the executive board of the textile workers that ten additional firms had agreed to give their employees the fifty-five hour week. This makes fifty-eight firms that have conceded the demands. It is estimated that that number of 20,000 persons are now working under the conditions demanded by the unions of the thirty-nine branches of the textile industries affected by the strike. The leaders of the strikers express confidence that the workers will win their fight and point to the fact that firms are each day agreeing to the demands of the union.

On the other hand, the manufacturers who have not acceded to the union's request—and among them are some of the largest mill owners in the industry—feel confident that the men cannot win. They declare they will close down their establishments indefinitely before submitting to the union.

Postal Clerk Removed.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Second Assistant Postmaster General Shallenberger has removed Svend Schibsby of Kansas City, a railway postal clerk, on the charge of violating the postal laws. Schibsby is charged with leading a movement of railway postal clerks to secure payment for traveling expenses, a claim that never has been recognized by the government and which would involve payment of about $1,500,000 annually for the 800 odd clerks in the country. The case has been investigated by Alexander Grant, the assistant general superintendent of the railway mail service. Schibsby stated that his expenses were incurred in good faith and that they were not made until after he had notified the chief clerk of his division of his intention to resign from the service.

The Post Office Investigation.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The investigation of affairs at the post office department is proceeding as rapidly as possible, and the investigating officials hope to finish the inquiries by Aug. 1. Postmaster General Payne said that all the salient points of the investigation probably would be disposed of by the end of this month, but that the rest of the work might continue for a considerable time. The only development announced at the department was the promulgation of the letter of former First Assistant Postmaster General *Heath, who enters a denial of the Tul*loch charges.

Block Cutters' Strike Ends.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y., June 3.—The block cutters' strike, which was inaugurated March 18 and was followed May 8 by the manufacturers locking out the table cutters, thus affecting the 10,000 glove workers in Fulton county, was settled as a result of the intervention of Messrs. M. A. Marks and Samuel R. Donnelly of the National Civic Federation, New York. THE RIVER IS FALLING

Kansas City, Mo., Has Blue Sky Overhead.

HOPE THAT ALL DANGER IS PAST

Many Bodies Seen Floating Down Stream—Fifty Refugees Brought In by Boatmen—Some Still Imprisoned by the Waters.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 3.—Blue sky was visible above Kansas City, the rains have ended, and the sun was visible for the first time in a week. For this and other reasons it is thought that the great dangers of the flood are past.

The waters of the Kaw river have fallen eight inches and are steadily declining at the rate of about one-half inch an hour. In the Missouri the high stage is still maintained, but, this is due to the rise which has been coming down the Missouri proper and has been able to offset the fall in the Kaw. It is the water of the latter stream, however, that has caused all the damage in this city and in Kansas City, Kan., and with it at a normal stage business in Kansas City soon will resume usual conditions.

This city by a narrow margin has escaped a serious shortage in food, has faced the peril of fire, utterly helpless to avert its consequences; has suffered millions of dollars of damage to property and sustained a loss in life that in all probability never will be accurately measured, and now it is commencing to believe in the promise of better things.

The situation shows improvement on almost every side. The waters are falling, the waterworks will resume operations, the gas has been turned into the mains once more, and there is no immediate danger of a serious shortage of food. The city has cared for her own and is abundantly able to do so still, while there is not sufficient food on hand to permit the relief committee and the municipal officers to feel easy over the outlook. Provisions from outside will be cordially welcomed, and, while there is no dire necessity, there is urgent need.

Two more lives their lives in the attempt to save others, Joseph L. Keenan was drowned while endeavoring to rescue some people from the Adams House in Union avenue, and Edward Brooks lost his life in Liberty street, where his skiff was overturned by an eddy while he was endeavoring to get another man out of a building. A number of bodies were seen floating down the stream, but are believed to be those of people drowned farther up the Kaw, probably in North Topeka.

Fully fifty people were brought to the Twelfth street viaduct during the day by the boatmen. None of them had been in great danger, but had remained in buildings until weary of the contest and had then signal for assistance, which was given as rapidly as possible. Many people are still in the warehouse and office building and will remain there until the flood shall subside. They are entirely safe and fairly comfortable.

GOVERNMENT WILL SEND HELP.

Boat Issues Order to Help Kansas City Sufferers.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—General Gillespie, chief of engineers, telegraphed Major Casey, at St. Louis, asking if a snag boat could be sent from St. Louis to Kansas City for the relief of the flood sufferers. Major Casey replied as follows:

"Bridges blocked by debris. Steamboat navigation suspended on the Missouri. Coal very difficult to procure. It may be impracticable for snag boat to make Kansas City within three weeks."

Adjutant General Corbin telegraphed the commander of the department of the Platte that the Secretary of War approved the course of Colonel Miner in issuing rations to the sufferers at Kansas City, Kan., and directing that he ascertain the condition of the people in the stricken district and do all in his power to save life and property.

Flood Outlook at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, June 3.—Thirty feet, the danger point, was reached and passed by the flood that is coming down the Mississippi river. The river continues to rise rapidly, and a point considerably higher than thirty-four feet, which Weather Forecaster Bowie had predicted would be reached by tomorrow or Friday, will be an accomplished fact. The crest of the flood from the Kansas and Missouri rivers is yet to come, and when it shall reach here and be increased by high water in the Mississippi some loss of life is feared, and destruction to property must ensue.

The Situation at Topeka.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 3.—The flood situation in Topeka may be briefly summarized thus: Known dead, forty-eight; the river has fallen three feet and is now receding at the rate of two inches an hour; distress is great among the refugees; Governor Bailey has issued a proclamation calling for help for flood sufferers of the state; fifty deputy sheriffs armed with Winchesters go to North Topeka to protect property, with orders to shoot looters whenever they are caught stealing.

Storm Strikes Chile.

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 3.—A great storm has passed over Valparaiso. Four vessels foundered in the bay, the esplanade was destroyed and great damage was done to the floating docks. There are some fears regarding the safety of the Pacific Steam Navigation company's steamer Arequipa, which during a lull in the storm left port to pass the gale outside but has not since been heard of.

TO GUARD AGAINST CONTAGIOUS DISEASE

Board of Education Considers Health Conditions in the Public Schools.

FINANCE SATISFACTORY

COMPETITION FOR ARCHITECTS OF NEW HIGH SCHOOL.

Annual Budget Determined for Ensuing Year—Janitors Re-Employed—Increased Number of Graduates—Other Details.

Important recommendations from the school medical inspectors in regard to the care of contagious diseases in the schools were submitted to the Board of Education at its regular monthly meeting, last Monday, and although left open for action at a later meeting they were discussed at length.

It was advised by Doctors Tomlinson and VanHorn that special provision be made in each of the schools for rooms in which the books and other articles used by infected pupils might be disinfected. Such room properly equipped would cost not greatly in excess of $150, according to estimates submitted. In this way, infected books which, up to the present time, have been burned could be saved for further use. It was further urged that all books should be disinfected at least twice a year, and that desks, door knobs, pencils, and penholders in use by pupils should be cleansed once a week. Mention was also included, in the report of the inspectors, of the inadequate drinking facilities afforded the eighty pupils in the Wadsworth building, where, it was asserted, a new drinking fountain and new cups should be provided.

With the exception of a few cases of diphtheria, the schools have been almost wholly free from contagious diseases during the year now nearing completion. The inspectors have examined 190 pupils during the past month.

The report of the custodian of the school monies showed a balance on hand of $10,047.52. According to the report of the county superintendent, the apportionment of State money for the support of Plainfield's schools was this year $24,165.40. The increase over that of the preceding year, said Superintendent Maxson, in explanation, was due to last year's small school attendance caused by the smallpox scare.

It was decided that fifteen architects should be invited to compete for the privilege of designing the new high school, the plans of the first prize winner to be accepted, and prizes of $200 and $300 to be awarded for the designs that should be considered second and third in merit.

Superintendent Maxson announced that the sum necessary to be appropriated by the city for the use of schools during the coming year is $64,000. The following committee were named by the Superintendent to select winners in the High School prize essay competition: George H. Goddard, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson and Mrs. Robert Lowry.

There will be thirty-four graduates from the High School this June, and seventy-nine in the grammar schools, in each case a larger number than ever before. Reference was made to the brilliant record of LeRoy Hallock in Lehigh University, as reflecting credit upon Plainfield's schools. The Superintendent advised disposing of three old type-writers in use by students and the renting of five new ones of different manufacture to make a total of twelve. The present supply, he said is out of date and insufficient.

The building committee reported that measures had been taken at a cost of $300 to avoid the danger occasioned by the insecure position of the cornices on the Bryant School. Other recommendations of the building committee which were accepted were that the Epworth House should be rented for the next school year, beginning September 1, and that the janitors now in office should be employed again in the several school buildings, beginning July 1. Clerk Frank Clark was appointed a committee of one to have charge of programmes, ushers and police at commencement.

SEMINARY GIRLS IN AMATEUR THEATRICALS

Miss Louise Saunders Scores a Hit As a Playwright at Local Institution.

A FINE PERFORMANCE

"THE GRIM TRUTH" EXCELLENT AS A CURTAIN RAISER.

Charles Reade's "Nance Oldfield" Well Received—Cast of Amateurs—Large Attendance at Delightful Affair.

Had the little farce been a familiar one and the author a familiar name in literature, the audience which listened to "The Grim Truth" at the Plainfield Seminary, Tuesday would have been delighted, for the actors played their parts most commendably. But the fact that the "curtain raiser" was written by Miss Louise Saunders, one of the pupils of the Seminary, gave an added interest and charm to the youthful performance.

Miss Saunders, the daughter of Former Mayor and Mrs. William L. Saunders, of Rockview avenue, had prepared the farce in the course of regular study at the school when the class in English literature wove the circumstances of a true incident into a little drama, Miss Saunder's production being selected for last night's performance.

The parts of Phyllis Baugh and Charlotte Mather, medical students at Philadelphia, was admirably taken by the Misses Helen King and Helen Stevens. The loss of money from their room made them suspicious of Pearl, a colored domestic, employed by their landlady, Mrs. Nyber. Miss Janet Close acted the heavy and injured landlady to perfection and Miss Josephine LaTourette as Pearl was delightful.

The device of the students to frighten Pearl into confession by leaving a skeleton in their room was a huge success, the "curtain raiser" turned and made an effective "motif" for the little play, which was full of happy hits and bright allusions. As the curtain fell, the cries for the author were responded to by the announcement that the author was preparing for the next performance.

Then followed "Nance Oldfield," a comedy in one act by Charles Reade, period London, 1706. The cast was as follows:

Mrs. Anne Oldfield, a famous London actress of Drury Lane Theatre, Louise Saunders; Susan Oldfield, Anne's cousin, Marion Hall; Nathan Oldworthy, an attorney from Coventry, Edith Burt; Alexander Oldworthy, his son, Margaret Mead; Robert, footman at Mrs. Oldfield's, Louise Booth.

The play was a revelation, for the author of the first piece was forgotten in the actress of the second. Was this a school girl making her debut before a large audience. The comprehension of the part, the study of situations, the ease of manner, facial expression, mobility of tone and self-forgetfulness were beyond belief. The difficult part of lowering her art to disillusionise her lover in obedience to the father's request was most successfully done, and her capture of father and son were as sure as her capture of the audience. The characters of Nathan Oldworthy, Alexander, his son and Robert, the footman were difficult ones for school girls to take, but Miss Burt, the teacher in elocution, managed most successfully the chest tones and vehement manner of a conceited attorney and irate parent; Miss Mead, as Alexander Oldworthy, played her part well as lover and versifier and Miss Booth as Robert, the footman deserved praise.

With the curtain fall came calls for the deferred applause of the author, and Miss Saunder clad in a classic costume, with her arms full of flowers, bowed her acknowledgements. All of the performers received many gifts of flowers.

Miss Francis R. Kenyon, the instructor in literature, who trained the young women for their parts, deserves great credit for her painstaking efforts and great success. The appropriate setting for the two plays was arranged by her. The performance concluded with a dance for the young people.

—People realize that this is the time to can and preserve strawberries when they see the great display at Neuman Brothers. 13,00 quarts of berries were on display this morning and included in this are several hundred quarts of the famous Colburn berry.

Affair in Parish House Marks Close of Season—To Resume in Fall.

A charming entertainment given by members of the Girls' Friendly Society of Grace Episcopal Church attracted a large audience to the church parish house last Tuesday. Soprano solos by Miss Katherine Glenn won for the singer many well deserved compliments, and Rozana Love performed on the piano with an expressive intonation and excellent technique. Miss Cornelia Miller's soprano solos were beautifully sung, and Miss Cornelia Hyatt's performance on the violin won for her rounds of applause. Miss Lotta Lowe gave a pleasing recitation, and Arthur Mosher and James Rankin puzzled the audience by some clever sleight-of-hand tricks. The accompanists were Mrs. W. A. Freeman, Miss Emma Hyatt and Miss Lillian Glenn. The committee in charge were the Misses Emma L. Adams, R. Richardson, Dora Bennett, Louise Egan and E. B. Little. PLAINFIELD ASKED TO AID STRICKEN PEOPLE

Kansas City Business Men Communicate With Mayor Olin L. Jenkins.

TEXT OF THE APPEAL

THOUSANDS HOMELESS IN FLOOD SWEPT DISTRICT.

Want to Rebuild Armourdale—Institutions to Which Contributions May be Sent—The Signers to the Appeal.

The Armourdale Flood Association, of Kansas City, Kansas, has communicated with Mayor Olin L. Jenkins appealing to Plainfielders for assistance in supplying the people of the flooded district with food and material and financial contributions.

This is the text of the letter received by His Honor:

"Armourdale, the South side of Kansas City, Kansas, has met with an appalling disaster. The Kaw river has overflown its banks and swept away the town. Sixteen thousand people are homeless. They have lost their furniture, clothing and everything. Their houses have been carried off or totally wrecked. The good citizens of the town have been able to care for the refugees temporarily, but the effort to keep them here and provide homes from them is a perplexing problem. To do this will overtax us and we appeal to you for help.

"Money raised from this source will be expended for their relief by giving them material to build their own houses. Three thousand families must be helped to homes in this way, so that they will be better able to help themselves, when the great rush of rebuilding the city is going on.

"Contributions should be sent at once to the Armourdale State Bank of Commerce, The Kansas State Bank or the Kansas State Bank. This movement is made by the Armourdale Flood Association for Rebuilding Homes, which has been organized by the business and professional men of the town."

The appeal is signed by Jacob L. Klein, postmaster, president; J. B. Hipple, publisher of the Kansas Press, and O. Q. Claflin, E. S. Merrill, Dr. C. G. Pinkard, Fred Meys, J. F. Clark, Dr. Z. Nason, S. S. Kirby, James Lillis and W. H. McHale.

George Wyckoff Injured While Attempting to Dodge Rigs—Not Seriously Hurt.

While attempting to dodge between two rigs at the corner of Park and North avenues last Tuesday about 6 o'clock, George Wyckoff, of Somerset street, ran into the end of a shaft and was thrown down. The shaft struck Wyckoff in the obest, inflicting a painful, though not serious injury. James Davis, manager of the Cab Ompany, was in charge of the rig and he was walking his horse at the time. As soon as the man fell, Mr. Davis stopped and assisted in carrying him to Armstrong's drug store, where proper treatment was given. He was then taken home by Mr. Davis.

It was between a rig owned by W. A. Coddington and the one driven by Mr. Davis that Wyckoff attempted to pass and had he but waited a second or two the affair would not have happened.

FINDS VIOLATIONS OF LAW

DEPUTY FISH AND GAME WARDEN HAWKINS HERE.

Calls Attention to Provisions of New Statute, But Makes No Arrests.

Deputy Game and Fish Warden G. M. Hawkins, of Elizabeth, was in Plainfield Tuesday calling the attention of the new game and fish laws. This provides that it is unlawful at all times to use, have in possession, or offer or expose for sale, any artificial bait with more than three hooks or more than one barr of three hooks attached thereto under a penalty of $20 for each offense.

Mr. Hawkins discovered violations of this law while in Plainfield, which under ordinary circumstances would have cost the violators $2,000 in fines. No action was taken because the law is a new one and it is the purpose of Mr. Hawkins to give all a fair opportunity to become acquainted with it as soon as possible.

CHOIR BOYS' ENTERTAINMENT

HOLY CROSS LADS RAISE FUNDS FOR BASEBALL TEAM.

Excellent Programme Rendered in the Parish House—Those Taking Part.

The Choristers Baseball Club, of the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, gave an excellent entertainment last Tuesday in the parish house for the benefit of the team.

The well received programme opened with a selection, "Stroller," rendered by five members of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, and this was followed by "Lorain Loree," a recitation by Miss Viola Lievers. Mrs. William A. Westphal and Miss Jennie Mills sang a vocal duet, "Beautiful Moonlight," Mrs. Henry W. Ward sang a contralto solo, "When the Heart is Young" in so pleasing a manner that she was recalled for an encore. Following this "Hiawatha" was rendered in a spirited way by the orchestra. Miss Ursula Krewson recited "The Wreck of the Clara M," and this was followed by two tenor solos, "Ecstasy" and "My Sweet Repose" by J. Edmund Skiff, the church organist. As an encore to this, Mr. Skiff sang an amusing little pickaninny lullaby.

The second part of the programme opened with the rendition of the musical ballad, "We'll Have to Mortgage the Farm," given in costume by Mrs. William A. Westphal, Mrs. Irene Tillapaugh, Miss Fannie Mills and William Jeffery and Paul Whitall and this was followed by "Then and Now," a recitation by Miss Ursula Lievers. Ralph S. Lane sang Mascheroni's base solo, "A Soldier's Song" and, as an encore, "Blue Eyes."

Concluding the programmes was the amusing one act farce, "Popping the Question," given by six of the young people. The cast of characters follows:

Miss Winterblossom, a maid well along in years, Miss Laura Woolston; Miss Biffin, in like circumstances, Miss Etta Trembley; Mr. Primrose, "the particular Mr. Primrose," Leo Kenney; Ellen Murray, Ellen Murray, his young ward, Miss Ada Westphal; Mr. Henry Thornton, a young gallant, Paul Brakeley; Bobbin, the maid, Miss Lavinia Hand.

At the conclusion of the farce, the orchestra rendered "Night Hawk March" and the evening broke up informally. Ice cream, cake and lemonade were served.

Forty dollars was netted by the affair and the money will be used for purchasing uniforms and equipment for the baseball team. The entertainment was in the sole charge of Clarence J. Hand, the manager of the team. William Westphal is captain of the team.

GIRL ATTACKED BY TWO UNKNOWN MEN

Miss Mary Woermser Scares Off Scoundrels by Yelling "Murder!"

CITIZENS GIVE CHASE

SHE IS EMPLOYED AS MAID IN HOUSEHOLD OF DR. H. H. LOWRIE.

Both Men Make Good Their Escape—Girl is Suffering From Shock—Aged Twenty-Three Years and Handsome.

Miss Mary Woermser, a beautiful young girl was attacked on Lake street and Hillside avenue Tuesday night at 10 o'clock by two Italians. Cries of "murder, police help" by a woman's voice just as that aristocratic neighborhood was retiring for the night arroused the people who arrived on the scene just in time to save the girl from the hand of a villian.

The girl is a maid in the household of Dr. Henry H. Lowrie, in Park avenue. She has been in the habit of sleeping in a room, fitted up for a coachman, in a barn owned by her father on Lake street near Hillside avenue. Miss Woermser has made her sleeping apartments there for sometime.

Just before retiring last evening she opened the rear door for the purpose of getting a drink of water from a pump near by. She had no sooner reached the pump when from behind the shadow of a tree a tall man, roughly dressed, stepped out and embraced her. She crouched back and uttered a scream for help. The man placed his hand over her mouth and in a deep voice with a strong accent of Italian told her if she made a noise he would strike her.

The girl struggled violently while the tall fellow assisted by a shorter man started to carry her towards the open barn door. In her frantic struggles the brightened girl managed to get his hand away from her mouth and cried out "Murder" and "Police." The men became scared when they heard the ap proaching footsteps of men and let the girl fall to the ground. They started on a run.

Mrs. Louise Miller, who lives near by, took care of the girl while twenty men, from the fashionable houses in that locality joined in a man hunt for the two villians. The search was continued until a late hour but without success.

The girl is twenty-three years of age and is strikingly handsome. Mrs. Lowrie said Tuesday that the girl is suffering from the shock of her dreadful experience.

It was discovered that the attack has been deliberately planned as the dog was found in a stunned condition with a gag in its mouth. The animal is owned by Mr. Woermser.

P. H. S. COURSE IN ATHLETICS

PRINCIPAL TRAVELL ANNOUNCES IT AS PART OF CURRICULUM.

Requirements Outlined—Open to All Pupils, Commencing at Fall Term.

Principal Ira W. Travell of the City High School announced this morning his intention to introducing a special course in athletics at the school. This course will be started with the opening of school in the fall and will be for both the boys and girls. The plan provides for at least one hour's work in some athletic sport or exercises two days in each week.

While this will be done in time out of school, the pupils will be marked in the work and a four years' course in athletics—two hours a week afternoons for the High School course—will hereafter be considered work equivlent to a year's course in any first-class study in the school curriculum.

In order to facilitate the work as much as possible, the pupils will be divided into squads of ten or a dozen under the direction of a leader chosen by the squad. The work of the boys will probably consist of all out-door sports in their season, football, ground hookey, basket ball, skating, ice hookey, baseball, while the girls will be organized in tramping squads and basket ball teams.

WORK IN STREET DEPARTMENT

SANDFORD AVENUE AND OTHER ROADWAYS TO BE GONE OVER.

Second Street Now Receiving Attention—Other Thoroughfares to be Repaired.

Sandford avenue will soon receive the attention of Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett. For the past few months that part of the avenue which was abandoned some time ago when the new bridge was built, has fallen into disuse with the result that weeds and small bushes have grown in rank profusion. Some of the property owners along that part of the thoroughfare have made objection to the present condition.

A force of men are now at work on East and West Second street finishing the work of repairing that roadway. Considerable rolling has yet to be done and as soon as that has been finished the work will be completed. Street Commissioner Gavett has partially laid out his work for the summer. West Fourth street will receive attention as will West Fifth street. The heaviest work will be on Watchung avenue from Sixth street to Woodland avenue. All along that stretch new stone will be laid and most of the work will be in the nature of repairs.

LITTLE PEOPLE HOLD FAIR

FESTIVAL ON MR. GINNA'S LAWN FOR CHARITABLE OBJECTS.

A Number of Attractive Arrangements—$70 Was Realized—The Beneficiaries.

As the result of a most successful lawn fair given Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna in Watchung avenue, by the Hearty Workers, a society composed of fourteen energetic little people, the sum of $70 was realized. According to the wish of the members the proceeds will be divided between the Tribune Fresh Air Fund and the City Union, King's Daughters' baby camp on the mountains.

The spacious lawn was an ideal spot for such an affair and the little folks took entire charge of the candy and fancy tables, the ice cream and lemonade booths and the grab-bag. The lemonade well was attractively arranged beneath a large Japanese umbrella. The candy and fancy tables were arranged on the porch, while the lawn was used for the dispensing of ice cream and lemonade. During the afternoon the fair was well patronized and everything offered for sale was disposed of.

The officers of the Hearty Workers are president, Mary Rushmore; vice president, Priscilla VanWyck; secretary, Katharine Brown; treasurer Katharine Ginna.

Dance at Plains.

A dance will be given by the Superior Social Club in Earle's pavilion, Scotch Plains, this evening. It is expected that there will be a large attendance from this city and Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD GIRL WEDS NEW YORKER

Miss Grace Lilian Russell Marries Harry Bennett Machen, of New York.

QUIET HOME WEDDING

REV. D. ASA BLOCKBURY, OF NEW YORK, OFFICIATES.

Miss Marjorie Dorothy Russell Acts as Bridesmaid and Charles Hudson Machen as Best Man—To Reside in New York.

Miss Grace Lilian Russell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ingraham Russell, and Harry Bennett Machen, of New York, were married Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride on South avenue, Netherwood. It was a quiet wedding, only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom being present.

Shortly after 4 o'clock the wedding march from Mendelssohn was played by Westervelt's orchestra and the bridal procession started. The path lay down the broad hall stairs, which were decorated with greens entwined into a long rope with red carnations interspersed, and into the front parlor. Rev. D. Asa Blockbury, pastor of the Church of the Strangers, New York City, standing beneath a bower of greens and red carnations, tied the nuptial knot.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Marjorie Dorothy Russell and the best man was Charles Hudson Machen, a brother of the groom, of New York. The bride wore a travelling gown of pearl gray and hat trimmed with crepon to match. The bridesmaid wore a gown of pink and carried a bouquet of roses.

After the marriage had been performed the bride and groom received their friends as a wedding supper until it was time to depart for the honeymoon which will be enjoyed as a destination which was kept a secret. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Machen will reside in New York, where the groom is engaged in business.

Mrs. Carson Allowed by Court to Remove Children From the City to the Borough.

Application was made by Judge William Codington, counsel for Mrs. Sadie E. Carson, before Vice-Chancellor Emery in Newark yesterday for a modification of an order issued by the court last December, when James H. Carson, of Plainfield, sought to retain possession of his three children in a habeas corpus suit.

Under the court's direction, Mrs. Carson was given the custody of the children on condition that they be kept in Plainfield. Yesterday morning the order was modified to allow the removal of the children to North Plainfield.

OLIVE OIL IN ARIZONA.

Something About the Rise of a Great Industry in the Southwestern Country.

Olive oil is now being shipped by the ton from the Salt River valley of Arizona and the business is on the boom, says a Phoenix report to the Washington Star. The entire valley is becoming dotted with olive orchards since the season of The year the trees are covered with thousands of tiny star-like buds, which will soon be followed by the fruit formation, which when matured on the tree will amount to hundreds of pounds of fruit. Olives remain on the trees until they are thoroughly ripe before they are picked to have the oil squeezed and pressed from them.

When the olives are ripe it requires a large number of hands to pick them, for the work must be done quickly. This is usually done by spreading large canvas sheets around the trees upon which the pickers throw the olives as they are plucked off the branches. Once they are picked the fruit is carried to the crushing machine, which breaks the fruit up much as apples are crushed for cider. The pulp is then put into a machine which presses the juice from it, which runs off into a tank, where by force of gravity the oil proper rises to the top and is skimmed off and put away for several months to settle before it is bottled ready for market. It requires about 75 pounds of fruit to produce a gallon of oil.—Washington Star.

TYPICAL RUSSIAN PRISON.

The Monastery of Soudal Which Is Used for Offenses Concerning Religion.

An interesting description has been published in a Vienna newspaper of a monastery at Soudal, in the Russian province of Vladimir, which is used as a prison for priests and laymen who are guilty of religious offenses. Prisoners sent to Soudal only by special decree of the czar, who, however, accepts the advice of M. Pobiedonoszeff, the procurator of the holy synod of the orthodox Greek church.

According to a recent report there are about 1200 prisoners there, and they include two princes, one count, two barons, one general, four bishops, 16 common soldiers, 52 officers, 154 priests and one shoemaker. They are treated with severity, says the London Express, and many die in solitary confinement in gloomy cells. Many prisoners become insane after a brief period, while the weaker ones soon die from want of light, air and proper nourishment. The prisoner most recently sentenced is a priest named Cvietkoff, and the offenses for which he was sent there are typical. Cvietkoff disputed the holy synod's right to rule absolutely over the church as a whole and advocated the formation of a council of clergy to advise and to a certain extent control the synod. This sufficed to bring about his sentence to life imprisonment at Soudal.

HARDEST WORKED SEAMEN.

Firemen and Coal Passers Perform the Most Arduous and Repulsive of Tasks.

The stokers are the hardest working of all classes of labor on board steamships. From intimate association with them in their labor and from knowledge of their orders of labor on shore, writes B. Brandenburg, in Leslie's Magazine, I can say without hesitation that, as a class, ship's firemen and coal passers or trimmers perform more arduous and repulsive work than the miners in thin veins in the anthracite region, the miners in the hot mines of Montana, the glass blowers of the gas belt, or the grimy toilers in the rolling mills. They receive proportionately less pay. They usually work in four hour watches, with eight hours off. Their location is in front of the firing ends of the battery of ship's boilers or in the bunkers where the coal is stored, both of these being in the very bowels of the ship. The quarters are cramped, the air full of noxious gases, the light, the terrible glare of the raging fires, and the temperature ranging from 105 to 140 degrees Fahrenheit. The most that even the Cunard line pays picked firemen for their mail boats is $60 per month. The American line has its price regulated at an average of something over $30, though at times it equals the best rate.

Our Internal Commerce.

In view of the establishment of the department of commerce and labor it may be interesting to note that the internal commerce of the United States last year was estimated by the government statistician at $30,000,000,000. Fifty years ago it was only $2,500,000,000. The manufactures of the United States are nearly double those of Great Britain and Ireland, and about equal to those of France, Germany and Russia combined.

Big Apple and Corn.

At the recent corn carnival at Peoria, Mo., there were on exhibition an apple of the pippin variety and an ear of ordinary yellow corn, the former weighing six pounds and about the size of an average watermelon, while the latter measured 14 inches in length, contained 947 grains by actual count, was two inches in diameter, six inches in circumference, and was picked from its stalk nine feet from the ground.

Russian Military Service.

Every year nearly 1,000,000 Russians become liable for service, but of these only 278,000 enter the active army, the remainder being passed direct into the militia for 23 years.

Works and Ways of the New Woman

LAST Sunday I went to hear a man expound in a gripping world the new scientific religion. He called it that, but the two hours during which he spoke were devoted to tearing to pieces the old religions. He rattled off words like a phonograph, the sound of which indicated the voice remembered with a little. He told us there was no such place as heaven; science could not prove it. He smacked his lips with infinite satisfaction while he told us the multitude no longer believed in heaven or hell, but there is not sufficient proof of the truth of spiritualism and that therefore there is no proof of immortality. Now, I didn't object to any of this rant; it seemed to give such pleasure to the man, jumping around there like a dancing phonograph. But by and by he smacked his lips with still more relish and told us, "A dear old lady said to me, 'Mr. Talkee-Talkee, I like to hear you speak, you are so eloquent and splendid, but I fear if I come to your meetings you will destroy my hope of immortality.'" Now, dear, dear! That old lady was an adept in the art of flattering the masculine sex and making it think she set it up on a pedestal and worshiped its superior intellect. She must have been practicing a long time and have learned how to bait her hook with the rawest kind of a big piece of fat flattery to catch her gudgeon. No wonder she caught him and made him swell up like a balloon fish at the thought that he was great enough to destroy the inferior sex's belief in immortality. If you had seen the ineffable self conceit with which he detailed to us the story, telling us at the same time that he wouldn't—he really wouldn't now—destroy this poor, weak minded old lady's faith. "Dear granny, I wouldn't!" He would spare her superstitions. It was kind of him, wasn't it? But the pitiable vanity of the man, to believe she meant it! Just so women have been flattering men since Adam and Eve and spoiling them with self conceit. But the wonder is that to this day men do not see through it.

You have read of radium, that mysterious, marvelous, newly discovered substance which gives off heat continuously without ever being used in bulk in the least. You have read how rays from this extraordinary material penetrate any substance the most opaque and, according to articles in darkness and that it is worth nearly $2,500,000 an ounce. But did you ever read that radium was discovered by a woman, Mme. Curie, a French lady? No? Of course not. Well, it was thus discovered, though credit has not been given to Mme. Curie. Her husband gets all the credit because he and she for years have worked together in the same laboratory. But isn't that just like this world?

Speaking of women's clubs, the jolliest I have heard of is one calling itself the Widders' club. It is composed of a few merry, self supporting widows, kindred souls, brilliant, cultured, witty and experienced, who never read papers at the club meetings. Their proceedings never get into the newspapers either. They meet in summer at some lovely outdoor spot and picnic together. They feast, they sing and say what they like, regardless of Mrs. Grundy. Do they enjoy themselves? Well, rather!

A friend tells me a good story regarding the late suffrage campaign in New Hampshire. Mrs. Mary D. Fiske was one of the state suffrage speakers. She went into a village and looked for a hall in which to hold a meeting. The only available one belonged to a woman, the largest taxpayer in the town. The committee in charge found the woman was opposed to woman suffrage. Mrs. Fiske bravely called on the lady, told her errand and asked to hire the hall. "No," answered the lady shortly. "You can't have it. I don't want suffrage." "But you are the only taxpayer in this town, aren't you?" gently asked Mrs. Fiske. "What's that got to do with it?" This was Mrs. Fiske's opportunity. She sailed in, as it were, and talked an hour to the lady. At the end of it the taxpayer arose, put on her hat and not only gave the hall, but called on the people of the town with Mrs. Fiske to help her get a large audience.

FOR THE CLEVER WOMAN.

Some Ways in Which She Can Improve Her Wardrobe.

The economically minded woman is being helped by the manufacturers and shopkeepers. She may purchase at a comparatively small cost handsome robes, which she can put together herself. There are also any number of pretty hat shapes that only require a bow or a bunch of flowers for trimming.

Some of last year's garments can be renovated at a small cost. Plain bell sleeves are no longer popular, so these may be gathered or plaited at the back into a wide cuff of some fancy material or silk covered with lace or embroidered galloon. This cuff may be run off into a pointed tab at the back where some soft, full lace or plisse chiffon may be added. Skirts frayed at the edge may be renovated by a band of velvet or silk with tabs or straps of the material standing upright or set in groups. This is really a pretty finish and is admirable for linen skirts which show stains or other signs of wear and tear and also for figured cottons, as plain colored goods may be used for the border.

The silk cashmere or crape skirt which fits closely around the hips can be a trick of growing glossy or shiny there, and this defect may be concealed by simulating a yoke with braid.

The illustration shows a smart stole of white chiffon.

THIN MATERIALS.

Veiles of Fine, Silky Makes—Chiffons and Muslins.

Veiles of fine silky make are called by other names, such as chiffon voile, colienne silk crape, etc. They are really very similar fabrics and lend themselves readily to drapery. They are mostly manufactured in pale shades, rose pink and pale green being the most popular in Paris, though a very light biscuit and pale blue are much in evidence.

Hand painted chiffons and muslins are a great feature of the gala day frocks, and these gowns for the greater part are arranged with a fichu of wonderful lace and embroidery. The skirts and frills are very full.

Pompadour sashes and pompadour ribbon are in vogue and are charming for the debutante either for day or for evening wear.

Hats are quite simple. Milliners are using the best shapes of all periods, and, as usual, the apparently simple lines taken from the old masters make the most successful headgear. A great many black and white chip, cream and black leghorn and lace hats are seen.

WHITE MULL WAIST.

The useful and practical hat is composed of all kinds of straw, biscuit and black, scarlet and white and navy being the favorites.

The plain, orthodox tailor made gown is making a bold bid for popularity and will have its own following, but the average woman loves elaboration, and the modern tailor frock has suited her so well that she will be loath to accept the plainer garment.

The cut shows a pretty waist of white mull with bands of shirring.

HARD WORKING WOMEN.

Life of Ladies Who Make a Profession of Society.

This summer's Newport season is expected to make a record as the gayest, busiest, most crowded, of any since the place became the favorite resort of our republican aristocracy. For several years the Newport season has been commencing earlier and continuing later. Year by year our society ladies stay longer in addition to spend the summer in Europe except as a spot to hide away and rest in for the next winter social season. Now it has come about, too, that the fashionables in foreign lands, notably England, are stealing away from them at home and are really coming to Newport for our summer season. This adds to Newports gayeties and its crowd. Again, last winter Mrs. William Astor, social arbiter, let down the bars and allowed 150 more individuals to skip over into the paddock of first society; then she insisted upon them up again. All these new people will flock to Newport. The old town, which was erstwhile chosen for a place of summer rest and restoration by the sea, will merely witness a continuation of last winter's social circus in intensified form.

Last winter was the heaviest social season ever known in New York and Washington. The quite up to date fashionable woman not uncommonly went to a lecture in the morning and in the afternoon to a tea, where she swallowed peanut sandwiches and other concoctions the most unholy that could pass into human stomach; after that out to dinner of half a score of courses and more iniquitous concoctions; then on to the opera till mid night. "After the opera's over, then we retire to the ball," to dance and again stuff till after the sons and daughters of toil have taken their places on the treadmills. Does daylight look in, dreary and cheerless, with wan faces, the withered flowers? Draw the curtains closer, turn the electric lights higher, shut out the day beams, and on with the dance! Let not the whirl stop!

It is no exaggeration to say that the life society women lead in New York and in the national capital during the season is much like that. What do they do it for? I don't know. Nobody knows. To the less happy it would look as if the constant and incessant spinning round were to enable them to forget. But what can fortune's favorites have on their minds that they wish to forget?

The strain of such a life is harder than that of the washerwoman. Last winter it broke down several who started in determined to do or die. One of these was Mrs. Roosevelt, the amiable, hospitable wife of our president. She was obliged to retire temporarily from the field ere she had come coming of Lent gave surcease from entertaining and receiving. One of her most efficient aids, Mrs. Knox, wife of the attorney general, also dropped before the season closed, a victim to the kindred souls, brilliant, cultured, witty and experienced, who never read papers at the club meetings. Their proceedings never get into the newspapers either. They meet in summer at some lovely outdoor spot and picnic together. They feast, they sing and say what they like, regardless of Mrs. Grundy. NOVELTIES IN LIGHTING.

Artistic Ways of Subduing Electric Light Glare—Floral Effects.

More than half of the beauty of a room consists in its artistic lighting. The hard light of gas or electric globes has done more than a little to spoil otherwise artistic effects.

When first electric light was introduced it was unwelcome on account of its harsh white glare. Now, however, manufacturers have invented new and soft tones in glass which allow a mellow pleasant light to filter through, and the greatest ingenuity has been devoted to designing bulb holders.

The illustration shows two of the most recent. One is a bunch of flowers and is done in green bronze and third glass. The other is an artistic hall lantern of ruby glass and wrought iron. Muffled glass is toned in every color and may be bought in the most attractive pink second tints, in the soft gray green of ancient vitrified glass, or it will show the strange glint of mica.

Even the humblest gas jet or electric light bulb may be made soft and beautiful by the addition of a crepe paper flower which will give dainty tints to the light which it veils.

Just now the approved fixture for a hall is a polished iron lantern of Flemish shape, its panels filled with green or amber muffled glass, the whole hanging from an arm fixed in the wall. Old flat bottomed Venetian lanterns, as well as empire torches, are also used on stairways.

For the table elaborate flower pieces in glass or silver are made. The light shed through the flowers reflects the exact shade of the petals. When the floral centerpiece is not adopted electric candles with floral shades of muffled glass often take their place.

THE SUMMER PIAZZA.

Beautify It and Make the Home Attractive For the Heated Term.

No matter how small the piazza is it can be made into a delightful little nook for warm evenings so that when the man of the family comes home he will find a cool spot in which to sit and doze or enjoy his paper.

One family I know has transformed the rather wide piazza into an ideal summer living room. The house is part wood and part stone and the lower half—what would be the railing of the veranda—is of stone. On the top of this has been placed a long, narrow box, painted a dull green and filled with flowers of the hardy variety —geraniums, heliotrope, nasturtiums, etc.. The spaces between the pillars are fitted with shades of split bamboo, which may be raised and lowered at will. This is very convenient in case of rain, and it keeps the piazza always partially shady. A rug or two cover the floor, and wicker chairs painted green or red are scattered here and there. There are a couple of rustic tables bearing books and magazines and two or three lamps hung for safety on wrought iron brackets.

If in a mosquito district it would be well to inclose the veranda with screens and to have a screen door. These screens may be partially covered by climbing vines.

If wicker furniture is not desired the plain wood mission furniture may be used.

A hammock, a tea table and a lot of linen covered pillows are necessities.

If a piazza is fitted up in this fashion its uses are without number. At any rate the rest of the house will be pretty sure to be deserted in its favor.

Cape Peleriues.

Some of the cape pelerines have long tabs. These are bordered with mull ruffles and are also decorated with the pretty diamonds and the other shaped medallions and much lace, always white. Chenille embroidery is also employed to ornament some of the long tabs and the shoulder part. Some have beautiful jet fringes and others velvet grapes and cherries. One has much latitude in choice.

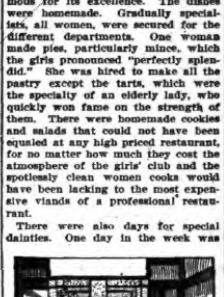
Success of Business Women's Luncheon Clubs

SOME years ago Edward Everett Hale, talking one day to a lady belonging to the Chic club of Chicago, remarked that a midday luncheon place ought to be started for girls in business whose means are small.

The Chic club talked and thought the matter over, finally elaborating a working scheme. Three features had equally to be considered—good food, cheapness, cleanliness. An enterprise in club form was settled on, members of the lunch organization paying 25 cents a month. This entitled them to club privileges. Next it was settled that no dish should cost more than 5 cents, while many articles could be given at a cent apiece—say a good slice or two of bread and butter. Close calculation was made, and it was found that a good cup of coffee or tea with real cream could be furnished at 3 cents. The name chosen for the organization was the Noonday Rest club. Tastefully furnished reception rooms with library, piano and music were added presently, also a room in which any member who felt ill might lie down.

From the beginning the enterprise proved that it filled a need of the new woman. The menu soon became famous for its excellence. The dishes were homemade. Gradually specialists, all women, were secured for the different departments. One woman made pies, particularly mince, which the girls pronounced "perfectly splendid." She was hired to make all the pastry except the tarts, which were the specialty of an elderly lady, who quickly won fame on the strength of them. There were homemade cookies and salads that could not have been equaled at any high priced restaurant, for no matter how much they cost the atmosphere of the girls' club and the spotlessly clean women cooks would have been lacking to the most expensive viands of a professional restaurant.

There were also days for special dainties. One day in the week was



RECEPTION ROOM OF CHICAGO LUNCH CLUB

"hot gingerbread day," and on that occasion the rooms were crowded. There was also a particular dish made with cheese which appealed marvelously to delicate palates. At each luncheon there was a choice of three kinds of meat, tender and steaming hot; also three vegetables. Slabs of pie, tarts and a dish of vegetables cost each 3 cents. An average meal cost 10 to 13 cents, while a "gorgeous spread" was had for 17 cents. It is on record that once a girl tried to eat all she could buy for a quarter and, though a maiden of healthy appetite, failed. Moreover, meals were served on spotless linen tablecloths and white china.

Members were permitted to bring guests on payment of 5 cents admission for each. Any outside woman might also get luncheon by paying the five cent fee. The condition for regular membership is that the applicant should be a business woman.

Of course one would naturally say there could be no profit at such prices and the enterprise was after all a charitable one. Not so; not at all. In six months, employes being paid good wages, there was a profit in bank to the credit of the establishment of $4,000. It does not seem possible, yet such is the fact. The explanation of the accruing profit is that in this unique establishment waiters are dispensed with. Each girl is her own waiter. The food is divided into portions and placed ready upon hot steam tables. The eater takes a plate and puts upon it what food she wants. A check is placed on a file upon a hook paper which she gives to the luncher. As she goes to her seat at the table the luncher passes a stand where knives, forks, spoons and napkins are ready. She helps herself to these, then sits and eats the food to which she has helped herself.

The plan of the Chicago women's restaurant is here detailed somewhat, because from it have sprung various similar admirable clubs in other cities. And in every city in which the plan has been tried it has been an instantaneous success. There are now two such luncheon clubs in New York, with a loud cry for half a dozen more.

It has been said that women have begged to be permitted to eat at men's restaurants and have been refused. Now the tables are turned. Business men of refinement begin to knock at the doors of the girls' lunch places, craving admission, which unfortunately must so far mercifully be denied them.

CIGAR CABINET FOR A KING

One That Was Built in the United States for the Ruler of Portugal.

What is the finest and largest cigar cabinet ever built has been recently shipped from an establishment in Anderson, Ind., to the king of Portugal, and will be used by the king's order, says the Philadelphia Record, and will occupy a prominent place in the palace at Lisbon. It will cost $2,500 and will hold 7 000 cigars.

The makers call it a porcelain cigar cabinet. It is 51 inches wide, 16 inches deep, 30 inches high and weighs 500 pounds. The exterior is of the finest ivory white tile. In the central panels of each door will be the crest and coat-of-arms of his majesty. They are to be fitted into the doors when the cabinet reaches Paris.

The exterior finish of the cabinet is of silver plate at the corners and also bordering the doors. The hinges, fastenings and screws are also silver plated. The interior has a full tile lining, insulated with two inches of mineral wool. Some of the interior tile are left unglazed and they become absorbent of the moisture from an application of pure water. In it a new idea and, it is asserted, overcomes all possibility of mold or gases.

A part of the framework of the interior of the door is of San Domingo mahogany, highly polished. The shelving is of white enameled steel. At the back of the cabinet is good, old Indiana oak, that took on polish equal to the San Domingo mahogany.

HELD ONLY PAIR OF THREES.

How a Little Man Bluffed the Late Tom Reed in a Poker Game.

The late Thomas B. Reed was without the fear of man, but he never did have much nerve at poker, according to a New York Times writer. A few may still recall a little game in a back room in Portland, when the limit was a dollar and a certain sharp-faced little man sorely vexed the great speaker of the house. The little man seemed to be getting all the bad cards, which he threw down with ostentatious evidence of disgust. At last he made a bet and all the players dropped out except Mr. Reed, who eyed his own three aces complacently and raised him heavily. The little man snickered and came back with an equally heavy raise. Mr. Reed opened his round little mouth, blinked his little black eyes and gurgled with uneasiness; but he shoved his chips onto the pile and put an extra red on top. The little man hovered over it, then deftly swept the whole of his stack on the board and eyed the great man with a superior smile. Mr. Reed lurched back in his chair, looked at his opponent severely for a moment, and—quit. There the little man spread out a pair of trays and gathered in his winnings.

"Why, confound you, sir," roared the speaker of the house, "you ought to join the senate lobby!"

NEW CURE FOR BALDNESS.

Odd Thing Told in All Seriousness in a London Paper About Hair Growing.

A North country farmer who has reached a good old age states that his second crop of hair, which has come after a period of baldness, is due to the application of nettles as a hair restorer, says the London Express.

When a young man the farmer was anxious to grow a beard, and hit upon the expedient of experimenting with the nettles. Every night before going to bed he applied a stinging nettle to his chin. Next morning his face was red and swollen; but the application of a little sour milk soon remedied that. And the beard grew quickly.

On becoming bald, the farmer recollected the treatment of his young days, and slept for several nights in a night cap filled with nettles. The sensation was at first painful, but after a time the nettles appeared to induce sleep, and a plentiful crop of hair was the result.

Lakes Always Frozen.

"There are in the state of Oregon two lakes that are frozen stiff from one year's end to another," said F. G. Harper, of Portland. "They were discovered in Baker county not very long ago by a party on a hunting and fishing trip in the mountains of the Snake handle district. After passing through a particularly wild stretch of country the party discovered the lakes on the north summit of one of the mountains in the neighborhood. The lakes are both about a mile and a half or 150 feet across, while the other is less than 1,000 feet in diameter. Both are covered with a heavy coating of ice, as clear as crystal and as smooth as glass, and of such strength that it held several members of the party who rode across on horseback. It is believed the ice never melts, because the lakes are so situated behind two peaks that the rays of the sun never strike them for sufficient length of time to make any impression."

"Not Guilty."

Since President Roosevelt deplored the lack of children in American families he has received a photograph from Bucyrus, O., showing a scurvy-looking couple surrounded by their 12 children. Below was written: "Not guilty."

BAD BOY ON A FARM.

Makes Experiments with Incubator and Some Gamecocks.

How His Uncle Thinks the Kid Wasn't Around When They Were Passing Out Brains and Common Sense.

There is a farmer up in Westchester county, N. Y., who wishes that there wasn't any such member of the human family as the nephew who is so bad that he can't be kept in a boarding school and has to be sent to the country to learn how to behave himself. He has just such a nephew stopping with him.

This particular farmer makes a specialty of raising very fine chickens, more for his own amusement than anything else, and along with them he keeps a few gamecocks. Of course, the gamecocks are for his amusement, too, but that's another matter altogether.

"Yes, I have some gamecocks," he said the other day to a New York Sun reporter. "What is more, everybody in the whole town knows it now. It all came about through that young fellow. He isn't so very young, either —guess he turned 15 along with turning tricks on his poor old relatives.

"When he learned that I was mighty fond of my hens and chickens, he said he'd like to help me take care of them. I began right away to fear the worst, and I hit the nail on the head that time, too.

"Nothing would do but he had to take a hand in running the incubator. I had about 200 of the finest half game and half Plymouth Rock eggs in the machine the other day that were laid by any hens on earth. I wouldn't have taken $1,000 for the lot.

"Well, I go away one day to see a friend, and the young cub he invites some of his young rascal friends around to see how my incubator works. Somehow he got the idea that the eggs were not hatching out fast enough, so what does he do but turn on the heat full blast to see what would happen.

"Well, nothing happened that he could see, and pretty soon he got tired waiting to see the chickens hop out.

"'Guess I'll pinch one of the eggs,' said he, 'and see if I can't help one of the chickens out.'

"He did, and of course the egg was as hard as a rock. Couldn't be anything else. All the rest of them were, too. The whole 200 were baked silly. And then he said he was sorry.

"I made him sorrier, you can bet. But thrashing doesn't do his kind any good.

"But you haven't heard the worst yet. You know what those gamecocks of mine are. There aren't any finer in the state.

"Well, we go to church the other Sunday, and, like the fools we were, we left him behind. It makes me hot now to think of me singing in church about all the good things while that young cuss was at home wreaking devastation on my whole chicken yard.

"He went around and summoned all his cronies—a bad lot they are, too—to see some fun. Then what does he do but sneak out back and let every gamecock on the place into the big chicken yard.

"Oh, it must have been fine! You can imagine what those roosters did to the rest of the flock. Why, there were enough feathers on the ground when I got home from church to fill a dozen beds. And what young rooster so didn't have their pretty little bodies all torn up were about as much use as a last year's bird nest.

"And then, when he saw that the young roosters were no match for those fighters of mine, he said he had a good idea. Imagine a good idea getting into that noddle of his! Well, he went and got my eight turkeys and fired them in with the roosters. Oh, those poor turkeys! They haven't got nerve enough yet to let a decent gobble out of their ripped-up necks.

"'Uncle,' says he, when I see the mess, 'you ought to have been here and see the fun! Gee, but can't those little gamecocks fight!'

"Do you know anybody that wants a boy?"

THE WEDDING INVITATION.

How a Man Feels When He Gets One and His Efforts at Present Saving.

A wedding invitation is practically an admission ticket, costing $20, to the church service; reception at the house afterward, extra; cards to the at homes, more extra, says the Insurance Press.

When a man gets an invitation nowadays he feels as he does when he has been served with a subpoena. He sputters about the idiocy of marriage in general, and wonders why in thunder, or somewhere else where thunder is unknown, those little fools didn't just stand up and get married and get it over with. Then when he calms down he is inveigled into making an appointment with his wife at some jeweler's. There he is met with a stereopticon battery of silver trowels, meat saws, and miniature pitchforks, which his learned wife explains to him are fish knives, lettuce servers, and berry forks, respectively.

Then, as his eyes wander about the store, he spies a golden ball, perforated with fancy holes, and he ventures the facetious remark to his wife that they might take time by the forelock and send that baby a rattle. Which is met by the chilling rejoinder that "that" is a tea ball, and it is just the very thing. And so the man hands over the necessary and his wife directs where the goods are to shall be sent.

The feelings of a strong, healthy man being required to attach his card to a dinky tea ball and send it to a young couple as a mark of his good wishes fall either of expression or description.

AND THE FROG CAME BACK.

Was Taken Far from His Favorite Spring House, But They Couldn't Lose Him.

Nearly every living thing has a local habitation and abiding place which it regards as its home. Even frogs have an attachment for particular places in which to spend their leisure hours. About three years ago a Pennsylvania farmer named Anderson found a large frog in front of the spring house, and when the milkmaid opened the door to put her pail of milk in the spring the frog hopped in behind her.

"Goodness!" said the maid, "but you're a big fellow."

It was a big fellow. From his nose to the ends of his extended legs the frog measured 15 inches. It hopped out of reach of the girl's hand and partially buried itself in a bed of clay in the darkest corner of the spring house. There, in a stupor, neither eating nor drinking, it remained until the spring. Then it departed.

Each autumn since then the frog has appeared at the first sign of frost and made his winter bed in the spring house. This year he came as usual. But the farmer desired to make an experiment on him. He was awakened, lifted from his warm clay nest, placed in a wagon and carted to a place a mile down the road. There he was left.

Before evening he was back again. The milkmaid found him at sunset seated before the spring house door, waiting patiently to be let in.

HANDY JOBS FOR MAIMED.

Thoughtful Corporation at Elmira, N. Y., Provides for Injured Employes.

"Up in my city," said ex-Senator J. Sloat Fassett, of Elmira, to a New York Times writer, "we have a corporation more thoughtful of its employes than is most corporations. Consequently one of them gets a hand or an arm taken off, but instead of casting the men so maimed adrift the corporation provides places for them where men with but one hand can work satisfactorily. The one-armed men soon learn to profit to a certain extent by their misfortune. The men with right hands pair off with the men with left hands and in that way one pair of gloves, mittens, cuffs and such things goes for both.

"But more practicable even than that is the sight of two such men at the theater. A man with a right hand left sits next to a man with a left hand also left and when anything pleases them they turn instinctively toward each other, clap their remaining hands together and contribute more than would seem possible to the applause."

Eating Glass.

"How much glass do you suppose that you consume daily?" a Philadelphia physician asked of one of his patients the other day, and then went on, in response to other's interrogative look: "It is a fact that we all swallow each day more or less glass, the manufacturers not having yet reached the point where their product is impervious to the action of fluids. He who drinks beer consumes the most glass. A chemical analysis of any bottled beer inevitably reveals some of the glass' constituents. But the water drinker, too, swallows his share of glass, and therefore for the present only choice books and those which are not intended to be handled roughly are covered with frogs' skins.

International trade touches as many diverse and interesting articles as an "old curiosity shop" handles. One of the most curious items is cat-o'-nine-tails. SOME POLITICAL PRAYERS.

Singular Supplications Attributed to Chaplains of Several Legislative Bodies.

The Philadelphia Record recalls some political prayers made by chaplains of legislative bodies. It was inoffensive, but in poor taste, when a chaplain in the Delaware legislature prayed: "Oh, Lord, Thy servants are in a deadlock. Give them the key." During the last Cuban insurrection a chaplain in a legislature prayed: "That the United States might supply with arms, if necessary, those in Cuba who were struggling for liberty," and that we "might insist upon upholding the Monroe doctrine." The chaplain of the Illinois house prayed God to "contract the capacious maw of the penal reformatory institutions of Illinois. May they learn to be content with less money, and may those who refuse to worship a golden calf also refuse to worship gold in any form."

The chaplain of a populist convention in Arkansas prayed that the statesmen be delivered from democratic control. But the Colorado legislature Dean Peck prayed that the populists and democrats might be resigned to their fate. A populist chaplain in Kansas prayed God to "palsy the brain and still the heart of the treasonable conspirators," to-wit, the republicans. In a Massachusetts campaign a minister prayed for the triumph of righteousness, and then broke out: "Oh, Lord, what's the use of beating about the bush? Give us Briggs for governor."

THE ITALIAN IMMIGRANT.

He Is Industrious and Thrifty, But Does Not Become Fully Americanized.

Italy is still sending over sea swarms of her people who seek the hazards of new fortunes in the United States, and the steamships from the Mediterranean brings hosts of steerage passengers to Ellis island, says the New York Tribune. The sturdy sons of Italy are fortunate in their new homes, and almost every one of them saves money in the new world. But too many of them go back to their old homes to live on their savings. Too many persist in remaining Italian in habits and sympathies and ways of living, and refuse to cast their lot in this hemisphere to the end of their days and become thorough Americans.

The Italian element, both in North America and South America, is numerous and important. Too large a part of it, however, is transitory. Immigrants from Ireland, Germany, Sweden and all the Scandinavian peoples cross the Atlantic with the purpose of staying permanently in this half of the globe. But the passion for the old scenes and the old conditions appears to be almost inextinguishable among the descendants of the ancient Romans.

NOSES AND EYEGLASSES.

Lack of Adhesion When the Wearer Is Troubled with Cold in the Head.

When a man who wears glasses gets a cold in his head he has a hard time. That fact is apparent to anybody who gets about town at a time when grip is prevalent and watches the antics of the sufferer, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. It is not the watery condition of the eyes that gives him trouble, it is the nose. Not one man in a thousand can keep his glasses on when he blows his nose; consequently he who performs that nasal office frequently has considerable difficulty.

The wise man in glasses never tries to read when suffering with a cold. He gets no satisfaction out of the printed page.

"Dreadful accident on the—" he reads, and then, before he can find out what it was, his attention is forcibly directed elsewhere, and it is only in snatches that he gets the details of the disaster. A man who has had experience with colds seldom even puts his glasses on when so afflicted. He only has to take them off every few minutes, and until somebody invents a device warranted to prevent their dislodgment during nasal contortions he prefers to go it blind.

Bound in Frogs' Skins.

From Calcutta comes the strange news that the skins of frogs are now being used to a considerable extent throughout India for the purpose of binding books. Frogs abound in that country, and bookbinders claim that their skins can be exquisitely tanned, and when turned into leather are pliable and durable. The cost of dyeing and tanning is, however, somewhat greater than in the case of ordinary skins, and therefore for the present only choice books and those which are not intended to be handled roughly are covered with frogs' skins.

SOME BORN TO LEAD.

Senator Pettus Believes There Is No Accident in Success.

How a Private Took Charge of a Wagon Train on the Plains and Commanded the Obedience of His Superiors.

Edmund Winston Pettus, aged 82, is the junior senator from Alabama. His life has been full of stirring experiences, from the time he was a lieutenant in the Mexican war until the present. He was a brigadier general in the confederacy and saw many a battle. In 1849 he rode on horseback with a company of fortune seekers across the plains to California. Being a Californian himself, the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Post was interested in the brief line in the Congressional directory telling of this journey, and asked Senator Pettus to tell him some of his experiences.

"Oh, that was a long while ago," he replied, gazing reflectively from a capitol window toward the monument and the west. "I don't remember much about the places I visited in California. The journey was crowded full of incidents that I suppose were thrilling, but life in those days was thrilling to everybody, as a matter of course. I recall one experience on the plains that showed how naturally men turned to the born leader, whether he is in shoulder straps or a private in the rear ranks. We were about 300 miles west of Fort Smith. I was riding ahead, with the compass. Two men were with me, both privates. Our party, you know, was a regular military organization.

"Away off in the distance, at the top of a slight eminence, we saw what looked like two or three thousand Indians, coming toward us at breakneck speed. That was my first sight of Indians, and I didn't like the sight at all. One of my companions, a clear-headed, brave fellow, at once took in the situation. He realized that if the Indians reached the wagon train, strung along as it was, we would all be killed. He hastily explained the situation, directed us to watch the Indians and every retreat to the train, while he galloped back and gave the alarm.

"When he reached the wagon train he gave directions here and there, and inside of a few minutes had the wagons parked, the animals inside, and the company stationed at the right points, with arms ready for a skirmish with the Indians. We retreated slowly, the Indians gradually approaching. There were only five or six of them, apparently, at first, but others appeared to be riderless. My companion told me not to be misled by this, as the plains Indians were expert horsemen and often rode on the side of their mounts, with their bodies completely covered. In confusion we are badly scared as we turned back and hustled toward the wagon train.

"It turned out that the five or six Indians I had seen comprised the whole band. They were friendly Seminoles, and had raided a village of hostiles somewhere to the westward and stampeded their horses, and were riding like mad to get the band across the river and away from the pursuing hostiles. We let them cross in a couple of minutes, and until somebody invents a device warranted to prevent their dislodgment during nasal contortions he prefers to go it blind.

Sound in Frogs' Skins.

From Calcutta comes the strange news that the skins of frogs are now being used to a considerable extent throughout India for the purpose of binding books. Frogs abound in that country, and bookbinders claim that their skins can be exquisitely tanned, and when turned into leather are pliable and durable. Fire Alarms in Russia.

In St. Petersburg the arrangement of fire alarms is rather peculiar and decidedly unique, and the fire alarm telegraph is an unknown thing. Instead, a fireman is at all times in the tower of the city hall, and he watches for signs of a fire. When a fire is discovered during the day he runs up black balls on the top of the tower as signals; at night, red lanterns are used. The number of the balls or lanterns shows the district or ward in which the fire is located. As soon as the signal is seen by the man on duty at an engine house he rings a bell outside which calls together the members of the company, who may be seated, or even a couple of blocks. This method is not conducive to quick time in reaching the scene, and from 20 minutes to half an hour is good work unless the fire happens to be near the engine house.

WORLD'S FAIR SLANG.

St. Louis Will Now Set the Pace in the Coining of New Words and Phrases.

One of the enduring effects of the Chicago fair in 1893 was the amount of original slang which the Philadelphia centennial is indissolubly connected in the minds of many persons with the disappearance of Charley Ross, and from that exhibition dates, practically, the host of jokes that have at times made existence a burden to the stage on the slothfulness of Philadelphia and Philadelphians, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

Now, St. Louis, in anticipation of the opening of the Louisiana Purchase exhibition, has been burnishing up some of the recent slang of the Mississippi valley, and some of the items may be obtained from advance sheets, so to speak.

What is called in Chicago a "dead one" or a "sleeper" is in St. Louis a "crape." The St. Louis version of the expression "the real thing" for a pretty girl is "a swell doll." A "crown guy" is a policeman, a "gitney" is a nickel, and "mug's landing" is the Union station.

St. Louis has a large southern and southwestern population. The southwest has, in recent years, superseded the west very generally as the starting place of most American slang, and St. Louis considers it has advantages in this respect that are not likely to be obscured by the action of any of its up-to-date citizens.

DARE NOT HINT AT MURDER.

Turkish Newspapers Are Not Permitted to Refer to the Crime of Regicide.

The sultan of Turkey lives in constant dread of death at the hands of an assassin and the most extraordinary means are taken to guard his person from their approach. He has likewise prohibited any mention of the crime of regicide in the newspapers published in his domain. He insists that every ruler or person of high political importance should die a natural death. The Stamps of Turin says that other rulers of Europe are not officially recognized by Niachan Effendi, the censor. When King Humbert was assassinated at Monza the Turkish newspapers announced the sad event in this way: "King Humbert left the hall amid the frantic cheers of the people. The king, much affected, bowed several times and to all appearances was immediately dead." When the shah of Persia was assassinated the Turkish papers said: "In the afternoon the shah drove to his summer palace and there complained of illness. His corpse was sent to Teheran." One paper excelled all others by this absurd piece of euphemistic simplification: "The shah of Persia at 11 p. m. ordered his corpse returned to the palace." This was too much even for the Turks, who keep the phrase as one of their proverbs.

SLAVERY IN NEW ENGLAND.

Brought to an End by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts in 1783.

Slavery in New England began soon after the settlement of the country. In 1638 Pequot Indians were taken from Massachusetts and sold in the West Indies. The vessel returning brought a cargo of cotton and tobacco, says the Boston Transcript. Slaves were most numerous in New England about the middle of the eighteenth century. In 1754 there were nearly 5,000 negro slaves in the state of Massachusetts. In 1780 a declaration of rights, all men were declared to be free and equal. In 1781 a white man in Massachusetts was indicted for beating and imprisoning a black man. His defense was that this was the necessary and lawful correction for a slave, for a slave could not be held in subjection unless one could punish him when he went away or refused to work. In 1783 the supreme court of Massachusetts declared that the defense invalid. This decided an end to slavery in New England. Slaves were mostly household servants, kept largely by rich people for purposes of display.

Chickamauga and Chattanooga.

The word Chickamauga means "dull, sluggish stream," and it is from the waters of the creek that the Indians, who were among the most daring and warlike of all the tribes in east Tennessee, got their names, says the Chattanooga Times. The original interpretation of Chattanooga has long been lost. The generally accepted meaning of Cherokee is the word is "Hawk's Nest," said to have been suggested by the valley nestling in the shadow of the ridges and mountain. Others say that the word is derived from the name Clanooga, given by the Cherokees to small, warlike hawks that made their nests in the cliffs of Lookout mountain.

Linen for Large Hotel.

What would the ordinary woman say to a family that used every day 20,000 napkins, 12,000 towels, 3,800 sheets, 20,000 plates and 18,000 knives and forks? This is what is required by one of the large hotels in New York, at which a man cannot live for much less than eight dollars a day. The hotel will accommodate 3,000 people, besides 1,500 servants to wait on them.

Dr. Julius Boeckemann, German physician and scientist, who went to Patagonia eight years ago to study the conditions of the country, says the Patagonians will be extinct in a few years.

WOMEN'S CLUBS THRIVE.

Pessimists Say They Are a Fad, But They Go On Increasing in Numbers.

The latest edition of the official directory of the woman's clubs of Chicago shows that the pessimists who say that women's clubs are a fad, and that they die soon after they are created because of the members being extremely fickle in their allegiance to their clubs, are entirely and totally wrong, says the Chicago Tribune.

There have been four editions of the official directory. The first one printed, which covered the years 1899-1900, reveals that there were 66 clubs at that time. The next year's directory shows that the number of clubs had leaped to 112. Then the pessimist would naturally expect that the directory of the following year would indicate a slump back to something like the 66 clubs given in the first directory. But the book for the year 1901-1902 reports 97 clubs in existence, and the new directory for the year 1902-1903 gives the names of 98 clubs.

A comparison of the book just issued with the one first published shows that almost all the clubs given in the first volume are alive and prosperous. The biggest change was between the years 1900 and 1901 and 1902, when the number of clubs slumped from 112 to 97. An examination of the directories of these dates will show that few of the clubs actually died, but after the phenomenal jump from 66 to 112 it was found that many of the clubs could do better by merging under one name.

GOOD WESTERN ENGLISH.

Only Part of the United States That Gives the "R" Its Real Value.

That which the rest of the country accepts as the standard of correct pronunciation, though seldom attaining it, characterizes the speech of the majority of the people of the west. The west is the only section that does not badly misuuse R., says Leslie's Weekly.

It is perhaps incorrect to say the east and south misuse R. They hardly use it at all. In the east and many parts of the south R is, in effect, an auxiliary vowel except at the beginning of words. It merely lengthens the preceding vowel. Occasionally it refers a distinct vowel sound, that of Italian A.

In many parts of the south it is not heard at all. While the Georgian says "befoah," his Alabama neighbors say "befo'," dropping R from its position as a vowel, or vowel modifier.

In the west, R is sounded with an approximation of correctness. Yet even the westerners do not give it its full value, as do the Irish and Scotch. Their strong enunciation of the letter sounds harsh to us, yet the letter is intended to be pronounced and its use differentiates words liable to be confused by the ear.

The Anglo-Saxon seems to be doing his best to depose R. Were it not for the influence of the Irish and Scotch, R would not be little more than a written letter, as silent as initial H in Spanish.

CREATING A WATERFALL.

Great Piece of Engineering That Has Been Accomplished at Niagara.

When the waters of the Niagara river were made to flow over turbines to give electric power and light to the city of Buffalo it was considered a great piece of engineering. Engineering, says an account of "The Greatest of Power Dams," in Leslie's Monthly. But at Niagara the dam and the fall were there from the beginning. The power was ready in the rough—it had only to be applied to the machinery. When, however, it was proposed to utilize the speed and force of the Hudson river and to turn them into the power that lights towns, runs street railways and vitalizes factory plants the problem was a different one. The river was there, but the fall had to be created, and to do this it would be necessary to build one of the largest dams ever constructed, a wall, in fact, 1,600 feet long and 154 feet high, at certain points. No such barrier, great or small, had ever been placed across a river of a volume and flow equal to that of the Hudson just above Glens Falls, N. Y., yet this has now been successfully accomplished.

AGE OF CRIMINALITY.

When Criminal Responsibility of Children Begins in the Different Countries.

With reference to New York's special police court for childish offenders, it is noteworthy that both British and American law fix the same age of criminality. The code of theology the legal codes of all nations regard a man as sinless by birth. Before attaining a certain age he is regarded as incapable of crime.

In England and America this age is seven years, and before this a child cannot be prosecuted. After his seventh birthday a child is accountable for its deeds, but if under 14 the prosecution must show that he was acting with criminal intent. The same age of criminality is held in Russia and Portugal. In France and Belgium a child must be eight years old before being prosecuted. In Italy and Spain a further year of grace is accorded.

In Norway, Greece, Austria, Denmark, Holland and Switzerland, says the London Chronicle, the age is ten. The little German can play pranks with impunity until 12 years old, while in Sweden no prosecution is allowed when the offender is under 16.

AGE LIMIT UNKNOWN

Cupid Robs the Cradle as Readily as the Grave.

When Love Enters the Heart Years Count for Nothing — Startling Elopement of Children—Romance of 50 and 60.

There is no age limit on romance. Children of 15 and 16 and old men and women of 50 and 60 and older will exhibit about the same emotions when they become involved in an affair of the heart.

To prove that romance knows no ages is simple. There is the case of Daisy Dutcher and Willie Falk. Daisy was just of the age when mother thinks of letting down another inch in her daughter's skirts. Willie was new to the dignity of long trousers. The lady in the case started it. She wrote a note on perfumed paper to Willie, asking him if he would marry her. Both lived in Torrington, Conn. She had gone to the trouble of finding out exactly where they might be married without difficulty, and in her letter she explained that this could be accomplished in Brewster, N. Y., just across the Connecticut state line.

The letter fell into the hands of Willie's mother, and she gasped when she realized its businesslike nature. She inquired about the fascinating Daisy, and discovered from her youthful son and heir that he had met the girl at a children's party two weeks previously, and that he had promptly fallen in love with her.

Mrs. Falk gave her precocious offspring some sound advice and a good scolding on the impropriety of his conduct and sent him to bed, telling him to think over her words of wisdom.

This he did, evidently, for the next day he was missing. He had put on his best suit of clothes and his new shoes. When inquiries were made at Daisy's home it was discovered that she, too, was missing. So, also, were her party gown, pink sash and flower bonnet.

Efforts were made to locate the children, but before anything could be done to prevent it the news was learned. They had been married by Rev. Joseph Charles, of Brewster, and had gone on a protracted honeymoon.

With that romance of 15 and 16 in mind you may read another of 50 and 60. Charles Doolittle, of Texas, lived with his sister. Mrs. Rebecca Williams was a widow of 55, who kept a cigar store in the town where Doolittle lived. He himself was 63 and never had been married.

His sister, strange to relate, had opposed the marriage of her brother. She had been so long accustomed to have him under her sisterly wing, attending to his wants and making his home for him, that she looked with suspicious eyes on any woman whom she might suspect of attracting him.

Charles, who had felt the gentle passion on several occasions, had been forced to break off all negotiations in the direction of matrimony because of her attitude.

When he fell in love with the widow Williams he realized that circumspection would have to be employed or this affair, like the others, would come to an untimely end. He began by buying his stogies at her store.

The widow became considerably mystified by these attentions until one day he handed her a banknote in payment of a bill, and out of it dropped another kind of a note. This proved to be a love letter in which Charles declared his passion and stated the reasons for his caution.

The widow thought the matter over dispassionately. Charles was not an unprepossessing bridegroom, and the widow felt that she was in need of business to her lonely life. She decided to accept, and the next time she handed him change a return note was pressed in his hand. This said "Yes."

Then Charles became slightly flustered, but he managed to hide his excitement from his sister. A marriage in his home town was out of the question. The sister would have dragged him from the altar.

An elopement was planned by means of the mails, and one day the widow hired a man to take charge of her shop while she made a visit to the neighboring city of Austin. Brother Charles also made excuses at home and slipped away.

That night the sister received a telegram announcing the marriage of the two. Now if she will give them her blessing she will be allowed to manage the affairs both of the home and the cigar store.

A. L. Force, Ed... and Proprietor

The City Union of King's Daughters announces that the baby camp on the mountain will be opened Saturday, June 20. This particular undertaking of the Union is most praiseworthy. Through its operation poor little babies and their careworn mothers, during the summer days, find relief from the heat of the city in the cool breezes at the camp. The more fortunate of Plainfield's population in many instances do not realize the great benefits of this institution for when the thermometer begins to jump away they go to enjoy the delights of a vacation. It is a splendid work and should receive substantial support, financially and otherwise, from the people of this city.

Are there not enough wealthy men in this city willing to contribute to the free band concert fund? It is proposed to revive the plan of holding concerts in the City Park during the summer months and already a neat sum has been subscribed. To carry out the worthy scheme about $600 is yet needed. These concerts will provided entertainment for rich and poor alike. When Bandmaster LaVere gave a series of musical festivals in the Park two years ago large crowds gathered to listen to the band. The attendance in each instance proved conclusively that the people found pleasure in such affairs. Mr. LaVere is endeavoring to raise by subscription the amount necessary to cover the expense. Why not make a donation?

Can any city in the State boast of such safeguards to the public health as this municipality proudly claims. The protection insured here by the rigid requirements enforced by the Board of Health has incited the admiration of newspapers and people throughout New Jersey and the reputation extends to New York. This is largely responsible for the increasing population of desirable people. There is hardly a branch of municipal work so important as this, and the local authorities fortunately realize it.

The action of the Board of Education in taking steps to prevent any spread of contagious disease in the schools is the most recent move in the right direction. The Board has decreed that in the future all books used by the pupils must be disinfected twice during the school year. Furthermore, it has ordered that all door knobs, desks, pencils and pen-holders in the schools must be cleansed once a week. To some this may seem on first thought a needless precaution, but a little reflection will bring conviction that when the life and health of so many school children are at stake every effort should be made to prevent disease spreading.

Lurid literature, or rather reading matter, is responsible for the apparent lack of moral sense in the make-up of Willie James, whom a Coroner's jury has adjudged guilty of gross carelessness in the handling of a weapon. As a result of his recklessness the life of a little girl has been blotted out and the boy is now confined in the Somerset County Jail to await a final disposition of his case. At the inquest he frankly admitted that he was a reader of the "dime novel." Such being the case it is easy to understand how his mind gradually became poisoned, especially when his tender age is considered. Gradually, no doubt, the foolish fiction completely fascinated him and within him grew a desire to imitate the characters there portrayed. The harm done by this class of cheap reading stuff is almost incalculable. It is safe to say that a large proportion of the criminals within and without prison walls today focused on this type of stories in their youthful days. It is to be regretted that some legal steps have not been taken to prevent children from spending the days, which should be devoted to a better purpose, reading the "dime novel."

Signal System.

Owing to the fact that there has been an increased amount of traffic on the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey lines, of late, the company has installed the trolley block signal system on its main line between this city and Elizabeth. A signal box has been installed at the East Fifth street switch and others have been placed at convenient places along the entire route.

HELP IT ALONG.

Chance to Contribute to Charity Work of Unquestionable Benefit.

A cool trolley ride through shady lanes and green fields, when the day is hot and tired nature needs resting, is a delight to anyone. How much more pleasure and benefit will it bring to weary mothers and to little children, who cannot go without financial assistance.

All are asked to contribute to a fund for this purpose in charge of Mrs. S. R. Struthers, superintendent of the Relief Association, 544 West Front street. Even a very small offering will help in giving happiness to some poor child or careworn mother.

Councilman R. I. Tolles, who has been spending a number of days in Vermont seeking a needed rest, is expected to return home the last of this week.

ALIS WON.

A large crowd witnessed the game between the Alis Club and Pearsall A. C., of Jersey City, on Crescent Oval, in which the home team was victorious by a score of 11 to 8. The feature of the game was the heavy batting of both clubs. Alis secured twelve and Pearsall fourteen hits. Other attractions were the work of Hope, who had seven assists and struck out six men; the outfield work of Dupee, Lederer and Schoonmaker, who had a number of difficult flies; the general sharp playing of the Alis infield, as well as the playing of Barnes. Flynn led in batting with three hits. There were many inexcusable errors, but altogether the game was an interesting exhibition throughout.

TROLLEY LINE TO METUCHEN PROMISED

Thomas F. Walsh Says Necessary Rights of Way Have Been Secured.

STONE BALLASTED ROAD

HOPE TO HAVE LINE COMPLETED BEFORE END OF SUMMER.

Edward H. Radel, Secretary of the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company Talks on Scheme —The Work to be Rushed."

Before the close of the coming summer trolley cars may be running direct between this city and Metuchen. This is the statement made yesterday to a Daily Press reporter by Edward H. Radel, secretary of the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company.

During the Winter and Spring the company has been quietly at work securing rights of way between Plainfield and Metuchen with a view to running a trolley road between the two places. Manager Thomas F. Walsh made the announcement a few days ago that the rights of way had been secured from property owners along the proposed route and within a few weeks the work will be started on the road. It will be rushed through to completion.

A thousand tons of steel rails have arrived at the company's store yards at New Brunswick for the new road and the wire and ties are the only things that are now delaying the commencement of the work. These will arrive in a few days. Mr. Radel declared to the reporter that the road would not pass through any of the roads leading from this city to Metuchen but that it route is over private property through which rights of way have been secured by the company. The road will be stone ballasted, as is the road between Bound Brook and New Brunswick. Extra heavy rails will be laid so as to insure the best possible speed.

The connection with the local line will probably be at the Watchung avenue terminus. This will be a junction with the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Railway lines. No arrangement has been made so far, however, and if, in the event of the impossibility of securing certain concessions from the local line the trolley company may enter the town through New Market and Dunellen. The line, when completed, will make a trolley road from this city to Perth Amboy and Boynton Beach and other Staten Island Sound summer resorts.

The line, as it is proposed at present, will connect directly with the New Brunswick road at Metuchen, which extends through that town as far as Pompton. Provided an arrangement can be secured with the local lines, the cars will connect with the Arlington avenue line at Park avenue. It is said that the right of way has been secured as far as the point where the local tracks leave Park avenue for the cemetery.

BAN NOW PLACED ON PROFESSIONALISM

Plainfield Amateur Baseball League Takes a Decided Stand.

NO MONEY FOR PLAYERS

THE TEAM MANAGERS EQUALLY DIVIDED ON THE QUESTION.

President Casts Deciding Vote on Resolution Offered by the Manager of the Y. M. C. A. Team —Resident Players.

After much discussion, the Plainfield Amateur Baseball League at its regular weekly meeting last Monday decided to retain its status of last year, continuing as a purely amateur organization. Professionalism received a knock-out blow through the deciding vote cast by Judge William N. Runyon, president of the league.

Public opinion had taken such a position in the matter that the league resolved that it was time to take final action. Within the membership of the organization recently there has been increased talk favorable to adopting tactics similar to those of managers who run teams solely for pecuniary gain. It has puzzled the organization's managers just how to check this tendency.

At the meeting last night, John Steiner, manager of the Young Men's Christian Association team, took the initiative. A resolution offered by him called for the disqualification of any players receiving pecuniary reward for his services. Moreover it barred any one who has not been a bona fide resident of this city for at least three months.

When the roll was called Manager Ned Gaston, of the Safe Works team, lent his support to the resolution as offered. John Cose, manager of the Hope Chapel Young Men's Association nine, registered his vote in the negative as did also Manager Shannon, of St. Mary's. Judge Runyon, as president, cast the deciding vote, and the resolution became operative.

In arranging for umpires for next Saturday's games, Charles Creeden, of Raritan, was selected to officiate at the Hope-Y. M. C. A. contest, on Hope Common. At the same time Charles Mumford will act as umpire at the Safe Works-St. Mary's match.

Manager Steiner registered the names of Herbert Cathcart and Alfred Egan in place of John Kuhns and Frederick VanAuken. Under the rules of the league the new men will not be allowed to play until the expiration of two weeks.

PASSED SAFELY THROUGH FLOOD.

Party of Plainfielders Had Many Exciting Adventures Out West.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Shotwell, of Fairview avenue, who in company with Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Cadmus, of Plainfield avenue, returned Saturday from California, passed through many escapes on their journey East that were almost literally "hair-breadth." The train following theirs into Kansas City was the one on which L. Newmiller, of Vine street, met his death.

While passing down the Missouri river further west, the tracks were washed away half an hour after they had passed over them. At another time their train was waiting to cross a bridge which broke down in front of them under the weight of a construction train. The party saw several churches and school houses, and large numbers of houses and trees floating down the stream, many of them with occupants clinging to them.

Mr. Shotwell represented the First Presbyterian church in the General Assembly at San Francisco.

Mr. Garretson has been appointed to the position of accountant of the four mills of the Atlas Cement Company and his residence will be at Allentown.

RAISING FUNDS FOR TABLET

THEATRICALS IN AID OF WASHINGTON ROCK MEMORIAL.

Amount Now in Treasury $250—Celestial Tea Netted $73 —More Needed.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, has consented to arrange theatricals to raise money for the Washington Rock monument fund. It is planned to give a performance sometime in the fall. In all probability an historical subject will be chosen as a title for the play.

The affair will be given under the auspices of Continental Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution of which Mrs. Florence Howe Hall is regent.

The tea given April 17 last netted the chapter $73. The money has been placed in the fund for the monument at Washington Rock. The fund now amounts to $250.

Nothing has been decided upon so far as to what kind of a monument to erect at the rock. Some have suggested that a huge bowlder be placed upon the rock, surmounted by a memorial tablet.

HIGH OR LOW.

Difference in Churchmanship May Result in Deadlock Over Bishopric.

East Orange, June 9—From all appearances it is likely that there will be a dead-lock again at the adjourned convention of the diocese of Newark, which meets in West Orange Tuesday, June 16. The purpose of the session is to elect a successor to the late Bishop Starkey. The dead prelate was what is termed a high churchman, and the clerical delegates favor one of his time as a successor, while the lay delegates desire a low churchman. The names most prominently mentioned are Rev. Dr. George McClellan Fiske, of Providence, R. I., a high churchman, and Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, of Orange, N. J., a low churchman.

Among other names discussed are that Rev. Dr. Floyd W. Tompkins, of Holy Trinity Church, Philadelphia, who is a low churchman; the Rev. Dr. Charles Wheeler Colt, of St. Luke's Church, Baltimore, a high churchman; the Rev. Dr. Jacob A. Regester, of St. Paul's Church, Buffalo, also a high churchman, and the Rev. Dr. Albert W. Arundel, of Pittsburg, who is a broad churchman

CONSTABLE MANLEY A MILLIONAIRE?

Wealth For Plainfielder If He Can Prove His Startling Claim.

VALUABLE EQUITY HIS.

LANDS ARE IN THE HEART OF LONG ISLAND CITY.

Lived Years in Ignorance of Fortune Awaiting Him—Counsel Engaged to Prosecute Claim —The Story in Detail.

In the heart of Long Island City, there is a tract of land one and one-half miles long by one-half mile deep over which a citizen of Plainfield has a claim which, if allowed, will make him a wealthy man and possibly a millionaire. John Manley, the constable, of Park avenue, is the lucky individual, who has been living for eighteen years in blissful ignorance of the fortune which might have been his almost for the asking. It is a romance in real life that reads much like a chapter from a novel, with the hero a faithful, hard-working public official.

Within the past month, Mr. Manley was considerably startled to receive an offer from the Pennsylvania Railroad to buy out certain portions of his equity on land adjoining the tracks of the Long Island Railroad. This offer set Mr. Manley to thinking and the results of his investigations are included in what follows.

Garrett V. Manley, father of John Manley, died in 1880, the owner of two tracts of land, one a small island in Newtown Creek and the other in Long Island City, fronting for about a mile and a half on Jackson avenue, the city's busiest thoroughfare. The property at present extends from Thompson avenue seven blocks to Newtown Creek and from Jackson avenue to the Long Island Railroad tracks in the rear.

This property was foreclosed in 1885 by James Thompson, a Wall street broker, and through an oversight or error of some sort the name of John Manley was omitted from the list of heirs. Consequently, Mr. Manley has an equity on the property which in validates all previous transfers, although he cannot claim to own it outright. The Pennsylvania Railroad desires a portion of the tract as a site for their depot, which they intend to make the largest passenger terminal in the world. The present property holders cannot sell out to the railroad until Mr. Manley receives his equity, enabling them to give the railroad a clear title. There are 586 property owners in the tract.

Mr. Manley has already received an offer from the railroad of over half a million dollars for the transfer of his right of equity, and has refused it. He has placed his case in the hands of Attorney V. W. Nash, Jr.

Mr. Manley has been a resident of Plainfield for about five years having moved here from New Brunswick. Previous to that time he lived on his father's estate on Long Island, until the time when the mortgage was foreclosed. He is a member of several lodges, and has been actively interested in church work and in the Rescue Mission. He is constable of the Second ward and popular for his faithfulness in office and his genial social qualities.

Afterwards the delegation took dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Patterson, Greenwich, Conn. An invitation was extended to Port Chester Lodge, No. 96, to visit Plainfield June 21 for the purpose of decorating graves of Plainfield members. The invitation was accepted.

Big Celebration.

The one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Monmouth will be appropriately celebrated at Freehold, Saturday, June 27. The battle was fought June 28, 1778, but as the anniversary falls on Sunday this year, the celebration will be held the day previous. The State has appropriated $3,500 for a military display and there will be a parade. One of the landmarks, the Tennent Church at Tennent, is still standing in a good state of preservation.

ST. MARY'S T. A. B. SOCIETY OFFERS RELIEF FOR FLOOD VICTIMS.

Organization Prosperous—An Excursion Planned—Officers Chosen.

Aid for the sufferers from flood and fire in the South and West to the extent of $25 was voted last Monday by the Total Abstinence Benevolent Society at their rooms in T. A. B. Hall. The committee to attend to the disposition of the money consists of M. E. Flynn, A. T. Lynch and George McCloskey.

The treasurer announced a prosperous financial condition of the society, all the property being free of incumbrances and the treasury containing a surplus of $1,200. A. T. Lynch, chairman of the building committee, reported little alteration in the original plans. The entertainment committee, Clinton Shannon, chairman, advised an excursion for the benefit of the society and were empowered to act on the matter. The excursion will probably be to Atlantic Highlands in July.

These officers were chosen: President, Michael O'Keefe; vice president, Patrick J. Miller; recording secretary, Richard Birmingham; financial secretary, Clarence Walden; treasurer, John C. Carney.

MISTAKE IN SEEDS CAUSES TROUBLE

Farmers Fight Because One Sold Other Mustard Seeds for Oats.

DREAMS OF HARVEST

CLIMAX TO TAKE PLACE IN A JUSTICE'S COURT.

Farmer Kane Wakes Up to Find He Has Been Deceived — Pounces on Farmer Ayres—Latter He Brings Action is Tort.

During the drought Joseph T. Kane, a Warrenville farmer, planted some seed in a large ten acre lot on his farm. He thought that the seed was oats and he planted it plentifully. Three weeks ago there was a slight fall of rain and in a day or two there appeared an abundance of little green shoots.

Farmer Kane rubbed his hands with glee for he thought that he would have a larger and healthier harvest of ripe oats than his neighbors. He watched the little stalks as they grew. Saturday afternoon the field was a beautiful green seemingly of wavy oats. After the rain storm that night the farmer awoke the next morning to look out at the oat field, to find to his astonishment, that the field was yellow. His oat crop was a mere dream. The good farmer's eye quickly discerned mustard plants, almost ready to seed.

It is recorded that farmer Joe tore his hair with vexation. He sought out one Jonathan Ayres, who sold him the seed. Joseph, in righteous wrath "jumped all over" his neighbor. The result is that a suit has been brought before Justice W. E. Mattison, of the borough, between Joseph T. Kane, plaintiff, and Jonathan Ayres, defendant, in tort. Their troubles will be aired in court Monday afternoon.

AIM TO PRESERVE HOME OF MASONRY

Building Once Occupied by Trenton Lodge, No. 5, F. and A. M.

AS A MASONIC MUSEUM

GREAT MEN OF NATION HAVE SAT WITHIN ITS WALLS.

Major Anderson, of Civil War Fame, Made a Mason There—Lodge Never Missed Stagie Communication Since 1787—Its History.

If the proposition which the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of New Jersey now has under consideration is adopted the first home of Masonry in this part of the country will be purchased and preserved.

The building is located in Trenton, a block away from the State capitol. It is a relic of early Masonry in this country, and the proposition to buy and preserve it is interesting Masons outside of New Jersey, as well as those within the State.

The first Masonic temple in the State of New Jersey is now a dwelling and store, but it has scarcely changed at all in appearance since it was built, about 1797. It is splendidly preserved for an old building, and, with a little renovation, could be made a solid and substantial structure. This building was the first home of Trenton Lodge No. 5, F. and A. M., and from it sprung the memory of five great States, namely, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Trenton Lodge has not missed a communication or lodge meeting since 1787. During the Morgan troubles, when Masonry was under the ban to some extent, and when it was looked upon as inimical to the interests of the country, this old lodge went ahead and held its sessions regularly in the old temple on Front street. Most of the lodges in America at that time suspended their meetings until things quieted down.

This old Masonic home was used until a few years before the outbreak of the Civil War. Governors of States, United States Senators and members of Congress have sat within its walls. It was there that Major Anderson, of Civil War fame, was made a member of the Masonic order. He presented to the lodge the desks that were used at its meetings in this old building, and which are now divided among the members of No. 5 as relics.

Trenton Lodge No. 5, while in the old building, granted to Trenton Masons who settled in Cincinnati, the first charter for Nova Caesarea Lodge, in what was then the Northwest Territory of the United States. The granting of this charter was really the beginning of Masonry in that Territory north of the Ohio River, between the Pennsylvania line and the Mississippi River, where it now flourishes. The famous Indiana Lodge No. 1, of Vincennes, Ind., received its start at the close of the second war with England, from Trenton Lodge No. 5.

The movement on the part of Masons to purchase this historic building was started at the last session of the grand lodge of New Jersey, held in Trenton about a month ago and which was attended by members of Anchor Lodge, No. 144, and Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, both of Plainfield. The matter was championed by Francis B. Lee, of that city. Most Worshipful Grand Master W. Holt Apgar, of the Grand Lodge, discussed the matter at some length in his annual report, and strongly urged the Grand Lodge to cooperate with Trenton Lodge in securing possession of the building and preserving it. The matter was referred to Messrs. Lee and Apgar, and they will report to the grand body at its next meeting on the advisability of proceeding with the project. They are both heartily in favor of the plan, and if their recommendation is adopted the property will pass into the possession of the Masons of the State. Trenton Lodge No. 5 has a mortgage interest in the property, and no great sum of money would be needed to buy the place, notwithstanding that it is centrally located and occupies a valuable piece of ground.

If the proposition to secure possession of this historic Masonic building in Trenton is favorably acted upon by the grand lodge it will be made the repository for relics of early Masonry in this State.

Adams on the Spot.

C. P. Adams, formerly of Plainfield, is superintending the restoration of telegraph lines and poles damaged by the recent Kansas floods. Mr. Adams was for many years telegraph superintendent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey and now holds a similar position with the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific. He describes many of his experiences in the flood in a letter recently received by his son, E. W. Adams, of North Plainfield.

PROTECTION TO THE PUBLIC

STATE NURSES ASSOCIATION SPONSER FOR GOOD LAW.

Trained Nurses to be Registered in County Clerk's Office—Examinations Required in Certain Cases.

Trained nurses in this city desiring to continue in their engagement must register their names at the County Clerk's office in Elizabeth, on or before July 1. This is in accordance with the law passed at the last session of the Legislature at the request of the New Jersey State Nurses' Association.

Those complying with this requirement need not undergo a State examination as to their fitness. Anyone failing to register, in accordance with the law will, after that time be required to submit to an examination, graduated before or after the law became inoperative. The statute is regarded as a good one in that it will serve to protect the nurses and aid greatly in insuring qualified attendants in sick rooms. There are now about 400 members in the New Jersey State Association.

WEDDING FEAST.

A Boroughite Gives Stag Party in Honor of His Wedding Anniversary.

In honor of his recent marriage, Frank J. Schaeffer, of the borough, entertained a number of the members of the Independent Shooting Club at a banquet at the Arlington Hotel last Monday. The evening was spent in dining. Speech-making interspersed song and story.

The room was decorated especially for the occasion and a sumptuous repast was served by Charles Jensen, proprietor of the hotel. Those were present: Henry Haurand, captain of the club; Matthias Mennenbach, Louis Van Dyke, Edward Sebring, William Mills, Christian Steckle, Chas. Keller, Dennis Baglin, William Krausse and Joseph Blatz.

Mr. Schaeffer was married to Miss Otilia Heinold, of Grove street, on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Schaeffer will reside in North Plainfield where the groom is employed.

LITERARY.

Fourteen good short stories and some sixty illustrations, beautifully printed, and bound in one of the handsomest covers of the season, constitute the Red Book's promise of high standards and constant improvement. Numerous half tones in color-printing are a noteworthy feature of the June number of this sparkling monthly. David Graham Phillips, Hayden Carruth, Augustus de Bubna, Charles Michael Williams, Mary and Rosalie Dawson, Richard Linthicum, Lynn Roby Meekins, Edward Boltwood and half a dozen other fiction writers of acknowledged merit, fill the enticing table of contents.

THEATRICAL.

Not less than 500 persons will be engaged in the Manhattan Beach production of Pain's "Last Days of Pompeii," beginning June 24. One of the many new features will be a fire dance in which a score of Greek slave girls appear to dance upon a perfect sea of fire. The company's experts spent a good deal of time perfecting the illusion and they promise a sensation in realism.

Another Phase of Prosperity.

According to a notice sent to the local coal dealers some time ago by the line agents, it is expected that on or about June 15 the price of coal will be advanced from $6 to $6.25 per ton. The advance thereafter will be at the rate of twenty-five cents a month.

P. H. S. BATTALION EXHIBITION DRILL

Annual Competition for Company and Individual Prizes Held.

LARGE CROWD PRESENT

OFFICERS AND PRIVATES DO CREDITABLE WORK.

Winners Announced—Capt. G. F. Edwards as Judge—Sketch of Battalion and Present Roster of Officers.

The final drill of the Plainfield High School Cadets was held last Friday on Stillman Field. The work was in charge of Commandant James D. Macnab and Major Alden E. Moore. Captain George F. Edwards, 2nd Regiment, N. G. N. J., acted as judge of the competitions.

Company C, Captain Ralph S. Lane won the banner for proficiency in company drilling. The company scored 98½ points out of a possible 100. Co. A, Acting Captain Arthur F. Conant was second with 18½ points and Co. B, Captain Michael T. Moynihan next with 14 points.

The individual drill with arms narrowed down to First Sergeant Harold C. Fenno, Co. C; Sergeant Stuart Freeman, Co. C, and Private Louis Bock, Co. A. The winner will be decided upon by the judges and will be awarded a gold medal at the school commencement exercises on June 18.

The following men received 100 per cent. medals for attendance at drills and officers' meetings: First Sergeant Charles Fisher Neagle, Co. B; Co. Quartermaster Sergeant Harold Alexander Brownell, Co. C; Co. Quartermaster Sergeant Ralph Rose Eckert, Co. B; Cadet Leroy Runyon Adams, Co. A; Cadet Jerome Grant Cline, Co. B; Cadet Joseph Henry Jones, Co. B; Cadet Robert Lawrence Kyte, Co. C; Cadet Edward Mosher, Co. C; Cadet John Locke Platt, Co. B; Cadet Frank Rimmer, Co. C; Cadet Milton Wilcox St. John, Co. B.

The Plainfield High School Cadet Battalion held its annual exhibition and prize drill last Friday on Stillman Field.

Bronze 100 per cent. medals were awarded to fifteen students for faithfulness in drill during the year.

Announcement of the successful competitor in individual drill and award of the gold medal offered by James D. Macnab will be made at commencement time.

The reviewing officer was Capt. Geo. F. Edwards, former commandant of the battalion.

The past year of the battalion has been the most successful year since its organization. Three companies were organized in September and regular drills have been held weekly in connection with the High School work. At the beginning of the year these companies were commanded by Captain Fred T. VanAuken, Co. A; Captain Alden E. Moore, Co. B and Captain Ralph S. Lane, Co. C. Early in October a special uniformed company was formed and Captain Moore was placed in command. Thenceforth this company was known as Co. H.

It consisted of about thirty men. At the beginning of the year a new uniform was adopted by the commissioned officers. This uniform was modeled after the regular army uniform for New Jersey infantry and only differed from it in the insignia on the collar of the blouse. Shoulder straps were also adopted for the commissioned officers.

In November, an exhibition of military camp life was given by the members of the battalion in Franklin Hall. The entertainment represented a typical day in camp and included the various drills which go to make up such a day. The affair was highly successful.

During the last three months of the year, numerous changes were made among the officers of the battalion. The death of Major E. Douglas Murphy, Jr., on May 3 was a severe blow to the battalion, as he had been most active in the promotion of some of the greatest improvements in the organization of that year. At his death, Captain Frederic T. VanAuken, of Co. A was appointed major, but he was obliged to leave the High School and enter an Annapolis preparatory school so that on June 6 Captain Alden E. Moore, of Co. B, was appointed major. These promotions caused numerous changes in the other officers of the battalion and for this reason the drilling of the past month has been somewhat crippled.

The roster of the company officers follows:

First Lieutenant Arthur F. Conant, acting captain; Adjutant George L. Babcock, acting first lieutenant; Second Lieutenant Vincent B. Miner; First Sergeant Harry G. Thompson, Second Sergeant Charles N. Doolittle, Third Sergeant Howard B. Craig, Fourth Sergeant Charles Elliott, Quartermaster Sergeant Edwin I. Waterman; Corporals Charles P. Titsworth, Leslie Blocum, Samuel Rogart, H. G. Lapsley and thirty-five privates.

Company B, Captain Michael T. Moynihan, Quartermaster Lucius T. Koons, acting first lieutenant, First Sergeant Charles F. Neagle, Second Sergeant Frank Lock, Third Sergeant Harold E. Lavell, Fourth Sergeant Edwin Daniels, Quartermaster Sergeant Ralph R. Eckert; Corporals P. C. Mayer, J. W. Gevert, G. M. Rittenhouser, J. Loizeaux and twenty-nine privates.

Company C, Captain Ralph S. Lane, First Lieutenant VanWyck Brooks, Second Lieutenant Albetz D. Boers, First Sergeant Harold C. Fenno, Second Sergeant Albert F. Yaeger, Fourth Sergeant Percy M. Brown, Third Sergeant S. F. Freeman, Quartermaster Sergeant Harold Brownell; Corporals P. Leichtenstein, H. Flanders, H. Rottberg and thirty-six privates.

Alden Moore is major at present and Lucius T. Koons, quartermaster; George L. Babcock, adjutant; L. L. Sheppard, sergeant major and Monro Long, quartermaster sergeant. These are the staff officers in connection with J. D. Macnab, commandant.

SILK DRESSES OF TIN.

Metal Weighting Substance Has Taken the Place of Vegetable Matter.

A Chicago chemist declares that 75 per cent. of the so-called silk used for skirts, blouses, and dresses is nothing less than tin, pure and simple, says the Tribune of that city. He asserts that the practice of substituting tin for vegetable weighting substances originated in Germany. The vegetable matters were no detriment, though equal brilliancy of color was not obtainable, and there was not the same sheen and "feel" when handled as that produced by real silk, which has the rustle so pleasing to the ladies' ears. "The practice of the dyer," he explains, "to whose hands the silk yarn is intrusted for dyeing and weighting, is to boil it, and in so doing he reduces every 16 ounces to 12, thus eliminating the natural gummy substances and the foreign matter added for the purpose of spinning. The 12 ounces were then brought up to 14 by the use of tannic acid, etc. To-day by the substitution of tin, the 12 ounces are raised to 16 ounces, or even 30 ounces.

"The proportion of 'weighting' is more than that in black silk," said a manufacturer to whom this statement was submitted. "Frequently only one-fourth of the woven material is real silk; the other three parts are tin and dye."

Any woman can test for herself whether the silk she is buying is tin weighted. Let her hold some threads in a flame, and the genuine will leave an ash resembling that of wood when burned, with no traces of filament, while the tin weighted simply loses its color and tenacity, each thread remaining distinct in a thin wire gauze.

THE "BLESSED LETTER 'B.'"

Some of the Benedictest Things That Come to the Horticulturist Under This Letter.

A writer in the Garden has discovered that many of the worst foes of the horticulturist begin with "w," and he instances worms, weevils, wind and other workers of wickedness. This suggests a question, says the London Chronicle, as to whether there is any natural grouping of good or evil things under particular letters. Take "bad," for example, and consider how many bonnes-a-man by bring out his briar and blow his baccy while he bestrides his bicycle. Finally, with his "choke" on the boister he may find bliss in bed between the blankets. These are but a few of the beneficent things included under that blessed letter "b." Now, as a contrast, take "d," and among the first words we think of are damp, dark, dreary, dismal, dirty, depressed, despairing, dead drunk, and—so on, the very sound of which is enough to drive one into doleful dumps.

A NEW FEMININE MADNESS.

The Powder Channels Is Much in Evidence Nowadays in Public Places.

In order to make the most of their time it has come to pass that many of the women one meets in the restaurants and hotels, at the theaters, and in the shops, do a lot of primping in public, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. Powder rags, eyebrow pencils, rouge brushes are the implements and woman does not hesitate to put some finishing touches to her toilet, wherever she happens to be. These finishing touches, by the way, seem to be needed every day.

"I have traveled a good deal," remarked a middle-aged woman the other day, "and I am sure that in no other part of the world do women keep face powder in such constant commission, but I will say for the American woman doesn't begin to make up so much as many women of other countries.

"The latter, however, when they do make up their faces for the day, seldom touch it after a touch until evening anyway, whereas the American gets out her powder and daubs it on perhaps a dozen times a day. Her powder rag and she are inseparable.

The M. P. Gets No Pay.

Members of the English parliament, unlike the members of the American congress and all the other parliaments of the world, serve without salary. The labor party's representatives in parliament and the Irish party's members are the only ones who are paid to serve in the house of commons. They draw their salaries, not from the government, but from their own political parties. There are so many able men willing to serve their country and their party for the honor of it that all agitations to secure salaries for members of commons have been unsuccessful. The average member from $3,000 to $25,000 in election expenses to get into commons if his election is warmly contested by a candidate from the opposing party, so that, as a rule, the average member of the house of commons is a man of fortune.

Effect of Drugs.

Certain substances which are dead in their effects upon men can be taken by the brute creation with impunity. Horses cantake large doses of antimony, dogs of mercury, goats of tobacco, mice of hemlock and rabbits of belladonna, without injury. On the other hand, dogs and cats are much more susceptible to the influence of chloroform than man, and are much sooner killed by it.

PUPILS GIVE A MUSICALE

AFFAIR UNDER AUSPICES OF HIGH HCOOL CLASS.

Some Good Solo Work—Entertainment for Relatives and Friends of the Pupils.

The musicale given by the class of '08 of the Plainfield High School in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, last Thursday, attracted an audience that completely filled the edifice. Those present included pupils of the Public Schools and their parents and friends and all were appreciative of the programme presented under the direction of Chas. L. Lewis. Miss Jessie Utter was at the organ and Miss Mabel Maxson at the piano. The soloists were Mrs. Thomas McDonald, soprano; Miss Cornelia Miller, soprano; Miss Mary Collier, alto.

A large chorus from the High School sang several well-known selections, including "Damascus-Triumphal March," "Costa;" "The Red Cross Knight," "Calloott;" "The Lost Chord," Sullivan. These numbers were followed with two selections by the Mandolin Club from the High School, winning much applause.

The second half of the progamme was devoted to the rendition of the cantata "Ruth," by the school. In this connection special mention is due Mrs. Thomas McDonald, Miss Cornelia Miller, Miss Mary Collier and Charles L. Lewis, who took the solo parts. Their work was of a high order, especially the trios and duos by the sopranos and alto.

The ushers were George Babcock, Charles Titsworth, Albert Boers, Arthur Conant, Lucius Koons, Harold Brown, Alden Moore, Edwin Daniel, Cyril Brown and Ralph Eckert.

HOT AND DRY.

Statistics of the Month of May—The Dryest Ever Recorded in Plainfield.

The month just passed was the dryest May ever recorded in Plainfield, the rainfall being 3.74 inches below the normal. The total rainfall for the month was 0.84 inches, the greatest amount within twenty-four hours being 0.47 inches, which fell in thirty minutes on the 28th. There were four days of rainfall, fifteen clear, eleven partly cloudy and five cloudy.

A remarkable fact about the month was that hail fell on the 5th and there was ice recorded on the 2nd. Seven days were foggy and three witnessed thunder storms. It was a hot month with the temperature two degrees above the normal. Three times the temperature was above the ninety mark, and once it fell below thirty-two. The mean temperature was 63.2, the highest 98 on the 20th and the lowest 31 on the 2nd.

ELECTRICITY AND WINE.

The Current is Now Employed in the Process of Aging the Grape Juice.

Italian wine merchants have reason to congratulate themselves on the introduction of the electrical process for the aging of wines in the wine-producing provinces of Italy. The process is said to render possible extraordinary modifications in the bouquet and body of the vintage, and the suggestion has been made that it might be employed with advantage also in the correction of faults frequently apparent in California wines as well as from the richness of the soil in which the grapes have grown. But the tempering of wine is only one of the many uses to which electricity is now put in the wine-producing industry. In an establishment in Algeria, where the Arab labor is unskilled, uncertain and unsatisfactory, a generating plant has been erected for doing the whole work. The current from the dynamo is utilized for lighting purposes and for the operation of seven electric motors ranging from two to ten effective horsepower. One motor drives a crushing mill, which lifts boxes of grapes from the ground floor to the beating room, three motors operate the beaters and presses, and the remaining three are coupled direct to centrifugal pumps, which keep the must moving in the tuns.

NOT UP ON CLASSICS.

A Telegraph Message That Was Terribly Translated by the Operator.

A well-known literary woman went over to Michigan to prepare her summer cottage for occupancy during the summer. Before going she made arrangements with her husband to have a lot of household goods packed and forwarded by steamer, relates the Chicago Tribune.

For some reason the shipment was delayed, and she wrote inquiring the cause of the delay.

"Please wire me when the goods have been shipped," she said in conclusion.

The husband went hard to work and personally saw the books, hangings, and other property packed for the trip. Then he went down to the dock and saw them safely on board the boat.

Coming back from the river he stopped at a telegraph office and sent the message as requested.

"Lares and Penates on board boat," he said. "Will arrive to-morrow morning."

And this was the way the telegram read when the boy brought it to the waiting woman in the little Michigan town:

"Lard and peanuts on board boat. Will arrive to-morrow morning."

CAT'S LONG JOURNEY.

Covered Four Miles Eight Times to Get Her Kittens Back to Her Old Quarters.

"And the cat came back. I believe that is the name of a song popular some time ago, but I have evidence of the fact that the cat was here, as I tried saying," said C. T. Chichester, of Syracuse, N. Y., to a Washington Star man. "A friend of mine in Syracuse conducts a brewery, and a grocer friend presented him with a cat and a box of kittens that had very recently been born. The old cat and little ones were carried to the brewery and securely locked in. The next morning the cat and kittens were on the front porch of the grocery store waiting to be let in. How do you account for that? The grocery was four miles from the brewery, and the kittens were too weak to walk even a few yards. If the cat carried them back in her teeth she must have done so one at a time, making eight miles for each kitten and 32 miles for the entire litter, or else she relayed them, carrying one a little distance, then going back after the next, and so on, until the last one had been deposited in her first stopping place, and so on in short distances until she reached the store. You can figure out the distance she travelled in this way."

BEAVER DAM IN NEW JERSEY.

Curious Conflict Between Wild Animal Life and Agriculture Near a Great City.

Mr. Justus Von Lengerke recorded in our columns two years ago the discovery of a colony of beavers in the wilds of New Jersey, a region from which the animal was supposed to have been exterminated long ago, says Forest and Stream. The precise location of the colony Mr. Von Lengerke judiciously withheld, for he was apprehensive that the beaver would prove a temptation to the trappers. But now the animals have revealed their whereabouts and forced themselves into public notice by reason of their destructive nature and the activity and enterprise which it has prompetd. They have built dams and overflowed the adjacent farm lands, and landowners have at last the unwelcome task of destroying their work, and are now seeking some measure of relief. At Mr. Von Lengerke's suggestion, the New Jersey legislature passed a bill for the protection of beaver; and the aggrieved farmers are thereby restrained. Together, this is a very curious conflict between wild life and agriculture within two hours of New York city.

Importance of Puget Sound.

There are few more striking facts than the growing importance of Puget sound customs districts. In the year that has just closed all the customs districts of the United States showed a decline of exports and grain products except the Pacific coast ports, the shipments from Puget sound ports increasing 41 per cent.

DUNELLEN METHODISTS BURN THE MORTGAGE

Destroy Satisfied Obligation in Presence of a Large Congregation.

DR. HALLERON THERE

SING "PRAISE GOD FROM WHOM ALL BLESSINGS FLOW."

Many Clergymen Take Part in Service—Celebration to Mark Wiping Out of Debt of $3,000—Pastor's Wife Lights Match.

Dunellen, June 5—A service of unusual interest to the members was held at the Methodist Episcopal Church, last Thursday, when the mortgage on the church property was burned to the great delight of the congregation. Prior to a year ago there was a mortgage of $3,000 on the church property and about eleven months ago Mrs. Alice Newton, of this place, left a legacy of $500 to the church with the understanding that within a year the balance, $2,500 should be raised. The year was up on May 1 and after much earnest effort the necessary amount was raised and last evening was the time set for the burning of the mortgage.

Rev. Dr. Halleron, presiding elder, was in charge, and there were a number other clergymen present who took part in the service. Dr. Halleron was the first speaker and he was followed by Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryan, Rev. E. S. Jamison, the latter a former pastor; Rev. John McMurray, who spoke for the neighboring churches; Rev. N. J. Sproul, representing the Presbyterian Church; Rev. L. E. Livermore, of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, and Rev. Frank Fletcher, of the New Market Baptist Church. All spoke congratulatory words.

After these remarks, Rev. S. K. Doolittle, pastor of the church, took charge and called to the altar the Board of Trustees, representatives of the Ladies' Aid Society and Rev. E. S. Jamison and Dr. Halleron. The mortgage was placed on a silver salver. A candle was then lighted and Mrs. Doolittle was the first one to touch the paper with the flame. The candle and salver were then passed among the officials, until each one had a part in the destruction of the mortgage. As the paper passed away in smoke and ashes, the entire congregation arose and sang "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

Originally the mortgage, which was dated in 1876, was $5,000. Later it was reduced to $3,000 and last evening to ashes. Although the church has a small membership, the success in liquidating to debt on the property was the cause for great rejoicing last Thursday.

A CONTRACT DISPUTE.

Jury Returns Verdict for Plaintiff After Deliberating Two Hours —Thomsen vs. Kane.

An important contract case in which Peter C. Thomsen was plaintiff and Thomas Kane and Mary Kane were defendants was given a jury trial in Justice Hand's court yesterday. After two hours' deliberation, the jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff.

The plaintiff sued for the recovery of money which he claimed was due him for building operations on the house of the defendants. The defendants filed an offset, stating that they had bought up a claim upon Thomsen owned by Irvin & Company and had offered to pay the balance. The offer was refused, the plaintiff accepted a check from the defendants, who urged that by so doing he barred himself from the right of recovery. Eleven witnesses appeared, six for the plaintiff. The jury, through John Manley, foreman, announced a verdict for the plaintiff. William A. Coddington represented the defendant and Louis A. Clement, the plaintiff.

After the couple had been made one, congratulations and best wishes were extended and a social time followed, during which an elaborate supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left their friends later in the evening for a wedding tour through the New England States. Upon their return they will go to housekeeping in this city.

The bride received a complete set of dinner dishes from the clerks at Woodhull & Martin's store and a handsome vase from the firm. The gift of the bride to the bridesmaid was an emerald ring and to the flower girl a gold bracelet.

The bride was handsomely remembered with pretty wedding gifts by relatives and friends, including her friends at Woodhull & Martin's store, where she was engaged for some time as a saleswoman. Mrs. Wilson's father is Past Grand Master Workman of the Ancient Order United Workman and has been a Justice of the Peace for many years. The groom like the bride has a host of friends. He is now in the employ of the New Jersey Central.

The couple was given a royal sendoff when they left town. The coach carrying them to the railroad station was appropriately decorated, while the occupants did not escape a shower of rice.

There were guests present at the wedding from Brooklyn, Newark, Jersey City, Cold Spring, N. Y., Jamaica and Lyndhurst, L. I., and this city.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning June 16—Command by Rev. S. R. Hole.

Topic.—Gold or God.—Luke xvii, 13-28.

In the sermon on the mount Jesus said, "No man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one and love the other or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." In these words the Master clearly lays down the principle that it is absolutely impossible for any one to have two supreme aims in life. This principle is one the force of which is easily recognized. First place in the heart and life cannot be given to two objects. Only one thing can be supreme, and all else will revolve around it. This principle applies to God and money. It is absolutely impossible to give the supreme place to both God and money. Many would like to do it, and many have tried to do it, but it cannot be done. Of this fact we have an illustration in the rich young ruler who came to Christ. "God and gold" had been the desire of his life, but Christ soon convinced him that it must be God or gold. Both cannot have the supreme place, and all must therefore choose between them.

Since it cannot be God and gold, but must be God or gold, there should be no question as to which should be given the first place and there should be no doubt. Its possession is not to be slightly esteemed. Honestly obtained and properly used, it is and can be a great blessing, but to make money supreme and everything else secondary, to make it the master and everything else the servant, is a false and disastrous basis of life. God should always be given the first place and everything else in life made secondary to Him. Yet, alas, how many turn from God and worship the golden calf, as the Israelites did in the wilderness! And how many money is everything, although they may not realize it! It was so with the rich young ruler. Little did he imagine perhaps what a hold his riches had upon him until Christ put him to the test. Gold was

BOROUGH WANTS USE OF DISPOSAL PLANT

North Plainfield Council Appoints Committee to Confer on Subject.

NO SEPARATE SYSTEM

THE CITIZENS' SEWAGE COMMISSION MAKES ITS REPORT.

Routine Work of Borough Fathers —Report of Collector—Appropriation to Fire Department for Independence Day Work.

The Borough Citizens' Sewage Commission in its final report submitted to the North Plainfield Council last Friday recommended that an arrangement be made with this city to use the local sewer beds. It suggested that a committee be appointed by the mayor to confer with a committee of the Plainfield Common Council for the purpose of ascertaining what arrangements can be made with this end in view.

The commission believes that some sort of a sewer is necessary in certain portions of the borough. It recommends that piping be laid and the grade be changed where necessary. It was stated in the report that the arrangement suggested would be much more satisfactory than installing a separate disposal plant or of running a pipe to tidewater. The report closed by saying that the piping laid for connection with the Plainfield beds could be used at some future date should Plainfield, Dunellen and North Plainfield decide to run a sewer to tidewater.

Under the request of the commission, which is composed of Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Assessor Elston M. French, Captain William G. Smith and David T. Kenny, Mayor Smalley discharged it and appointed the present street committee, composed of James F. Arnold, chairman; Robert Clark and Morris VanArsdale, a committee to confer with a committee of the City Council as recommended. Their report will probably be made at the next meeting of the Council. A unanimous vote of thanks was extended the Sewage Commission.

All the members of the Council were present excepting M. C. Van Arsdale. A petition was received from George Nelson, C. Frank French and others asking that certain parts of Somerset place be laid with flagstone sidewalks. The Board of Health, in a recommendation to the Council, requested that a storm sewer be laid in the western part of the town running from Sycamore and Mercer avenues to Green brook. The matter has been attended to by the committee on sewers.

William Mowrey was appointed a special marshal by the Mayor. The street committee reported that $10 has been moved from property owners on Walnut street as a nucleus to a fund with which to start macadamizing that thoroughfare. On motion of Councilman Clark, of the fire, water and lamps committee, $75 was appropriated for extra services of the fire department on July 4. On motion of Councilman Clark, it was decided to lay storm sewers on Jackson avenue from Watchung avenue to Somerset street and on Mercer avenue to Green brook. The committee composed of Councilmen Clark, Lee and VanArsdale, which was appointed by Mayor Smalley to confer with a committee from the City Board of Trade to discuss consolidation, did not make a report. On motion of Councilman Clark, W. B. Bennett, who has served in the North Plainfield fire department for a term of seven years, was placed on the list of exempt firemen.

Collector George W. Brown's report showed that the receipts for the past month amounted to $15,994.99 and the disbursements were $1,755.26, making a balance on hand of $12,859.63.

James F. Arnold's report, as chairman of the street committee, stated that the expenditures amounted to $901.75 added to which $908.70 for stone for macadamizing Belmont avenue. Claims amounting to about $3,120 were ordered paid. Councilman Lee, as chairman of the police committee, reported that during the past month $7 had been collected from fines and that eleven arrests had been made.

An ordinance was introduced and passed on its first reading enlarging the district over which the borough will have jurisdiction over property owners who do not lay flag stone sidewalks in front of their houses. The new ordinance embraces Brook avenue from Franklin avenue to Farragut avenue; Norwood avenue from Brook avenue to Monmouth avenue; Manning avenue from Franklin avenue to Belmont avenue; and on Belmont avenue from Brook avenue to Mountain avenue. The ordinance will be amended to the ordinance governing the construction and relaying of sidewalks on certain streets and public places in the borough, and will take effect on July 15.

A DELIGHTFUL ENTERTAINMENT

THE CONGREGATIONAL ENDEAVORERS HOLD ENJOYABLE AFFAIR.

Music and Games—One Prize Was Awarded—Refreshments Were Served.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational Church enjoyed a social last Friday at the home of Miss Jenkins in West Seventh street. The affair was given under the auspices of the social committee, of which Miss Woodcock is chairman, and the missionary committee, of which Miss Emily Winant is chairman. Sometime ago small silk bags were distributed among the members for the reception of the two cents a week dues. These were collected last evening and $14 was realized for missionary purposes.

During the evening there was an informal musical programme in which Miss Gertrude Yale, of Tarrytown-on-the-Hudson, rendered two piano solos. The Endeavorers also played two interesting games, one in which funny pictures, cut into pieces, were distributed, for the purpose of having the guests arrange them in their right order. The other was called "The bean game." All received the same number of beans and a scheme was invented whereby they could be won from one another. The one having the greatest number of beans at the end of a half hour, received a prize. Phillip Suffren won the prize. Later in the evening refreshments were served.

PANAMA CANAL TREATY.

President Roosevelt's Patience Is Well High Exhausted.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Important conferences have been in progress lately between Secretary Hay and persons connected with the Panama canal enterprise, the outcome of which is a determination to terminate promptly the negotiations with Colombia one way or the other. Reports from Colombia respecting the outlook for the ratification of the treaty are conflicting.

Secretary Hay has awaited the return to Washington of President Roosevelt before taking any decided steps, but he is now in position to act. The president's patience is well nigh exhausted, and the Colombian government is to be made aware of that fact.

On June 20 the Colombian congress will convene, and its proceedings will be watched with great interest here. If it shows an earnest purpose to consider the treaty a due allowance of time will be made by our government. If there is an evident purpose to delay ratification beyond a reasonable time, then the treaty negotiations will be terminated, and the president will carry out the next instruction of congress —namely, to arrange with Nicaragua and Costa Rica for canal rights.

O'CONNOR'S ULTIMATUM.

Ameer of Figuig Must Come In and Submit.

BENI-OUNIF, Algeria, June 10.—During the day envoys from seven villages around Figuig came to make their submission to the French commander, offering to accept any terms. General O'Connor refused to receive them, saying he would only treat with the ameer or with the head men of the villages personally. As Figuig was independent and did not recognize the supremacy of the sultan of Morocco, General O'Connor would only see those whose authority was recognized by each tribe.

The general is skeptical regarding the promise of surrender coming in the name of the population. The raising of the standard of a holy war by any chief would lead to the promises being repudiated. General O'Connor has decided to wait twenty-four hours, when if the head men have not made their submission he will resume operations.

The inhabitants of Figuig are terrorized by the power of the French shells, which reduced the town to a mass of ruins, and they are particularly impressed by the fact that the French did not have a single man killed or wounded.

True Bill Against Mrs. Aldrich.

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., June 10.—Mrs. Jennie Aldrich of East Hardwick was indicted for the murder of Mrs. Mary Massey, a neighbor. She has been in the county jail under $2,000 bonds. The state alleged that Mrs. Aldrich struck the boy Aldrich's boy became involved in a quarrel over the question of fishing in a stream near the Massey home, that Mrs. Massey interfered and that Mrs. Aldrich crept up behind, threw her to the ground, beat her with her fists and then, dragging Mrs. Massey to the edge of a steep embankment, threw her to the bottom.

Death Follows Assault.

BOSTON, June 10.—Death has followed an assault upon William A. Worley, foreman of laborers in the Forest Hills cemetery, and Frank McDonald, aged thirty, who is under arrest, will have to answer to a charge of manslaughter. McDonald had been discharged by Superintendent Hargraves for not doing his work, and the man laid his discharge to Worley. When he met the foreman he struck him two blows, the last one under the chin, which knocked Worley down. He was taken to a hospital, where he died.

Cuban Money Orders.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Mr. Quesada, the Cuban minister, had a talk with Acting Postmaster General Wynne regarding the exchange of money orders between this country and Cuba. An exchange similar to that between the country and Canada, by which money orders issued at post offices in the one country are payable in the other, has been in operation since the Spanish war, and a formal treaty covering the subject has been agreed on.

GAUSS HAS ARRIVED

German Antarctic Steamer Reaches Simonstown.

EXPEDITION WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

A New Country Was Discovered and Named Emperor William II. Land. Expedition Brings No News of the Steamer Discovery.

SIMONSTOWN, Cape Colony, June 10.—The German antarctic steamer Gauss has arrived here and will remain about three weeks to refit and then will proceed homeward. The vessel shows outward signs of her experiences in the ice. The expedition has been a great success, and not a single casualty occurred among those on board throughout her stay in the antarctic regions.

After sailing from Cape Town Dec. 7, 1901, the Gauss called at Kerguelen island, where a party was landed. The vessel reached floating ice Feb. 14, 1902, and was icebound on Feb. 22 in latitude 66.30 and west longitude 90. The expedition discovered a new land, which they named Emperor William II. Land. It was covered with ice with the exception of an inactive volcano. The expedition was icebound here for almost a year, the ship being fast in pack ice. The crew went into winter quarters, and many scientific investigations were carried out during this period.

Several expeditions with dogs and sleighs left the winter quarters, but found the season too advanced, and their progress was hampered by fearful snowstorms and darkness. The Gauss made her way out of the ice with northward flowing currents, and, leaving the ice April 8 of this year, proceeded to Durban, passing Kerguelen island and calling at St. Paul and New Amsterdam islands.

The expedition enjoyed good health, and there was no sickness, accident or death among its members. Professor Drygalski speaks in the highest terms of the vessel both at sea and in the ice and as regards its equipment. There were enough provisions on board to last the expedition another two years.

The results of the expedition are briefly: The discovery of a new land in the polar circle and innumerable investigations of interest to scientists. Specimens will be sent on ahead to Berlin.

The expedition did not sight the British antarctic expedition steamer Discovery, now returning from the antarctic regions, nor the ship Morning which was sent to the Discovery's assistance.

Arrested For Insurance Frauds.

VIENNA, June 10.—Ludwig Grunfeld, a merchant, and Anton Coric, an agent, have been arrested at Triest on the charge of defrauding a New York insurance company by effecting an insurance on the lives of sick persons and then acquiring an interest in the policy for small sums. They insured seven persons for a total of $60,000. The company paid the first claim for $8,000, but discovered the conspiracy in the second case, in which a man named Arnoud, insured for $12,000. Petschek revealed the plot shortly before his death, stating that he had sold the interest in the policy to the prisoners for $400.

Marine Engineers Still Out.

NORFOLK, Va., June 10.—There is no particularly important developments in the marine engineers' walk out. Both sides still maintain that they are perfectly satisfied with the present situation. The strike and the losses appear to be about even. Occasionally a boat is sent out by a new crew, but the engineers have been successful thus far in having all imported men join their ranks or leave the city.

Cigar Makers Are Still Out.

KINGSTON, N. Y., June 10.—The American Cigar company has agreed to the demands of its 1,200 employees here for one hour at noon and a Saturday half holiday, but refuses to advance wages. All except employees paid by the piece will go strike and are trying to unionize the factory. The company claims it has voluntarily advanced wages 2½ per 100 cigars and claims it cannot afford a further advance.

Forest Fires Under Control.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., June 10.—While every fire in the Hudson river area of the Adirondacks is under control at the present time, the state authorities are taking no chance, and fire fighting forces are to be kept in the field until every spark of fire is extinguished. It is expected that the authorities will now begin a vigorous prosecution against men who are known or are suspected of causing fires.

CALISTHENICS AND SONG PLEASE PARENTS

Pupils of Randolph-Cooley School in Exhibition of Year's Work Friday.

CLOSE OF SCHOOL YEAR

STUDENTS WHO APPEARED IN COSTUME AT RECENT JAPANESE FETE.

School Beautifully Decorated—The Principal Received Tea Set —Fourth Year of School Completed—Other Exercises Held.

The closing of the school year at the Randolph - Cooley - Collegiate School was the occasion of a celebration in the form of an entertainment and reception by the pupils. In the morning the kindergarten pupils exhibited exercises, games and manual work practised during the last half-year. There were twenty-three pupils taking part under the Misses Burt and Morgan.

The school was charmingly decorated for the afternoon event given by the academic and elementary pupils. A programme of songs and calesthenic drills interested the parents and friends, the general excellence of the performance revealing the conscientious work of the instructors, Miss Julia J. Ketcham and Mrs. Charles Haseltine. These children participated in the exercises: Fanny Snow Knowlton, Helen Hood and J. C. Bartlett. Specimens of the children's work covered the walls, and pleased the parents. A silver tea set, presented to the principal, Miss Marion Randolph by the teachers was greatly admired. Congratulations were bestowed upon Miss Ena Browne, who has completed her preparatory course and will enter Wellesley College in the fall. The former principal, Mrs. Mason Partick, of Washington, was among the guests in attendance.

The school year just completed was the fourth in its history. Since its inception, the school has grown in number of pupils from 40 to 180. The school prepares girls for college, and provides a general course for those not intending to pursue their studies further. There is an elementary course for boys and girls. Miss Grace W. Cooley, the former principal, resigned last fall and was married.

The work next fall will be continued by Miss Emelyn B. Hartridge, of Savannah, with Miss Randolph and Miss Mary A. Mellick as associates.

PRAISE FOR PARSON JACKSON

THE COLORED BAPTIST JOURNAL ENDORSES HIS STAND.

It Condemns the Modern Dance As Unholy Practice—Other Pastors Should Take Same Stand.

Speaking editorially of the stand taken by Rev. E. R. Jackson, in an article against dancing published in its columns, The Baptist Trumpet says:

"This paper has the right ring. Every minister of Jesus Christ should stand ready to condemn the modern dance. Dr. Jackson speaks wisely in his description of the ills which flow from this unholy practice. If the doctrine advanced by Dr. Jackson in this article was more generally advocated by our pastors we would have less dancing by professing Christians. There is nothing in dancing as it is conducted by modern society to develope ones spiritual or moral life. Hence we agree with you Brother Jackson — dancing should be condemned by all Christians."

BOROUGH TAX RATE TO SOAR HIGHER

Board of Education Wants Amount Due on Back Taxes Yet Unpaid.

COUNCIL IN DILEMMA

CORPORATION COUNSEL REED SAYS SUM MUST BE PAID.

Board Entitled to Full Amount for Last Five Years—Written Opinion of Counsel to be Submitted at Next Meeting of the Council.

At the Borough Council meeting last Friday a communication was received from John Valiant, chairman of the finance committee of the North Plainfield Board of Education, asking that the Council pay to the School Board the amount of $2,450.31. This amount is alleged to be due on back taxes which have been running from 1898 to 1903, and which the present school law, it is claimed, says can be collected from the Borough Council, whether the borough authorities have collected the amounts appropriated at past elections or not. An argument followed the reading of the communication by Councilman Nichols, who offered a resolution that the matter be laid upon the table until a written opinion is received from Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed.

The attention of the school trustees has recently been called to the fact, through the passage of the new school law, that the body is entitled to the full amounts appropriated at elections for school purposes for the past five years and consequently last month a request was sent to the Council, for the back money. It was urged that the amount be paid by July 1. Corporation Counsel Reed gave a verbal opinion to the effect that there was no way of getting out of paying the bill as the law distinctly says that it can be collected.

In speaking of the matter at the Council meeting last evening Mayor Smalley said that coming as it did at the present time it came rather hard on the borough. He said: "While the Councilmen have been practicing economy, this places them in a bad light as the odium falls on them. Some will say 'we have an extravagant Council.'" He declared that probably it will be necessary to levy an extra assessment on the tax payers which will mean a raise in the tax rate.

The discussion lasted some time. It seemed to be the consensus of opinion that the bill must be paid. The written opinion of the [corporation counsel will be received at the next meeting, when it is probable that some definite action will be taken in the matter.

REUNION OF P.H.S. CLASS '84

SCHOOLMATES GATHER AFTER FOR YEARS.

Fourteen Members of the Class Attend An Enjoyable Affair.

The second reunion of the class of '84 of the Plainfield High School was held last evening at the home of one of the members, Miss Ida L. Spicer in West Fifth street, a strange coincidence being that there were originally fourteen members of the class, two have since died and one member could not be present. All the others happened to be in or near Plainfield at this time. Even Prof. F. J. Miller, now professor of Latin in the Chicago University, but the teacher of the class of '84, happened to be visiting in this city.

During the evening the members sang songs from the old class books. Solos were rendered by Mrs. Alice Holmes-Faxon and Miss Isabelle Clem. There was much merriment in the reading of the class constitution and the class prophecy of each member was recalled. Perhaps, one of the more pleasant features was the exchange of experiences for the class had not met before since January 31, 1884. The colors, pink and lavender, were in evidence through pink roses and heliotrope. Later in the evening refreshments were served.

The members present were Mrs. Alice Holmes-Faxon, of Fitchburg, Mass., Mrs. Madge Sutphen-Lockwood, of Newburg, N. Y.; Mrs. Edith Esty-Forster, of Plainfield; Miss Isabelle Clem, of Brooklyn; Miss Lewis Bass, Miss Florence Clem, Miss Kate Hazen, Miss Carrie Hazen, Miss Ida L. Spicer, Miss Florence Stevens and William C. Hubbard, all local members of the class, and Miss E. E. Niles, teacher in the High School; Miss Bass, Mrs. William C. Hubbard, both of Plainfield, and Prof. F. J. Miller, of Chicago.

DETAIL OF PLANS FOR PROPOSED PARK

Civil Engineer F. J. Hubbard Outlines a Scheme for a Pleasure Ground.

APPROXIMATE EXPENSE

LOCATION OF PLOT AND SUGSESTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENTS.

An Artificial Lake to Cover Twenty-Five Acres—Boulevard a Feature of Plan—Ideas for Landscape Gardening—Other Details.

"I strongly urge upon your honorable body that the project is deserving of prompt and careful consideration. Such a park is needed in the interest of all our citizens, and besides greatly contributing to their welfare, it would be the means of attracting new citizens, and would directly add to the reputation and future growth of the city, more than any other single improvement that is likely to be attempted for many years. If a joint committee, made up of an equal number of your honorable body and the citizens at large, should take the matter in hand, it would be an easy task to formulate a plan under the acts of the Legislature referred to in my last annual message whereby the city could acquire the property, either by purchase or condemnation, before the close of the present year."—Extract from address in the message to the Common Council advocating the establishment of a park.

There appears no dearth of representative citizens willing to assume positions on the park commission to be named at the July meeting of the Common Council. President Buckle has the power to name the committee of fifteen, five of which will be members of the Common Council itself. After the Mayor's message on the subject was read to the city fathers Councilman Walterstorfen's motion for the appointment of the commission disposed of the matter temporarily. The exhaustive report of Civil Engineer Frank J. Hubbard has been made public.

In his report, Mr. Hubbard covers the whole subject thoroughly. He says:

"No doubt, in many ways, the ideal location of a park is in or near the center of the town. This is the thought pursued by many of our newer cities in laying out their original plats, but for a city of the size of Plainfield, we must obtain the necessary land where the conditions will permit and then make it accessible in every way possible. This condition we have carried out on the plan submitted.

"Properly speaking the park begins on Arlington avenue, at Cedar brook and runs almost due south to a short distance beyond the city line. To make it more accessible, and bring it into the main thoroughfare, a boulevard 113 feet in width, which is obtained by widening Arlington avenue, is continued out to Park avenue, and this, with the other various street connections shown makes the park accessible for driving or walking from every section of the city, while those who may wish to go by trolley can gain access thereto at three different points; either at Arlington avenue and Cedar brook, at Randolph road, or at Park avenue and South End avenue; at which last place would be the most southerly entrance from Park avenue, with the same wide boulevard and a space on either side for beautifying the approach.

"In order to save expense it is proposed to leave a tier of lots fronting on Union street, and also on Park avenue, at the southerly end of the park; and include within the confines of the park all of that land lying along Cedar brook which has generally been considered of little value on account of its swampy nature. We have endeavored, however, to take in enough of the bluff surrounding the low land to protect the park in every way and give an opportunity for walks and drives which will overlook the property.

"As to the nature of this land, there is a prevalent idea that it is an impassable swamp fit only for snakes and mosquitoes and, in its present condition, the popular idea is not far astray, but to one who has not been through it, the swamp is a revelation. The mud and vegetable mound is seldom more than two feet in depth, and is underlaid with as beautiful a body of sand and fine gravel as may be found anywhere in this vicinity. This gives a firm, unyielding bottom and only the proper drainage is needed to completely abolish the swamp.

"The soil, properly drained and mixed with the underlying sand and gravel would meet every requirement for the purpose, being rich for trees, shrubs, plants and grass, while it would be delightful under foot as there would be no tendency to either extreme of mud or sand. The water is of the purest and the whole place abounds with springs.

"Indeed the stratum of water which underlies our whole city and which is a living, moving stream, here comes very close to the surface and is undoubtedly accountable for this feature. Then too, we find here several tracts of large timber, in some places trees that have grown almost for centuries and would be of inestimable value for park purposes.

"A feature of the plan is something that Plainfield has long needed, a lake with its approach. As noted, the water level underlying the city here comes very close to the surface and I am of the opinion that we can dredge out the muck, sand and gravel, as the material so obtained to grade up the adjoining low land, build a low dam across the southerly side and have a lake of twenty-five acres, or more, in extent that will be maintained by spring water of the purest and cleanest.

"As a matter of comparison it will be interesting to note that the area of this lake will be eight or ten times that of Tier's Pond. It should be unqualifiedly superior to anything in this vicinity, the water cold and sparkling and the bottom clean white sand and gravel. An opportunity offers, for high land with clumps of trees should be left as islands.

"Carrying out your suggestion I have indicated a proposed straightening and widening of the present line of Cedar brook through the property, making the same forty feet in width, this should also be dredged in the same manner as the lake, carrying it down into the underlying stratum of water and using the material so obtained on the adjoining land.

"The drives indicated have a total length of nearly two miles, the total width is, in each case, 113 feet and they should be built of gravel which could be obtained in dredging for the lake. These graveled drives would make pleasanter riding for the pleasure travel which would naturally seek the spot while the cost of construction would not be as great as that of a macadamized road. Other roads could also be constructed as the development of the park suggested and many beautiful nooks and corners developed. Bridal paths and walks would also suggest themselves, though not shewn on the plan, as a complete topographical survey would better determine their location.

"A subject that has excited a good deal of attention in Plainfield in the last few years is the possibility of having a speedway. Should it be found advisable and desirable the city could here encourage the lover of fine horses by permitting the use of the straight portion of the boulevard for fast driving and as it runs into Lake avenue to the south this could be extended to any desired length and I have no doubt but that arrangements could be made with owners in that locality to dedicate the necessary lands for a speedway that would appeal to every horseman in the vicinity.

"Bridges across the stream would not be expensive and should be artistic structure in masonry or concrete, arches lending themselves most readily to the general design. That part of the ground lying north of Randolph road is suggested as a garden which should be laid out with walks and beds of flowers and shrubs. The section south of Randolph road might be left in its wilder state.

"As stated, the park covers an area of about 118 acres, of this acreage it gives me pleasure to hand you an option of gift to the city of about twenty-five acres on condition that the city shall proceed to acquire the balance of the land and improve the same along the general lines herein mentioned. While the parties so giving their lands have other lands adjacent thereto that will be greatly benefited by this improvement, still the land proposed to be given, and comprising about one quarter of the whole tract, is of considerable value and has been held at good prices; so that too much cannot be said for the generosity and public spirit of these citizens.

"Unfortunately, however, all the owners are not so situated that they can forward this plan and much of the land will have to be bought outright while some few pieces will undoubtedly have to go into the hands of commissioners and be condemned. For the purpose of forming a close estimate of the cost of the land I have personally seen or written nearly every owner within the tract and have based my figures on their price where the same was reasonable or if they were exorbitant in their demands, or unwilling to give a price, I have based my figures on the known recent selling price of property in the

FRIENDS LAUGHED AND APPLAUDED

Class Day Exercises at Stillman High School Were Unusually Bright.

HALL WAS CROWDED

FACULTY AND STUDENTS REMEMBERED BY APPROPRIATE "GRINDS."

History, Prophecy and Will Much Enjoyed By All—Music Included in the Programme—Several Unusual Features.

The members of the class of 1903, Stillman High School, delighted their friends Tuesday evening by an bright a series of Class Day exercises as the outgoing of classes from the school has witnessed for many years. All the regular features of a Class Day programme were included, and the dance which followed was equally a source of pleasure. The assembly hall of the Franklin School was the scene of the event, and it was packed to the doors.

The opening song by the class was followed by the history of the freshman year given by Norman C. Hall, and of sophomore year by Cyril Brown. Each was filled with witty references to amusing and interesting events that occurred during those years and the appreciation of the audience was evidenced by generous applause. The history was continued by Helen C. Moody who reviewed the junior year and Arthur F. Conant who told of achievements during the year just past. Both speakers were listened to with keen enjoyment, the humorous "grinds" provoking repeated outbursts of laughter. A number which, in particular, awoke admiration, was a song by the class, "The Red and Blue."

A piano duet by the Misses Davis and Long was enthusiastically received, the selection calling for no small degree of talent. The girls were equal to the task, and were rewarded for their skill by having to respond to an encore.

Neither faculty nor students were forgotten in the assignment of compliments appearing in the proverbs, of which Ella L. M. Taylor was the author, and class prophecy, in which Harold C. Brown foretold the destinies of his classmates. The school song, to the tune of "In the Good Old Summer Time," was sung for the last time by the class together. "In the Good Old Plainfield High" was the title.

The various legacies desirable and otherwise left by 1903 to the succeeding classes were described in the class will by Ralph S. Lane. An original feature introduced consisted of a mandolin solo by William Van Eps, '04, a violin solo by Miss Dorothy Waldo, of the seniors, and a piano solo by Miss Edna D. Long, also '03. The selections were different each from the other and, performed simultaneously, they produced an indescribe effect. Responding to a general request, Mr. Van Eps repeated his solo without accompaniment.

The reading of the class poem, cleverly written by Miss Dorothy Waldo, and the singing of the class song by the class brought the exercises to a close.

Norman Hill, the president of the class, introduced the speakers and had charge of the arrangements for the dance which followed. C. M. Sahr's orchestra provided music for dancing which continued until the "wee sma' hours."

THE OTHER HALF.

A Clergyman Delivers Address on Condition in New York's Tenement District.

A meeting in the interest of the Westfield Fresh Air Camp was held in the chapel of the First Presbyterian Church, last Tuesday, under the direction of Rev. C. L. Fox, pastor of the Eleventh Street M. E. Church, New York.

Mr. Fox pictured the wretched condition in certain tenement districts in New York with a stereopticon and showed the improvement made in the poorer class of children, as well as their mothers after a visit to the fresh air camp at Westfield. After the illustrated lecture, Mrs. Gertrude H. Diehl, matron of the Westfield camp, gave an interesting talk of the work at the camp.

HORSE THIEVES HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY

The Plainfielders Accused of Crime Given a Hearing Before Justice Smalley.

CHIEF KIELY'S WORK

RUN DOWN AT IRVINGTON AND WERE BROUGHT TO THIS CITY.

Chief Marshal Campbell Makes Arrests Near Newark—Men Accused Are Olaf Alexander, John Teeple and John Pope.

Olaf Alexander, John Teeple and John Pope, all of this city, arrested near Irvington Tuesday on a charge of horse stealing have been remanded to the Somerset County jail. They were brought here yesterday and taken before Justice D. D. Smalley.

From the farm of George Hoffman, of Sterling, it is alleged the men stole two horses and two rigs. According to the story they rode to Smalleytown and stole a rubber tired rig from Augustus Moore. Subsequently they sold one of the rigs to John Barry, a contractor, of Greenbrook road.

When the thieves left he took the wagon to William Sharkey's blacksmith shop on Lincoln place for repairs. Hoffman came to this city in search of his rigs and found the wagon at the shop. Chief Marshal Campbell of the borough and Chief of Police Kiely of this city were notified. Chief Kiely telephoned to different cities and finally located the men near Newark. Chief Marshal Campbell arrested them last evening and they were brought to this city and locked up.

ALSO WITHDRAWS.

Hope Y. M. A. Out of City League—Plan to Consider New Organization—To Confer With St. Mary's.

Hope Y. M. A. has followed the lead of Safe Works and withdrawn from the City League. The action was taken at an adjourned meeting last Tuesday. A committee composed of William R. Runyon, John Cose and Brit Martin was directed to confer with a like committee from St. Mary's to decide whether the teams should continue on an independent basis or endeavor to establish a new four team league of semi-professional players.

It was suggested tentatively that the league be composed of the two teams mentioned, together with Dunellen and Garwood A. C's. Definite action was left to the committee with full powers.

Manager Cose was instructed to arrange a game for Saturday without reference to the present schedule. The meeting was adjourned to Tuesday of next week.

Herbert L. Dyer, of Cincinnati, formerly of this city, is visiting G. Archibald Brakeley, of Dunellen.

DEEP MYSTERY OVER-HANGS THIS PLACE

Secrecy Maintained In Regard to Purpose of the Factory in the West End.

NONE CAN SEE INTERIOR

A. C. BRUNSON, OF FIRST NATIONAL BANK, THE OWNER.

Entrance Carefully Guarded—Machinery Works An Hour Each Day —Those In the Secret Will Not Talk on Subject.

In the West End, there is a factory over which hangs an air of profound mystery. It goes by the name of "the prison," but what is hidden behind its walls, and what its purpose is, only the owners know and they are silent. For one hour each day, the dull, whirring sound of wheels can be heard, and now and then a man appears for a moment at the one entrance, guarding with watchful eye against the approach of a possible intruder. These are the only signs of life about the building, and further than there is little concerning it that the most searching inquiry can ferret out.

The factory is located on Rock avenue; is forty by twenty feet, built entirely of sheet iron. At each end is a heavily screened window, twenty feet above the ground, in size twelve feet by twelve. It has no chimney; only an exhaust pipe. It was built by A. J. Brunson, vice president of the First National Bank.

A Daily Press reporter visited the place yesterday afternoon. Promptly at 4 o'clock he heard the rolling noise of heavy machinery set in motion, and for an hour this continued without a break, ceasing as abruptly as it began, on the dot of 5. This, the reporter learned by inquiry, happens every day at the same time.

Once during the hour, the only man who is ever seen about the place opened the inner door in such a way as to foil the reporter who was doing a little detective work on the side, carefully locked it and repeated the operation with the outer door. He then stepped unconcernedly out into the open, turning a deaf ear to the many questions which were hurled at him. His only reply to all queries was: "I cannot answer your question; you will have to see Mr. Brunson." He refused even to give his name. The man it is learned works, eats and sleeps on the place never at any time going more than a few yards from the entrance.

The only machinery which has been seen to enter the building is a gas engine of six horse power installed when the plant was erected about a month ago. No raw material enters the place, so far as can be ascertained, and no finished product has ever come out.

Neighbors profess to know nothing about the place. Mortimer Slater, an employe of the Price, Bond & Woolston Paint Company, of Rock avenue, told a reporter that no floor has ever been laid in the building and no floor lumber has been taken in the plant since it started to operate. He said that the man who was employed to paint the window sashes was prevented from seeing within by heavy curtains hung on the inside.

Various explanations have been advanced to unravel the mystery. The rumor that matches are being manufactured has proved upon investigation to be nothing more than fancy. Other theories are to the effect that a great patent is being developed or that the building covers a shaft by means of which ore is being mined. Still another theorist, remembering that Mr. Brunson was formerly interested in the manufacture of carpets, thinks that his new factory was also built for that purpose, but this rumor has no foundation in fact. From the truckman who installed the gas engine it was learned that no chemicals are being manufactured. This last individual said that, like all others who had seen the inside of the building, he had been sworn to secrecy.

A. J. Brunson, the owner, was interviewed at his office in the Park Avenue Hotel. He refused to give out any information further than to state that the place was a store house for machinery. Beyond that, he said, its purpose would remain a secret.

Miss Hannah Crandall, of Westerly, R. I., who has been the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Irving A. Hunting, of 235 East Second street, for the past three weeks, returned home this morning.

THIS CITY'S PROSPEROUS PAST

BOARD OF TRADE THINKS BUSINESS FLOURISHED DURING THE YEAR.

Committees on Trolley Service, the West End Baths and New Quarters Heard From.

No business of more than usual interest was transacted at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade last Tuesday. There was a general discussion concerning the growth in the several branches of business in Plainfield during the past year, the consensus of opinion being that the city is unusually prosperous. The growth in the real estate business was commented upon especially.

Charles W. Runyon, who was a committee of one to report on trolley service, announced that as a result of a conference with Phillip Maguire, the local superintendent, better service had been promised on the Arlington avenue line on Saturdays and Sundays. The number of cars running on those days will be increased to whatever extent the demand seems to warrant.

A committee consisting of E. M. Laing, J. C. Pope and H. C. Runyon was appointed to secure rooms in which the board can meet hereafter, as their present quarters will be used by the police office, pool room and dormitory. W. J. Cashin, of the committee on public baths in the West End, reported that several meetings had been held but that no definite action had been taken.

JAPANESE CANTATA.

Hope Chapel Benefitted By An Exceptionally Fine Entertainment Last Night.

The members of the Y. P. S. C. E., of Hope Chapel, gave a Japanese Cantata last evening in the lecture room of the church. The programme was the most interesting in the society's history, every number being well rendered.

The opening scene was a Japanese tableau, posed by the Misses Firstbrook, Duvier, Porter, M. Duckworth, Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Dixon. Mrs. Howard was heard in several vocal solos and Messrs. Sweeney and Firstbrook gave an original sketch entitled "A Postal Card."

Piano solos by Miss Sofield, of New Market, and a dialogue, by members of the society entitled "Mrs. Reggles and Her Family," concluded the programme. Ice cream, cake and strawberries were served later to the guests.

A large sum will be realized from entertainment, the money to be used to defray the expenses of building the chapel kitchen. The following young women composed the committee in charge: The Misses M. Duvier, Mabel Firstbrook, Marion Porter, Neuman and Mrs. A. B. Lewis.

—The chief requisite of delicious salad is pure olive oil. Pure olive oil is claimed to be sold at many local grocery stores. Neuman Brothers import the oil sold at their store direct from France. Any size from pint to gallon. Prices low.

—The millinery department at Hill & Shepp's store has been moved from the second to the first floor.

TEXAS "TURNIP KRAUT."

A Dish That Is Common Upon the Tables of the Farmers of the Lone Star State.

In many parts of Texas the question in the fall is: What can we do with our superabundance of turnips? In south Texas a discussion is going on in regard to this vegetable which may be of interest to the people who do not know what to do with turnips when they have more than they can eat, says the Galveston News. The Hallettsville Herald has this to say:

"The Herald copied an item from the La Grange Journal last week relative to 'turnip kraut,' which that paper stated was something previously unknown in this section. The editor acknowledges that he had never heard of turnip kraut before, but he has since been informed by several parties in Hallettsville that it is nothing new. There are many families in this city who make it every year, and one informant tells us that every German's farm in Lavaca county has either makes it or knows of it. Turnip kraut is different from other kraut, but is equally as palatable. The turnips are cut with either a cabbage or a potato cutter and made with salt and vinegar. It is likewise and has a substance other than plain kraut, and has a firm, white appearance. A day never passes but what one learns something new, and we have added turnip kraut to our department of knowledge."

HE WANTED TRANSPORTATION.

Stranded Americans in the Philippines Makes Strange Request of Gen. Chaffee.

Gen. Chaffee tells a story about an itinerant American he met in the Philippines, says a writer in the New York Times. He was from Texas and was known as "Volcano" Marshall. He had become "stranded" in Manila and asked the general to send him home on a transport.

"Are you in the United States service?" asked the general.

"Not by a blamed sight," was the explosive reply. "I am a free-born American citizen and no confounded satrap."

"My orders," said the general, "are to send back only those who are in the military or civil service."

Marshall thought a moment. "General, you could send me if you wanted to," he ventured, persuasively.

"See here, Mr. Marshall," replied the general, sternly, "if you were in my place, and had my orders, and I were in your place, would you give me transportation?"

"You bet I would," returned Marshall, quickly, "and be darned glad to get rid of you."

When the general is asked whether the man got transportation he only smiles.

LAND WIRELESS NEWSPAPER.

First Publication of the Kind in the History of Journalism, on the Pacific Coast.

The only daily newspaper in the world publishing "sure-enough" dispatches transmitted by wireless telegraph had its birth on March 25 at Avalon, Santa Catalina island. The event is important in the history of journalism, as it marks the beginning of an epoch in the dissemination of news in isolated places, says the Scientific American. The name of the infant journal is the Wireless, appropriately so called on account of the method by which it receives the news of the busy world. The unique sheet begins its career in the shape of a three-column folio, the exact size of the pages being 11 by 8 inches. In this convenient form is crowded, in addition to the local news of Avalon, an epitome of the local and general news appearing simultaneously in the Los Angeles Times, thus giving the residents of the island and visitors to its lovely shores the comprehensive synopsis of all the principal news of the world hours before the arrival of the steamer from the mainland with the Los Angeles morning paper.

A Rousing Business.

A Philadelphia man earns a living by going around and waking people up at stated hours each morning. He is said to be doing a rousing business.

TOO MUCH SWEARING.

Superstition of Quaker Instatting Officials Disgusted with the Abuse of Profanity.

Some people who took the trouble to read the oath of office administered to the newly elected senators at the opening of the extraordinary session must have been struck by the contrast between the solemn language prescribed by the statute and the reputation which some of the senators have managed to acquire in the matter of fidelity in the discharge of the duties of the office, says the New York Times. The constitution requires that each member of either house of congress shall take an oath to support the constitution, but it goes no further. This was expanded to include support and defense against "all enemies, domestic and foreign," in 1868, at the close of the war for the union, and the clause was inserted as the mental reservation or purpose of evasion. It is natural enough at the time, but we do not suppose that anyone has ever changed his conduct in consequence of taking the oath.

But this is one of many instances in which the amplification and multiplication of oaths tend rather to diminish than to enforce the sense of obligation assumed. In such swearing familiarity unquestionably does help to breed contempt. The lawyer who would make an affidavit to a statement of fact, but would not bet on its accuracy, is the traditional example of the working of this well-known rule. It is hardly practicable to go to the extreme simplicity of the Society of Friends and refrain from all swearing, but the nearer we can come to it the less we shall incur the risk of encouraging perjury.

SOUTHERN WEDDING FEAST.

Brief Description of an Ante-Bellum Festival in Virginia by a Preacher.

A Virginia preacher who had the good fortune to be born in the good old days writes to a local paper of the old-time wedding. He describes an old-fashioned wedding supper in this fashion, says the Nashville American.

"Let me tell you about it—that supper when Miss Nancy got married! The table was about 25 feet long; it stood in the hall of the 'big house,' which was about 40 by 60 feet. About the center of that table, in a large game dish, was a pig, cooked whole, with an apple in his mouth. Near each end of the table was a large turkey. Midway between the pig and the turkey were two large pound cakes, gaudily embossed with name 'Nancy' on one of them and 'Ed' on the other. Near the center and near each end of the table were stacks of butter 18 inches high, curled and frizzled in the most approved style. There were smaller cakes, fruits and confections in abundance. We did not know about boiled custard in our settlement and over on a side table were about three gallons of syllabub. They said that it would keep the cake from making us sick. Perhaps it did; at least I do not remember that any of us were sick when Miss Nancy got married."

FORGOT HIS WEDDING DAY.

Busy New Yorker Overlooks an Important Engagement and Makes a Hurried Trip.

"We hear a good deal about the busy men of New York," said one of them, according to the Sun, "but I have a friend in Wall street who has broken the record.

"I was in his apartment a few nights ago after the theater, and he was chatting with me about the deals of the day, and as he chatted he was running over a bundle of memoranda. All of a sudden he sprang up as if he was shot.

"'Great Scott!' he exclaimed, 'I'm to be married to-morrow to a woman in Chicago, and I had forgotten the date completely. Say, old man, come with me and help me to pack up. Of course, I can't make it now to save my life, even if I hired a special engine and car, for the wedding is set for to-morrow morning at ten o'clock!'

"While he began pitching his things into his trunk he wrote out a message to his sweetheart and hurried to the telegraph office. My friend left on the first train out and after his arrival in Chicago he wired back:

"It's all right. She has the measles."

Honest London Policemen.

Josiah Flynt, whose studies of the "under world" are so well known, has been devoting attention to the police system of London, England. The most striking feature, from the American point of view, that his observations reveal are: (1) That the force is composed mainly of honest and conscientious men; (2) that politics is not allowed to play any part in the management or direction of the organization; (3) that London is one of the safest cities in the world. As to police corruption in London, there is very little to report. Mr. Flynt found no corruption which could be compared with the blackmailing system for which the New York police have been so long notorious. Gambling is punished speedily.

The Tail and the Hide.

Emigrants from the continent of Europe introduced oxtail soup into England in the sixteenth century. Before their arrival the London butchers sold their bullocks' hides with the tails on. The tails were thrown away and wasted, but the refugees obtained them for next to nothing and made soup of them.

Throwing Life-Lines.

Capt. Andre, a Chicago life-saving official, has recently made an important improvement in the method of throwing life lines to wrecked or disabled ships. If the wreck happens at night a steel rocket is used which leaves a trail of light behind it and thus enables not only the life-savers to locate the vessel in distress but to observe when the line strikes the ship where the life line has been cast. The captain has devised a combination of colored lights which will burn for almost a minute in a continuous trail of light. These lights will be kept in a shed after use in the discharge of the duties of the office, says the New York Times. The constitution requires that each member of either house of congress shall take an oath to support the constitution, but it goes no further. This was expanded to include support and defense against "all enemies, domestic and foreign," in 1868, at the close of the war for the union, and the clause was inserted as the mental reservation or purpose of evasion. It is natural enough at the time, but we do not suppose that anyone has ever changed his conduct in consequence of taking the oath.

But this is one of many instances in which the amplification and multiplication of oaths tend rather to diminish than to enforce the sense of obligation assumed. In such swearing familiarity unquestionably does help to breed contempt. The lawyer who would make an affidavit to a statement of fact, but would not bet on its accuracy, is the traditional example of the working of this well-known rule. It is hardly practicable to go to the extreme simplicity of the Society of Friends and refrain from all swearing, but the nearer we can come to it the less we shall incur the risk of encouraging perjury.

Birds on the Black List.

Uncle Sam has a black list of birds and quadrupeds which it is absolutely prohibited to introduce into this country. The mongoose, the flying fox and the starling are on the list. The mongoose is a species of ferret, a native of India, where it is domesticated as a sort of animal rat trap and snake destroyer. It was introduced into Jamaica to get rid of the sugar cane rats. These exterminated, however, the mongoose went on to diet off the insect-destroying birds, with the result that the crops have been devastated by insects in some sections of the island. The animal is exceedingly crafty, nocturnal in its habits and evades traps with ease. The flying fox, known also as the fruit bat, is a voracious harvester of fruits and vegetables. The starling belongs to the crow family.—Washington Star.

Native Salt in Africa.

Toombtain salt the Bakaluia and other African natives burn banana leaves and certain grasses, and, collecting the ashes, place them in a large funnel, ingeniously made from large banana leaves; through this they percolate water, and the solution is filtered water by boiling, obtaining a fairly white salt composed of a very small amount of chloride of sodium and a very large amount of chloride of potash and other salts. Prior to the arrival of the traders and the missionaries this was the only salt they had to satisfy the natural craving of a vegetable-eating people.—N. Y. Post.

The Murderer's Card.

In colonial Virginia it was not murder to slay one's slave, but a just judge condemned such a criminal to wear a rope round his neck till death, and present himself annually at the courthouse for inspection of the sheriff. What matter that the cord was of silk and the condemned lived at ease on his broad acres? He saw himself pointed out wherever he went, and gradually he became a hermit, praying for death and constantly declaring his punishment was greater than he could bear.—Jacksonville Times.

Fishes from Volcanoes.

How to Name Dented.

Very much in the aspect of a singular equestrian statue in Belgium, yet there is no cause for alarm, since it is nothing but a tree. Some ten years ago a police officer retired from the force and went to live near Charleroi. Being an amateur horticulturist, he busied himself a good deal with trees and flowers and one day as he was trimming a hawthorn in his garden it occurred to him that it would be a novel idea to train it in such a manner that in time it would eventually assume the figure of a cavalry officer. At once he went to work, and after ten years' labor he succeeded in transforming the tree into a perfect picture of a mounted soldier. The tree is known in the neighborhood as "Gen. Hawthorn," and hardly a day passes that strangers do not come from a considerable distance in order to view this wonderful example of horticultural art.—Detroit Free Press.

"Floating Gardens" of Mexico.

Nature and man work together with uncommon accord in forming the celebrated "floating gardens" of the Lakes Chalco and Xochimilco, near the City of Mexico. An English naturalist, who recently visited them, found them a paradise, tells how they grow. Floating clumps of entangled peat, moss, rushes and grass are caught, combined and anchored by stakes, or long saplings of willows and poplars, which are driven into the lake bottom, where they soon take root. Fertile mud is then ladled up and heaped on the float until a real island is formed, which is quickly transformed into a garden where are grown flowers, melons, gourds and other kinds of produce which are daily carried to market through a canal leading into the city. There are hundreds of such gardens on the lakes.—Youths' Companion.

Took It Literally.

Once upon a time a very nervy man called on his physician and asked him for medical advice.

"Take tonic and dismiss from your mind all that tends to worry you," said the doctor.

Several months afterward the patient received a bill from the physician asking him to remit $18 and answered it thus:

"Dear doctor, I have taken a tonic and your advice. Your bill tends to worry me, and so I dismiss it from my mind."

The Main Barrier.

"I shall not marry Miss Croesus after all," announced young Jenkins sadly. "Her family seem too opposed to the match."

"Hang the family!" exclaimed a sympathetic friend. "Go in and win, Jenkins, all the same! What do you care for the family's opinion, so long as the girl is willing?"

"That's just it," explained Jenkins, still more sadly; "Miss Croesus seems to agree with them!"—Cleveland Leader.

A Real Bargain.

"In time," said the struggling artist, "that painting will be of great value. You see, I know the rules, but unfortunately I am not in a financial position to carry them out. So, if you want a real bargain, I'll let you have this little gem for $1.50."—Chicago Post.

Game of Electric Billiards.

Electric billiards is a new amusement of Parisians. It is played on a table in the center of which is a plate of some easily electrified material. The billiard balls are of compressed pitch and the cue is a metal rod with a cork tip, prepared chemically. The balls being attracted by the plate, add greatly to the difficulty of making caroms.—Electricity.

Her Mistake.

"Yes, it is a pretty good cigar," said Brown, as he held it up and looked at it critically. "Jones bought it, and if he thinks he bought my silence with it he is mistaken, as the story is too good to keep. Jones, as you know, considers he is old enough to know better. I was walking with him this afternoon, and he could talk of nothing but his 'latest.' Suddenly he exclaimed:

"'By Jove! there she is now, across the street; isn't she a peach?'

"Off came his hat with a flourish, exposing his bald pate to the cold wind, and an idiotic grin spread over his features.

"Much to my surprise, for she did not look like a girl who would indulge in a street flirtation, she waved her hand, hesitated a moment, and then started to cross the street where we were.

"'They can't resist me,' said the beaming Jones. 'Excuse me, old man, see you later. Ta, ta!'

"Hat in hand, and grinning like a monkey, Jones approached the young lady, who suddenly stopped, looked startled for a moment, and then gasped:

"'Goodness! I mistook you for my grandfather!'"—Detroit Free Press.

Obeying Instructions.

There was a new housemaid at the Goodmans. She had been very carefully instructed her on the way in which she was to behave.

"You must address me as 'madam,' for the most part," she said, "and sometimes 'ma'am;' and when speaking to the master you must say 'sir.'"

Two days later some visitors called. Mr. Gordon was in the garden, and on being told visitors had arrived he came to the kitchen to wash his hands. Unfortunately he slipped, and when Mary saw this she ran to the drawing-room and cried:

"Of if you please, madam for the most part and sometimes ma'am, the sir has fell in the sink."—N. Y. Sun.

An Unhandy Name.

The king of Greece has an aid-de-camp who rejoices in the name of Papadiamantopoulos. In the ordinary course of things the gallant colonel would accompany his Hellenic majesty on his travels abroad every summer, but his name was found to leave a train of dislocated jaws in the royal wake; moreover, it was charged as two names, and one was mutilated by telegraphists beyond all recognition, so he is now left at home and a gentleman of the name of Thom takes his place in attendance on King George on his annual visits to Aix-les-Baines and Paris.—London News.

Coffee-Drinkers and Alcohol.

A traveler has made the observation that coffee-drinking people are very seldom addicted to alcoholism. In Brazil, for instance, where coffee is grown extensively and all the inhabitants drink it many times a day, intoxication is rarely seen. The effect is not only noticeable among the natives, but the foreigner who settles in Brazil, and possessed of ever such a passion for strong drink, gradually loses his liking for alcohol as he acquires the coffee-drinking habit of the Brazilian.—Detroit Free Press.

The One He Got.

"So your pickle of a brother is a sober, married man? Do you know, I put him down as a confirmed bachelor ever since I noticed on his dreadfully with that monkey-faced, forward little minx with the squint eyes at Sloshington-on-Sea some years ago. You remember?"

"Yes; he married her, dear. She's upstairs now taking off her hat, and will be delighted to see you, I'm sure."—London Tit-Bits.

She Had to Surrender.

"I've refused George twice," she said, "but it's no use."

"No use!"

"Not a bit. He believes in predestination."

"What has that to do with it?"

"Why, he thinks I'm predestined to be his wife, and of course, if that is so, I'll simply have to give in, no matter what papa says. He can't expect me to defy Fate."—Chicago Post.

How Autos Turn Corners.

The facility with which an automobile turns a corner depends upon the fact that the motor-driven axle is in two pieces, connected with bevel wheels and a pinion. In turning, the pinion is loosened on its stud, which permits the two wheels, each of which is solid on its axle, to revolve at different speeds.—Scientific American.

EFFORTS OF DULL CHILDREN.

Illustrative Example of the Amazing Results of Attempts at Mental Exercise.

Sometimes the statements made by dull children are amusing. A friend of mine had in her physiology class a boy who had a fondness for long words, but very little understanding of the subject he was studying, says a writer in School and Home Education. In an examination he had been asked the question: "What are some of the results of breathing impure air?"

Joe wrote: "In response to question number one would say I never breeth impure air and don't remember the answer. Insted I will tell man's great powers of persition and illustrate my statemunts by diergrums. When man stands he should take the puppendicular persition [illegible]. When he leans he should take the slantendicular persition. When he lays he should take the horryzondicular persition — When he sets down the most heithiest persition is mixed slantendicular, horryzondicular and puppendicular. If we take these persitions we can generally breeth as we were percived and there is a joy on the hemmysperer around us."

The conclusions drawn by dull children are often ridiculous. Probably we have all heard the story of the little boy whose mother wanted him to go to the store to get a pound of sugar. Glancing at the clock, he replied: "Oh, I can't go, I'll be late at school." Then, seeing the disappointment on her face, he added: "Well, never mind, I'll run down and get a half pound."

SULTAN AT FOURTEEN.

Probable Fruits of the Efforts of the Ruler of Morocco to Walk Alone.

The sultan has a mingled blood. His great-grandmother was an Irish woman, wife of a Gibraltar corporal, who went from barracks to harem, writes Malcolm Williams, in Century. There are so many negro women in the succession that his father, Mulai-el-Hasan, had pronounced negroid features. The original stem is Arab, direct in the male line from Fatima, daughter of the prophet, through a chain of 36 lineal descendants, and on this has been grafted a long line of Berber marriages.

Mulai Abd-ul-Aziz's mother was a Circassian of Turkish residence and origin. He was made sultan at 14, and when his mother and the vizir who made him sultan died, he began to walk alone, that vanished thing an oriental absolute prince playing an old part that will end with him. Before he is through with the pretty game of learning to rule by ruling to learn, Morocco will have gone the way of all other Moslem realms, absorbed, controlled or protected by some European power. Either France will include it, or Europe agree on a division, or the empire be put into commission.

MANNHEIM BUTCHER SHOPS.

Some in the German City Are Made Attractive by the Use of Ornamental Tiles.

According to United States Consul Harris at Mannheim, the meat shops in that German city are most attractive places. This attractiveness is secured largely by the use of ornamental tiles for floors, walls and even ceilings and counters, says the Washington Star. The tiles on the walls are similar to those used in bathrooms in the United States. They are generally of light shades, arranged in patterns of artistic design. The floors are also laid with tiles of different colors. These tiles, however, are unglazed and are heavier and of cheaper quality than those on the walls.

In one of the most attractive of these stores, says the consul, the walls are of ivory-colored tiles, with panels of flowers and other designs. The counter, which runs along two sides of the room, is of the same ivory-colored material, ornamented in gold. It presents a rich, handsome appearance. Even the bookholders, scales and gas fixtures are tiled. The general effect of the room is suggestive, above all, of cleanliness.

Bank Notes in Sheep.

Some extraordinary but well-authenticated stories of the Bank of France are related. One day a sheep ate up a 10-franc note belonging to a butcher. The butcher went into the house of a friend, seized a gun, and shot the sheep. He had no sooner done this than the owner of the gun rushed up. "That was an expensive shot of yours for me," he said. "What do you mean?" asked the butcher. "Well," said the other, "I had 70 francs in bills hidden in the barrel of that gun!" The sheep's carcass was pretty thoroughly searched, and enough of the pieces of the notes were found so that the bank redeemed them all.

Something Left to Do.

Although a number of bureaus of the treasury department have been transferred to the new department of commerce, the secretary of the treasury is not without duties. He raises and distributes $1,000,000,000 of government revenue; he supervises the system of national banks; he is custodian of $800,000,000 of coin in the treasury vaults; he is responsible for the cash balance; he controls the mints, directs 3,000 persons in printing money and securities, and is head of the biggest auditing office in the world.

Newly Coined Word.

"Magnasinitis" is a new word coined by a French physician to describe the state of mind, similar to intoxication, produced in kleptomaniacs when they see the tempting display of seemingly unguarded articles in department stores.

THE SHIP'S STEWARD.

His Duties Are Numerous and Varied and His Pay Is the Poorest of All on Board.

A steward is nothing more or less than a combination waiter and chambermaid. His duties begin an hour before breakfast, by all rights, inasmuch as it should take him that time at least to brush up his blue or black uniform, shave, make his hands smooth and shine his shoes. He is supposed to wear a spotless and expansive bosom to his shirt, clean collar and black or white tie. I do not think I ever saw but two stewards who had shirts, all the others used a dickey for the sake of economy, writes the author of "Life on a Liner," in Leslie's Monthly.

Waiting on the passengers at table, the care of the tables, the care of the silverware and a certain amount of dishwashing and pantry work make up the steward's dining-room duties. The other half is work in the staterooms, making the beds, straightening up the rooms and doing the general work of a chambermaid as well as being a certain amount of attendance to the occupants of the rooms.

The pay is very poor, and the principal dependence of the steward is on the tips he receives. They are really the poorest paid officers that goes to sea in any way, and yet I have known men to make £40 in tips on a six weeks' voyage.

LOST FRACTION OF TIME.

British and French Scientists Trying to Straighten Out the Discrepancy.

If one grain of sand on the shore of the ocean were lost and scientists were to spend years in trying to find it they would be attempting a task resembling that to which the leading astronomers of England and France are now devoting themselves. One-sixteenth of a second is missing, says London Tit-Bits, and no one can tell where it has gone. Between the sun's time, as recorded at Greenwich and as understood at Paris, there is that brief and seemingly unimportant discrepancy. No expense is being spared to trace the missing fraction. A special building has been erected at Paris, costly instruments installed, a corps of mathematicians engaged and a process that may take years to complete has been begun. The discovery is more important than will appear to the lay mind. Longitude is calculated on the basis of Greenwich time. It determines the boundaries of many countries. A slight variation of time may change the nationality of hundreds of people. The pursuit of the missing fraction of a second is, therefore, of world-wide importance. When it is found not a grain of the sands of time will be missing.

POWERS OF THE PRESIDENT.

Are Not as Extensive as Is Generally Supposed at Home and in Europe.

The popular impression, here and in Europe, is that the president is practically a dictator. Lyman J. Gage, in Nelson, in "The Hampered Executive," in Century. This conception is largely due to the fact that the extent of his power is commonly measured by what a few of our presidents have been able to accomplish at exceptional times, especially when the nation has been at war, and when the system of checks and balances has withdrawn broken down, all restraints upon the president being removed, and when congress has abandoned its powers and duties. At such times as these the very exercise of ultra-constitutional and illegal powers by the president has but illustrated his powerlessness under the provisions of the law establishing his office, defining its functions and limiting his jurisdiction. The truth is that the framers of the constitution intended that the president's power should not be great, that congress should be the superior power; and the constitution is framed in accordance with this theory.

INTELLIGENCE OF FISHES.

Fisherman Sees Evidences of It in an Acre-Wide School of Menhaden.

"You will see birds flying in great flocks and never touching wing," said an old fisherman, describing to the New York Sun, "and it is just the same way with fishes about their fins.

"There might be a million menhaden moving along in one school, but they keep their distance so perfectly that they never touch. Let a bluefish get after the menhaden, or anything happen to frighten them, and then they will mass up together in their efforts to escape, and bruise and jam and hurt one another, just as, coming back landward, fishermen's cattle will mix up and get thrown down and get their legs broken and get trampled on when they are scared.

"But with things going smoothly around them the million menhaden will swim along close enough together to seem to the eye like one great solid blanket of fish, but really far enough apart so that every one of them has room to work its fins in. The fishes are just as intelligent about that in the water as the birds are in the air."

Onion-Flavored Eggs.

The flavor of eggs may be influenced by the food eaten by laying hens. The North Carolina experiment stations, by feeding a quantity of chopped wild onion tops and bulbs to hens, obtained eggs so pronounced in flavor that they could not be eaten and this continued while the onion ration was fed.

ABOUT DRESSMAKING.

One Architect Wears Out Her Customers; the Other Does Not.

I have had two new gowns this season. The first was of rather heavy dark gray cloth. No matter how it was made—that does not count. I went to be measured first. After that I went to have the waist lining fitted. On this occasion I told the woman of the needle exactly how to shape every part of that gown. The waist lining, although she had measured me previously, fitted no more than the hat and coat of a scarecrow in a cornfield. Consequence—I had to go and be fitted again. Back I went next day. Waist lining somewhat better; skirt cut altogether different from what I had ordered; dressmaker said she had forgotten what I told her. Had to go back another time to get sleeve fitted and to see if skirt was right. Skirt not right; had to be ripped and made over. Dressmaker on each occasion while she was putting, hauling, snipping and pinning at me entertained me with an account of her ailments. She had rheumatism in her knee, for which she had to have electric baths twice a week. She groaned every time she stooped over and groaned again when she walked. Her eyes were getting weak, too, and she was afraid age was "beginning to work on her," for she was getting so forgetful.

THE DRESSMAKER KNELT UPON THE FLOOR

The fourth time I went to her she had a new ailment, the grip. She told me all its symptoms. While she was pouring out her tale of woe I found she had made serious mistakes in the fabrics of that gown, and I had set my heart on having it just right, for I don't have a new dress every day. The dressmaker told me she was nervous and that was why she had made the mistakes. By that time I was becoming a little nervous myself. I went away and returned a fifth and a sixth time. Each time I stood for half an hour watching like a hawk till every wrinkle in the waist was smoothed out, every dip in the skirt evened. I called the woman's attention to the puckered seams in the skirt and had her press them all over again and was obliged to note whether she had done so next time I went, for I could not depend on her remembering. I am not a delicate person, but every time after a session with that costumer I was good for nothing for several hours. I must have gone ten times before the frock was finished.

I went to another costumer for the second gown, and you need no explanation why. The second one measured me, took down figures rapidly and silently and said, "Come Tuesday to be fitted."

I went. The gown was cut and shaped. The dressmaker fitted it a little closer over the body, changed the chalk marks for the pockets as I wanted—it was a bicycle suit—and knelt upon the floor with a tapeline and a piece of chalk. The exact distance from the floor upward so many inches was measured and marked with chalk upon the skirt, so as to make it the same length all around.

"It will be done Saturday," said the dressmaker.

And it was so. That was all. No anxiety, no nervous exhaustion, no loss of time through running to the costumer ten times and no bother at all. I heard nothing of that woman's ailments, not a word of her private history, for which the gods be thanked! I have troubles enough of my own to occupy all my attention.

Now note the two types of dressmakers. If a woman would know the reason why men dressmakers have such vogue here it is: Men have learned perfectly cutting, fitting and sewing in their trade of tailor. They also understand the importance of properly shrinking and pressing their goods. It is not that woman dressmakers have not strength enough for this; it is only that so many of them will not take the trouble to be exact. Bestowing undivided attention on the work one has at gives skill and confidence. Could a man dressmaker do his work so well that oftentimes he runs women out of the business if he whined over his troubles, gossiped with his customers and told them of his ailments and his quarrels with his wife?

Nay, verily!

Yet even now women dressmakers can reconquer their own kingdom. They have only to learn their business so well that they have perfect self confidence, then adopt business methods.

WHAT IS WORN.

The Vogue of Embroideries—Canvas as a Smart Material.

Embroideries still prevail, and the newest are on velvet, but in silk they now take the form of connected motifs or strings of medallions in two or three sizes. In fact, all trimmings aim at being detachable and are repeated in varying widths, so that the modiste can use the same pattern throughout the toilet.

Canvas is quite a smart material for a summer wrap, and lined with taffeta and bedecked with embroidery or incrusted with lace it is really delightful for summer wear. The biscuit and putty tints are mostly favored, but a soft pinky gray is charming if bearing as well a wee touch of black in its decoration of lace.

The new cotton goods are less effective this season, and there are many small stripes which invariably lack style when made up. There are any number of delaines with exquisite designs of the floral and pompadour order, but somehow delaine never suggests a smart gown, and it is more suitable for morning gowns, home tea gowns and the less dressy type of blouse.

The sketch shows a simple little gown of figured challie. It is trimmed with lines of fagoting.

FOR SUMMER WEAR.

The New Muslins and Batistes—Some Evening Coats.

The new muslins and semitransparent batistes are as charming as ever, and the finer ones are strewed with floral sprays and groups, which appear as if painted. The new chiffon of heavier make is like an extremely fine voile and is termed chiffon de soie and voile de soie. This has more substance than chiffon and is admirable for gauged skirts.

Evening coats are of various types, but a rich satin much powdered with lace motifs and bordered in the same fashion makes a recherche garment. These should be of course a deep pelerine cape liberally enriched with lace and some fussy ruched frills of chiffon. Handsome evening coats are of accordion plaited crepe de soie over a shaped glace lining, and these have the inevitable deep cape and stole ends of lace.

Sleeves are growing fuller and wider. The latest Vienna and Paris models show a very long shoulder and a sleeve actually gathered at the top.

The cut shows a pretty gown of mauve pastel cloth. The trimming is of wall flowers.

SMART MATERIALS.

Linens Very Popular—Voiles the Most Widely Used Dress Fabrics.

Linens of every description from the finest blond makes to the coarsest makes of crochet and guipure adorn practically every model from the boating serge or linen to the gorgeous costumes for smart festivities.

In materials the choice is wide, but there is no doubt that the best frocks in Paris are made of supple materials that lend themselves admirably to tuckings, gaugings and beautiful stitchery such as fastidious women demand.

Voiles of every make and shade have been a feature of the early spring and are still popular. For the smart street toilet Paris is still faithful to the big spots, two of her favorite mixtures being brown and gray and brown, red cream and red.

The kilted and plaited skirts are much worn in the coarser makes of voile and hopsacking. They just clear the ground at the back with that becoming tilt which is so distinctively French. In all such cases the bolero are very short and show either a wide belt of colored leather or a draped band of taffeta with a full blouse underneath.

The waist in the illustration is of china silk of two shades.

FANCY EFFECTS.

Pompadour Designs in Parasols Carriage and Evening Coats.

Pompadour designs are plainly visible in parasols. All the best have very long handles, and some of the prettiest have covers of plain pale blue silk or satin with beautifully hand painted flowers and insertion. Graduated stripes and large spots in satin on check silk ground are in favor. Sometimes these match the gown in color; sometimes they are a glaring contrast.

Carriage and evening coats and indeed dust wraps are very graceful.

FANCY WAIST AND SKIRT.

We still adhere to many characteristics of the Japanese kimono, especially where trimming is concerned. The most sumptuous carriage wraps are composed of beautiful accordion plaited chiffons, kilted gauzes and jeweled embroideries, generally showing a capuchin effect.

For hot days and less dressy occasions there are attractive little sack coats of net or lace with fichu-like drapings. The empire shape has by no means left us and is still met with in carriage wraps, tea gowns and evening frocks.

Delicately colored linens, pale blue, green or mauve, embroidered in white are charming, also a real biscuit is exceedingly dainty treated in harmony.

The waist in the cut is of fancy lace trimmed with bands of black taffeta. The skirt is of the same black taffeta.

FOR WARM DAYS.

Laces Are Popular as Ever, but the Fashionable Dressmaker Frowns.

Laces are as popular as ever, but the tints are slightly altered. Ecru is toned down and labeled straw or champagne, but the old tint is just as fashionable. The écrase shade with the slight greenish tint is still to be patronized, as it is worn in Irish crochet and in lovely embroidered robes of net. Medallions of embroidery are introduced on thin gowns and are generally inclosed in lace. Grass lawn has returned in a new guise, and there are robes much embroidered and incrusted with lace which have the smartest air. In fact, the tussore tint is much in the foreground, and the silk is to be used both for dust coats and for gowns.

Spots are very fashionable on lawns, crapes, cottons and on the lighter kinds of wool garments.

The new dust coats in tussore silk, alpaca and lawn are trimmed with flat embroidered galloon and a good deal of lace, but very handsome effects are obtained with spreading collars of the deep Richelieu shape and either broad insertion of lace or diamond shaped motifs in combination with tucks.

A handsome gown of champagne colored crepe de chine is inserted with stripes of lace to match and appliqued with a bold vandyke design in black chantilly lace. The full bodice has a pretty pelerine of the crape with a pliase frill and a collar arrangement of the black lace, and there are stole ends of the crape drawn and finished with tassels.

A smart three-quarter coat is here shown. It is of tussore silk, with a needlework collar and cuffs.

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

The Accordion Plaited Skirt—The Popularity of Red.

The accordion plaited skirt appeals to many, and some of the leading houses are selling smart specimens ready made.

The economically minded will do well to consider the purchase of the ready embroidered linen and cambric blouses not to speak of the muslin robe.

The popularity of red is great, and nothing can be more serviceable. There is a new kind of hopsack linen which is prettier than the stiff fabric of yore, inasmuch as it does not crease, but instead falls into charming folds. Most of the linens boast of the little loose bolero or sack coat with the blouse bodice trimmed with tags and tassels. For all practical purposes the skirt is short, though not aggressively so, and the bottom has the wide flare which is a necessity.

Bonnets have made their appearance. The tendency is toward the 1820 shape, which may be large or small to suit the individual taste.

The illustration shows a very pretty cape effect, which may be carried out in lace or in any other fancy material.

FASHION HINTS.

Voiles and Eolienne in New Shades. Ecru Tints Smart.

In voiles and eolienne the colors are much the same as last year, but the new mignonette tint is less like reseda than of yore and shows more of a bluish shade.

The two leading blues are delft and pastel blue, the latter resembling the former veiled with gauze. There are fewer pinks, and the new pink is too much on the blue tone and lacks the warmth of last season's tone.

All the ecru putty and biscuit tints are extremely modish, and touches of color in the chou and belt act as a charm on such neutral shades.

The new skirts are excessively wide, and the circular gaugings are accepted with avidity, but these are woeful failures when touched by the prentice hand, and the new housemaid skirts gathered at the hips are becoming to but few figures. Neither fashion is likely to be very popular, and gaugings must necessarily be restricted to few textures.

Black point d'esprit dresses are decorated with ruchings and made on a glace taffeta lining which only shows here and there through the fullness.

Ecru veiling makes a charming tailor made when trimmed with lace dyed to match.

Lace is as much worn as ever for a trimming, and all over lace is even more used this summer than before.

Whole dresses made of lace are the smartest thing a woman can have, and nothing is prettier than a three-quarter wrap made of heavy lace in black, ecru or gray.

The shirt waist in the picture is of linen.

FASHION NOTES.

Hats Versus Bonnets—Some Dolly Varden Shapes.

There is an attempt abroad to revive the bonnet, but it has not yet proved popular. The reason is not hard to find. The average woman dislikes intensely to have her age added to by the slightest degree. For the white haired matron of mature years, however, nothing is more becoming than a broad bonnet with wide black strings made of velvet or lace.

From the bonnet has sprung a glorious picture hat something after the order of the old Dolly Varden shape, with a lace brim threaded through with ribbon tied loosely under the chin or perhaps hardly tied at all. This is one of the prettiest hats of the season, especially in summer straw with lace tulle or wide satin strings and a single flower of great beauty.

There is one golden rule in choosing a hat. Have it as simple as possible, but be sure that the outlines are good. One of the most perfect hats of the season is of Rounsey shape in a fine black chip. On one side is a very smart black bow, and from this two ostrich plumes take a graceful sweep to the left side.

The cut shows a smart stole of black chiffon and white lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

NEW EFFECTS.

How to Widen Revers—Medallion Trimmings and Fringe.

Revers, collars and stole pieces of coats and wraps may be widened admirably by ruched chiffon frills and a border of contrasting lace, black on white or ecru on white and cream or ecru on black. The contrasting lace is placed at the edge, and the frills fall from this.

The plain sailor hat is being revived, and nothing can be smarter, provided always that it is becoming. For those who wish a plain hat and cannot wear the stiff brim, the French sailor, with its jauntily rolled brim, is suitable and smart.

Some of the two and a half inch or three inch black insertions can be put into admirable medallions with only trifling waste. Another plan is to trim them with strappings of the silk piped with velvet or outlined with baby velvet and the pointed ends finished with tassels. An old fashioned fringe in jet or silk makes good tassels under a medallion of lace or jetted passementerie, and a waved trimming is also effective with tassels at the points.

Blouses or slips of plain silk or satin soon lose their freshness, but if covered with fleelle lace they acquire a new lease of life.

The cut shows a pretty bridesmaid's frock trimmed with bands of lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

DAINTY MILLINERY.

Tuscan Straws For Practical Purposes—A Great Deal of Red Used.

Tuscan straws for practical purposes still continue the rage. Some of the French sailors are bound with green and trimmed with fruit or flowers and a simple bow to form the bandeau of green velvet ribbon. These are worn tilted to one side, with a small sugar loaf crown.

A great deal of red is used, and white straw spotted with red is pretty with a red gown. White spotted with black, navy, blue with white and tan and black are favorite mixtures, but the better style of hats, such as the picture shapes, are chiefly kept to one color, all black bravely holding its own, all white, all red and various shades of green also being in demand.

There is a new pale shade of apple green which is wonderfully becoming in millinery. A mixture of parma violet and pale green is always artistic.

Some of the French hats in rough straws are simply trimmed with wreaths of foliage.

For embroidery on linen a special cotton is sold in skeins, the same as is used for the popular white muslin cushion covers. The work, indeed, throughout strongly resembles that Swiss fancy, though it is more generally declared Irish embroidery when applied to linen. The chief motifs are carried out in a long, close stitch, which is repeated at the back with a little swiss openwork to lighten the effect. Sometimes the embroidery is arranged in stripes, alternating with lines of drawn thread work.

The hat in the picture is of yellow straw trimmed with black and yellow daisies.

AT THE TABLE

One of Many Faults

"THERE are a good many things that would make eating a more graceful performance if they were observed," remarked the critical woman.

"For instance?" queried the girl who had much to learn.

"Oh, well, for instance, keeping one's drinking glass at a decent level and not wildly straining to get the last drop. I actually saw you tilt yours on the end of your nose the other night at Mrs. Greatrex's dinner."

The girl looked uncomfortable.

"Then, you know, this matter of spaghetti," went on the critic; "it's a mistaken idea to think one mustn't cut it. Anything is better than to see a man or a woman negotiating a lengthy string of spaghetti which will persist in uncoiling its snakelike length from the fork and often plumping down on the tablecloth at the most inopportune moment. Then this business of using crust of bread to wash around on the end of a fork in order to soak up the gravy in the plate. It's the result of a habit tolerated in the nursery, and it's one of those unfortunate habits that cling to one through life."

"You know so much I wish you would go on and tell me a lot of things," gushed the girl.

"Well, when you give a dinner be sure you make a careful advance survey of the table yourself. It is always unwise to leave everything to the servants. It is also best, unless one has the services of a decorator, to arrange the flowers oneself. They are prettier all the one color, and rarely more than two shades are seen at the same time. Tall vases are completely out and the decorations are flat, to allow of an uninterrupted view and a more general conversation. Crust stands never form part of a table decoration, but elegant salt cellars may be placed on the table so that the guests may not be worried to pass salt to their neighbors. For each guest should be placed at the right hand a tablespoon for soup, a silver fish knife and two large knives. On the left will be the fish fork and three large forks. A dessert spoon and fork are not placed on the table, but in the empty plate which is put before the guest just prior to the handing of the sweets and pudding.

"Fish, pastry and made dishes, such as patties, are always eaten with a fork. A spoon for sweets is only used when there is some creamy substance or juice which cannot be eaten with a fork. Asparagus is cut with a knife and a fork, as the appearance of holding it in one's hand and nibbling on the end is decidedly ungainly and only to be resorted to in private. Guests who are teetotalers should not be asked concerning their principles or pressed to take wine. Where wine is used three wineglasses should be placed on the guest's right side—one for sherry, to be handed around after soup; one for hock or chablis, handed around with fish, and one for champagne, handed around from the first entree until time for dessert. A glass of cordial is served with the coffee. Young girls do not, as a rule, take wine, and the servant should be instructed to immediately offer water to those who refuse wine. At dessert the table is cleared of all paraphernalia of the meal save the flowers, sweets, etc. A dessert plate is then placed before each guest, with a doily on it, on which are a finger bowl and a silver knife on one side and a silver fork on the other. If lees are served an ice plate goes between the doily and the finger glass, as ice spoon also being provided. The finger glass should never be more than a quarter full, and it should be lifted by the guest and placed at her left hand side."

GETTING THE LAST DROP.

"Well," remarked the girl, with a sigh, "I think you have taught me a few things—and reminded me of a few more."

Have you made a contribution for the support of the King's Daughters' baby camp? If not, there is no better time to do so than now. Do something for charity's sake!

Ten young men who have suffered the "pangs of dispirited love" have formed a rejected lovers association, and forsworn the fair sex. Remarks about "race suicide" are now in order.

The King's Daughters have appealed for aid in furnishing their babies' camp on the mountain. They are doing a work of true benevolence and should not be handicapped because of a lack of funds or equipments

A New York baby swallowed a valuable diamond pin and her fond papa shouted to the doctor in great distress of mind: "Hurry, I can sell that pin for $100." This touching spirit of paternity is only equalled in history by that of a New York reform administration.

A man who gave indications of having indulged too freely in spirituous libations wandered into the Elizabeth police court yesterday, laid a coin on the Justice's bar and demanded a drink. Hope he didn't intend to cast any unpleasant reflections on Elizabeth police practices.

A consignment of 1,500 cigars that will retail for $4 apiece has just passed through the New York custom house. It is just possible that the millionaires who buy them will not experience any keener enjoyment from their smoke than the laborer does with his "T. D."

The one hundred and fifty girls in Bayonne who have struck because they didn't have enough work are not holding down government positions as might be supposed from their ground for complaint. If they were, their action might lead to serious questions as to their sanity.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey has done a great work in the local Christian field during the decade of his pastorship at Warren Chapel. He has earned the rest which he has wisely decided to take at this time, and may be sure that his congregation will eagerly await his return from Europe.

Once more the flag waves from the high mast at the foot of Park avenue. We wish to thank the person who raised it. Now let it be seen every day from sunrise until sunset during the summer. There will be no difficulty in obtaining funds for a new banner, when the present one is no longer fit for use.

A New York police captain has been afflicted with a peculiar disease, the muscles of his neck, it is said, being so affected that he has been unable to look either to the right or the left. He is not the only one of his profession who has suffered in this way, the misfortune usually occurring at times when there is "something doing."

Mr. Cleveland has shown his usual common sense in refusing to harness himself to work. His decision to decline the presidency of the University of Virginia, should meet with general approval. That he would be a worthy successor of Thomas Jefferson as the head of this institution there is no doubt, but is there any honor which can be properly bestowed upon a former President? He has reached the highest pinnacle and the acceptance of any other office subsequently would be a step backward. An appointment the Bench of the Supreme Court of the United States or an ambassadorship to the Court of St. James might be a fitting honor for a former President, but there is a well grounded opinion that there is no office good enough for one who has been the chief executive of the Nation. "What shall we do with our Ex-Presidents?" is a question often asked. The best thing is to let them alone.

FAIR FOR BENEFIT OF KING'S DAUGHTERS BABY CAMP ON MOUNTAIN.

Mrs. James Schoonmaker, Aged Eighty-Five, Plays Virginia Reel As She Did Years Ago.

The City Union, King's Daughters' baby camp on the mountains will receive substantial aid as the result of a most successful fair held Friday afternoon in the commodious barn of S. L. Schoonmaker, in Central avenue. The affair was planned by these young women: The Misses Phillips, Annie Fisk, Mary Gray, Runkle, Eleanor Waring, Louise Stockton Andrews, Frederica Mead, Helen Whitney and Helen Timpson.

During the afternoon there was a sale of candy, ice cream and fancy articles, pretty booths being arranged about the large floor space. There were attractive decorations of flowers and flags. In the evening there was a dance for the young folks. This was largely attended. A feature at the close was the "Virginia Reel," the music for which was played on the piano by Mrs. James Schoonmaker, who is in her eighty-fifth year.

The sum of $300 was netted from the affair and the money will be given to the City Union, King's Daughters for the object mentioned. The young folks are grateful for the generous patronage accorded by their friends.

AFTER ALARM SYSTEM COMES PATROL WAGON

Another Important Improvement to Local Police Department Service.

AT THE HEADQUARTERS

COUNCIL TAKES ACTION FOR THE BETTERMENT OF THE DEPARTMENT.

Six Steel Cells Ordered—Provided With Swinging Bunks and Concrete Flooring—Horse Purchased for Patrol Wagon.

The Police Board had a long inning at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last Monday, when several improvements planned were carried into effect and some were laid over for a time. In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Randolph, chairman of the Board, the sum of $700 was appropriated for the purpose of covering the rental for the present quarters of the police department, the second story of the same building and the use of a plot of ground back of headquarters upon which it is proposed to erect a barn in which to keep the patrol wagon and horse to be used in connection with the new police patrol system. The resolution also included a right-of-way obtained from Mrs. Florence Moon from Front street through her property to the rear, where the barn is to be located. The resolution further provides that the corporation counsel shall draft the lease to attend to the legal side of the question. The lease is to be for one year with the privilege of three more.

Another resolution offered by the chairman of the Board called for an appropriation of $300 with which to purchase a horse for the police department. It will be used for the patrol wagon. The resolution was adopted.

After securing a place to build a barn and purchasing a horse, Mr. Randolph introduced the question of providing police headquarters with six steel cells of the most approved pattern. He presented specifications as submitted by W. T. Kirk, representing a firm in Cleveland, Ohio. The cells are to be of steel and provided with steel swinging bunks and a concrete flooring is to be laid. The cost of this improvement is to be $750 for the cells and $140 for the concrete floor. There was some misunderstanding about the bid on this work and it was finally inserted in Mr. Randolph's resolution that the price quoted is to include the purchase and erection of the cells and flooring. The construction is such that the whole business can be removed at any time in case police headquarters should be changed. The resolution providing for the purchase and erection of the new cells was unanimously adopted.

Then followed the question of erecting a barn on the plot of ground back of police headquarters. Mr. Randolph offered still another resolution providing that the Police Board be given the power to erect such a structure in which to keep a patrol wagon and horse at an expense not to exceed $600. The barn to be 20x20, and one story.

This resolution brought forth much criticism on the part of other members, who thought it unwise for the city to expend such a sum of money to erect a building on leased ground and for so short a term. In response to questions, Mr. Randolph stated that J. B. Coward and J. W. Murray, the lessors, would not agree to erect a barn on the property and lease it to the city and the Police Board had learned that it would be economy for the city to erect the barn, rather than pay to have the horse and patrol wagon kept at a livery stable, where it would not be convenient for the department.

There was so much opposition to the Council making an appropriation for the erection of a barn before securing bids for the work that Mr. Randolph withdrew his resolution. The Police Board will now secure bids before asking for an appropriation.

In connection with the question of making appropriations before bids are received for work or in making purchases of any kind for the city, Mr. Tyler made some timely remarks. He expressed himself as opposed to the foolish and unwise practice of making appropriations in advance of getting bids. He was supported in his opinion by several other members.

After the meeting the Police Board was empowered to purchase a patrol wagon at a cost not to exceed $600.

In Honor of Sister.

Miss Mildred Tyrell and Miss Nellie Todd, of East Third street, entertained a few friends Saturday evening. The social was held in honor of Miss Todd's sister, Miss Mabel Todd, of Trenton. STRICT ENFORCEMENT OF TROLLEY ORDINANCE

Councilman Robert L. Lee Successfully Remonstrates Against Poor Service.

FLAT-WHEEL CARS TO GO

POLICE DEPARTMENT INSTRUCTED TO STOP VIOLATIONS.

Other Business Transacted by the City Fathers—The Library Report—The Telephone Company's Contract.

Councilman Robert L. Lee's semi-annual remonstrance against certain irregularities practised by the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company, was a feature of the Common Council meeting, last Monday, and as a result, a resolution offered by him provided for the strict enforcement of the ordinance under which the trolley company operates in this city. In accordance with the resolution the police of the city are to look after these irregularities and violations of the ordinance and stop them. The resolution was adopted with only one negative vote, that being cast by Mr. Tolles.

Mr. Lee stated by way of explanation that the company continued to ignore requests made by the Council and that cars with flat wheels are being run and still greater source of annoyance is the fact that cars are allowed to stand on West Fourth street, which is in direct violation of the ordinance. Mr. Lee stated further that when employes of the company were requested to remove these cars they replied that they would be removed when the men got good and ready to do so.

It will now be up to the police to look after violations of the trolley ordinance and if they fail to follow out the provisions of the resolution offered by Mr. Lee, further action will be taken at a later meeting.

The annual report of the Board of Directors of the Public Library and Reading Room, was presented. The treasurer's report showed a balance on June 1, 1903, of $2,489.79 and the receipts were $4,940, making a total of $7,379.79. The disbursements were $4,-85.95, leaving a balance at present of $2,439.83.

Mr. Daniel offered a resolution transferring $500 from the general fund to the fire account and $500 from the general fund to the poor account.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Tolles, the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company was given permission to construct a telephone line south across between Richmond street and Belvidere avenue, in which to place telephone wires. This was in response to a petition made to the Council by the company.

Mr. Tolles reported on the petitions from residents in Albert street and Dunellen avenue asking that those streets be macadamized and from residents in West Sixth street asking for flagging, stating that the work was included in other street improvements soon to be made in accordance with a recently-adopted ordinance.

Mr. Gleak offered a resolution calling for an appropriation of $50 with which to put the city lot in the Plainfield Avenue Cemetery in proper condition, and Mr. Tyler moved that the application for a license to serve liquors during meal time at the Hotel Netherwood be granted, all the members voting in the affirmative.

The contract between the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company and the city, whereby the company agrees to take care of the patrol police system after its installation, was received and filed. Two claims, one for $200 for the purchase of a horse for the fire department and the other for $500 for the purchase of a team for the same department, were presented and they took the usual course, being ordered paid with the other claims.

THE SITE OF THE PROPOSED PLEASURE GROUND SUGGESTED.

Committee of Fifteen to be Selected —This Committee Will Report on Feasibility of the Scheme— Composition of Committee.

Mayor O. L. Jenkins' suggestion regarding the establishment of a city park was received by the Common Council, last Monday. This matter has been considered at some length by the Mayor and it is his idea to have the city secure the land before prices of realty go too high. His plan is to lay out a park on the southwesterly side of Park avenue, Randolph road and Pemberton road, in the vicinity of the new hospital. A draft has been made by F. J. Hubbard. The plans call for an artificial lake covering twenty-five acres. In his communication, the Mayor spoke of the many natural advantages to be found at the proposed site. He suggested that the Council invite the co-operation of citizens, not office-holders. The Mayor also recommended that a joint committee be appointed by the president to confer regarding the improvement.

After the reading of the mayor's communication, Mr. vanHerwerden spoke in favor of the proposition and moved that a committee of fifteen be appointed by the president of the Council, five members of the Council and ten citizens not holding office, and that the committee report at a further meeting. This motion was adopted and President Buckle announced that he would appoint the desired committee at the next meeting.

SYNOPSIS OF THE LAW

SNIPE SHOOTING IN SPRING OF YEAR PROHIBITED.

Season for Web-Footed Fowl Now a Month Later—Must Not Collect Specimens for Museums or for Scientific Purposes.

Revision of the game laws by the Legislature this year included a number of changes which will be of interest to sportsmen in this city and vicinity. People who sell game and fishing tackle are also interested, because new restrictions are also placed upon them.

These are now unlawful acts under the law:

To pursue with intent to take or injure or to capture or kill any game fowl or animal, excepting by hunting with a gun.

To kill or capture, have in possession or expose or offer for sale any part of the plumaged, skin or body of any bird, other than a game bird, excepting English sparrows, blackbirds, crows, Cooper's hawk, gooshawk, sharp-skinned hawk, duck hawk and great horned owl.

To rob the nest or destroy the eggs of any wild bird except the English sparrow.

To kill any game bird or animal out of season at any time or place, excepting in private deer preserves.

To shoot water wild fowl from any boat or vessel propelled by any means other than oars or paddles, or from any boat or sink box not anchored or staked within 100 feet of marsh, meadow, bar or bank.

To trap, capture, kill or have in possession at any time, any beaver, under a penalty of $100 for each offense.

To trap or snare any game bird or animal or have in possession any such that has been trapped or snared in any way at any time.

For dealers to offer or expose for sale any game bird or animal excepting during the open season for same or within fifteen days after the last day of such season.

To hunt with dog or gun or to carry a gun into the fields or upon the waters on Sunday.

To hunt or kill partridge, grouse, pheasant, quail, woodcock or rabbit when there is enough snow on the ground to permit tracking game, or to have in possession any game killed or captured by tracking in the snow.

To permit any dog to run at large in any field inhabited by game birds or rabbits during the closed season, except when accompanied by and in the custody or charge of its owner, lessee or custodian.

To take any fish excepting suckers, eat-fish and carp and bait fish at any time, in any manner, excepting by angling with hand line or rod and line, without a special permit from the Board of Fish and Game Commissioners for stocking purposes.

To take or use the young of carp and tench for bait at any time or in any manner.

To catch trout, bass, pike perch, pike or pickerel between 9 o'clock at night and daylight.

To catch, sell or have in possession any black bass, Oswego bass, white bass or calico bass less than nine inches in length; pike perch less than twelve inches, trout less than six inches, or pike or pickerel less than twelve inches, excepting after having obtained a license from the commission to take smaller fish for stocking purposes.

To kill fish by placing in the water for that purpose any dynamite, giant powder or explosive substance or any drug or poisoned bait.

To allow dye stuff, coal tar, sawdust, tanbark, lime, gashouse refuse or other deleterious matter to run into any waters in quantities sufficient to destroy fish inhabiting same.

To bring into the State for sale, or to have in possession from another State, any game bird, animal or fish during the closed season for same in this State.

Things it is lawful to do under the new law are:

For farmers and fruit growers to trap rabbits in box traps at any time during the year after obtaining a permit so to do so from the president of the Fish and Game Commission, which permit can be obtained by sending to that official an affidavit, taken before a justice of the peace, that the rabbits are injuring or destroying such farmer's fruit, vegetables or other crops. It is unlawful to sell rabbits captured in this way. To kill at any time, in any way, English sparrows, blackbirds, crows, Cooper's hawk, gooshawk, sharp-skinned hawk, duck hawk and great horned owls.

To destory the eggs and nests of English sparrow.

To collect specimens at any time for any public museum or natural history society or for scientific purposes.

THEATRICAL.

There is no let down either in the quantity or quality of the shows given at Keith's popular playhouse, in this, what is ordinarily considered the "off season," theatrically, which means that there is no curtailment in expense, a thing unknown at Keith's. This fact is worthy of special notice, and so also is the fact that so-called "headliners" are not catered to, for the reason that it is the "whole show," rather than a few special acts, that people go to see.

Just to show how busy they can be at times, Messrs. Sam. S. and Lee Shubert yesterday signed to star one comedian for a term of ten years and engaged a dozen prominent players to support the companion to be headed by Miss Fay Templeton and Miss Paula Edwardes next season. The star who was signed for ten years was Jefferson De Angelis, who has headed one of the companies of E. R. Reynolds for several seasons, playing the star roles in "The Royal Rogue," and "The Emerald Isle."

Fresh from Broadway triumphs Henry W. Savage will present George Ade's merry musical play "The Sultan of Sulu," with music by Alfred G. Wathall, at the Manhattan Beach Theatre on Saturday evening, June 27. It will inaugurate the summer season at Manhattan Beach and the production and cast will be the same that made "The Sultan of Sulu" a six months success at Wallack's Theatre. In a season noted for its many musical plays "The Sultan of Sulu" won far and away the most favor and was conceded to be the hit of the year in New York. Clean, clear-cut, sparkling wit and novel situations characterize "The Sultan of Sulu." In a new atmosphere on the Atlantic's shore the merry Sultan and his followers during their two-weeks stay are sure to be greeted by big audiences. Frank Moulan will again be the Sultan Ki-Ram.

Following his last summer's phenomenal success of 100 nights on Broadway, Sig. Sinatore, the great conductor and his Italian Band, under the management of Howard Paw and Frank Gerth, went on an extended concert tour of the south, west and New England, and met with a success which is generally known and appreciated. In all of these places he broke the concert attendance records, and received the highest possible praise of the musical critics. Creatore is now taking a much needed rest of a couple of weeks in Atlantic City, after which he will give two weeks to rehearsal and open in Philadelphia for three weeks and then go to New York City for another summer season.

All the games on local diamonds were well attended Saturday afternoon, but interest chiefly centered at Crescent Oval, when the independent nine scored a brilliant victory over Madison. This is a brief account of the games.

CITY LEAGUE.

Safe Works lost for the first time this season, going down in the dust before St. Mary's, 11 to 4. St. Mary's fielding contrasted favorably with the exhibition given by their opponents. Carr was steady and reliable in the box. Braeme, for the Safe Works, had to give way in the seventh to Burns. Score:

St. Mary's—Cooney, 3b; Doyle, 1b; Taylor, lf; Moynihan, ss; Campbell, cf; Malley, c; Davidson, rf; Kennedy, 2b; Carr, p.

Inability to hit Kinney, the Hope pitcher, coupled with hard hitting and sharp fielding by Hope, proved the downfall of the Y. M. C. A. team at Hope Commons. Three of Y. M. C. A.'s best players were replaced by substitutes. The score:

Hope—Martin, ss; Hewitt, 2b; Dodge, 3b; Bolan, c; Kinney, p; Overton, rf; Shorlman, cf; Symons, 1b; Roseberry, lf.

Y. M. C. A.—Maher, c; Squires, p; Morgan, 1b; I. Dodge, 2b; O. Dodge, ss; Munro, 3b; Mundy, lf; Smith, cf; Hall, rf.

Hope.....0 3 5 3 1 2 6 1 x—21
Y. M. C. A.....0 0 0 2 0 1 0 0 0— 3

ASSOCIATION LEAGUE.

By achieving an overwhelming victory the Reform Club came up a peg in the position for the Association League pennant in the game with the Clinton Avenue team. The result of the game places the Reform Club and the Clinton Avenue team on an even basis, both nine having won four games and lost two.

The playing by the Reform Club was good while the Clinton Avenue Club worked hard but seemed to be outclassed. The Cuban Giants won the game with the Orange Field Club by two runs. This gives the colored nine three wins and three loses and leaves the Orange Field Club still at the bottom of the list.

Summaries:

Reform Club—J. Scott, lf; Taylor, ss; Dugan, 1b; D. Scott, p; McGinley, 3b; Brady, 3b; R. Scott, cf; O'Laughlin, c and Parent, rf.

ALIS' FINE VICTORY.

One of the prettiest exhibitions of baseball this season took place on Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon, between Alis and the Madison A. C., the home team being victorious. Day, a strong pitcher from New York, occupied the box for Alis and his work was of the highest order. Richardson, Alis' first baseman, played a phenomenal game. He made two brilliant left-handed catches, ordinarily good for clean hits, and distinguished himself by making a three base hit at a time when there were two men on bases. Early in the game Barnes split his hand and he went to centre, while Page, a new man, went behind the bat. His work was fine, as was also that of Worthly, another new man who played third. Hemminger put up a strong game at short, while Ralph Schoonmaker covered second base in a brilliant manner. The entire outfield did good work.

As for Madison the team played good ball, holding its opponents down in clever fashion. Henderson, the crack Cornell pitcher, and Stratton coupled the points for the team and his work was of the best. Poor support at times, was responsible for the team's defeat. At the bat Madison was unable to bunch hits and place them safely, although in general the team played fast ball.

WESTFIELD WINS.

Westfield defeated Scotch Plains Saturday at Recreation Park, Westfield, 4 to 0, in a game in which the umpire played a leading part. Scotch Plains claimed that three of Westfield's runs were gifts of the umpire, Traphagen. Minnahan, of the old Manhattan college twirler for Westfield, struck out fifteen men and allowed only two hits. Davis, for Scotch Plains, was almost equally effective. The umpire's decisions on balls and strikes were acknowledged by both sides to be unfair to both teams. Mr. Traphagen narrowly escaped mobbing by disappointed spectators after the game, the protection of the police being necessary to conduct him safely to his carriage. The summary:

Friends Make Useful Gifts to Popular Young Couple.

An affair of much interest was the "kitchen shower", given to Miss Lonsdale Clawson at her home in the Lincoln building in West Fourth street, Saturday evening. Nearly forty young friends of Miss Clawson and Asa F. Randolph, to whom she is engaged, visited her home, taking with them utensils sufficient to furnish a kitchen completely. The whole affair was a complete surprise to both Miss Clawson and Mr. Randolph and was an evidence of the high esteem in which the popular couple are held.

CAPTAIN MARTIN LEAVES FOR ENGLAND

Members of All-America Team Left New York Last Saturday on Cunarder Lucania.

CO. K SAYS "GOOD-BYE"

PRESENTED CAPTAIN WITH MAGNIFICENT FLORAL HORSESHOE.

Sketches of Capt. Martin and Co. K Following International Shoot in England, Team Will Compete in Other Contests.

Captain William B. Martin, of Co. K, who left New York City for England last Saturday at 8 o'clock on the Cunarder Lucania, was given a glorious send-off by the members of his company, about thirty of whom last evening journeyed to the steamer moored to Pier 51 to wish him Godspeed.

In behalf of the company, Sergeant A. I Littell presented the Captain and Mrs. Martin who accompanies him, with a magnificent horse-shoe of roses, five feet high, with the word "Bueno" in large floral letters. Captain Martin made a graceful response telling his men of the plans for the trip and his hopes for a successful issue in the international contests. A couple of pleasant hours were spent in the steamer's saloon in conversation before the final adieus were spoken. "Success" was adopted by the team as a watchword for the trip.

Capt. William B. Martin.

The committee in charge of the presentation consisted of A. I. Littell and Frank W. Wickoff.

Eight members of the international team made the trip, and about ten others accompany them, including Tard Breen, of Trenton. The international shoot for the Palma trophy will take place at Bisley Camp, England, July 11. The contestants will shoot at distances of 800, 900 and 1000 yards, each competitor to have fifteen shots at each target. The team making the highest aggregate at each range wins the championship. The Americans will contest in other matches in England, Scotland and Switzerland. Col. Bruce and Lieut. Alfred Jones are in charge of the party.

Captain William B. Martin has had a military career of unusual length as well as distinction. His first military experience was with the National Guard, in which he enlisted December 16, 1884. His rise was rapid, from corporal in 1886, to sergeant three years later. He was made commissary sergeant of the Third Regiment in '96.

The captain is a veteran of the Spanish-American War, serving as first lieutenant and battalion adjutant in the Third New Jersey Volunteers. He was mustered out with his regiment in February, 1899, and the following fall became first lieutenant Co. I, Second Regiment. Two years later he was chosen captain, from which position he resigned in October 1901.

In January of last year, Captain Martin was made battalion adjutant and first lieutenant in the Third Regiment, and in the summer was advanced to the office of inspector of rifle practice with the rank of captain. His present position as captain of Co. K, he has held since November 8, 1902. His last three commissions he held within the space of a single year. His early experience as private in the crack Phil Kearney Guard laid the foundation for many of his later successes as a marksman.

Captain Martin has been a member of the Third Regiment rifle team since 1899 and of the New Jersey State team since 1900, the latter team winning the Hilton trophy in '99 and 1900 and the inter-State match for the past two years. Since the reorganization of the National Guard in 1900, he has belonged to the Second Regiment team, which was twice successful in winning the Columbia trophy.

His career with the All-American or international team has included every contest since competition for the Palma trophy was re-instituted in 1903. In 1901, the team met defeat at the hands of the Canadian marksmen, but won ample revenge the next year over both the Canadian and English teams. Captain Martin was also winner of the famous Wimbledon cup shot for at Sea Girt.

In October of last year, Captain Martin won the Gerstenberg trophy against all of the best shots in the District of Columbia, the contests taking place in Washington. The shooting was done under most unfavorable conditions, a rain storm, new rifles, Government ammunition and a tricky wind making good shooting a matter of extreme difficulty, and leading all the more credit to Captain Martin's performance.

The captain is a leading Elizabeth dentist and a precentor of the Second Presbyterian Church of that city.

Company K, Second Regiment, National Guard of New Jersey, was organized on the evening of February 27, 1901, with Dr. W. K. Browning first lieutenant and J. M. Lewis second lieutenant. The company was mustered in by Gen. Quincy O'Gilmore. Four months after the company was organized, Dr. Browning was made captain of the company and held that position until last November when he resigned on account of his growing business.

When the company enjoyed its first year in camp great interest was manifested in the rifle practice. Twenty-three marksmen and two sharpshooters is the record made by the local men. In the second year at camp the number of marksmen had increased to forty-nine, with 11 sharpshooters and four experts.

The present officers of the company are as follows: Captain, William B. Martin, whose departure for the international contest in England, was celebrated by the members of the company last evening; first lieutenant, J. M. Lewis; second lieutenant, H. B. Kitchell; quartermaster sergeant, Edgar R. Pearsall; commissary sergeant, P. B. Cresger; first sergeant, C. A. Peterson; second, A. I. Littell; third, Asa F. Randolph; fourth, A. M. Siders; fifth, C. R. Pearson, Jr.; corporals, G. Harold Whitney, N. R. Hart, George A. Logan, Clarence Bolyen, Alfred Trenchard, A. R. Phillips and William E. Harnell. There are now 65 members in the company.

Company K led all the other infantries of the State at the rifle practice shoots at Sea Girt last summer. Although young in years, it has attracted attention all over the country in military circles for its fine showing at the targets.

Since the company has been organized it has been driven from pillar to post. For a long time drills were held at Washington Hall on Second street until the accommodations became inadequate, when open air drills were held for a time. Later Saengerbund Hall was used. The rooms on East Second street in the Democratic Club headquarters were used for a time until a month ago when the hall in the Schepflin building was secured. There the company has located permanently.

Ether-Drinking in Russia.

The habit of ether drinking is known to be prevalent in some parts of Russia, and of East Prussia, and all the efforts of the authorities to combat the evil have hitherto been almost fruitless. An idea of the extent to which the habit prevails may be gathered from reports given in the Russian newspapers of a recent accident which occurred at a place called Trossno. Ether is drunk by farmers on festive occasions, when it appears to be consumed in pailfuls. A farmer celebrating his son's wedding in the fullness of his hospitality got in two pails of ether. During the process of decanting the ether into bottles a violent explosion took place, by which six children were killed, and one adult dangerously, and 14 others more or less severely, injured. — British Medical Journal.

Fixing the Wedding Date.

A curious old marriage custom, called locally "the settling," still survives in County Donegal, Ireland, and in the Scottish districts of Lowtyre and Cowal. After the marriage has been publicly announced the friends of the couple meet at the house of the bride's parents to fix a suitable date for the ceremony. A bottle of whisky is opened and at each guest drinks to their happiness he names a date. When each guest has named a date an average is struck and "settling" is complete. Neither the bride nor the bridegroom ever thinks of protesting against the date so curiously chosen. It would be considered bad luck even to speak of alteration.—Chicago Chronicle.

Centre of Bacteria.

Dh. Ehrlich, a physician of Strassburg, Germany, has recently published the results of an examination, made at the University of Strassburg, of the colonies of bacteria residing on the surface of unwashed fruit, taken from the markets. He computed the number of bacteria found on half a pound of each of the fruits named as follows: Huckleberries, 400,000; damsons, 470,000; yellow plums, 700,000; pears, 800,000; gooseberries, 1,000,000,000; garden strawberries, 2,000,000; raspberries, 4,000,000; grapes, 8,000,000; currants, 11,000,000; cherries, 12,000,000. Dr. Ehrlich advises that fruit be washed by the use of running water.—Science.

Why Men See Snakes.

A French scientist accounts for the fact that snakes are seen by those suffering from delirium tremens, as follows: "The minute blood vessels in the retina of their eyes are congested. In this condition they appear black and are projected into the field of vision, where the movements resemble the squirming of serpents." But the sufferer from delirium tremens may see anything from lice to elephants, and a case is recorded in which a sufferer manufactured regiments of balloons.—Chicago Tribune.

The word "terne" as applied to tin plate signifies a sheet of iron and steel covered with an alloy two-thirds lead and one-third tin. LOVEY MARY GIVEN IN TABLEAU FORM

Ladies' Aid Society of the First Presbyterian Church Entertains Large Crowd.

OTHER ENTERTAINMENT

A STORY READ BY MISS DIETRICH A FEATURE OF AFFAIR.

Songs by Members of the Choir—Cake and Candy Sale—All Under Mrs. Haseltine's Direction.

A unique entertainment consisting of tableaux which represented the story of "Lovey Mary," was given in the chapel of the First Presbyterian Church, last Thursday, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. The chapel was filled with members of the church and congregation and the whole affair was a decided success. The story, which has been enjoyed by thousands of people, was read by Miss Dietrich, while the tableaux were given by these persons representing the principal characters in the story:

"Lovey Mary," Miss Alberta Waterbury; "Mrs. Wiggs," Miss Bessie DeForest; "Tommy," Elston Hoagland; "Mrs. Bell," Miss Jessie Prudon; "Miss Hazy," Mrs. Charlotte M. Ross; "Nurse," Mrs. Alvin E. Hoagland; "Asia," Miss Bertha Inglehart; "Europenia," Miss Marion Inglehart; "Mephisto," Harold Luckey; "Faust," Harry Messersmith; "Mrs. Redding," Mrs. LeRoy Gates.

After the tableaux a trio consisting of Clifford S. Braider, piano; E. Maxwell Honeyman and R. Wilson Derby, mandolins, rendered several popular selections.

In addition to the entertainment there was a sale of fancy candy, ice cream, strawberries and cake. Those at the cake and apron table were Mrs. W. W. Dunn, Mrs. H. A. Pope and Miss Sally Ross, while Miss Jessie Prudon and Mrs. Charlotte M. Ross were in charge of the candy table. Mrs. J. A. Haynes and Mrs. William VanWinkle comprised the committee on refreshments and the waitresses were the Misses Emma and Minnie Line, Bertha Hill, Ethel Boice, Marion Inglehart, Belle Williams, Florence DeForest, Hattie Messersmith and Beatrice Miner.

The entertainment was given under the direction of Mrs. Charles Haseltine and Mrs. Russell Bond, while Mr. Dunning and Mrs. LeRoy Gates took charge of the decorations which were very elaborate.

The proceeds of the affair will go into the treasury of the society and will be used for the kitchen fund. It is expected that the net profits will be large as the patronage was most generous.

Curious Chinese Customs.

Of all the quaint industries which furnish a livelihood for a corps of workers there is none more worthy of comment than the sacred furnace of Mon Wan, erected and supported by the religious fervor and reverential sentiment with which the Chinese regard their letters and papers. In every Chinatown, however small, a building dedicated to Confucius can be found, and to every almond-eyed celestial that building is sacred. Secured from the inscription over the door to the blue smoke that curls up and mingles with the fog, for it is the oven wherein are incinerated all the letters, newspapers and old books of the Chinese quarter. Every scrap of paper upon which a Chinese character has been written or printed, when its purpose in the business or social world has been accomplished, is burned in a perfumed flame, and the ashes are disposed of with reverential care. That they may not become contaminated with the touch of human fingers, they are, with sacred shovels, scooped into sacks and are carried from the building in haste and swift, and there they are given into the care of old Neptune, who respects equally the customs of all nations.—Leslie's Weekly.

All the Accessories.

"I was coming along New Jersey avenue the other day," said Senator Dilboil, recently, "and I saw two little boys playing horse, as I thought. One was driving a small cart and the other boy was drawing him. Trailing along behind the cart came a most disconsolate looking little girl, a sister of one of the little boys. I stopped the boys, whom I knew, and said to one of them:

"'Tommy, what are you playing?'

"'We're playing automobile,' replied Tommy.

"'Well,' I asked, 'why don't you let sister play, too?'

"'She is playing,' said Tommy. 'She's the gasoline smell.'"—N. Y. World.

In the Suburbs.

These are the days when the suburbanite delights in tantalizing the cooped-up city man, for he points out the advantages of the green fields and the delights of out-door life, and compares them with the dusty, paved streets, the absence of trees, and everything of nature and what man likes best—freedom. The New Jersey Central stands first as the commuter's road, and its towns are among the finest suburban places in the country. The General Passenger Department of the New Jersey Central, New York, has just issued an expensive booklet, known as "Within the Suburban Limits," and the book contains much of interest to those interested in suburban life. Send 4 cents in stamps for it.

Cold Comfort From Doctors.

Doctors say neuralgia is not dangerous. This is poor consolation to a sufferer who feels as if his face were pierced with hot needles and torn with a thousand pairs of pincers. A word of advice to him: stay indoors and use Perry Davis' Painkiller. The blessed freedom from pain which follows this treatment cannot be told. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'.

Injured.

JOSEPH DURYEE, conductor, Plainfield, severely bruised; injuries not serious.

MRS. FREDERICK SKILLMAN, Stebbins place, Plainfield; severely bruised.

MRS. FREDERICK LEWIS, daughter of Mrs. Skillman, also of Stebbins place, severely bruised.

Other passengers shaken up, but not seriously hurt.

Motorman James Christie, of this city was killed and several others injured in a street railway wreck on West Jersey avenue, Elizabeth, at 12 p. m., June 10. Christie's back was broken and he was instantly killed. The car, going at a high rate of speed, left the track in rounding a sharp curve, struck a telephone pole and threw Christie to one side and under the car.

It was the second accident of the kind within a short time on the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway, happening at about 12 o'clock at night. Soon after open car No. 60, of that line had left Elizabeth on its last run to Plainfield. The car was in charge of Motorman James Christie and Conductor Joseph Duryee, both of Plainfield. Christie was killed, while Duryee received several cuts and bruises. He will be able to return to work today. Other Plainfielders injured were Mrs. Frederick Skillman and her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Lewis, both of Stebbins place. Their injuries consist of cuts and bruises, but their condition is not serious. In all there were about thirty passengers on the car, but none were seriously injured. Most of them lived between Elizabeth and Westfield.

The accident occurred on West Jersey avenue at the corner of Linden avenue, Elizabeth. The cars have a short sharp decline on West Jersey avenue and at the foot of the avenue there is a short curve. It was at this point that the car jumped the track and ran at full speed into a trolley pole. The car was partially overturned and the motorman was unable to jump quick enough to avoid being killed. He was caught between the front of the car and the pole and death was almost instant. Christie's body was taken to the Elizabeth Hospital. It will be removed to Plainfield today.

When the car jumped the track there was wild confusion and the passengers were panic-stricken, several women becoming hysterical. All the nearby physicians were telephoned for and arrived within a short time, while the trolley company employes from Westfield were hastily taken to the scene of the wreck to render assistance. Shortly after 1 o'clock Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Skillman were brought to their home. The other passengers were also taken to their various homes and placed under the care of physicians.

Christie, the dead motorman, is a Scotchman by birth, having come to this country two months ago. In Scotland he ran a tramway car. Soon after coming to Plainfield he secured employment with Wm. Lindsay & Son, dairymen on Monroe avenue, and later got the job of motorman. His relatives all live in Scotland. They were notified today.

Duryee, the conductor, has been employed on the trolley road about six months. He came from Newark, where he had experience as a conductor on the lines in that city. He is married and has two children His home is in North avenue.

When an official of the company at Westfield was asked this morning as to the blame for the accident, he said that that had not yet been fixed.

CLERGYMAN FIGURES IN DIVORCE SUIT

Mrs. Watt, of North Plainfield, Defendant in Counter Proceedings.

WOMAN WILL NOT TALK

REV. DR. VAN DE WATER NAMED BY HER HUSBAND.

Mrs. Watt Began Suit First on Charges of Like Nature—Marital Troubles Up in Court Over in New York.

In a countersuit to an action for divorce brought by Mrs. Adele Watt, of No. 7 Rockview terrace, her husband, Commodore Archibald Watt, alleges that he is entitled to an absolute severance of the marriage bond. His names as correspondent Rev. Dr. George R. Van De Water, rector of St. Andrew's, New York, and one of the most prominent clergymen in the Episcopal Church in America.

Mrs. Watt in her bill alleges that her husband is cruel, neglectful, indifferent and also makes a more serious charge. A reporter for this newspaper saw Mrs. Watt at her home last week, but was unable to obtain a statement. "I have nothing to say," was the only statement she would make, and it was apparent from her persistent refusal to talk that she had been advised by her counsel to maintain silence. The defendant in the counteraction is little known here. She lives quietly and has not figured in local society so far as is known. Rev. Dr. Van De Water has visited this city on several occasions and is well known among the Episcopalians.

The separation suit and the counter action came up in Special Term, Part 1, of the Supreme Court in New York, Thursday before Judge Blanchard, on a motion to have the issues framed so that the suit could be tried before a jury instead of by a judge sitting in Special Term.

Some thirty-five questions, called issues of fact, were filed in the court to be submitted to the jury that hears the case, counsel for both sides agreeing on such a disposition.

Among the issues which will be submitted to the jury are whether or not the defendant neglected and ill-treated Mrs. Watt; admitted his improper relations, and said her name was "Mrs. Rice"; was addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors, and abused and villified the plaintiff; was guilty of improper conduct on board the American in 1906, and refused to allow the plaintiff's daughter by a previous marriage to live with her.

Dr. Van De Water is entitled to be served with the summons and complaint, so that he can defend himself. At his house, No. 7 West One Hundred and Twenty-second street, last night it was given out that he was out of town. Last August the vestry of Dr. Van De Water's church gave him a vote of confidence in a set of public resolutions when his name was mentioned in the case. Last night, when several of them were seen, they deplored the continual litigation, and declared that the use of Dr. Van De Water's name was uncalled for, and the result of vituperation. "He is innocent," said one of the vestrymen; "his relations with Mrs. Watt, who was a worker in church and guild, were simply those that would naturally exist between the rector and any active member of the church. The matter will be entirely cleared up, and this outrage in attempting to connect Dr. Van De Water in a malignant form with the proceedings, will react upon the instigators, to their dismay."

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning June 23, "Be Loyal to the King and the Kingdom"—Text, Job xiii, 15; Dan. vi, 4-10.

Those who have traveled in foreign lands and after many days of seeing strange scenes and hearing strange languages have suddenly come to the sea and seen a vessel bearing the flag of stars and stripes will never forget the thrill caused by that sight. Pulses beat more quickly and tears dim the eyes while an unutterable sentiment of devotion and affection makes the heart warmer. The sight of the flag brings into quick recognition the love of fatherland which had for the time being been crowded out of mind.

Not every day are the depth and genuineness of our patriotism put to the test. True is it also that much which passes current as patriotic is more nearly related to bigotry and prejudice. But occasions do arise when all the hidden power of our devotion is put to the proof. The test of courage and loyalty comes when the call to arms is heard; comes when the battle is on. But a severer trial comes to those who, before on and slowly wasting with starvation, are offered freedom if they will join the forces of the enemy. He who prefers death by starvation to dishonor and disloyalty is a greater hero than he who, he merely fought on the battlefield.

In maintaining fidelity to God it is less difficult to stand firm under open persecution and danger than to reject the insidious advances of proffered allegiance and worldly gain. In the general rules of the Methodist Episcopal church there is a section which is often overlooked, but which is important in the development of sturdy Christian character. It relates to the things to be avoided. It is "softness and needless self indulgence." The appetite for gratification, amusement, recreation, is strong in young life and may become imperious if not dominant. It is a good indicator, just a moment, to guide or control. The demands of spirit are ever superior to cravings of bodily powers. The claims of our King are always above every other right, the needs of His kingdom and our heavenly heritage paramount to all other duties.

It is a fatal mistake to barter integrity for any other interest. The pressure is strong and, sometimes almost irresistable to lower the standard of right and consent to do something that is not color, but customary and considered polite. The minister who preaches with a stronger desire to please the people than to declare the truth of God may receive favor among the people, higher salary and position, he may be flatters, but he has lost all loyalty to Christ and all that should be of value to one of His ministers. The young Christian who is more anxious for entrance into the fashionable society of the community than for the loving regard of Jesus may win the coveted prize, but may awake to find it all as worthless as a wedge of gold and Babylonish garment of an Achan, accursed and needing to be hid. Loyalty to a conviction once bartered or pawned can never be recovered. "Hold fast to that which is good."

Under His Rule.

Let our temper be under the rule of the love of Jesus. He cannot, alone curb it. He can make us gentle and patient. Let the vow that not an unkind word of others shall ever be heard from our lips be laid trustingly at His feet. Let the gentleness that refuses to take offense, that is always ready to forgive, to think and hope the best, mark our intercourse with all. Let our life be one of self sacrifice, always studying the welfare of others, finding our highest joy in blessing others. And let us, in studying the Word of doing good, yield ourselves as obedient learners to the guidance of the Holy Spirit. By His grace the most commonplace life can be transfigured with the brightness of a heavenly beauty, as the infinite love of the divine nature shines out through our frail humanity.—Andrew Murray.

Readiness to Die.

Readiness to die and the wish to die are not descriptive of the same state of mind. It ought to be assumed that every Christian is ready to die at whatever time and in whatever way God may appoint. The wish to die, on the other hand, is generally very far from being a healthy feeling. It usually indicates either feebleness or morbidness or must be attributed to cowardice. We are in the world not to be overcome by it, but to overcome it by carrying to it the gospel in Christ's name and illustrating the gospel in our lives, as Christ did in His life. This assertion is enough for which to live.—Examiner.

From Everlasting to Everlasting.

From whatever angle the love of Christ is regarded it is unfathomable. It is unspeakable in its length; it had no beginning; it knows no break; it has no end. The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting. It is unspeakable in its breadth; it includes and will call all; it has a message for men on every soul; it is unspeakable in its depth; it saves to the uttermost, and it is unspeakable in its height; it makes us joint heirs with Christ, kings and priests with God forever.—A. J. F. Behrends.

The History of the Redeemer's Love.

Consider the history of the Redeemer's love and a thousand enchanting words of affection will suggest themselves, all of which have had for their design the weaving of the heart into Christ and the intertwisting of the thoughts and emotions of the renewed soul with the mind of Jesus.—Spurgeon.

Letters from Women

Caused by the use of Kodol are received daily. Their troubles nearly all begin with indigestion or other stomach disorder.

If the food you eat fails to give strength to your body, it is because the juices secreted by the stomach and digestive organs are inadequate to perform the natural preparation of the food into blood. That is indigestion. The system is deprived of the amount of nourishment required to keep up the strength, and the result is that one or more of the delicate organs gradually grows weak, and then weaker, until finally it is diseased. Here a great mistake is made. Treat of treating the diseased organ. The best doctors in the land make this very mistake. Why should they? It is so easy to see that the trouble is not there.

Kodol Cures

This famous remedy puts the stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition so that rich, red blood is sent coursing through the veins and arteries of every man, woman and fiber throughout every organ of the entire body, and by Nature's law of health, full strength and perfect health is restored to such. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders.

I have taken Kodol for nearly two months after suffering for a long time, only remedy that gave relief from the terrible pains I endured. After a time I would take it but once a day, and now, while I keep a bottle handy, I seldom need it, as it has cured me.—Mrs. J. W. Cooleboss, Mile Center, N. Y.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning June 23—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—How we may learn to use our sword.—Eph. vi, 17; Heb. iv, 12, 13; II Tim. ii, 15.

Warfare is both offensive and defensive. The soldier must learn to make aggressive warfare and also how to defend and guard himself. Defensive warfare was more prevalent in the past than today. The weapons of offense were such that it was possible for men by extensive armors to protect and defend themselves. But no armor can withstand the modern weapons of warfare, and hence little attention in recent times has been paid to this important phase of ancient military life. In his description of the Christian's armor in the sixth chapter of Ephesians Paul mentions five articles of defense and but one of offense. The defensive armor is composed of the girdle of truth, the breastplate of righteousness, the sandals of security and swiftness, the shield of faith and the helmet of salvation. The only offensive weapon is the "sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." The chief business of the Christian in this life is to protect himself from the assaults of the evil one, and his only offensive weapon is the word of God, which was inspired by the Holy Ghost. Error is to be overcome by the truth and evil resisted by the use of God's revealed word.

The effectiveness of the sword of the Spirit in Christian warfare is not to be doubted or questioned. The power of the word is a proof of its effectiveness. It is the word of God, and herein lies the secret of its power. It was inspired by God's Spirit, who understood the human heart and life and knew what was necessary for their welfare and who also understood evil and knew what would overcome it. As the word of God it has great power when rightly used. It is living and powerful and heart searching. Experience has proved it a successful weapon of God's word as a Christian weapon of warfare. No better example of this fact can be recalled than that of the Master Himself. During His great temptation the sword of the Spirit was His only weapon, but it was a most effective one. To Satan's argument, "It is written," He invariably replied, "It is written again." Thus He successfully parried every blow of the adversary and came off more than conqueror at last. God's word is still effective in warding off evil and overcoming it.

We may have to use the sword of the Spirit in two ways—by study and by practice. (1) We must know the word of God. (2) We may be provided with all the weapons of warfare, yet if he does not know how to use them he is a failure as a soldier. God has given us His word, but we must study it in its depth and entirety before we can use it effectively. If we would understand it and know how to rightly divide it. This can only come from study. (2) We must use God's word. Practice gives proficiency. Every temptation should be met in the strength of God's word; every progressive movement in Christian work or life should be founded upon it. By constant practice we will become proficient as soldiers of Jesus Christ in the use of "the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God."

The Society's Monogram.

One of the many strikingly characteristic things in connection with Christian Endeavor has been its monogram. Pins bearing the letters "C. E." are worn by thousands of young people not only in this country, but throughout the world. The monogram has found a place on letter heads and envelopes of scores of unions, on untold numbers of convention badges, and it has given added force *to large quantities of advertising mat*ter sent out from a myriad of pressrooms. The Christian Endeavor monogram is known and recognized the world over.

The New Forward Movement.

New York state is leading the list in the matter of increase in the number of societies under the "New Forward Movement." The definite proposition which is the basis of work in connection with this new line of activity, as stated by Dr. Clark, is "at least a 10 per cent increase in membership during the first six months of 1908 or before the time we gather in our international convention in Denver next July."

Stands For the Bible.

The Christian Endeavor movement has always stood for loyalty to the Bible. It aims at a Biblical type of Christianity, both in character, experience and activity.—Rev. Charles A. Cook of New Jersey State Union.

ADVICE, PROPHECY AND RETROSPECT

Senior Class of Borough High School Hold Their Last Exercises Before Parting.

FRIENDS FILLED SCHOOL

MUSIC AND POEMS INCLUDED IN THE HIGHLY CREDITABLE PROGRAMME.

There Are Twenty-Two Graduates—Those Participating Acquitted Themselves to the Delight of All Their Friends.

Class history, advice to undergraduates and prophecy were the features of the class day exercises of the senior class of the North Plainfield High School last Friday. The auditorium of the Somerset street school was filled with parents of the pupils and their friends, undergraduates and members of the Board of Education.

The opening address was made by the president of the graduating class, Frederick Armstrong. He said that instead of being joyous over the fact that the irksome books and papers could be laid aside, those who are leaving school experience much that is sad.

The class history, by Raymond Martin, was exceptionally clever. It included pleasant reminiscences which delighted members of the school and visitors alike. Frederick VanEpps rendered some banjo selections, accompanied by William E. MacClymont upon the piano. The renditions were cleverly executed and greeted with applause.

Miss Clyde Slater in an interesting humorous article read the official senior advice to the junior class. Miss Irene Miller read the class poem composed by herself. It was well written and was received with much applause. The class prophecy by Edgar George, Jr., was one of the hits of the evening. Miss Sadie Winkler composed the class song which was sung in closing. The lines gave evidence of unusual skill in poetical composition.

The members of the graduating class are: Arthur Humble, Miss Maria Englehart, Miss Agnes LaBoyteaux, Miss Sadie Winkler, Edgar Adams, Miss Stella Vormeule, Miss Jeanette Bergman, Miss May Seal, Miss Clyde Slater, Miss Hope Miller, Fred Armstrong, Miss Belle Williams, Miss Hattie McLaughlin, Miss Priscilla Everson, Miss Edna Lewis, Miss Leah Hammond, Miss Matilda Coddington, Raymond Martin, Miss Florence Conroy, Miss Minnie Nischwitz, Edgar George and Miss Hazel Martin.

The exercises were held under the direction of Superintendent Homer J. Wightman.

MISSION BAND'S GOOD WORK

YOUNG WOMEN OF TRINITY REFORMED CLOSE PROSPEROUS SEASON.

After Reports Are Read a Talk is Given on Mission Work.

The monthly meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed Church, and the last for the season, was held Friday night in the lecture room of the church. Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff, the president, was in charge. The reports for the month showed that much had been accomplished. The flower committee has sent flowers to New York and literature and cards have been sent to the hospital in Arabia and yesterday the domestic committee packed a barrel with clothing, valued at $20 to be sent to New York.

The emergency committee reported that over $6 had been realized from cake sales. Mention was made of the proposed entertainment to be held October 20, and it is also proposed to hold a handkerchief bazaar in the fall. The treasurer's report showed a balance of over $17 in the treasury.

After the presentation of reports, a most interesting address was given by Mrs. Morris, of Brooklyn, who represents the Board of Domestic Missions. She spoke chiefly of the mission work among the Mountain Whites of Kentucky and among the people of Oklahoma.

DETAIL OF PLANS FOR PROPOSED PARK

immediate vicinity.

"On this basis I have prepared a list of owners with the valuations on their respective lands which shows the total cost of the property to the city to be $30,000. The above price includes four dwelling houses, from the sale of which the city could recover some small part of the cost, on this no estimate has been made.

"In an undertaking of this character there is almost no limit to the amount which could be spent on the improvement of the ground but it is not necessary, nor, in some ways, desirable that this should all be done at one time. Should the city decide to dredge the lake and brook and use the material therefrom to roughly grade the property and build the drives, such work could be done at an expenditure of about $20,000. Thereafter a yearly appropriation should be made for the further improvement and maintenance of the site, or, if desirable, a larger amount appropriated at the start and the yearly appropriation correspondingly reduced.

"We have then a large park in a location admirably suited to the purpose and by drives, boulevards and trolley, readily accessible to all classes. It combines in its possibilities every feature which makes such a place desirable and provides a lake of no mean size, a single item which would make it worth more than its cost to the city of Plainfield where the people have long deplored the absence of such a body of water. The cost is exceedingly reasonable and is undoubtly lower than will obtain for any such tract of land in the future.

"Since making my report on the proposed city park, under date May 25, two other interested parties have come forward to be heard from. October 20, and it is also proposed to hold a handkerchief bazaar in the fall. The treasurer's report showed a balance of over $17 in the treasury.

"The estate of William DeKlyn, through Mr. P. C. Brown informs me that through legal complications they cannot give the land away but that they feel very favorably disposed toward the project and will sell that part of their land indicated on the map for park purposes at a nominal figure. This makes a total of over forty per cent. of the total area of the park which is practically given for the purpose."

NO MINERS' STRIKE

Action of Mine Workers' Convention Accepted.

DISTRICT PRESIDENTS ARE ELECTED

Operators Through President Baer Announce That the Action of the Miners is Satisfactory and That They Will Abide by It.

SCRANTON, Pa., June 17.—There will be no strike in the anthracite region growing out of the refusal of the operators to recognize the credentials of District Presidents Nicholls, Fahy and Dettrey, selected by the joint executive board of the United Mine Workers as the miners' representatives on the board of conciliation.

The convention of the United Mine Workers elected the three district presidents by districts as their representatives, and the operators, through President George F. Baer of the Reading company, announced that this action was satisfactory.

Mr. Council of the conciliation board, on the one hand, and President Mitchell, on the other, communicated with one another through Dr. Charles P. Neill, who was sent here as a peace envoy by some members of the strike commission, and the result was a tentative agreement that if the miners in the three separate district conventions elected representatives those representatives would not be objected to by the operators.

When the convention opened President Mitchell read the report of the committee on resolutions providing for the election of conciliators by seperate district conventions. The resolutions call attention to the refusal of the anthracite coal operators to recognize the members of the board of conciliation selected by the executive boards of the United Mine Workers of the anthracite districts and state that such selection was in accordance with the award of the anthracite coal strike. Though satisfied with the manner of the selection by the representatives, it is decided to remove any possibility of misunderstanding concerning the legality of appointment by having this convention of accredited representatives of the three districts of United Mine Workers give unqualified indorsement to the action of the executive officers in appointing Messrs. Nicholls, Dettrey and Fahy to represent us on the joint board of conciliation, and we hereby authorize them to act as our representatives in the adjudication of all disputes growing out of the interpretation or application of the award of the anthracite coal strike commission and in any other way growing out of the relations of the employers and employed."

The report was adopted unanimously, but with absolutely no show of enthusiasm.

President Mitchell then announced that the three districts would next vote separately on the selection of representatives for the board of conciliation. While the delegates of one district were voting, he explained, those of the other districts would remain silent.

Nominating resolutions similarly worded except as to nominee and locality were then presented in turn by delegates previously selected from each district, and with rousing and unanimous "Ayes!" the three district presidents were duly elected as conciliators.

With a rising vote the convention as a whole indorsed the action of the districts. "It is unanimous," declared President Mitchell.

On motion of Secretary Dempsey of the First district the convention authorized the chairman and secretary to issue credentials to the newly elected conciliators.

LIPTON IS CONFIDENT

Gets a Send Off From New Yorkers In London.

HOPES TO WIN "BLOOMING OLD MUG"

Will Toe the Line at Sandy Hook, With Good Prospects of Shamrock III. Successfully Competing in Great Race.

LONDON, June 17.—Sir Thomas Lipton's last night in England prior to his leaving for New York was signalized by a large dinner at the Carlton hotel given in his honor by George T. Wilson of New York, at which the leading Americans in London and many distinguished Britishers were present. The room was profusely decorated with British and American flags.

Sir Thomas had an enthusiastic welcome from the company, which included the United States consul general, Mr. Perry Belmont of New York, Lord Deerhurst, Lord Fairfax, Members of Parliament J. H. Daniel, W. McKillop, J. Kemiker Beaton, Sir Charles Furness and Sir Gilbert Parker, Hiram Maxim, R. Peabody of New York and Designer George Watson.

The menus were inscribed "Bon voyage to Sir Thomas Lipton" and bore a picture of the Shamrock, stars and stripes and union jack intertwined. Proposing the health of his guest, Mr. Wilson struck a note, which was followed by the other American speakers, in saying that, while not wishing that Sir Thomas would lift the cup, Americans would rather see him successful than any other living Britisher.

Both the British and American speakers spoke in the highest terms of Sir Thomas' pluck and sportsmanship and expressed hopes that they would meet with their reward.

Sir Thomas Lipton's speech, which was received with great enthusiasm, was full of confidence. He said:

"I have the greatest respect, as I have reason to have, for the skill of Americans as shipbuilders, but you would not expect or wish me to toe the line at Sandy Hook in any but the most hopeful frame of mind. I have a very good hope that I shall soon be employed in getting an insurance on the famous cup. I have had advantages which I have never had before.

"From what I hear the Reliance is a wonder, for which I am glad, as we want to win against the very best that America is able to produce. If my hopes are fulfilled I am certain the American people will not grudge me the success.

"I wish to say in conclusion, gentlemen, that I hope to meet you all again when I return, but with the difference that we shall have that blooming old mug on the table in front of us."

SUBSTANTIAL CHECKS GIVEN TO PASTOR

Members of Warren Chapel Show Appreciation of Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey.

SURPRISE TO MINISTER

PRESBYTERIAN PEOPLE MARK HIS TENTH ANNIVERSARY.

Clergyman and Wife Going Abroad F. H. Andrews and Leander N. Lovell Sketch the History of the Chapel.

As a token of the esteem in which he is held the members of Warren Chapel and Crescent Avenue Church presented two substantial checks to Rev. J. O. McKelvey last Thursday as a surprise given in honor of the tenth anniversary of his pastorship. The affair was attended by many members of Crescent Avenue Church and by almost the entire congregation of the chapel.

The reception was also an occasion for wishing Mr. and Mrs. McKelvey God-speed on their intended trip abroad this summer. The rooms of the edifice were artistically decorated with flags and bunting, which, lighted by lamps with many colored globes, gave the room an attractive and hospitable appearance. During the evening musical selections were rendered by several members of the chapel.

The address of the evening was made by Frederick H. Andrews, superintendent of the Sunday-school. He told of the growth of the church and Sunday-school and attributed it largely to the energetic work of the pastor. He also spoke of the ten years in which the pastor has been connected with the church as being ten years of spiritual helpfulness. He was followed by Leander Lovell, who was the first superintendent of the Sunday-school. Mr. Lovell spoke of the past ten years as being a decade of healthy growth and said that the vacation which the pastor and his wife was about to enjoy was well earned. He closed by saying that the people of the chapel and of the mother church wished to express their appreciation of his work at the church in a substantial manner and ended his remarks by presenting two envelopes to the pastor.

To the remarks of the speakers Mr. McKelvey responded feelingly and thanked the members for the remembrance by saying that while he was abroad he would be with the church and its members in his prayers and thoughts.

The affair was arranged by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society. Those who took part in the entertainment were Misses Edith, Nell and Grace Squier who rendered piano selections; Miss Helen Wooley, who gave several recitations; Elmer Wheeler favored with flute solos; Miss May Leavers favored with recitations; Theodore Gavett and Chester Briggs rendered mandolin selections, accompanied on the piano by Miss Carrie Dewey; and Miss Mary Newman soprano solos.

Gorgeous costumes, well trained voices, skilful acting and beautiful music augmented the success of the sacred cantata, "Esther, the Beautiful Queen," given last Thursday in Vincent Chapel under the auspices of the Young Men's Brotherhood of the First M. E. Church. Every seat in Vincent Chapel was filled. The plot of the cantata hinges on the destruction by the Persian king Ahasuerus of his overbearing counsellor, Haman, who for his hatred of Mordecai, a Jew, had caused a great massacre of the Jewish people. Haman's true character is revealed to the King by his wife and Queen, the beautiful Esther.

Following is the cast of the leading characters:

Lewis; Zerish, Haman's wife, Mrs. Stephen Tugwell; Ida, their child, Miss Frances Rittenhouse; Mordecai, a Jew, Elmer D. Cutting; Prophetess, Mrs. W. A. W. Burnett; Miriam, Mordecai's sister, Miss Florence Bennett; Scribe, Thomas MacDonald; First Maid of Honor, Mrs. Joseph Dunham; Second Maid of Honor, Miss Nelly Tabb; Rachel, Zerish's maid, Miss Carrie Mulford; Hagai, Eugene Edgar; Herald, Harold Fenno; Guards, Arthur Humble, Harold Whitney, Augustus C. Hoagland, William D. Pike.

The choruses of Jews and Persians were composed of the Mesdames E. S. Alpaugh, J. L. Bennett, Mrs. W. A. W. Burnett, Joseph S. Dunham, E. A. Edgar, J. G. Forman, L. M. French, Thomas MacDonald, E. P. Mrs. Charles L. Lewis was at the piano.

The ushers were Louis Wilson, Stephen H. Tugwell, Albert Steiner, Edward Shearer, Fred. A. Martin and Astley Weaver. Ralph S. Lane and Nelson A. Miller took tickets and R. Frank Fenno was in the box office.

The following committees served: Furnishing committee, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Edgar, Dr. and Mrs. P. W. Fenno, Miss Bertha Whitney and Miss Elsie Horne; concession committee, William Symonds, S. H. It is believed that about $100 will be cleared by the affair. The Young Men's Brotherhood, under whose auspices it was given, does an excellent work in assisting all the departments of the church. Its officers for the present year are Nelson A. Miller, president; Stephen H. Tugwell, vice president; Louis V. Wilson, secretary, and Ralph S. Lane, treasurer.

TRIED FOR STEALING A WATERMELON

It Was Only a Mock Trial, However, at Trinity Reformed Church.

FUN FOR C. E. SOCIETY

CONVERSATION ON VITAL TOPICS A FEATURE OF ENTERTAINMENT.

Instrumental and Vocal Music Also on Programme—Everybody Taking Part Did Well and All Had a Good Time.

A unique social, including a musicale, a mock trial, together with a number of special subjects for conversation, attracted a very large number of young people to Trinity Reformed Church, last Tuesday. It was given under the auspices of the social committee of the Christian Endeavor Society and was the last affair of the kind for the season.

The programme opened with a tenor solo by W. T. Jeffery, accompanied on the piano by R. E. Humpstone, after which the young folks took part in a game called "Conversation." They were allowed a limited number of minutes to discuss these vitally important subjects: "Should summer flirtation be encouraged?" "If Columbus had not discovered America where would we be?" "Patience." "Summer Vacations." "Opportunities." "The Value of common sense." "Some lessons worth learning." "Is a lie ever justifiable?" "The ideal woman." "The ideal man."

Interspersing this portion of the programme, there were instrumental selections by a quartette comprising Joseph Sattels, Arthur Mosher, violins; G. W. V. Moy, viola, and Kenneth Shupp, 'cello.

The most fun resulted from the mock trial, which concluded the entertainment. This was given by the members of Endeavorers' class No. 15, of which Miss Mabel Wilson is the teacher. "Obadiah Root," in the person of Clarence Rittenhouse, was accused of stealing a watermelon, and a number of persons were employed to decide the important case. It took about half an hour to discover that the accused was not guilty and that a hired man had collected the melons from Deacon Timothy Seed's patch and stored them in the farm house cellar. This fact was brought out by "Jernsha Seed," his wife, after much argument and many perplexities. The prize melon of the patch was exhibited in court.

There was considerable fun during the selection of a jury, some that were called being rejected for reasons of a more or less ridiculous nature. One would-be juror was not wanted because he had not paid his poll tax and it happened that he had not in fact paid because he is exempt. He really thought the accusation was intentional, until matters were explained afterwards. The court refused to allow one man to serve because she had been engaged five years. This and similar incidents helped to make the trial unusually funny.

These were the characters and their interpreters: "Judge Curlywig," Charles M. Dolliver; clerk, Frank Bach; "Lawyer Goosequill," Albert L. Schomp, representing the complainant; "Lawyer Chanticleer," Thomas Carter, representing the accused; "Deacon Timothy Seed," the complainant, Frank Platts; "Jerusah," his wife, Mrs. William Trembath; "Obadiah Root," the accused, Clarence Rittenhouse; "Hans Ouwehlianben," a store-keeper, William Trembath, and "Sally Muggins," Obadiah's sweetheart, and witness for the accused, Miss Nettie Kreitling. HUSBAND HEARTBROKEN; WIFE BURIED AT SEA

Pierre Bonnet's Helpmeet Stricken on Board Ship Bound for Havre.

LOCATED BY REPORTER

DAILY PRESS MAN FINDS MR. BONNET AT MT. BETHEL.

Sorrowing Husband Offered Ship's Captain $5,000 to Bring Body Back, But Was Refused—Bonnet Tells His Own Story.

Driving through the rain on an unknown road with the night so dark that one could almost feel the inky blackness, a reporter for The Daily Press started for Mt. Bethel Tuesday in search of a "story." A wealthy Philadelphian's wife died on her way from this country to France of smallpox, and was buried at sea, in spite of offers of a great sum of money by the husband if he would be allowed to bring the remains back to America. That was the basis for the "story." The destination was unknown. Pierre Bonnet, the bereaved husband was living with relatives on the road to Mt. Bethel.

Each farmhouse on the road was hailed and some sleepy head appeared at the window and there the question, "Do you know Pierre Bonnet?" was asked. William Kirch's house was finally reached. A knock at the door by the reporter surrounded on every side with barking dogs, brought forth a bollow sound from an upstairs chamber, "Who's there?" The reporters could not raise his voice above the noise made by the dogs. Finally the householder appeared in negligee at the door.

"Two hundred yards down the road 'till you come to the end of my property then turn to your left into a lane and follow that for half a mile through the woods and the first house on the left hand side is the one you are looking for," were his instructions. The darkness was impenetrable.

The directions were followed and the lane found after going a dozen yards beyond the road. The carriage wheels sank up to the hubs in mud and the horse was hardly unable to draw the load. Both occupants of the carriage alighted and led the horse up he dark, muddy and steep road until a faint light in a window told us the house had been reached.

The reporter, in getting out of the carriage started for what he thought was the door. A voice called out from a top story window, "What do you want there? Get out of my berry patch." Looking up he spied a man in night apparel with a wicked looking rifle. The reporter briefly explained his errand and was finally admitted to the house. Here is the "story:"

While on her way to visit the birthplace of her husband, Pierre Bonnet, a wealthy carpet designer, of Philadelphia, Mrs. Pierre Bonnet was borne at Mt. Bethel, was taken suddenly ill on the Steamship Savoie, of the Franco-American line, and died on June 10. Death was due to a violent type of varioloid. Not a soul among the passengers on the ship was aware that a death from a contagious disease, had occurred aboard and no one knew of the burial which took place at midnight, save a few trusted sailors, the captain, Dr. Maire, the steamship physician, and the woman's husband.

Mrs. Bonnet left this country for France, Thursday, June 4. She was then in perfect health, apparently. When she had been at sea for several days she showed evidences of sea sickness. She was treated for this complaint but to the surprise of the physician on board she grew rapidly worse. An examination brought to light the fact that the woman was suffering from varioloid of a violent type. Her death resulted four days later. She was buried at sea.

Mr. Bonnet returned to this country on the same steamship. He sought seclusion at once at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Julia Ledos, near Mt. Bethel. He has been living apart from the world since his wife's death, and has refused to see anyone.

Last evening a reporter for The Daily Press saw him in his mountain retreat and obtained the story of the death and burial at sea. This is Mr. Bonnet's version:

"My wife and I left this country to visit my birthplace at Havre, France, on Thursday, June 4. Four days out she was taken sick and in a few days died. While the men were preparing the body for burial I went to the captain of the vessel and asked him to allow me to take the remains back to her native land when the ship returned. He said that the rules of the steamship company forbade such proceedings inasmuch as the death was due to a contagious disease.

"Almost frantic with grief I besought the officers of the ship to grant my request. I said that if it was merely a question of money, I would be willing to pay almost any amount to take the remains back to America for interment in Newark. I would have been willing to pay $5,000 to have brought the remains home with me.

"While I was yet pleading to be allowed to bring the remains back the sailors were preparing the casket for burial. In some part of the boat I heard eight bells ring out and then, with a prayer by the captain, with the sailors standing bare headed about the casket, draped with a French flag, the remains were consigned to the deep. A splash and all was over. No one save myself, the captain and the three silent sailors attended the funeral service.

"The passengers were not informed of the death. Many inquired after my wife but I was instructed to say that she could not be seen. The passengers were all watched for evidences of the disease but so far as I know there were no other cases on board.

"I went to Havre with the ship and returned on the same vessel. I came here to be away from the rest of the world. Tomorrow I will return to Philadelphia."

The dead woman was Mr. Bonnet's second wife. He married a Miss Baron, of New York, about twenty years ago. She died in her native city and in 1899 he married Miss Ledos.

The Ledos family is well known in and about Mt. Bethel. Mrs. Ledos is the proprietress of a summer boarding house about a mile outside the village.

Mr. Bonnet is the manager of the Oldham mills in Philadelphia. He is known to many in this city in the Pierre Frerries glove factory on Grove street.

SCHOOL BATTALION TO BE ABOLISHED

Lack of Interest Reason for Change at the Plainfield High School.

HEREAFTER A COMPANY

A FOUR YEARS' ELECTIVE COURSE NOW ARRANGED.

Appointments Made for Next Year—Many Pupils Intend to Select a Branch in Military Instruction—Other Details.

After the opening of school in September, the Plainfield High School Cadet Corps will be a voluntary organization. During the past year the military work has been a part of the school training for the boy pupils. The work of the battalion in which there was an element of the uninterested could not be entirely satisfactory and after consideration this battalion has been abolished and a company will be formed.

School Principal Ira W. Travell has planned to have this military work count as a full course in the school curriculum if pursued for the full four years of the course. The members of the company will all be uniformed and drills will be held twice a week during the school year. A size limit will doubtless be fixed. The drilling will take place in the afternoons for periods of one hour—not during school as has been the case during the past term. The boys will be required to hold a certain standing in the military drill.

With such a voluntary company, the field of work of the High School cadets will be greatly broadened. Much interest is shown among the pupils and some forty of them have signified their desire to take part in the military work.

The commandant has selected the officers for the coming year from the list of candidates, considering as far as possible the rank held by the men this year.

The appointments are these: Francis K. Anderson, captain; Lucius T. Koons, first lieutenant, Harry G. Thompson, second lieutenant; Charles F. Neagle, first sergeant; Ralph R. Eckert, quartermaster sergeant; Harold E. Lovelle and Stuart F. Freeman, sergeants; Paul C. Meyer, Phillip Leichtentritt and Joseph Gavett, Jr., corporals; Harold A. Brownell, first lieutenant and quartermaster; Charles Elliott, color sergeant; Adam V. Scott, drummer.

MERCHANT TRICKED.

Goods Ordered for New England Went to a Nearby Town—Most of the Goods Recovered.

A clever ruse practised on a Plainfield merchant has just come to light. The Plainfielder manufactures an article which has gained a wide and extensive sale in various markets and recently he received frequent orders for it from parties representing themselves as merchants in a New England city. It was the frequency of the orders that made the local manufacturer suspicious and he began to investigate. When the last order was received he wrote the out-of-town parties that he must have a guarantee that the article would not be retailed for less than fifty cents before shipping the goods. Back came the guarantees and the goods were promptly shipped. A few days later the Plainfielder, unexpectedly heard hat his article was being sold in a nearby New Jersey town at 39 cents each. Further investigation was made and it was then learned that a concern in New York was making a practice of buying goods in this way and shipping them to other towns, where outrates were established. The Plainfielder has succeeded it getting nearly all of his shipped goods back and in the future he will be guarded as to sales in large quantities. In this instance his goods never reached the New England city and it was not intended that they should.

Courts Investigation.

"I have nothing to fear from any investigation, and it is needless to say that I have the confidence of my people," said the Rev. Dr. George R. Van De Water, rector of St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal Church, who has been named in connection with the divorce suit brought by Commodore Archbald Watt against his wife, Mrs. Adele Watt, of North Plainfield, just before he sailed on the Lombardia for his annual three months' vacation yesterday. THE CACTUS FAMILY.

Botanists Divide It Into Four Distinct Branches.

With Very Few Exceptions They Are All Natives of the Western Hemisphere—How They Are Classified.

[Special Los Angeles (Cal.) Letter.]

TO THE collector probably no family of plants, outside the orchids, present so many fascinating features as the cacti, which, with very few exceptions, are natives of America and its adjacent islands, only. The cactus industry moves in cycles. Latterly, it is very quiet, but interest is again gathering, although it will probably be about ten years before another actual craze is experienced. Even now there is a great demand, especially in Europe, Germany furnishing the best market, at present. Most of our large cities, according to their several climates, have good collections. In the east, that at Baltimore is, perhaps, as worthy of remark as any. Of course, in climates where the plant is a native it thrives best, as is seen in the parks at Los Angeles and Riverside, Cal. In the latter city is probably one of the most interesting little cactus parks in the world. In our first illustration is a bit from one of the gardens in Los Angeles, in which the Cereus giganteus is most prominent.

The Echino cactus grows to a height of about eight feet. Its fruit is sour and not much relished, but the inner part of the plant itself is soft, acrid and juicy, and, to some, agreeable to the taste. As Indian selects a plant three or four feet long and two feet in diameter, cuts it down and hollows it to form a trough into which he throws the soft pulp, which surrounds the central woody axis, and adds meat, roots, seeds, meal, fruit, or anything edible at hand, together with water. He mixes the whole and drops in hot stones, which he takes out and licks, reheats, and drops in again, repeating the process until the mixture is thoroughly cooked. Horses sometimes kick open the cactus plants, to obtain the juicy pulp. The small, black seeds of the Echino cactus are dried, parched and pulverized into meal.

Closely resembling this variety in structure is the Cereus giganteus (represented also in the second cut). This latter is found native in Arizona only and sometimes attains a height of 60 feet. The fascicate form at the right in the photograph is very rare and highly prized. A collector discovering same would cut off the fan-shaped top and if he felt unable to retain such a prize for himself, could readily find a purchaser. A specimen of this kind was recently sold at the Royal Botanical garden at Kew, England, for a very large sum. The plant here represented is probably about 25 feet high and two feet in diameter. The cactus plants furnish the abiding place of these little desert woodpeckers. The fruit grows near the top of the plant and is highly prized by the Indians. Its interior is of a beautiful red color and is very palatable, being more juicy than the fig while resembling it in flavor. It is sometimes preserved, also made into syrup. The Pimos Indians prepare from it a clear, amber colored, exceedingly intoxicating wine called Tiswine. After a plant has been dead for about a year, it splits longitudinally into long poles. The natives utilize a strip from a dead plant with which to reach up and push off the fruit from a living one. There are various uses to which this plant is put. Sometimes a cup-like cavity is formed on the side of a plant and allowed to fill with the sap. In case of extreme thirst, this may be drank, but the taste is acrid and exceedingly unpleasant and the beverage is never used except in extreme cases. The plant might serve as fuel, but this is seldom necessary as, in the desert, all the vegetation has a greasy tendency and, as a rule, may be burned when green. The scrubby little bushes seen all over the ground in the picture are greasewood.

To illustrate this characteristic of desert foliage, the pepper tree, a native of Peru, found through Mexico and California, rarely presents the dusty appearance observed on cultivated trees which have been introduced there from more favorable climates. This is due to the quantity of oil in the leaves of the latter, which, repelling

The third great cactus section is the Opuntia. Of this, the Texas family is the most extensive. In Los Angeles county are found many varieties of Opuntias. The edibles grow on flat-leaved plants. These are two great fields in this state in which collections of value may be made. First, the Colorado desert between San Bernardino county and Yuma, beginning about 100 miles from Los Angeles. The other field is the Mojave desert, beginning on a line with the San Fernando tunnel and ending at Bakersfield, the northern-most limit of native cacti in California. Prickly pears, very common Opuntias, have been known to grow in running water. They are very tenacious of life.

There are more specimens of cactus in Texas than any other state, among which are at least 40 of commercial value. The most common of the Opuntias is that shown in the third cut, where the fruit may be seen growing in abundance on the flat, pear-shaped leaves (so-called). "Indian figs," are very common. This fruit grows from three to four inches long and two or three inches in diameter, is egg-shaped or pear-like in form and covered with minute and excessively annoying spines. The pulp is of an agreeable sub-acid flavor. They are sometimes called "Barbary figs." Over 150 varieties are native in the United States. The Opuntias, set in line, make an impenetrable fence. They grow in any dry, sandy soil and will subsist where scarcely any other vegetation is found, as on the porous lava of volcanic districts.

A fact interesting to scientists is that the cochineal insect lives on a species of the Opuntia. In southern Mexico, Central America and the Canary islands, the plant is largely grown and insects reared. Cochineal dye, carmine, lake and other dyes are prepared from this insect. In the island of Sicily over 10,000 acres are said to be cultivated for the fruit alone.

A fourth but very small section of the cactus family is found in this state, viz.: the Mammillaria, which does not often grow more than one foot high. Many new and curious forms of cacti are constantly being produced by cultivation.

Mr. Ernest Branton, one of the best authorities on the cactus and to whom we are indebted for our information, states that on one occasion

CAPTAIN IS A DATTO.

American Commander Ranks with the Princes of Sulu.

Former Chicago Society Man Occupies Peculiar Position Among Natives of Island and Is Adored by Moro Belles.

After falling in love with an American girl whom he had never seen, Kiram, the sentimental sultan of Sulu, has issued a mandate and heaped honors upon the head of a Chicago man. Every day in Jiligan, in the Lake Lanao district of the far away island of Mindanao, Capt. John J. Pershing calls about him the dusky inhabitants and dispenses what little law he has to guide him. Capt. Pershing is what Kiram calls a datto. A datto is a bigger man in Jiligan than the mayor is in Chicago, and Capt. Pershing is the first American to become a datto.

The New York Herald says that the present datto of Iligan was formerly a well-known bachelor of Chicago, and there he led many a cotillion and created many a flutter in one of the smartest circles. He was one of the eligibles. But he went to war and now he is a datto as well as a bachelor. He was chosen by the sultan upon request of the latter's subjects, and has the same rank as the princes of Sulu enjoy.

To be a datto is almost as interesting as being the sultan himself. Datto Pershing is subject to the commands of the sultan, that is so far as is consistent with his duty to the stars and stripes. But in spite of the fact that the sultan of Sulu is supreme in authority, Capt. Pershing is virtually an independent ruler in his own district of Lake Lanos, wielding a kind of mystic power over the Moros which not even the sultan himself may boast of. For Datto Pershing is a white man, and the pale skin of Americans is an awesome thing to Moro superstition. He has been hailed as a "prophet," as a Divine messenger, sent by Mohammed and the president of the

CAPT. JOHN J. PERSHING.
(American Commander Who Has Been Made a Datto of Sulu.)

United States to teach them the ways of civilization.

Datto Pershing's councils are held each morning with Moro chiefs, are famed from corner to corner of Mindanao, and a continual procession of savages visits the white man's tent. He is counselor, guide and prophet for the entire district, and every conceivable kind of business, both private and public, is taken to him for adjustment.

When Gen. Davis, commanding the department of Mindanao and Jolo, sent Pershing to Iligan as commanding officer, he selected one of the most efficient officers in his command to preside over the turbulent district of Lake Lanos. Datto Pershing's forces are more like family councils than anything else. The swarthy, brilliant-eyed Moro belles bring gifts of tropical fruits and rare woven textures to his feet, and they never leave without him is one of worshipful adoration. Mothers carry their children to him to receive his commendation, for 'tis said that the favor of Datto Pershing will insure a brilliant future. He lives on terms of familiarity with the natives, and his very unpretentious bearing, his very apparent attitude of friendliness, won them from the beginning, and they made him their chief officer when they found that rule with him meant kindliness, sympathy and understanding. Alone and unarmed he ventured into the district which he commands, establishing himself there at the very doorstep of the Moro stronghold. His very coolness won their admiration. And when they found that he had come as a friend, instead of an enemy, it won them unconditionally.

The savage Moro appreciates a gentle friendship. They know the datto is in sympathy with them, for he has paid them the compliment of respecting their customs and they carry their grievances and their difficulties to him as often as to a parent.

That Capt. Pershing is a soldier of the first order was demonstrated by the campaign of last September under his immediate command, when he and his men gave the Marin Moros such a drubbing that no trouble has occurred since at any of the camps along the trail.

German Crown Jewels.

The value of the jewels at the disposal of the German emperor is about $1,250,000. Of these, however, only $500,000 worth are her private properties. The others belong to the crown and are simply lent to the empress. The present empress does not care to wear jewels, except on state occasions, nor does the emperor care to see them on her in daily life; hence weeks often pass without her seeing them.—London News.

Reanimating the Heart.

The Russian feat of reanimating the heart of a child that has been dead 20 hours is shown by Dr. K. Rommel to be nothing new. The heart is not the delicate organ generally supposed, and for a long time physiologists have understood the possibility that it could be restored to action, the effect being of shorter duration in the human heart than in that of lower animals. A current of arterial blood, or a solution of salt charged with oxygen, is a common means of restoring the beating to dead hearts. By massage, the exposed heart being rhythmically squeezed with the hand, Prof. Prus, of Lemberg, has succeeded in reanimating 55 hearts out of 100, and by combining massage with electrization M. Batelli, of Geneva, has revived dead dogs, and kept them alive as much as 24 hours. Human beings have been revived by the latter method, though only for a short time.—Medical Journal.

Dogs Smell Death.

There's an old superstition that a howling dog in front of the house of an ill person portends death. One prominent physician believes absolutely in it. The physician has a wonderfully acute sense of smell. Frequently, he says, he can foretell the coming of death within 48 hours of a patient's demise. Within two days of death, he says, a peculiar earthy odor becomes noticeable among a person about to die. He tells of one case where he became aware of the peculiar odor while talking to an apparently healthy man. That night the man dropped dead of heart disease. The physician is far from attributing the peculiar manifestation to other than physiological reasons. His own sense of smell is abnormally acute.—Chicago Chronicle.

PROVED HIS THEORY.

Round House, Built Fifty Years Ago, Remains Unchanged.

Its Architect Wanted to Demonstrate That Circular Construction Is the Most Effective for Residence Purposes.

The "roundhouse" in Somerville, Mass., was built more than 50 years ago by Enoch Robinson, who was a typical Yankee, inventive, practical, economical, a man of mechanical mind.

It was a theory of Enoch Robinson's that a "roundhouse" not only could be erected at less expense than the ordinary "frame" house, but that more room in it could be made practically available. Moreover, the question of light could be best disposed of, since each room must necessarily have its outside windows, and all would be more or less lighted within from a central shaft covered with a roof skylight.

Some time in 1850 Mr. Robinson decided to build. The site selected was on the southern slope of Spring hill, Somerville, and adjoining a large open tract of land which, until a few years ago, was not broken by any house.

The lot was a good sized one, but for the house itself a circle, 40 feet in diameter, was laid out, a cellar dug, and a solid stone foundation built about it.

In the construction of the house not a stick of timber was used. The walls were made of plank sawed to fit in the circular foundation and nailed together, one above the other, in regular courses. On the first floor four rooms were provided, three of them with two windows each, and the other, a room like the house itself, laid out in a perfect circle, having only one window.

These windows comprised four large panes of glass set in a single sash. These slid up in the cases between the outer and inner walls, and entirely out of the way, in much the fashion as do the small square windows in our modern railway coaches.

The blinds of the house were also set in a casing similar to that which held the windows. These were raised up between the walls, as were the windows themselves.

With such an arrangement for the blinds and windows it was not possible to have those of the second story directly above those of the first, so when the seven upstairs rooms were laid out one was taken out to have the windows above those below. Moreover, as sliding windows and blinds were used upstairs, it was necessary to have a place for them to push into when raised, and for this purpose a series of bay-closets was built to surmount the second story of the house, and into the space thus provided the upper window casements were fitted.

The front door of the house entered into an octohedral vestibule formed by the outer circle of the house and the irregular walls of the circular library on the right and an oval shaped parlor on the left. The parlor was 24 feet long and 16 wide, while the library opposite was exactly 13 feet in diameter.

The kitchen, immediately behind the library, was finished in white wood, varnished, and had a slate floor; adjoining was a large dining room, with windows facing the southeast. Between the dining-room and kitchen was the large chimney, and space adjoining was utilized for closets. Other closets were built in spaces left otherwise unavailable by the curves of the parlor and library.

These four rooms were built about an irregular hallway and stairway in the middle of the house, which was lighted from above. The stairway was built in a spiral, and, on the second floor, led into a large rotunda 13 feet in diameter, from which led the seven chambers. Two of these chambers had two windows, the largest one being over the dining-room.

Five years later a third story, or cupola, was built over the second story. In this were arranged five rooms, completing a house of 13 rooms, not including the large cellar of something more than an area of 300 square feet.

It took Enoch Robinson nearly two years to construct the house. Into it were put the best of materials and superior workmanship. Yet it was erected at an expense much less than a square house built in the ordinary way.

The house as it stands to-day remains unchanged outside since the addition of the cupola. Inside, beyond a few repairs and improvements, it is as Mr. Robinson's family moved into it more than 50 years ago.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Intercollegiate track and field meets among the larger colleges are about over for the present season, and the new captains for the teams of '04 have been selected. Chicago has picked a sprinter for the place, Northwestern a pole vaulter and high jumper, Wisconsin and Michigan two-milers, Yale a hurdler and Princeton a half-miler. Clyde Blair, who was elected at Chicago, is one of the greatest runners in the country, and at a recent meet established a new western record of 0:09 4-5 with unfavorable weather conditions. He succeeds Jerome Magee, the pole vaulter. Arthur Smith was the unanimous choice of Northwestern, he is the star center of the football team of the Evanston institution, and is a weight man as well as a jumper. At Michigan N. S. Kellogg succeeds former Capt. Robinson. He is the best two-miler in the west, and has won the event three years in succession at the conference meets. Wisconsin has also selected a two-miler in Edgar J. McEachron to succeed Capt. Keachie. Edwin J. Clapp, who has been elected to the position of honor at the head of the Yale track team, holds the intercollegiate championships for both the 120 and the 220-yard hurdles. At Princeton the Tigers have selected Lynn M. Adair as their captain for the coming year.

Yale has declined Cambridge's challenge for an athletic meet between the two universities. Yale decided that inasmuch as the original plan for a joint meet has proved impossible, and as it would be rather late in the season, they would have to decline the challenge of the Cambridge university.

Alfred Shrubb, of England, recently broke all records for two miles for both grass and cinder tracks by going the distance in nine minutes, 11 seconds, on a grass track.

Although the venerable game of golf has been played across the water for a great many years, not more than 20 years ago there was not a regular golf course in America; to-day there are thousands. C. B. McDonald was one of the first Scotchmen to come to this country with his bag of clubs, but his play was confined to driving a few balls in the outskirts of Chicago. The first course in the vicinity of Chicago was laid out at Lake Forest in 1901, but it was only a small affair. About the first club actually organized in the country was the Old Apple Tree brigade at Yonkers, N. Y. The St. Andrew's Golf club was formed in 1888, and after the game became more generally known championship tournaments were started. The Newport Golf club ran off the first one, and W. Lawrence took the honor. In 1895 the United States Golf association was formed and the first championship event was won by McDonald; since then H. J. Whigham has captured the honor twice, winning in both 1896 and 1897; Findlay Douglas won in 1898, while the fifth championship went to Herbert Harriman. Travis won the year following, and the present champion is Louis James, who won his title last year at Glenview. The progress of the game in this country has been remarkable since its inception, and it is impossible to give with any degree of accuracy the number of followers of the game to-day or the number of clubs in existence. Phelps B. Hoyt is the popular captain of the Glenview club. He has done much to further the game in the west, and has figured prominently in championship events in recent years.

Barney Oldfield, of Toledo, O., recently broke the world's record for a mile on an automobile. During a five-mile match race at Yonkers, N. Stanley went the distance at Readville, Mass., in 1:02 4-5.

Jack Root, light heavy-weight champion of the world, and George Gardner, a claimant for the honor, have been matched to fight for the honor before the International Athletic club of Fort Erie, Canada, on the afternoon of July 4.

Among the entries for the famous Henley regatta, which is held yearly on the Thames river, London, appear the names of two Americans and one Canadian: Titus, of the Atlantic Boat club, of New York; Juvenal, of the Vesper Boat club, of Philadelphia, and Scholes, of the Don Rowing club, of Toronto. The Argonauts, of Toronto, are also entered in the regatta.

There is a lively fight on for Sunday ball in Ohio. The ministers of Tiffin, Fostoria and Findlay held a meeting recently and decided to do their best to abolish the evil, but have thus far failed in their efforts.

VICTIM OF MUSKIES.

Being an O'er True Tale of a Fishing Expedition.

Discomforts and Disfigurements Count for Naught When the "Strikes" Are Numerous—The Story Has a Sad Ending.

I am a sight and I know it.

A week's growth of beard disfigures my face. Beneath it shows a skin of many hues.

My nose is at least four different shades of red, varying from a brilliant crimson to a pink.

My lips are parched, and cracked, and bleeding.

I know these things for several reasons.

First my friends never fail to comment upon my appearance when I meet them.

Secondly I can feel my disfigurement.

Thirdly a mirror hangs on the wall before me as I write.

It will be at least a week before even "store clothes" will make me presentable in good society.

My family shun me. My wife refuses to appear upon the streets in my company, and finds excuses for eating her meals alone. My children evince a decided preference for their mother's society, and I am not called upon to entertain my friends.

But I cast the thoughts of all these things from me, and permit my mind to ponder only on the past pleasures.

"Muskies" were the cause of my disfigurement. Those wolves of the waters that entice many a disciple of Walton from the city and make of him a fine museum attraction for his friends.

I am but one of thousands in this class who brave ridicule and the elements for the sake of the sport these prizes furnish. But one of thousands who listen impatiently to the ticking of the week until Father Time says to the authorities whose duty it is to protect the fish during the close season: "Take down the bars and let the anglers in. Their day of sport has come."

My "muskies" are, or were, denizens of the waters of Tomahawk lake. (For the unknowing ones I will explain that this bit of water, like many others of its kind, lies in northern Wisconsin, close beside the tracks of the Northwestern railway.

The wind blew at Tomahawk. It tumbled the waters into choppy seas that made navigation difficult for Tom, our guide. It blew from the north directly from the ice fields that Perry and others have buffeted unsuccessfully. It came down upon us with a frigidity that congealed the waters the dashing waves cast into our boat.

The sun shone at Tomahawk, but its rays, though intensely bright, had none of the congenial warmth belonging to late May.

I have but a dim recollection of shielding my eyes from the blinding reflection from the water, and my face from the cutting blasts of the wind.

That which I do remember with a vividness which cannot be effaced is the rush of the "muskie" through the water.

The strike!

The leap of the finny prize into the air!

The plunge into the depths of cold water!

The whirr of the reel as he took out line!

The bending, quivering rod!

The tug and pull on the line!

The turning of the little crank that reeled in the line as the "muskie" started for the boat!

The final landing of the prize as Tom's arm shot out with the gaff and brought him into the boat!

All of these things I remember distinctly. There needs no jogging of the memory to bring them back again, and remembering these what care I for the disfigurement of face; what care I for the jeers of friends; what care I for uncomplimentary comments.

Ah, but I remember one thing more. It was not a pleasant incident. It is with curses that I recall it.

I remember all too distinctly the doom pronounced upon me by the game warden.

"Confiscated!"

My "muskies" gone to feed the madding crowd that fish not, neither do they brave the discomforts heaped upon us by the weather man.

"Confiscated!"

And all because the law was stronger than my will or "pull."

Disfigurements count for naught, but this is a sad ending to a pleasing tale. The next time the label will be right. Tom shall be my witness that it is, and I and mine shall eat the next "muskie" that falls a prey to my prowess.

Boy Plunges to Death from Third Story Because He Dreaded Further Chastisement.

With stinging welts of a leather strap on his back and in terror of his father, who had administered several blows, Jasper L. Carter, a 12-year-old colored lad, jumped to his death from the third story of the Pennsylvania Insurance building at Fourth and Walnut streets, Philadelphia.

The boy's skull was fractured, and he died at the Pennsylvania hospital, to which place he was taken as quickly as possible. The child's father, Bartholomew Carter, was placed under arrest and was held by Magistrate Harrison to await the action of the coroner's jury.

The elder Carter was at a lodge soiree Thursday night, and returned to his rooms in the insurance company building, of which he is janitor, about three o'clock in the morning. As he walked along the hallway on the third floor he stumbled over something, and on investigation found it was a bicycle wheel. He concluded that Jasper had left the wheel there.

The man immediately proceeded to the small room where Jasper and another son slept, woke the former, and started to chastise him.

After he had received several severe strokes of a strap the boy cried "murder" and "mamma," then broke away from his father. He dashed into the next room, where his mother and sister slept, and, running to the window, jumped through the glass and fell to the street below, his head striking first.

Policeman Bookbinder, of the Third district, heard the crash of the breaking window and reached the spot where the boy fell just as the father was picking up his unconscious form. An ambulance hurried the boy and father to the hospital, and after the lad had died the father was taken to the police station. When arraigned before Magistrate Harrison, the elder Carter was completely overcome.

"I was angered at the boy's disobedience," he said, "and I felt like whipping him, but I never thought he would do what he did."

SOAPSUDS FOR SNAKES.

How Miss Ella Beckleen's Back Yard "Den" Was Raided with Wonderful Success.

The Avon (Ill.) Sentinel reports that the other day there was considerable excitement in the south part of town over the discovery of a den of snakes in Miss Ella Beckleen's yard. For several days previous Miss Beckleen had seen a number of snakes near her house, some of which she killed. Upon the afternoon named she discovered a snake emerging from a hole near the slough in the rear of the yard. Thinking perhaps there might be more reptiles burrowed in the ground, she called in her next-door neighbor, Olof Beckleen, and other near-by neighbor women to come to her assistance. Together with various weapons of destruction they started out to wage war upon the snakes. They carried a tub of hot soapsuds, which they poured into the hole, and the excitement commenced sooner than the women anticipated. The hot water had done its work well, and the snakes fairly crawled out, each one as they emerged from the hole. The way those women flourished their hoes and clubs, with which they were well armed, as they chased the reptiles about the yard, caused passers-by to stop and wonder what on earth was going on. But the ladies were brave, and when the conflict ceased and an inventory was taken they found they had killed ten snakes.

A SMART COSTUME.

It Is Made of Taffeta, Eolienne and Crepe de Chine.

A dress of crepe de chine seen recently had its skirt arranged with flat plaits on the hips and finished at the hem with heavy folds and tucks. The coat shaped bodice was short at the back and had a big collar of cream embroidery edged with silk fringe and tassels. It opened over a waistcoat of pink and black chiné silk which was cut awky to show a tucked chiffon vest and a cravat of alencon lace. With this was worn a pink chiffon hat trimmed with a wreath of green foliage, the brim being lined with black chiffon.

Taffeta, crepe de chine, colienne and silk voiles are all very smart. Ring spotted net is having a good share of favor on a lining of shiny silk, but it is too flimsy and not to be compared with firmer fabrics. For tea and coffee coats it is all very well and even for blouses, but for an afternoon season frock a material which in itself is more attractive is to be preferred.

There is a great deal to be said in favor of the chine silks, especially for gala occasions. Such frocks must be softened by lace or a net fichu. To forget this is to court failure, for the general effect of a gown must be soft.

The cut shows an accordion plaited costume made of soft taffeta trimmed with passementerie.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

They Follow Closely the Fashions of Their Elders.

Very dainty light tones are used for young girls' dresses. Crepolline, etamines and summer woolens are the favorites for such gowns, and the fashions follow very closely those intended for older people. Thus there are the same deep capes, the same plaited costes and the same sack bolero.

The plaited skirt, if well made and fitted, is a most becoming fashion when worn to the ankle and is especially suitable for girls from fifteen to seventeen. The hip yoke is less popular, for it requires shapely lines and a well rounded figure. The excessively pouched front has disappeared, but the fullness is slightly fuller and more pronounced.

Belts, too, are not pulled down so low, but encircle the waist. The swathed belt of bias silk or satin without buckle or clasp is generally worn and for light woolen gowns is generally of silk matching the color.

Creamy whites, pastel blue, pink and beige are very fashionable, and for a dark girl the champagne tint is becoming, but it is too yellow in tone for a blond wearer.

A complete novelty in the blouse world is to be found in a slip of chine net, such a pretty stuff, the pattern dissolving into the net ground, achieving a completely original result, while the latest mussiine acquired for a like purpose are unexhaustible. These can be pulled through the band like an eastern silk fabric and emerge unscathed.

The cut shows a French sailor suitable for a young girl. It is of yellow straw trimmed with pink roses.

THE USEFUL TEA GOWN.

The Correct Thing In This Dainty and Serviceable Garment.

It makes one feel cool on a hot day to look at the pretty tea gown here with illustrated. It has both comfortable short elbow sleeves and the yoke is so fine and transparent that it not only is but looks cool and comfortable. The dress itself may be of china crape or any of the pretty thin woolens, like challis or voile. There is a soft and thin wool printed in very dainty designs, called wool delaine, and this also is made up after this model. But to be really cool the material should be silk in a soft and clinging weave.

The back of this pretty gown is in princess shape, with the fronts hanging loose from the side, while the inner part may or may not be of some other material. While the outside is printed in a design the inner part may be plain in the same shade and trimmed with lace and black velvet ribbon run in in two rows style, with loops at the ends. Some of the prettiest of the tea gowns have no collars, but have the neck finished off with a row of lace laid on flat.

I saw one beautiful creation of lilac crepe de chine with the inner part of liberty silk in the same shade. The pointed belt was of soft, dark green velvet, and several small rosettes of the same were set along the bottom just above the shaped flounce. There was a superb trimming of rich cream colored lace, so that it formed the edge, and this fell over a silk ruffle of the same shade. The yoke was of lace lined with chiffon of the same color.

There is a pretty and quite cheap stuff called poplinette which makes up into attractive tea gowns and will wear for at least one season. A tea gown made of this stuff in pastel blue poplinette had a shaped flounce quite high in the back and bordered with a line of white insertion laid over a line of pale pink ribbon. This is a decidedly French touch. At the waist is a belt of dark blue velvet and down the front is a double line of rosettes made of quarter inch blue velvet ribbon, with loops to cross and close the fronts. The sleeves are wide and reach but little below the elbows, while the neck is finished off in V shape with ruffles of fine lace along the edge.

The empire shape is also much affected for these dainty garments called tea gowns for want of a better name, though many of them are just simply cosy and comfortable house dresses for those who have no active domestic duties to attend to. One other pretty gown of this sort is of drab crapeline trimmed around the bottom with frills of reseda green ribbon shirred on, perhaps six or seven of them. This is a welcome change from so much lace, of which the eye is beginning to weary. The vest is shirred and smooth across the bust, while the skirt is tucked in clusters and hangs from the bust line, where it is laid under a lace yoke. The sleeves are in bell form, and have ruched ribbon around them. This is a simple design, but a dainty one.

Heliotrope colienne was used to make another beautiful tea gown. The outer portion hangs in a loose shape from shoulders to feet, but is open from the neck. The under part is of the same material and is shirred in three lines in two places. At the bottom the fullness spreads for a flounce. This is simply hemmed, while the outer part is embroidered with green roses wrought in all around with heavy lace as a border.

It is square at the neck and has a deep, square lace collar, which hangs over the shoulders. The sleeves are in two parts, just like one flounce above another, and each has a narrow ruching of chiffon.

With the thermometer at no one knows how many degrees one must not forget the latest in shirt waists. They are just the neatest and nicest of linen lawns, with a little choice embroidery, handmade, upon the garment. Very sparse is this between the tucks, but the effect is smart. In the first place, the linen is the finest and sheerest that can be made, and the tucks are hand run. Every stitch is done by hand, and so these waists are not only neat, but expensive. Narrow ties finish them off at the neck, sometimes black and sometimes in one color or another.

Quite a fancy touch is added by sewing on many tiny pearl buttons along the fold. I saw one with a monogram embroidered on the sleeve above the elbow. HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

THE NEW WOMAN IDEA

Fads and Foibles of the Fair Sex

THE other day a newspaper reported the proceedings of a woman's club and prefaced the account with the observation that the Selectas prided themselves on being the "most fashionably gowned club of women in the country." What a magnificent superiority, now, to pride oneself on! To wear the longest, consequently the uncleanest, dress skirts, with the tightest waists, and those most heavily and uncomfortably loaded with embroidery, fringe, lace inset work and outset work, ribbons, velvets, buttons big as small saucers and in no case made to button, awful looking peg heeled Oxford ties with bows so big they give the appearance of bits of rag around the instep, with the sky scrapingest hats and the most bagniest sleeves in the United States! Isn't that an item for women supposed to have brains and immortal souls to pride themselves on? If a majority of women's organizations throughout my country have come to this then I say better it were the woman's club had never been invented. In those glorious Greek statues which have stood for twenty centuries as the model of all that is most beautiful in the female figure is it the clothes of the marble women that we admire most? Will American women ever, ever learn that dress is only an adjunct to beauty and not at all beauty itself? The true sestic principle in dress is that it shall be secondary to the body which it covers. When a woman is dressed in such a way that her costume attracts more attention than she herself does it is an evil and admission on her part that she is nothing in herself, therefore must resort to costly or bizarre garments to draw notice at all. That is the impression conveyed by the Selecta club. They have no intellectual power, so must address to any notice taken of them. In this matter of beauty it is the body itself we should spend time on, to make it comely by physical culture, and not the garments that robe it. Add to this accomplishments of intellect and soul and you will have my Lady Beautiful.

Very bad news from Roumania! There is likely to be a famine in the land. Roumanian women have struck. They refuse to do the nation's farm work and the Roumanian crop of acres lie unplowed, growing up in weeds, the dispatches say. How sad this is! Our hearts bleed for the hunger and want of the poor Roumanian men. It is said, though, that a few of them are coming up bravely to the scratch and are preparing to till what they must of the soil themselves. And the first result of this is a large order to the United States for agricultural machinery. Just so. No land sharp for his majesty Max if he can get out of it. Well, one doesn't blame him for that.

Mrs. Snapback was a smart widow with a grown son. The son was six feet tall and broad and strong in proportion. She herself was of good size and health. She married a poor, meek, weak little husband, not much more than half the size of her son and not so strong as herself. The poor little husband was expected to support Mrs. Snapback in comparative luxury. For some reason he failed to fill her ideal of a man, so she left him and sued him for alimony, which she obtained. He paid it awhile, then fell ill. Mrs. Snapback sued him for back pay and demanded also that the regular amount, $7 a week, be increased. She appeared in court beautifully gowned and wearing diamonds. She cast her gorgeous eyes over the pale, little exhusband, then over the court room, and smiled. "Is that a small or large place this is?" she exclaimed. The judge looked at her, shlebodied enough to take in washing for a living if she needed to, then at the brawny, big son. his eagle eye finally hovering over the scale, and answered: "Little more than a hand," said the judge, "you may reduce your wife's alimony to $1 a week if you want to."

A man who is opposed to the emancipation of women shows that there was something seriously wrong or lacking in his wife and female relatives. His stand on the woman question is a reflection on them.

A man who is liberal on the woman question should be made much of. He is worth ten women in conquering prejudice among his own sex. Besides that, he has a vote.

⁂

Stand by your own sex through thick and thin as men stand by theirs.

WOMEN SCULPTORS

The Famous Ones of America

WHEN Caroline Shawk Brooks began modeling in butter some thirty-five years ago on a Missouri farm there was scarcely a woman sculptor in America. "Sleeping Iolanthe," exhibited at the Centennial exposition in Philadelphia, was much admired. A little later Vinnie Ream Hoxie made models of warriors and generals on horseback, heroic size.

A little later yet girls began to learn carpenter work and carve furniture, also portrait heads in wood, at first in Cincinnati, then in other cities, and finally even to use hammer and chisel on stone. Mankind then discovered woman to be no longer the fragile porcelain creature that would break if you looked at her. The discovery did woman herself a world of good.

There is now no transcendently great sculptor in the world; therefore we would not expect to find any in the United States, particularly among American women. There are, however, several American women of respectable rank in this department of art.

The progress made by American women in sculpture may be judged from the gradually increasing specimens of their work in our national expositions. Here they have appeared not so much in the capacity of independent exhibitors as in the humbler yet useful role of workers on the decorative part of the exposition buildings. At the Columbian fair they were chiefly the assistants of men artists who received orders for groups or architectural ornamentation. At the Buffalo Pan-American, however, Karl Bitter, the friend of women as well as of men modelers and chiselers, had charge of the decorative architectural sculpture and gave several independent commissions to ladies. One of these fortunates was Miss Enid Yandell, who did s statue of Daniel Boone that was pronounced excellent work.

At the Louisiana Purchase exposition the number of women sculptors who have obtained orders for work on their own account has been greatly increased. Karl Bitter again has charge of the decorative architectural sculpture. Miss Enid Yandell will again model her Daniel Boone, likewise two other heroic figures. Various other portrait statues are making, and on these several young women artists are engaged. One of them is Miss Janet Scudder, now of New York, but formerly of Cincinnati, where she began her studies. Miss Evelyn Longman is another sculptor who has received a commission for work at St. Louis, on which she is busily engaged.

But there is other work, strong and virile, apart from portrait modeling, that has been given to young women. The women who have the St. Louis groups in hand are nearly all quite young; therefore the best of their lives and achievement is yet before them. Miss Edith Barretts Stevens is making the pediment for the main entrance to the Liberal Arts building.

One of the important commissions at the St. Louis fair is that awarded to Melva Beatrice Wilson. She has been ordered to prepare the eight spandrils for Machinery hall. The decoration of the spandrils represents the wheelwright and boiler making trades.

Miss Wilson is also from Cincinnati. Young women artists from the south and west nearly all settle finally in Paris, the only place for their proper opportunity there. One, however, who has been called the most powerful woman sculptor in America, lives in Philadelphia, Meta Vaux Warrick. Her mother was a hairdresser, her father a barber.

Meta Vaux Warrick showed such genius when a child that her instructors became interested and urged very earnestly that she should be sent to Paris. It was her own strongest earthly desire. Her mother pinched and saved to pay the girl's expenses. She is only twenty-three years old now. In Paris she worked desperately. One day she took to the artist Rodin a small statue of her making which proved to be the making of her, for it gave the famous artist a "thrill," and no mistake. It represented a man eating his own heart. Her genius lies largely in the depiction of the weird and the terrible, of tragedy, suffering and despair. Perhaps the fact that Miss Warrick has colored blood in her veins may account for this.

PRACTICAL GOWNS.

Crepe de Chine a Good Material. The New Taffetas.

For everyday wear charming gowns are made of dark woolen material trimmed with bright colored embroideries or Arabian lace.

A dark gown can be prettily arranged with a small square opening outlined with galloon or insertion lace, and removable chemisettes can be worn.

There has been a great revival of taffeta—in fact, no material is so popular in Paris unless it be chiffon. The new silk weaves possess less brilliancy, but greater wearing qualities.

For economically minded people the best frock is a black one of crepe de chine, chiffon, voile or taffeta. There are many dull days and occasions where black seems the only suitable wear, for it has a smartness of its own and seldom advertises its date. Crepe de chine is softer and not more expensive than taffeta; but, after all, on a hot summer's day there is something chic about the latter, for it sheds dust like alpaca.

A sun rayed plaited skirt of soft taffeta is charming worn with a blouse of the same and a jabot of yellowish lace.

The illustration shows a gown of heavy lace ecru and pale blue linon.

FASHION HINTS.

Navy Blue Is Popular—Pretty Taffeta Frocks Are Useful.

Navy blue is considered very chic this year, and it is seen in all materials, from cheviot to glace silk.

A dark navy blue glace seen recently was made with closely ganged skirt, the ganging coming about three inches below the hips, and it was finished at the hem with five large flat tucks, stitched with fancy veining between each tuck. This skirt touched the ground all round. In fact, it did more, for it lay on the ground, although it had no train. This is a characteristic feature of many of the smart afternoon skirts of the hour.

The short skirt is kept in Paris for street wear in the morning, and for practical purposes it does not enter in the category of smart gowns for afternoon wear.

Some of the taffeta frocks are made with loose sack boleros, with a fichu or stoleline ends of lace and chiffon. In most cases taffeta is a fabric which requires softening, and nothing can be more attractive than lace to give the required effect.

The cut shows a walking costume of blue cheviot. The jacket is made in the prevailing loose sack shape, laced in front with a silk cord.

FARMER'S RAG DOLL.

Created by Death of His Wife, Jerry Mooney Carries a Dummy with Him All the Time.

HELPS DUMMY TO FOOD.

Carrying in his arms a huge rag doll dressed in the clothing of his dead wife, Jerry Mooney, a farmer living near the village of Montague, Lewis county, N. Y., goes to his work in the fields each day.

For 13 years, ever since his wife, Molly, died of paralysis, Mooney has carried this dummy about with him. He refuses to believe his wife is dead. After her burial he made a rag woman and dressed it in his wife's clothes.

He often places the figure in the favorite chair of his wife and spends long evenings before the fire talking to it. At meal time he draws the chair containing the figure up to the table and helps it to food. On Sundays he dresses the figure in the best clothes his wife had at her death, gets out all of her jewelry and places it about the neck and on the hands of the doll.

Week days, when he goes to the field, the rag doll is carried by him and placed under the shelter of a tree in summer or in some protected spot in cold weather. He always carries luncheon for himself and the doll, and never eats the latter's portion.

Mooney and his wife came from Londonderry, in the north of Ireland, in the early fifties and settled on a small farm. They were rigid Covenanters, and, having no children, lived by themselves. When his wife died, in 1888, neighbors, not seeing her about, called at the house and found her dead in bed and her husband sitting by the side of the body and talking to her.

Mooney will permit no one to enter his house. The existence of the rag woman was discovered by persons who watched the house and saw him carrying it back and forth from the fields.

On all other subjects Mooney is rational.

MONEY FOR HEATHEN.

Here Is an Account of the Funniest Contribution Ever Turned Into a Church Fund.

"Many funny contributions are turned into the missionary hopper, but one of the oddest I ever heard of was the offering of a small boy in our Sunday school," said a prominent *member of a leading Brooklyn Meth*odist church to a New York Tribune reporter. "The boys in a certain class had been urged to do their utmost to bring in larger contributions to swell the missionary total for the year. One particular youngster, whose parents are very poor, had the month previous given 15 cents. On the last grand rally day, however, he shamefacedly produced only one cent.

"GAME DIDN'T WORK OUT."

"'De game didn't work out,' said he, apologetically to his teacher, of whom he was fond.

"'What do you mean by the game not working out?' asked the teacher.

"'Well, y' see,' said the lad, 'last month I kep' my eye skinned for "crap" games, an' w'en I seen a game on I'd steen a cop into it, an' w'en the cop chased de boys I'd jump in an' get wot's left of de money. Dat's de way I got 15 cents las' month. But yisterday w'en I puts a cop on to de game de boys grabbed up all de coin before dey lit out—all but one cent. That's all I got for me work, but maybe I'll have better luck nex' Saturday.'

"The narrative was told with absolute sincerity, and the lad apparently never had a qualm of conscience about his method used in gathering up pennies for the heathen."

Too bad that John Wesley could not live to hear some of the good things said about him that were not uttered with his bones.

The Elizabeth boy who said he was not born in the United States but in New York had reason in his statement. If New York's foreign element increases at its present rate, the city will be anything but American in a comparatively few years.

A California man has left his son a legacy of $400,000 on condition that he shall marry a New Jersey girl, and the young man is speeding East at the present time on his quest for a bride and a fortune. Get in line girls and look your prettiest. It is the opportunity of a life time for one of you.

A member of "Newport's "smart set" has been giving his parrot the honors of a personage, having it driven about town in front of a couple of footmen. Rather rough on the bird, to have to impersonate a high society "swell." Doubtless he answers all the requirements quite as well as his master.

Another wail comes from the New Brunswick Home News office. This is the latest:

"The importance of a better supervision of the milk supplied to the community is pointed out by the spread of such diseases as typhoid fever and scarlet fever in other places by the distribution of impure milk. Only in a general way does our State Health Board watch the milk supply. It must devolve upon local boards of health to protect their own citizens. Price cutting in this county has had one bad effect, that of causing the best dairymen to send their milk to the big cities where they can get better prices. Our opinion is that cheap milk is a positive menace to the health of the household. An agricultural friend tells us that a farmer who sells milk at six cents cannot make a decent profit, and that he must dilute it to get square with the consumer. The wise man will pay his milkman a fair price and get the pure article."

We regret by no fear from price cutting if New Brunswick only will wake up. Plainfield spends money wisely in protecting its city through an efficient Board of Health department.

The statement of Rev. C. J. Ryder, secretary of the American Missionary Association, in addressing the Congregational Church yesterday, to the effect that the race problem can best be solved by training up a wise leadership in the negro race itself deserves thoughtful consideration. It differs from the solution offered for instance by Former President Cleveland, who says that the problem should be left for the southern whites to settle. Perhaps, however, the two theories are not so much at variance as seems at first sight. "Let the white man do all in his power to train the black leadership and then leave these leaders to settle the problem with the others of their own blood." This is the substance of Mr. Ryder's doctrine, and probably Mr. Cleveland would concur in its good common sense.

With this and other problems of race and nation that have to be faced, one is often reminded of the applicability of Shakespeare's advice:

"To thine ownself be true,
And it must follow as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man."

When whites as well as blacks are educated to a realization of the truth of these words and to an ability to act upon their wisdom, there will be no race problems to solve.

FEW PARTICIPATE IN EVENT AT THE WESTFIELD CLUB.

Hale Drives Away the Enthusiasts —Present Standing for Golf Committee Cup at Hillside—The Scores Made on Saturday.

H. R. Stockton, by winning first honors, leads for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. He made a net score of 76 on Saturday and he now has a total of 9½ points. Augustus R. Fisk, who has lead in this competition for a number of weeks, has not played of late, thereby not having an opportunity to improve his position in the race.

Despite the wretched condition a number of enthusiasts took part in the competition, although but few posted their scores. Olaf Saugstad finished second with a net score of 79, while E. T. Newkirk won the remaining point with a net score of 81, pretty low scores considering weather conditions. It was decided to postpone the play for the Men's Handicap cup until next Saturday,owing to the limited number present willing to enter the competition.

These scores were made for Golf Committee cup:

H. R. Stockton, 83, 6—76; Olaf Saugstad, 94, 15—79; E. T. Newkirk, 91, 10—81; H. deP. Wright, 85, 1—84; Walter Peterson, 95, 10—85; Dudley H. Barrows, 93, 6—87; Arthur Murphy, 100, 10—90; C. B. Morgan, 107, 13—94.

The rain was too much even for the enthusiastic golfers of the Park Golf Club and the weekly competitions were allowed to go by default. W. R. Faber was the only member to visit the course during the day and he did not remain to play.

A corporal's guard visited the course of the Westfield Golf Club and took part in the monthly handicap play. Charles Hansell won the cup with a moderately low score. A majority of those who played did not post their scores.

CLOSED SEASON'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS OF TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH HELD EXERCISES.

Entertainment Was Successful —Programme of Piano Solos and Recitations—Those Taking Part.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society, of Trinity Reformed Church, held its closing exercises, for the season, in the lecture room of the church Thursday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock. The exercises were arranged entirely by the officers and members of the society, reflecting much credit on their ability. In addition to a large attendance of members there were present many friends.

The programme consisted of piano solos and recitations. Those who rendered solos were the Misses Edra Cole, Elsie Dinavan, Edith Robinson and Harold Schenck, Cornelius Schenck, Jr., and Fred Smith. Recitations were given by the Misses Cora Gano, Ella Porter, Ethel Vail, Elsie Tier, Beatrice Tier, Laura Trowin, Anna Vail, Mary Porter, Adelaide Cole, Helen Woolley, Edna Dilts, Beulah VanWinkle, Ella Case, and Chas. Keiderling and Rosamond Rogers.

Miss Ida Tier, as president of the society, had charge of the exercises and announced the various numbers. After the entertainment refreshments, consisting of ice cream and cake, were served and a social time was enjoyed. The society will not meet again until the first Wednesday in October.

SOCIETY WOMEN IN JAPANESE COSTUME

Tea and Musicale Under Auspices of Hillside Tennis and Golf Club.

A PONY CART PARADE

WEATHER DOES NOT DETRACT FROM DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR.

Young Men and Women Sing Popular Songs From Latest Comedies —Awards in Pony Cart Parade —A Dinner at Night.

The heavy downpour of rain did not dampen the enthusiasm of the members and friends of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Saturday afternoon, when the Japanese tea and musicale was given for the benefit of the club. The affair was a decided success, attracting over two hundred guests. Everything was on the Japanese order. Many Plainfield society women appeared in Oriental costume. The clubhouse was prettily decorated to represent a Japanese garden, there being a profusion of roses, fans and fancy umbrellas. Several cozy nooks and corners were arranged where oriental draperies were used to good effect.

In the large room of the clubhouse there was a sale of Japanese fans, umbrellas and novelties. This was in charge of Mrs. Theodore Wilson, Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Mrs. Henry Clay Irons, Mrs. John G. Drayton. The candy table was in charge of the Misses Holly, while Mrs. Joseph Sandford presided over the lemonade well. An attraction was the room devoted to fortune-telling by Miss Stewart. Assisting at the various tables were the Misses Fraley, Davis, Sykes, Moore, Stewart, Scott, Fleming, Finch, Tracy and Sandford. They were all dressed in Japanese costume.

A decided feature of the afternoon was the musicale, a programme of unusual merit being arranged from the latest musical comedies. The solo work by Mrs. LeRoy Mack, Mrs. E. T. Newkirk, Mrs. George Ring, Willard Wadsworth, Irving Stewart, as well as that of the chorus of men and women won hearty merited applause. Accompanying the singers was an orchestra composed of Miss Hyatt, piano; A. Willis West, mandolin and Dr. Charles Davis, violin. They assisted largely in making the musicale a success.

This is the programme:

Opening chorus, "The Moon" from San Toy; solo and men's chorus, "Chinese Soye Man," from San Toy, Irving Stewart; solo and chorus, "Rhoda," from San Toy, Mrs. LeRoy Mack; solo, "Posey from Over the Sea," San Toy, Willard Wadsworth; solo, "My Hong Kong Baby," Chinese Honeymoon, Mrs. E. T. Newkirk; chorus of men, "Heidlberg," Prince of Pilsen; solo, "Jewel of Asia," Mrs. George Ring; solo, Mrs. LeRoy Mack; solo and chorus, "Six Little Wives," San Toy, Willard Wadsworth; solo and quartette, "The Violet," Prince of Pilsen, Mrs. Joseph Shellabarger; solo and chorus, "My Sulu Lulu Loo," Mr. Hall.

It was intended to have a pony cart parade in the afternoon, but here the weather seriously interferred, but not to the extent of defeating the scheme altogether. There were three pony carts out and the occupants of each one received a prize. Howard and Delano Ladd received first prize, Miss Kelly and "Jack" Holly the second and Marion, Warren and James Ackerman the third. Each cart was handsomely decorated with flowers, chiefly roses. The cart occupied by the Ackerman boys was the most elaborate, but they did not arrive until after the awards were made. However, it was arranged to have the carts paraded again, when the third presentation was made.

Nearly all of the members and friends present in the afternoon, remained at the club for dinner and enjoyed the repetition of the musicale programme in the evening, given with equal success. The whole affair was planned and arranged by Miss Maud VanBoskerck, who was assisted by a number of other women of the club. It is expected that a substantial sum will be nested for the club's treasury to meet current expenses.

BURGLARS AT WORK IN HEART OF CITY

Three Business Houses Entered, But Small Amount of Booty Secured.

NO ARRESTS YET MADE

THIEVES OPERATE AT E. S. F. RANDOLPH'S STORE IN DAYLIGHT.

Nagle's Pharmacy and Belmont Cafe Entered—No Clew to Perpetrators — Methods of Entrance to Stores.

Three daring burglaries in the heart of the business section of the town took place Sunday, and one of them was perpetrated in broad day-light. E. F. Randolph's drug store at the corner of Watchung and North avenues, was robbed by persons supposed to have been familiar with the place and the habits of the proprietor and clerks. The Belmont Hotel, conducted by J. H. McVey, on North avenue, was entered shortly after 1 o'clock in the morning by means of the transom and Clayton N. Nagle's pharmacy, at the corner of Front and Grove streets, was entered by the same way. There is said to be no clews to the robbers.

After Frank Denckian, the clerk, had closed the store at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. Randolph had occasion to enter his store. Although Denckian had been gone but ten minutes when the money drawer had been looted and $16 was missing. Investigation showed that none of the stock had been taken. "No Sale" was rung up on the cash register. Further investigation showed that the door to the rear elevator had been forced open. None of the stock was disturbed. The robber left behind $10 secreted in the back part of the till.

Although the other two burglaries took place early in the morning the boldness with which they were accomplished is astounding. At Nagle's the men gained admittance through the transom. They secured $1.35 from an automatic chewing gum machine. The men did not loot the stock. Mrs. Joseph Frank, a next door neighbor heard a noise at 1 o'clock. She fell over a chair upon getting out of bed and this is believed to have frightened the burglars away. Mr. Nagle was robbed a year ago yesterday.

After breaking into Nagle's pharmacy the men are supposed to have gone to the Belmont Hotel on North avenue. Entrance was secured through the grating at the top of the door. Some odd change was secured in addition to several meal tickets.

Sunday morning Patrolman McCarthy visited the hotel and found on the floor strange footprints. Old straw and traces of manure lead the police to think that the men came from some stable in the vicinity.

COMMEMORATE BIRTH OF JOHN WESLEY

Services at the Grace M. E. Church in Honor of Founder of Methodism.

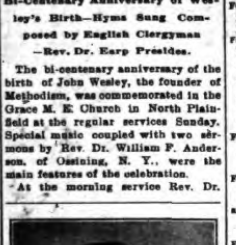
GREAT REFORMER'S LIFE

REV. DR. W. F. ANDERSON SKETCHES CAREER OF PREACHER.

Bi-Centenary Anniversary of Wesley's Birth—Hymns Sung Composed by English Clergyman —Rev. Dr. Earp Presides.

The bi-centenary anniversary of the birth of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, was commemorated in the Grace M. E. Church in North Plainfield at the regular services Sunday. Special music coupled with two sermons by Rev. Dr. William F. Anderson, of Ossining, N. Y., were the main features of the celebration.

At the morning service Rev. Dr.



Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp.

Anderson delivered a sermon on the life, character and work of John Wesley. He told of his times and the manner in which the reformer fought his way for a revival of religious fervor. His childhood and later career were sketched. Wesley's conversion and the zeal with which he entered into the work of enlightening the poorer classes of London and bringing them into a living knowledge of things spiritual was lucidly brought out. His teachings and doctrines, the speaker said, were accepted today by a large proportion of the Christian people.

During the morning service all the hymns sung were those composed by John Wesley. Miss Carrie Tingley rendered one of the great preacher's hymns as an offertory solo. The choir composed: Mrs. Charles Greer, Miss Mary Steiner, Miss Agnes Tingley, Mrs. Anna Most, Miss May Conover and Miss Carrie Tingley, assisted by John Steiner and E. H. Quipp. Miss Alice Carrol presided at the organ.

At the evening service of the Epworth League, the topic generally discussed was Wesley. His work was discussed and the hymns sung were those composed by the great preacher.

Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp presided at the evening service and introduced Rev. Dr. Anderson. The latter preached another instructive lesson. His text was taken from the five verse of the forty-sixth Psalm. In order that the truths of the Gospel might be brought to men, said he, it was necessary that men should first be brought to God. He emphasized the importance of having God near us at times of trouble and illustrated his thought with narratives of some of his ministerial experiences.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Buckle were last heard of in Central Africa and since then they have been travelling in different parts of the world.

PUPIL WORK EXHIBIT AT PAROCHIAL ACADEMY

Work of the Youngsters Being Shown in St. Gabriel's Academy, in the Borough.

CLOSE OF FIRST YEAR

SOME DESIGNS ATTRACT SPECIAL ATTENTION OF VISITORS.

Idea of Work Along Lines of Art and Elementary Sciences May be Gained—List of Exhibitors—School to Reopen in Fall.

An interesting exhibition of school work is made at St. Gabriel's Academy in North Plainfield for the benefit of the parents of the pupils. The exhibit opened Monday and closed the next afternoon. The work shows the careful training of the pupils by the Sisters of Mercy in charge of the school.

In the school rooms, an idea of the work of the department of art and elementary science is gained by the examples of the work arranged about the walls. Map making, by little tots six years of age, and even fancy work by children only a few years older is shown. The original examination papers and drawing sheets are exhibited so that the visitor gets a thorough idea of the every day work of the pupils.

On the first floor some of the work of the older pupils is shown. Delicate drawn work, carefully executed embroidery, hand paintings in water colors and in oils are samples of the work accomplished by the older pupils. Included in the display are some pastels and etchings by some of the Sisters of Mercy which are worthy of more than passing notice.

Some of the pupils whose names appear on the articles displayed are Miss Margaret Monahan, Miss May Dacheene, Miss Rebrant, Miss Nettie Blank, Miss Anna Fedellcon, Miss Lucy Traynor, Miss Marie Kenny, Miss Dorothy Heise, Miss Anna Jaeger, Miss May McCullough, Miss Francis LaPorte, Miss Madeleine Noonan and Miss May Berkhaus.

There are thirty-two pupils in the school ranging from four years to eighteen. One of the more advanced pupils, Miss Edna Smith, has on exhibition a large tapestry depicting a bootblack. It is cleverly executed and is considered a work of art.

On Friday the school was closed, the occasion marking the first year of its existence. The event was observed by a feast for the pupils provided by the Sisters of Mercy of St. Joseph's parish. The institution will be opened again in the fall when better accommodations will be had.

Welcome Home.

A welcome home party was tendered Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Shotwell and Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Cadmus, of this city, and Mr. and Mrs. Bodine, of Dunellen, at Mr. Shotwell's home on Fairview avenue last Monday. It was to celebrate their home coming from Los Angeles, Cal., where they were representatives at the Presbyterian general assembly. About fifty of their friends were present. Music and refreshments were enjoyed. Warm congratulations were extended the returned people for their fortunate escapes from disaster in travelling, through Kansas at the time of the floods.

Look at That!

A. J. Leader, of 63 Duer street, who is at the head of the Leader Printing Company, 33 Duane street, New York, suffered the loss of about $10 last Friday night, that amount being taken from a petty cash drawer at his New York office by safe crackers who had gained entrance to the office presumably by a fire-escape. The thieves tried to force off the door on the safe, thinking the cash to pay the employes on Saturday was inside. They were fooled, however, for Mr. Leader had paid his men on Friday.

Cold Water Advocates.

Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, will hold an open meeting on Monday evening, June 29, in the rooms in Washington Hall building. There will be an entertainment and it is expected that some of the State officers will be present. A general invitation is extended to the public to attend.

Office Being Altered.

The real estate office of George F. Brown in North Plainfield is undergoing alterations. The place is being enlarged so as to embrace some of the space of the corner store formerly occupied by William L. Smalley & Co., as a butcher shop.

Engagement Announced.

At a very charming luncheon given to a number of friends Saturday at 521 Madison avenue, by Miss Anna K. VanArsdale, daughter of Mrs. John K. VanArsdale, the engagement was announced of Miss VanArsdale to Clarence Brower Brokaw, of New York, formerly of Plainfield.

ATTRACTIVE CHURCH FESTIVAL

A SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR, CONDUCTED BY WOMEN.

Ladies' Aid Society of Park Avenue Baptist Church Realize Goodly Sum.

While the rain did not cause a postponement of the lawn fete planned to be held on the lawn of the Park Avenue Baptist Church on Saturday afternoon and evening, it interfered considerably with the affair and caused the Ladies' Aid Society, under whose auspices it was held, to move indoors.

However, it was a success. The affair was held in the Sunday-school rooms of the church, which place was made attractive by many fancy booths and through the use of bunting and flags.

These women were in charge of the booths and tables mentioned: Cake—Mrs. A. D. Thompson, Mrs. Theodore I. Runyon and Mrs. Charles VanWinkle; aprons and stocks—Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson and Mrs. Nelson Runyon; "mystery booth"—Mrs. Emily Runyon, Miss Marguerite Ostrom and Miss Esther Thompson, lemonade—Miss Henrietta Cuming and Miss Cora Brokaw; candy—Miss Lace, Mrs. David M. Runyon and Miss Julia Wyckoff; refreshments—Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry, assisted by Mrs. A. L. Hellyer and Miss Olive Z. DeLany. In the afternoon these young women assisted as waitresses: Miss Eleanore Stutsman, Miss Mabelle Stutsman, Miss Marjorie Brown and Miss Arline Brown and in the evening these young women served: Miss Grace Weeks, Miss Mildred Odam, Miss Autumn DeLany, Miss Lillian Cuming, Miss May Kelley and Miss Alice Brown, all members of the Junior Endeavor Society.

ENGAGEMENT AND BIRTHDAY

WILLIAM PIKE AND MISS SMITH HAVE PLIGHTED THEIR TROTH.

Mrs. W. D. Smith Celebrates Birthday Anniversary and Announces Daughter's Engagement.

A pleasant affair of last Monday was a party given in honor of the birthday anniversary of Mrs. W. D. Smith, of Washington avenue. It was also the occasion for the announcement of the engagement of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Smith's daughter, Miss Drusilla O. Smith, to William D. Pike, son of Mr. and Mrs. Noah W. Pike, of East Front street. The home was prettily decorated, there being a profusion of carnations. The reception was from 5 to 8 o'clock and at 6:30 the guests enjoyed an elaborate supper.

Mrs. Smith received a great many handsome gifts, while Miss Smith was also remembered. The latter received from her parents an engagement present of a two-stone diamond with pearls and torquoise, and from Mr. Pike's parents she received a hand-painted vase. Miss Harriet Seward, of Cranford, presented her with a hand-painted collar. Mr. Pike's gift to his fiancee was a pearl and torquois pin.

Those people were present: Mr. and Mrs. Noah W. Pike, W. D. Pike, Garfield Pike, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Smith, Miss Drucilla Smith, Miss Mary Smith, Miss Ada Smith, Orvil Smith, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Snodgrass, of this city; Mrs. W. D. Cole, of New York, and Miss Harriet Seward, of Cranford.

REV. J. H. ZELIE ACCEPTS THE CALL

Choice of Crescent Avenue Church Congregation to Become Its Pastor.

SUCCEEDS DR. RICHARDS

HE IS TO ASSUME CHARGE HERE IN SEPTEMBER.

Favorable Letter Received by Committee of Fifteen, Which Was Delegated to Select a New Pastor—Announcement Made.

As was expected by the members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church and congregation, Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, of the First Reformed Church, Schenectady, N. Y., has accepted the call to become the pastor of the local church, to succeed Rev. Dr. William R. Richards. Announcement of his decision was received in a letter from Mr. Zelie which was read at the church service Sunday morning. The communication was received by the committee of fifteen, appointed by the church to secure a successor to Dr. Richards. This is what the new pastor has to say:

"First Reformed Church,
"Schenectady, N. Y.

"To the Officers and Congregation of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church of Plainfield, N. J.:

"Having taken such time as seemed reasonable for considering your invitation to become your minister I now write to say that I accept this call.

"It was in the first year of my own ministry, thirteen years ago, that I first began to know of the work and preaching of your former pastor, Dr. Richards, whom you have called me to succeed. In accepting this call I wish to speak of the interest which ever since then I have felt in him, as preacher and man and, to say how deeply I appreciate the honor of following him in the pastorate whose traditions and spirit will always be an inspiration to me.

"The large degree to which your members have personally given themselves to the work of the church and to extending that work beyond their own borders and to making others sharers in it, encourages me beyond all other considerations in taking this step, and while in all this I enter into the reward of other men's labors, I do so in the hope and prayer that there will be no abatement but rather an advance in the services which your people have so freely given to the work of Christ's kingdom.

"In this spirit I cordially accept your call and ask you to pray with me for God's blessing upon this new relationship. I shall be ready to take up the work of the church at such time in September as may be arranged for with your officers.

"Faithfully yours,
"John Sheridan Zelie.

A Model and a Monument.

A dispatch to The Philadelphia Record from Bristol, Pa., says that "there was nothing remarkable in the life and death" of Sammy Cox, of Emilie, near Bristol, who was buried last week. There was something very remarkable in his life. He died at eighty-two in the old homestead where he was born; and in those eighty-two years he "had never been absent over night from his home." A man of settled habits, a model and a monument of permanency, a rebuke to American nomadic life.

Improved Service.

The trolley cars are now being operated between Bound Brook and New Brunswick on a headway of forty-five minutes, thus giving patrons much better service. The traction company is now giving a fifteen-minute service between Bound Brook and the company's park, every evening between the hours of 7:15 and 8:30, with extra cars to put on when necessary.

Chairmen of Committees.

Among the members of the Grain Trade Protective Committee appointed by President Burgess, of the Produce Exchange, New York, are John Valiant, of Myrtle avenue, chairman of committee on railroad affairs and D. M. VanVliet, of Washington avenue, chairman of the Grain Commission Committee. James F. Parker, of Grove street, is on the committee for railroad affairs also.

Plainfield Girl's Honor.

At the recent prize college entrance examinations held at Swarthmore College, Miss Mabel H. Vail won a prize scholarship of $150. Miss Vail is one of the graduating class of the Plainfield High School.

William Overland, who has been here on five days' furlough, has returned to West Point.

CELEBRATED HER BIRTHDAY

MARJORIE THOMAS ENTERTAINED HER FRIENDS AT CLUBHOUSE.

Little Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Lewis Thomas, of Watchung Avenue, Hostess at Hillside.

By no means the least important events at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday afternoon was a party given by Mr. and Mrs. T. Lewis Thomas, of Watchung avenue, for their daughter, Marjorie Thomas, in celebration of her sixth birthday anniversary. The affair was attended with many pleasant features and little Miss Thomas entertained eleven of her friends.

During the celebration the hostess and her guests enjoyed refreshments, after which all received favors. A pleasant incident was the presentation of Japanese dolls to the girls and bows and arrows to the boys by Keo Tetsuka, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Tetsuka, of Belvidere avenue, who was one of the guests. The little fellow was dressed in Japanese costume.

These were the guests at the party: Marjorie Thomas, Eleanor and Dorothy Webber, Katharine and Elizabeth Brown, Wesley Johnston, Winnifred Titus, Keo Tetsuka, Mary Thomas, Dorothy MacKenzie, Waltham Newkirk and Mary Rushmore.

POURS HOT SHOT INTO CASINO DANGERS

Rev. John McMurray Says It Is Not Different From Orgies at Galvin's Park.

HARMFUL CANDY SOLD

MINORS CAN GET INTOXICATING DRINKS IN PLAINFIELD.

Gambling Prevalent in the City—Pitfalls in the Way of Young Men and Women—Sermon at Monroe Avenue Church.

"Are the speakers at our graduating exercises consistent when they address the students on the importance of high ideals, and allow them immediately thereafter to hie themselves to the Casino, and spend the remaining hours until morning in dancing, a mere physical, not intellectual, gratification?" This was one of the many sensational questions and utterances made by Rev. John McMurray, last Sunday in his sermon on "Pitfalls in the Way" at the Monroe Avenue Church. He was referring to the dangers and temptations that beset the pathway of the youth going from the schools into the world. He continued further:

"Can a minister of the Gospel consistently denounce the orgies at Galvin's Park and the notorious resorts at Scotch Plains and not condemn the late dances at the Casino and other dancing halls in our own city? Does evening dress grove a taliman or charm against the harmfulness of these practices? Is there any ethical difference between the two? Both are indulgence in mere physical pleasures, one of the pitfalls in the way of young men and women.

"Another danger comes from the habit of social drinking in the home. There is as much danger and wickedness attendant upon the drinking of wines and champagnes at the club or in the home as there is in drinking beer or whiskey in a public bar. And perhaps the home drinker has the better excuse, if excuse there can be."

Mr. McMurray quoted statistics showing the comparative numbers of young men in cities who attend church, and drink in public barrooms. In one city 9,000 young men visited a single saloon in two hours and the next morning there were only 557 young men present at church services. He referred to the evils of the practice of selling confectionery with brandy in it—brandy drops. He also made mention of the fact that it is possible for minors to obtain intoxicating drinks in Plainfield in open violation of the law, instancing the case of a minor who is a notorious drunkard.

"Gambling," he said in referring to a third pitfall, "is stealing. It is prohibited by State laws. And yet I know of cases in North Plainfield where 'hand-book men' have gone openly among young boys and induced them to 'play the races.'

"There is also open gambling among the followers of baseball, noticed in one instance repeatedly in the game between Sate Works and St. Mary's. It was in direct violation of the law. And the policeman carefully looked the other way."

Mr. McMurray concluded by referring to the last pitafll, the danger of irreverence, of making light of the name of the Creator. "'A personal belief in the Creator is necessary to success."

PROBLEM OF THE RACES

DISCUSSED BY REV. C. J. RYDER AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

"Educate Negro Leaders and Let Them Work Out Their Own Salvation," Is His Advice.

"Every fourth man, woman and child in the United States is colored," said Rev. C. J. Ryder Sunday morning, in his address at the Congregational Church, his statement going by way of illustration of the magnitude of the race problem in America. Mr. Ryder is the secretary of the American Missionary Association, and the subject of his address was "The Problem of the Races in America." He said further:

"The problem of the twentieth century is the problem of the colored man. For the solution of the difficulty it is not safe to trust the white people of the South, as prominent statesmen have advised. The whites by their harsh treatment are driving out the better class of negroes from the South. They will not give the blacks the opportunity they seek for social and spiritual betterment. The race demands a leadership from its own blood, and when you have trained up a black leadership, wise and intelligent enough to cope with the ethical and industrial problems of the race, you will practically have settled the race question. As for the Indians," said Mr. Ryder further, "they can be trusted to work out their own problem. All that is needed for them is a little assistance in training their natural persistence and reverence."

FREEDOM CASTLE AT CHURCH

LOCAL FRATERNAL ORGANIZATION ATTENDS DIVINE SERVICE.

Rev. Chas. E. Herring Preaches and Choir Sings Special Music.

Members of Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, to the number of seventy-five, attended divine service, last Sunday, at the First Presbyterian Church. The pastor, Rev. C. E. Herring, delivered an appropriate sermon. His text was "Press Toward the Mark." Mr. Herring spoke many pointed truths. He urged his hearers to strive for the Kingdom of Heaven, as well as for the bester things in this life.

During the services the quartette, Miss Etta Raybert, soprano; Mrs. S. H. Tugwell, alto; Elmer E. Cutting, tenor, and Henry Baldwin Drake, bass, rendered special music, including a duet by Miss Raybert and Mrs. Tugwell. The music was under the direction of Clifford Braider, organist. Mr. Drake sang in place of R. Wilson Derby, the regular man, who was taken suddenly ill during the afternoon.

YOUNG MUSICIANS.

Performed Cleverly at Recital Given by Their Instructor, Miss Grant —Was Last of the Year.

Little tots entertained a number of music lovers, Saturday afternoon, at the closing recital of Miss F. May Grant's music class at her home on East Seventh street. In spite of the rain the attendance was large and the selections rendered by the pupils were most creditable to their instructress. The programme was not rendered in its entirety on account of the storm, but the performance was none the less interesting.

Master Manuel Vail displayed exceptional ability as a pianist in his rendering of Brags's "Angels' Serenade" and the "Dance of the Demons," both difficult pieces. Although but nine years of age he *astonished his hearers by the sym*pathy and accuracy with which he interpreted the works. Miss May Pruden and Miss Rose Hock, who played several duets, were commended for the ease with which they carried intricate parts from classical compositions in perfect time and harmony. Six-year-old Gertrude Blair also played her audience by work remarkable in one so young.

Vocal selections by Miss Ruth Adele Fray, aged six years, were a feature of the programme providing of special interest. Miss Grant, the instructress, sang and played several classical compositions. The rooms were decorated attractively with flowers and were filled with parents and friends of the pupils.

H. W. Titus, a student at Cornell University, is at his home in Central avenue for the summer.

FRIENDS THREW RICE.

Newly-Married Couple Narrowly Escaped Injury—Groom Formerly of Plainfield.

A pair of badly frightened horses, running through crowded streets at a made pace, collided with a trolley car, demolishing the carriage and throwing out the occupants, and all because of showers of rice aimed at a newly married couple by their friends. It was the same old story with new environment and new actors.

Miss Anna J. Fogel, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., was the bride, and Dr. John Alfred Brooke, a practicing physician of that city formerly of Plainfield, was the groom. Fortunately neither was injured by the fall, although the fright and excitement made an unpleasant beginning to the wedding trip. The trip to the station was continued in another carriage, uninterrupted by further instances of their friends playful affection.

The wedding ceremony was performed Tuesday evening at the bride's home in Wilkesbarre, a brilliant gathering of relatives and friends from New York and Philadelphia, making a notable society event. The groom's parents from Plainfield were among those present. Dr. and Mrs. Brooke will include Plainfield in their wedding trip, remaining a few days as the guests of the groom's parents.

COUPLE CELEBRATE FIFTY YEARS WED

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Teeple Observe Half Century of Married Life.

MANY FRIENDS PRESENT

RECEPTION AT HOME AND COLLATION IN WASHINGTON HALL.

Over One Hundred Relatives and Friends Offer Congratulations—Music and Speeches—List of Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Teeple, of South Plainfield, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage, last Thursday. Through the day guests gathered from Newark, Jersey City, Jersey Hill and elsewhere.

After a reception at the home of the host, the company proceeded to Washington Hall where a collation was served upon tables arranged in the form of a T square.

The aged couple received the warm congratulations of the assembled friends, after which Rev. J. A. Cubberley gave a brief and appropriate address. He compared the happiness of the period of advancing age with that of youth. He declared that after men and women have passed by the fables and fashions of earlier life they settle down to a more genuine happiness in the quietness and peacefulness of advanced years.

Miss Ida H. Olpp, of Newark, charmingly rendered "The Mission of a Rose" and "The Lost Chord." Irving T. Teeple, of Newark, was the accompanist.

About eighty persons were gathered at the tables. At the close of the repast the company joined in repeating the Mizpah benediction, "The Lord watch between me and thee when we are absent one from another."

The hall and tables were appropriately decorated with bunting and flowers.

Afterwards dancing was enjoyed in by many. Representatives of three generations of the family participated in a fancy dance.

A large number of neighbors and friends, as well as relatives of the family were present, including Mr. and Mrs. Henry Teeple, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. B. Teeple, Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Teeple, Mr. and Mrs. B. Germany Educates Dogs.

Education in Germany does not stop at children; it includes the dogs. New instruction for training those used in the army have just been issued. All the dogs must be thoroughbreds and of the best pedigrees. Heretofore Airedale terriers have been used, but now the German short-haired bird-dogs are to be tried. Their main service is maintaining quick communication between posts. The experiment is already successful enough to insure a promising future for ambitious and intelligent dogs. Henceforth competition for army appointments will be keen among them. All who are faithful may look forward to respectable positions at reasonable pay with retirement on a pension, and perhaps an advance in rank of one degree above that last attained. The picture of the gray, rotund, old retired General-Dog tolerantly inspecting the sad young dogs who succeed him is a cheerful one to consider.—Youth's Companion.

Birds on Women's Hats.

The Society for the Protection of Birds in London has been making a seemingly successful campaign against the wearing of egret feathers by fashionable women on their hats, and has been inclined to congratulate itself on the result. So-called artificial aigrettes, "warranted artificial," were sold at the shops instead of the real ones. The society bought a lot of these, had them examined by experts and was amazed to find that they were all genuine feathers of the white egret. In six months' time 20,000 of them had been imported. The only way to stop such cruelty, these birds having all been killed in the breeding season, is to induce women not to wear the feathers. The campaign carried on against the use of feathers and stuffed birds on hats has not been very successful. Fashionable persons are too often selfish in such matters.—Philadelphia Press.

Buzzards of Vera Cruz.

The buzzards that have long infested Vera Cruz and served a useful purpose as winged scavengers are doomed. A London firm is putting in a modern sewer and water system. The birds have become so numerous that they are a pest. The protection of the municipality has been removed, and when the new drainage system shall be completed the city will be rid of the pest, the contract which have already been reduced somewhat by catching the buzzards and placing them in wooden cages to be taken to sea and drowned.—N. No Plumbers in Heaven.

Rain had fallen almost steadily for several days. Johnny, the plumber's son, was displeased, as the dampness kept him in the house. One evening he said to his father:

"The angels can't be very thoughtful of the people down here, or they'd have their leaky pipes fixed."

Then the lad's business instinct asserted itself. "Pop, why don't you go to Heaven?" he asked, after a moment's cogitating. "Maybe there ain't any plumbers there, and you'd get the job."—N. Y. Times.

"Did I understand you to say that our old friend Barnstormer was married?" asked the low comedian.

"Your understanding is still doing stunts," replied the heavy-weight soubrette. "He married the daughter of a poultry dealer."

SUGGESTS SWACKHAMER FOR THE LEADERSHIP

The Correspondent of Philadelphia Record Sizes Up Somerset's Assemblyman.

GOVERNORSHIP TIMBER

HE COMMANDS RESPECT AT HOME AND ABROAD.

Some Inclined to Believe That He Will Figure as State Convention As a Candidate for Gubernatorial Nomination.

The Trenton staff correspondent of the Philadelphia Record, Democratic, has some complimentary things to say for Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield.

In discussing the probable candidates for leadership in the next Legislature he says:

"It is rather more likely that attention will be given to that tall, lank, happy man whom Assemblyman Secord dubbed 'the tall sycamore of Somerset.' So rapidly has he won popular favor at home that the Republicans of Somerset are seriously discussing the advisability of making no nomination for the Assembly, the coming fall because of the fear of overwhelming defeat if the Democrats shall renominate Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer. That the Democrats are sure to do, for Mr. Swackhamer has come rapidly to the front as one of the State's leading Democrats. He had been in the Assembly many weeks before he was known. 'He had laid back, just watching us,' said one of his fellows, 'and when we thought he was sleeping his soundest he waked up and he knew everyone of us through and through.'

"Swackhamer wore well and by the time the end of the session came it was some question which of the two, Leader Treacy or the 'Tall Sycamore,' wielded the most influence. Swackhamer soon convinced his fellow-members of his sincerity and integrity, for there were times when he could forget partisan ties and fly to the assault upon unrighteous measures which his party colleagues advocated.

"It was soon discovered that he stood for a high standard of purity, and, with his deep, rather melodious voice, commanding figure and fund of apt anecdote, he very readily commanded the admiration and respect of every members of the House, without regard to political ties, were his.

"In the calculations as to a leader, therefore, Swackhamer will have to be very carefully considered. Indeed, there are those who, having watched him grow from a country gaze Republican county, are inclined to the opinion that he will cut no small figure in the consideration of candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor."

Record Gas Refuse.

The commissioner of street cleaning in New York city, Mr. Woodbury, has been explaining how the municipality derives a revenue from every bit of street sweepings and refuse collected in New York, and he is proud of the good results from the city's incinerator and "digestor." "Now, what do you suppose," he said, "frequently clogs up our sifter? Why, hairpins! Do you know we sell tons of them and get quite a revenue from them? And what do you suppose came out of the 'digester' the other day? Two one-dollar bills. After the refuse is sifted," he continued, "it goes into the digester and later on is covered with oil. The top is skimmed off and what do you think we do with that? Why, that goes to Holland or France and comes back to this country as perfumery."—N. Y. Sun.

"You don't care much for such things, perhaps?"

"Oh, it isn't that, but this don't seem to be much good."

"Not complete enough, possibly?"

"It goes pretty near back to Adam, if that's what you mean," returned the hostess, "but there ain't enough kings and queens in it to suit me. Why, only this morning I told John to take it back and tell the man that I got it up that we can afford a whole lot better one than that."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Hysteria in Dogs.

Nerves are the disease of the present day among human beings, but I did not know till recently that hysteria is also a malady of dogs. A friend of mine owned a dog which suddenly one day was seized with an attack of nerves. Since then it has been subject to maltering incessantly round and round the room, refusing food, but still recognizing its owner. Another little dog suffered from hysteria in consequence of fright from railway traveling, and it really seems as though civilization, in rendering dogs more delicate and more susceptible, has done them a distinct physical injury.—London Graphic.

Milky Sea Not Understood.

The milky sea, as it is known to mariners, is not yet fully understood. It seems to be most common in the tropical waters of the Indian ocean, and is described as weird, ghastly and awe-inspiring, and is given to the observer on shipboard the sensation of passing through a sort of luminous fog in which sea and sky seem to join and all sense of distance is lost. The phenomenon is probably due to some form of phosphorescence.—Chicago Post.

A small girl in the class concocted the following sentence: "Boys bees bare when they go in swimming."

The Metric System.

The amusing feature of the present controversy concerning the metric system, in which one party holds to the yard and pound as consecrated Anglo-Saxon standards, is that the United States' fundamental legal standards of length and mass are the meter and the kilogram respectively, and not the yard and pound. The yard is legally expressed as the 3,600-3,937th part of a meter.—Detroit Free Press.

IMPROVEMENTS IN WEST END

NEW THOROUGHFARE TO DUNELLEN DEPOT TO BE OPENED.

Dwellings and Factories May be Erected Along Street Being Laid Out.

Realizing the growth of the city westward and the demand for comfortable houses with reasonable rents several property owners in the West End have been at work grading and putting through a street reaching from this city to the Dunellen depot of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. The improved thoroughfare is South Second street and about 4,000 feet have been graded and made into a wide residential avenue.

The work has been going on for some time under the direction of Contractor Zarros, of New York. Those who have been putting forward an effort to build up that part of the town are E. F. Vail and Mrs. Dr. Penfield, of this city, and Isaac Brokaw and John Sutphin, of New York, property owners in this city. The improvements has been completed at a great expense.

The street will soon be ready to be thrown open to traffic. As soon as it is opened the lots along the avenue, which have also been graded and improved, will be offered for sale and on many of them comfortable houses will be erected. On the railroad side of the street factories will be built and on the opposite side houses for the operatives will be erected.

This may mean rapid growth to that part of the city which, with the incoming of many factories and industrial plants, has already shown evidences of a healthy boom.

WEDDING FOLLOWS A DRIVE

"CLIFF" SCHORB AND MISS ETHEL MARSH MARRY SECRETLY.

The Nuptial Event Kept Quiet—Young Couple Broke the News at Last.

Miss Ethel Marsh, of Scotch Plains, was married to Clifford Schorb, of North Plainfield, Tuesday evening, June 9. The announcement of the wedding was made to the parents of the bride and groom last evening.

Young Schorb and Miss Marsh drove to Metuchen that afternoon. There they sought Rev. Dr. Fenton, rector of the Episcopal Church. He tied the knot.

Returning to this city the couple separated, going to their respective homes. Since then the wedding had been a secret. Mr. and Mrs. Schorb will reside in the borough.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Schorb and his bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Marsh, who are well-known here.

MAN AND WIFE.

Plainfield and St. Louis to be Represented in New York Wedding.

A New York wedding which will interest many people in Plainfield will be that of Miss Agnes Bryan, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. James Rogers Bryan, of Albert street, to William Wallace Chandler, of St. Louis. The ceremony will be performed Tuesday, June 30, at 5 o'clock at the Calvary M. E. Church, Seventh avenue and 129th street. A reception will follow at 126 West 130th street. The couple will reside at St. Louis.

Miss Bryan is a graduate of the Plainfield High School and has been a teacher in the public schools of Hartford, Conn., for twenty-two years.

Up to the Time.

When the Common Council meets in July, among other things to be considered will be the care of the town clock. During the past five years L. Moraller & Son, the Park avenue jewelers, have been successful in their efforts to make the clock keep accurate time. There is every reason to believe that the Council will continue to employ this firm as its services have been satisfactory.

At Northfield.

A number of Plainfielders are preparing to spend the summer at Northfield, Mass., where the campign facilities are so well-known. The camp was organized some time ago by Dwight L. Moody, the great evangelist, as a place where young men could spend the summer at a low cost amid congenial surroundings.

ATTEMPT TO POISON COLORED SERVANT

Woman Declares She Received Rough-on-Rats in a Letter.

SEVERAL IMPLICATED

MISS GOODWIN SAYS POLICE DEPARTMENT HAS BEEN NOTIFIED.

Jealousy Claimed to be the Motive for the Fiendish Act—The Druggists Say the Powder is a Deadly Poison.

North Plainfield has a poison mystery somewhat like the Moore case on this side of the brook.

Maria Goodwin, colored, a domestic employed at 38 Sycamore avenue, has received a letter in which was a small and mysterious package of powder. Several druggists in the city have declared the contents to be some kind of a poison. The person sending the package is unknown although several colored men and women are said to be implicated in the supposed plot to put her out of the way.

Miss Goodwin has been in this city three months. She came here to work for Mrs. French, of Somerset street. Her home is in Suffolk, W. Va. She came here a stranger and soon after her arrival went to work at the place where she is at present employed.

Soon after arrival the woman became acquainted with a Henry Little, colored. The pair were often seen together and recently, it is claimed, they went to a colored dance. The morning after the dance a letter was brought to the woman through the mails. In the letter Little's name was mentioned in several places and there were some innuendoes of a threatening nature. In it the writer says: "Enclosed you will find some powder which you can take in some whiskey, you are the one who has taken Henry Little away from me." The letter refers to a girl named "Sally," who was also deprived of "Henry's" company, it is alleged, through the winsomeness of the Goodwin girl.

The letter, written with a lead pencil, is dated Plainfield, May 31. The powder, which was enclosed, is wrapped in yellow paper. No name is signed to the letter although it is evident that it was written by a feminine hand.

The girl said that once before she received a letter containing threats against her if she did not stop Little's attentions. That letter she destroyed.

When she received the last letter the girl took the powder to Peter B. Hodge. Upon a brief examination she says he told her that the package contained rough-on-rats. He cautioned her against taking any of it. Several other druggists, when shown the powder by a reporter for The Daily Press last night, said that they thought the powder contained a large amount of arsenic, enough to kill a person if taken internally.

The girl says she notified the police when she received the first letter and they have been making an investigation.

MISS WILLIAMS WEDS.

Becomes the Wife of Irving Niles, the Ceremony Being a Quiet One.

Miss Florence E. Williams, of this city and Irving Niles, of Alfred, N. Y., were very quietly married Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride's uncle, Mulford Estil, 69 Grove street.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor-emeritus of the First Baptist Church, officiated. When they return from their wedding journey, Mr. and Mrs. Niles will reside in their home in West Fifth street, near Monroe avenue. The groom is employed as draughtsman in the Potter Press Company Works.

Lake Hopatcong.

Lake Hopatcong has become justly famous for several reasons but chief of these is its location. High up in New Jersey's beautiful mountains, a thousand feet above the sea level, surrounded by verdant hills and charming landscape, it is the perfection of outing places. To reach it is a delightful journey through a series of picturesque valleys, and [the time of the traveler is so occupied feasting on the scenic sights that the few hours journey are like fleeting moments. For a Sunday excursion no place is more popular than Lake Hopatcong, and if you want a day of enjoyment take in the $1 excursion to Lake Hopatcong. The New Jersey Central is to run on June 26th. There will be a special train from Plainfield at 9:20 a. m., and the return train does not leave the lake until late afternoon. There is ample opportunity for a trip over the lake or such enjoyment as one may care to indulge in.

CITY HIGH'S GRADUATION

Thirty-Four Boys and Girls Receive Well-Earned Diplomas.

ADDRESS BY A JURIST

Valedictorian's Essay Wins Applause—Dr. J. R. Probasco Presents Diplomas—L. N. Lovell Announces Awards—Rev. Mr. Stevenson's Invocation.

Thirty-four graduates of the Plainfield High School received from the hand of Dr. J. R. Probasco, president of the Board of Education, Thursday night, their rewards for four years of labor at their books, while proud parents, relatives and friends, who filled the First Baptist Church, where the exercises were held, to overflowing, applauded with the heartiness that comes from a personal knowledge of work well done.

It was the thirty-third commencement of the school, and the exercises in charge of Superintendent Henry M. Maxson and Principal Ira W. Travell, exhibited an exceptional degree of scholarship on the part of the commencement speakers. Musical numbers by Frank's New York orchestra, interspersed through the programme, were selected with excellent good taste and greatly pleased the audience. Rev. R. Vicars Stevenson, of Westminster Church, pronounced the invocation.

In her salutatory essay, Miss Alice Allegra Pugh chose for her subject "Child Labor." She dealt at some length with the evils attendant upon child labor, such as illiteracy, ruined health and low morals, and included a careful study of conditions in the large cities, in mining districts and elsewhere. Among the remarkable facts referred to by the essayist was that New Jersey has very nearly 5,000 illiterate children between the ages of ten and fourteen, sixty per cent. of whom have not heard of the United States or Europe; ninety-five per cent. know nothing of the Revolutionary War; and at least thirty per cent. cannot name the city in which they live.

At the close of her remarks, Dr. Probasco, as president of the Board of Education, introduced the speaker of the evening, Hon. William N. Ashman, one of the judges of the Orphans' Court, of Philadelphia. The gifted jurist held the undivided attention of the audience while he gave words of advice to the graduates. In part he said:

"The world of men into which you are about to step, needs you. The wealth which you will bring to it will count for more than the cargo of the merchant ship, no matter how costly its lading. I am not a pessimist—I believe the world is better than it ever was, but yet it is an old world, out of repair and again its mad wish for riches, against its mean frivolities, against is political immoralities, against its seething mass of poverty and crime, it needs your hopefulness, your faith and enthusiasm and above all your high ideals. * * * *

"Note a paramount reason why, in this age perhaps more than in any preceding, such as you are imperatively needed. The tendency of modern civilization is to emasculate man. * * * The evil is patent in every calling; the rich man's horizon is bounded by his ledger and his bank account; the rich woman gives to society the care which she owes to her children and her home; even the scientist deals in a specialty.

"The result is that only one-half, and that the lower half, of the man's nature is developed; and the past has no lesson and the future no inspiration for this bedwarfed humanity. What wonder is it that shut up in such a prison, violated nature should seek solace in dissipation and crime and perhaps even in suicide.

"There is no excuse in your case for so unused faculty. There is ignorance to be enlighted; there is want to be relieved; there are wrongs to be redressed; and there is encouragement in the thought that the best work which has been wrought, has been done by men who like Bunyan, the tinker, in the intervals between their daily toil.

"Trust to your ideals. From the high domain of the imagination comes the air without breathing which, no true soul can live. * * * Hold fast to your ideal; you may never reach it, but the very effort to attain it, will sanctify your life. * * * *

"Each of you is painting a picture—the picture of your life. Sometime today look at that picture; you cannot rub out a single line but the canvas is before you, and the work is unfinished. Paint the rest of it well. It is the best prayer I can utter as I bid you Godspeed and farewell."

Hon. Wm. N. Ashman.

An essay of unusual merit on the programme was that of Miss Louise Monfort Taylor, the valedictorian. Miss Taylor discussed the "Abuse of Conventionality" unconventionally and helpfully as follows:

"Conventionality is undoubtedly one of the strongest influences in our lives. Nowadays the people is not 'I thank Thee that I am not as other men are,' but, 'Let me be exactly as other men are.' If we examine our inmost feelings and motives, we shall find that many are bound by conventionality that ever present question, 'What would people say?' From the most trivial matters of dress to questions gravely affecting our life's welfare, conventionality rules us, and none dare gainsay its power.

"It cannot be denied that conventionality is sometimes a great factor for good. It is of great advantage to those people who are so weak that they are kept from wrongdoing, not by moral convictions of right, but by fear of calling forth adverse criticism. * * * *

"To fully understand the evils arising from too strict adherence to laws of conventions, it is necessary to consider the word itself. Con-ven-tion, the very sound of it suggests a dull, monotonous, lifeless thing. Webster defines it as 'A meeting; an assembly; a formal agreement between persons; a contract; a compact; a treaty; a settled usage.' Now, all these definitions are dull and uninteresting. Even the last, 'a settled usage,' which is the one we generally apply to the word, is not attractive. Yet, in spite of this apparent dullness, conventionality, personified, presents itself to us in a very different guise. Instead of appearing as a dull, prosaic thing, it appears as a tall, queenly woman, proud and haughty, with head erect and unchangeable laws.

"Wherever she goes, whether she is in the middle of the road or on the sidewalk, she is always in the middle of the road. It is actually true that fashions are in the middle of the road, for fashionably dressed women sweep along in trailing dresses and coats, and consequently from the press and pavement. Conventionality is a very exacting mistress. She rules life and limb by wearing three-inch heels. She carries men their convenient pocket-size, but heavily, pocket-book, containing her check. She rules their appetites by serving them with food, which, though delicious, is indigestible. Conventionality is a very jealous mistress. She makes Julius Caesar and the saint sleep. If by chance a woman is found brave enough to defy the laws of fashion and 'dress according to [illegible] personal taste,' forthwith dubbed eccentric and strong minded.

"Not only in regard to dress does conventionality assert itself strongly, but all social intercourse is under its rule. In this world people of so many types and such varying degrees of culture and refinement that it would be an impossibility to have perfect freedom of intercourse. Hence the need of rules. Distinctions between classes should not be so firmly fixed that they may not be passed. Why is Shakespeare acclaimed the greatest writer of modern times? Because of the fact that he did breadth or human sympathy, the understanding of human nature, which he displays. He would not have had that sympathy, that understanding, had he not been brought face to face from those below him. He mingled with rich and poor alike, discovered their thoughts and feelings, and put them in his works. It was this personal touch of life in the lives or others that put him in touch with man and man's nature. So it is with all of us. The more we keep to ourselves, the more self-satisfied, self-centered, self-opinionated we become; the more we mingle with others, the more our views are broadened, our sympathies made larger, and our understanding of human nature increased. Conventionality is the greatest in the small and humble about us, we foster in ourselves that great curse of humanity, selfishness, and we miss that divine touch of pity which makes the whole world kin. * * * *

"Why must we make ourselves such slaves to such convention? Why must we always control our conduct by what the world thinks? The truly great men are those who, calmly ignoring the petty fault-finding of those about them, keep on steadfastly in what they believe to be the right way. Abraham Lincoln is a serious crisis in a nation's affairs, boldly chose his course, and kept it with no deviation. His object was not to observe conventionality, and better it is to do this than to do this duty. He stands before us as the most striking example in our history of a man who, in small matters and in great, was freed from all trammels of conventionality. To be great we must rise above the little things of life, and this we cannot do if we are bound hand and foot by the chains of convention. By too strict adherence to conventional standards our independence and self-reliance are weakened. We see things in the wrong perspective.

"Trivial matters take precedence in our estimation, and these petty annoyances grow and we become narrow and selfish. He who, for the sake of avoiding censure, swerves from what he realizes is the path of duty, is a coward. It is only by acting according to principle, and not according to pattern, that we can rise on stepping stones of our dead selves to higher things."

And she, as I say good-bye, I feel that I cannot do better than quote to you these splendid words of Emerson, who was himself great enough to rise above the petty conventionalities of his day:

"'What I must do is all that concerns me, not what people say. This rule, equally arduous in active and intellectual life, may serve to make the whole distinction between greatness and meanness. It is the harder because you will always find those who think they know what is your duty better than you know it. It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion. It is easy in solitude to live after our own, but the great man is he, who in the midst of the crowd, keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude."

The presentation of diplomas by Dr. Probasco, during which the ushers were kept busy presenting the "sweet girl graduates" with bouquets sent by friends and admirers, concluded the exercises, after which an adjournment was taken to the Casino, where the usual alumni reception and dance brought Commencement Day to a close.

The following were the ushers at the church: H. J. DuBois, head usher, George L. Babcock, Lucius T. Koons, Henry B. Drake, Jose Tweedy, H. M. Brakeley, Maxwell Perkins, Charles B. Morse and Fred. K. Armstrong.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning June 30—Comment by Rev. L. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Christ in our cities.—Acts xvii, 1-11; Luke xix, 41-44; Matt. xi, 21, 24. (City missions.)

The problems of city government and city evangelization and salvation have always been great ones. From time immemorial the great cities of the world have been the centers where vice and iniquity have flourished, and the downfall of nations has often had its beginning in the downfall of the city. A nation's life is very often but the life of its important city or cities. Ancient Greece was but an enlarged Athens, the Roman empire an enlarged Rome, and Paris and London stands the same relations to France and to England today, and if the city life of America is not yet its most predominating force because of the extent of our rural habitations it is rapidly becoming so. The tide of population moves more and more toward our cities, and into them is poured the bulk of the foreign population that comes to our shores. City missions are needed. The impurity of city politics, the character of the large foreign populations, the natural gravitation of evil to the city, where it can be more secluded, the inexorable demands of city business life, the religious indifference of the vast multitudes of its people, all go to show the need of mission work in the city. Only those who come into personal contact with the work have any real conception of the needs in our great cities today. Heathenism as pronounced as exists anywhere is frequently to be found. Foreigners congregate together and occupy entire sections, living and often in moral and spiritual darkness such as is scarcely imaginable. All forms of vice manifest themselves, and here and there direct opposition to the truth as it is in Jesus is frequently manifested. It was so at Corinth, and in this respect the cities of today are not unchanged.

But the difficulties that face us in city mission work should not deter us. Christianity hesitates not because of difficulty or opposition. The command is "Go!" the promise is "I am with you," and with such a command and promise difficulties are not to be considered. Paul sought the great cities as strategic points for his missionary labors. He went to Rome, to Ephesus, to Athens and Rome the key to the world, and these became the great centers from which Christianity spread in the early Christian cities. Save the cities and you can save the country. They are the leaders in business, social and political life and also in religious life. Christianize them and the country will not be in danger from lack of religion or indifference to it.

The cities can be Christianized and saved. God saved Zoar in answer to the prayer of Lot and Nineveh as a result of the preaching of Jonah. In the apostles' days flourishing churches were established in the great heathen cities of the world, and in many of our cities today there is much vital Christianity. It is a mistake to think that our cities are devoid of all religion. Christian people, devout and consecrated, are to be found in large numbers in all our cities. While the fact proves the possibility of Christian living even in our cities. More than this, there is always a hearty response from the unevangelized in our great cities. In many of these there are flourishing missions and missionaries, and God has abundantly blessed evangelistic work among the masses of our cities.

Christ was interested in cities. It is true He declared that God would hold them responsible for their opportunities, but He also wept over the city of Jerusalem and desired to shelter and save it. This should be the attitude of all His disciples. As He was interested in the salvation of Jerusalem, so we should be in the moral and spiritual welfare of all cities. Specially should all Endeavorers who live in cities bend all their energies toward city evangelism. Christianity, patriotism and personal interest all call upon us to follow such a course.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning June 28, "Heathen Doctors and Medical Missionaries"—Text, Matt. x, 7, 8; 1 Cor. xii, 9-12.

"Gifts of healings in the one spirit."

The connection of spirit and body in mankind is so close that whatever affects one has great influences over the other. Disease of body causes a person to view matters in a far different light from what they would appear to him in health. Purposes, plans, disposition, character and even destiny depend in large measure on health and disease. Vice and crime and sin need to be studied in their relation to body and soul. The act of healing is more than a matter of medicine. The cure of souls also has much to do with the cure for the bodies of men.

Jesus gave much attention during His ministry to the relief of disease. His miracles of healing will in the future have a closer and more profound study than they have ever had in the past, as we come to appreciate the necessity for more adequate knowledge and treatment of diseases of body, mind and soul.

In the church of Jesus Christ emphasis from the first has been placed on relief of distress, poverty and sickness. Nursing and healing ministrations have had a place and made the offices of preaching and teaching.

In the mission work of the modern church special value has been found to lie in the healing art in reaching the people of heathen lands. Whatever may be the defects of medical science and practice in civilized lands, outside of the distinctively Christian nations there is absolutely no such thing as medical knowledge and skill. The suffering is appalling; the disregard of human life and indifference to the conditions of women and children among the heathen are almost beyond belief. Death is the only deliverance. The medical missionaries have opened the door of hope for this life and for the life which is to come.

Whether the work be in China, India, Africa or Mexico, the poorer classes of the people are almost totally destitute of any help from physicians. The native doctors are in many cases worse than useless. By opening dispensaries and hospitals where all can be treated at a reasonable charge or free of cost multitudes are cured. At the same time they are made acquainted with the gospel of Jesus and the hope of eternal life. When a new world of experience is opened to them. Those who can and will heal bodies will be trusted to give directions to the soul for its salvation.

The printing press, the school, the pulpit and medical skill all unite to spread the kingdom of Jesus Christ. We no longer can rely upon miraculous gifts of healing, but God has in the past few years wonderfully led the world into better views in medicine and in the improvement of valuable remedies have been discovered. A quarter of a century has revolutionised the practice of medicine and surgery. This all seems providential and will advance the cause of Christ as the conditions of men improve.

Slumbering Christians.

When is the Christian most liable to sleep? Is it not when his temporal circumstances are prosperous? Have you not found it so? When your hard daily troubles to take to the throne of grace were you not more wakeful than you are now? Another dangerous time is when all goes pleasantly in spiritual matters. There is no temptation half so dangerous as not being tempted. The distressed soul does not sleep. It is after we enter into peaceful confidence and full assurance that we are in danger of slumbering. The disciples fell asleep after they had seen Jesus transfigured on the mountain top. Take heed, joyous Christian! Be as happy as you will, only be watchful.—Episcopal Recorder.

"Not of Himself."

A detached railway car will go alone and even up grade for a short distance, but it soon exhausts itself and remains motionless until moved again by a power outside itself. He who undertakes to live by his own energy alone will soon find himself at the end of his resources. God gave man dominion at the first. He took from him the divine commission when he sinned. It is restored to him again when he renews his allegiance to the God of man and the universe.—Philadelphia Methodist.

Silence.

What a noble weapon is silence! It turns aside the thrust of anger. Before it hatred and malice are abashed, if not defeated. Slander and detraction are hushed in its presence. The bubble of idle gossip soon grows tired in the face of its rebuke. If we could but keep silence the world would be rid of half its evils.—Irish-American.

Every.

Every day its toil,
Every life its mission;
Man was till the soil,
Ah, and tradition.

Every task its time,
Every grief its season,
And in ways sublime
God makes known His reason.

Every eye its tear,
Every back its burden;
Tribulation here;
Peace in Christ our guerdon.

Every heart its pain,
Alternating pleasure;
Sunshine after rain,
Joy in all measure.

Every day its night,
Every night its waking;
Faith leads on to sight;
Obedience day is breaking.

Every shattered hope
May, like grain, be riven,
From a rainbow slope
To the gate of heaven.

GRADUATION EXERCISES IN DUNELLEN SCHOOL

Essays and Orations by the Six Pupils Receiving Their Dipomas.

ADRIAN LYON'S TALK

COMMENCEMENT TAKES PLACE IN M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. N. J. Sproul Delivers Invocation and Rev. Livermore the Benediction—Presentation of Scholarship Prizes.

The graduation exercises of the Dunellen High School were held in the Methodist Episcopal Church last Thursday, and six young people were given diplomas. The class consisted of Miss Irene Ayers, Miss Lillie Kennedy, Miss Minnie Schneider, Miss Edna Vail, Arthur Bogardus and Robert Lowrie. The programme opened with the "Graduates' March" by Misses Alice Agger, and Elsie Peters. Rev. N. J. Sproul delivered the invocation and then the Dunellen orchestra played a selection.

The first essay was by Miss Lillie Kennedy and was "Our Debt to Greece." The article was well delivered and showed careful and earnest preparation. Miss Irene Ayers then delivered an essay on "Our Islands and Their People." The essay was also very good and provoked much applause. A chorus from the schools then rendered in succession "Merrily Goes Our Bark" and "Fairy Voices." Robert Lowrie delivered an oration entitled "Loyalty." His style of address was good and his subject was well treated. Miss Mamie Schneider, in an essay entitled "Early Education in New Jersey," told of the advance and improvement of educational facilities.

The orchestra followed with the selection, "Hearts Courageous." Miss Edna Vail gave in a very pleasing manner a recitation, "Grandfather's Story." Arthur Bogardus was the last of the graduates to speak. His subject was an oration, "The Value of a Struggle." Hon. Adrian Lyon, of Perth Amboy, was the speaker of the evening. He gave the graduates some good advice. The remainder of the programme consisted of the distribution of diplomas and prizes and singing by the chorus. Rev. L. E. Livermore delivered the benediction.

RESENT THE EXEMPTS' ACT

ADVERSE CRITICISM OVER DISPOSAL OF HAND ENGINE.

Exempts It Is Claimed Should Have Returned the Engine to Gazelle.

Considerable disapproval has been expressed of the action of the Exempt Firemen's Association in allowing Plainfield's old hand fire engine to pass out of their control into the hands of the Elizabeth veteran association. It is thought that considering the value of the relic it should be kept in Plainfield, there being a large number of places where it could be stored.

The officers and members of Gazelle Engine Company, the old volunteer fire organization, are discussing the matter with a view to calling a meeting at an early date. It is their claim that the Exempt Firemen have exceeded their authority in allowing the engine to go outside the city, as an agreement had been made for returning the engine to Gazelle Engine Company after the Exempt Firemen had no further use for it. An effort will be made to secure the return of the relic after the parade next October at Allentown, in which it will be exhibited.

Addresses Pupils Receiving Certificates From the Grammar School.

INTERESTING EXERCISES

REV DR. SNODGRASS AND REV. MR. GOODRICH TAKE PART.

Timely Remarks of the Superintendent of Schools Who Points Out Ideals for the Graduates—Dr. Probasco Awards Certificates.

Pupils of the grammar department of the local public school, seventy-eight in number, received certificates Wednesday afternoon after appropriate exercises were held in the auditorium of the Franklin School. The hall was crowded with relatives and friends of the children.

An invocation by Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. Church, of this city, marked the opening of the exercises. A chorus by the graduating class preceded a recitation by Miss May Frances Cogan, entitled "Clesely's Transformation." The latter was a humorous selection and was ably rendered. A two-part song by the girls of the class was a feature of the exercises.

"The Bell of Atri," was the title of a recitation by Robert Lawrence Kyte. After a song by the class, Miss Gertrude Prince Abbott recited in a clever manner Ella Wheeler Wilcox's "How Salvator Won the Race." The High School Mandolin Club rendered two selections which proved to be one of the features of the afternoon's exercises.

Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational Church, of this city, delivered an address, his topic being "Value of an Education." He said incidently that in this age an education was most important in successfully meeting the requirements of the day. His talk was replete with helpful suggestions. Charles L. Lewis sang Schuman's "Two Grenadiers" in a masterful manner.

The address of the afternoon was made by Superintendent of Schools Henry M. Maxson. In his talk he pointed out the fact that one living up to a high ideal would gradually have that ideal reflected in the character of the person. The speaker declared that it is as the small and humble duties of life are performed with the preparation for the performances of great things make it easier to grasp later opportunities.

Incidentaly he said: "We have our aims, our ideals, our inspirations around which our thoughts centre day by day. If these ideals are noble and true our lives grow to be noble and true; if they are base and ignoble then our lives became the same. Youth is the time that most of these ideals are formed. The books you read, the friendships you form and the principles of conduct you accept combine to form pictures in your mindlike that will shape your future."

The remarks of the Superintendent were followed by the presentation of the certificates by Dr. Probasco.

A feature of the exercises not on the programme was the presentation of several volumes of Shakespeare by the pupils of the graduating class to Miss Anna M. Day.

BOROUGH HIGH COMMENCEMENT

Twenty-Two Young People Are Graduated From North Plainfield High School.

DR. HURLBUT SPEAKS

Largest Class in History of Institution — Reception and Dance Follow the Exercises — Outline of Address and Essay.

The members of the class of 1903 made their formal exit from the North Plainfield High School, last Friday, celebrating their commencement with music and oratory in the Young Men's Christian Association Hall. Twenty-two strong, five boys and the rest girls, they presented a series of exercises that honored themselves and their preceptors. The platform with its burden of youth and beauty and the decorations of red and black, the class colors, backed by a profusion of roses, palms and ferns, made a picture delightful and inspiriting to the families and friends of the graduates who occupied all the available space in the hall. Above the platform was the class motto, in large red and black floral letters, "Non Nobis Solum."

A chorus of girls voices successfully combining natural talent and careful training carried unusually pretty selections. The invocation by Rev. Edwin L. Earp, of the Grace M. E. Church, was followed by the salutatory address by Frances Ursula Krewson, a thoughtful article, in part as follows:

"Life has grown broader, more full of meaning, we come to feel a greater sympathy towards all the world, and now as we go forth into the broader walks of life may we keep in mind the thought embodied in our motto, 'Non nobis Solum'—Not for ourselves alone.

"In all material affairs the law is 'Save and ye shall have.' Thrift, economy, saving; capital, investment, gains, interest, discount, income; these are the vocabulary of the business world. The whole process is centripetal. This course is not to be condemned, but it is barren and unsatisfactory if it stops with this. On the other hand the principal of increase in moral life is beneficent.

"In all the richer life of the heart one profits by what he parts with. Wealth is here increased as it is shared. The order is centrifugal. We find abundant illustration of this in the intellectual life. Knowledge is always surer that has been shared. * * * * To have in a true sense is to share with others." * * * * *

"To live for one commonwealth is to make every fellow citizen one's neighbor. * * * * *

"Readiness to lose the individual life that all life may be elevated thereby is the one condition of saving one's own. We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths. We should count time by heart throbs. * * He most lives, who thinks most, feels the noblest and acts the best."

In his commencement address, Rev. Dr. Jesse L. Hurlbut took for his text the "Secret of Success," which he said was to "live within your income and take care of your safe." This was the speaker supplied in its relations to financial, mental, social and moral problems sure to arise in later years. He laid stress upon the importance of no confining one's self to a single vocation. One should have as vocation, radically different, that will dignify and uplift." He concluded with words of good cheer, urging upon his hearers the necessity for observing economy in time, variety in work, cheerfulness and strength in purpose, softness in aspiration.

Edgar W. Adams, the valedictorian, spoke in part as follows:

Carlyle says, "The centuries are all lineal children of one another" and bound by the same law of heredity. Looking back over the pages of history let us mark the rise of a great people and from its past predict its future.

Let us go back about eleven centuries to that little island then called Britain, now England, whose people were destined to surpass in achievement and power every nation which came before or after it.

We find Britain at this time the scene of a conflict between the natives and foreign invaders. There was no army or navy to protect the homes. Society was disorganized and civil government was unknown, each petty king striving with his neighbor. * *

At the head of this new nation there was a man who was strong enough to resist all foes, prudent enough to lead an untutored people and who saved from destruction a race that was destined for a great mission. * * Under his guidance a new government was organized and society set on a firmer basis. A great revival of learning took place and Christianity took a lasting hold on the Anglo Saxons. * *

England has produced more great men of literary ability than any other nation. * * * For three hundred years following that age of unrivaled splendor a wonderful succession of poets, essayists, historians, novelists, philosophers, orators, scientists, scholars and thinkers of every description have enriched the language with wealth that has made all later generations their debtors. * * * *

Another high expression of the intellectual of a people is found in their statesmanship, crystallized in their laws and institutions. The institutions of a people, says a noted writer, are its solution of the problem of life. Surely there is no greater problem and the solution of the greatest problem implies the best powers of the mind. The growth of the English constition is a living monument to the practical statesmanship of the Anglo Saxon. * * * *

Another expression of the intellectual life of a people is inventive genius which especially characters the Anglo Saxon. * * * * It is not strange that this race which has accomplished so much is the richest. The Anglo Saxon race posses two thirds as much wealth as all Europe.

What is the significance of these facts? Do they not clearly indicate that this race of unequaled energy with all the majesty of members and might of wealth behind it, the representative of the largest liberty, purest Christianity is destined to become the ruling race in the world. * * * *

We have entered upon a magnificent career, a career that will result in the transformation and Americanization of the world. By this we mean the acceptation of American ideas of personal freedom, political and religious, liberty and the right of every man to make for himself his place in the world. In adopting "E Pluribus Unum" as the motto of the U. S. our political forefathers unconsciously adopted what seems a fitting motto for the universe, the motto of a perfect civilization toward which the world is moving, a civilization which is destined to be effected there this influence of the Anglo Saxon race.

James R. Joy presided over the exercises and presented the diplomas. Their recipients were as follows:

These pupils received diplomas: Edgar Whittington Adams, Fred Kline Armstrong, Jennie D. O. Smith-Bergman, Florence B. Conroy, Matilda E. WELCOME TO COTTON

Prince Henry of Prussia Active In Reception.

FLAGSHIP GETS AN HONORED PLACE

Emperor William, Ambassador Tower, Consul Mason and Many Titled Notabilities Join In the Festivities.

KIEL, Germany, June 24.—Rear Admiral Cotton's squadron has reached its anchorage opposite the Imperial Yacht club. The fleet commanded by Admiral Prince Henry of Prussia, consisting of eight battle ships and six cruisers, saluted the American vessels, and the band of the German flagship played "America." Some hundreds of the townspeople gathered on the piers and slopes of the narrow bay and cheered as the squadron arrived.

Prince Henry sent his navigating officers and the captain of the port down the bay to meet the Americans. The flagship Kearsarge swung into her mooring next to the place reserved for the emperor's yacht, the Hohenzollern.

The stars and stripes were raised over the yacht club and on the hotels in the vicinity. Rear Admiral Cotton and Captain Joseph N. Hemphill, commander of the Kearsarge, and all the other American commanders called on the eight German admirals and vice admirals stationed here.

Prince Henry simplified the interchange of calls by suggesting that Rear Admiral Cotton, his staff officer, Lieutenant Hussey; Captain Hemphill and all the captains of the American squadron should meet him, his staff and all the commanders of the German ships on board his flagship Kaiser Friedrich III. Prince Henry then returned the call on Rear Admiral Cotton and talked half an hour with him. The prince examined the outside of the Kearsarge's double turret, but did not go inside, as there were seven German admirals on shore duty who were waiting to visit Rear Admiral Cotton. Prince Henry complimented the American officers on the smart appearance of the squadron, which had been freshly painted at Nyborg, Denmark.

Rear Admiral Cotton and the captains of the American vessels will take lunch with Prince and Princess Henry today.

The following notabilities have arrived for the regatta: United States Ambassador Charlemagne Tower, United States Consul General Frank Mason, the Prince and Princess of Pless, the Princess of Thurn and Taxis, Baron Louis Rothschild, Herr Ballin, director of the Hamburg-American line; Achmed Bey and Baron and Baroness Eckardstein.

Mr. Goelet's thirty footer Swan, the only American owned boat entered in the regatta, has been exercising over the course in the lower bay since her arrival here. Her owner is assisted in sailing her by Hopkins Smith, who with the yacht Uncle Sam won the cup given for boats of her class in 1902.

Emperor William will arrive today on the Hohenzollern.

A WET WEATHER CAMP.

Men of the Seventh Meet Disagreeable Conditions Under Canvas.

CAMP EMMONS CLARK, Peekskill, N. Y., June 24.—Although the weather conditions are slightly more favorable than they were last week, the men of the Seventh regiment are not having an altogether pleasant experience. The weather was cold, raw and wet when the men turned out for their day's work.

Special features are advance guard and outpost duty. This is preparatory to the bivouac of the First battalion, which was planned, but has been postponed until Friday.

General Roe has gone to Highland Falls and will not return to camp until today.

A Clear Course For the Cup Race.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—George A. Cormack, secretary of the New York Yacht club, had a conference with Assistant Secretary Armstrong and Captain Shoemaker, chief of the revenue cutter service, regarding the yacht race for the America's cup to be sailed from Aug. 20 to 29. Mr. Cormack requested the co-operation of the revenue cutter service in keeping a clear course for the competing yachts. He was advised that a fleet of vessels of the revenue cutter service under the command of Captain T. D. Walker will attend the races and keep the course clear.

Van Benthuysen's Funeral.

BLOOMFIELD, Is., June 24.—A special car carrying the family and remains of Will Van Benthuysen, accompanied by John Corwin of the Chicago Tribune and Lieutenant O'Connor of the Chicago police, has arrived here. The funeral was held at the home of Judge William Van Benthuysen, father of the deceased. It was conducted by Rev. K. C. Wilson, pastor of the Presbyterian church.

Tie Up of Paper Mills Likely.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., June 24.—Nearly 200 paper makers on strike at the Fort Edward mill of the International Paper company, and a tie up of the other ten mills of the concern in New York, Maine, Vermont and Massachusetts may follow. The present strike concerns a surprise, and it was believed that the proposed change of hours was the only grievance.

Roosevelt's Clemency.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, June 24.—President Roosevelt has remitted the $5,000 fine and has reduced by one-half the sentence of ten years' imprisonment imposed on Gaston Sauveterre, a Frenchman, by Judge William H. Holt, sitting in the United States district court at Ponce. The prisoner was convicted of passing counterfeit money.

WRECK AT NIAGARA, N. C.

Four Men Were Killed and One Badly Injured.

RALEIGH, N. C., June 24.—Four Seaboard Air Line men are dead and one badly injured as the result of a head on collision at Niagara, N. C., sixty-five miles from Raleigh. Both engines were torn to pieces and five freight cars badly damaged.

The dead men are Engineers S. T. Stewart and W. P. Wall, Firemen Walter Bond and Brewer, all white. Stewart is a Canadian, while the other three are North Carolinians, all making their homes here.

Stewart was carrying an engine and tender to Hamlet and was going south. He passed a north bound freight at Vass and evidently forgot another freight behind that. At Niagara he shot his engine up a grade around a curve. At the same time the freight in charge of Engineer Wall came flying down the grade around the curve. One fireman on the freight jumped just as the engines crashed into each other in a twenty foot cut.

The two engineers were killed at once. Fireman Brewer's body is wedged in the wreck.

SERVIAN KING'S JOURNEY.

Received a Warm Welcome From Belgrade Delegation and Visitors.

VIENNA, June 24.—King Peter arrived from Geneva and left again for Belgrade after a short stay. He received a warm welcome from the Servian, Croatian and Montenegran students and from a delegation from Belgrade headed by the mayor.

In responding to a brief speech made by the latter King Peter expressed his pleasure at returning to Belgrade after so long an exile.

In an interview which he gave while on his way hither King Peter dwelt on the difficulty of punishing the assassins of King Alexander and Queen Draga in view of their pardon by the Servian national assembly prior to his election as king.

Sir G. Bonham, the British minister to Servia, who was ordered home a few days ago, has left for London.

The minister of the Netherlands has been instructed to leave Belgrade before the arrival of King Peter.

The Greek court has gone into a fortnight's mourning for King Alexander and Queen Draga.

State Camp Made Good Showing For Inspecting General.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., June 24.—Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, commander of the United States army, reviewed the First brigade, N. G. Mass., consisting of Brigadier General Thomas R. Matthews, the brigade commander at the state camp grounds.

The ceremony was witnessed by several hundred visiting militiamen and civilians, and the number would have been swelled into the thousands had it not been for the leaden and threatening skies which have hung over the camp ever since the tour of duty began last Saturday.

The brigade made an excellent showing, and General Miles was warm in his praise of the state troops at the close. Immediately following the review General Miles and the brigade commander, with their respective staffs, made a tour of inspection of quarters, and here again the distinguished military visitor expressed his pleasure at the neat appearance of quarters.

GRAND ARMY SERVICE FOR COL. CRONKITE

Funeral at the Home Attended By Veterans and Many Personal Friends.

INTERMENT AT CAPITAL

PATHETIC INCIDENT AT THE CLOSE OF THE SERVICE.

Many Floral Tributes—Those Taking Part in the Service—Rankin Post Unable to Attend the Funeral in a Body.

An affecting incident of the funeral of the late Col. James W. Cronkite, which was held Friday afternoon from the home in Grant avenue, was the arrival of a long-absent son from Iowa just as the services were concluded. He had received word of his father's death and hastened with all possible speed home believing he would reach this city in time for the funeral.

It was expected that Rankin Post, No. 10, G. A. R., of Brooklyn, of which the dead man was a member, would have charge of the services, but at a late hour this was found impossible and Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, of this city, was asked to take charge. There were a large number of friends present including a delegation from the Custom House, New York, where Col. Cronkite was employed, and one from Rankin Post, of Brooklyn, as well as representatives from other Posts in Greater New York.

Commander H. Craig Smith, assisted by Rev. Frank Fletcher, of New Market; Chaplain M. C. Dobbins, Past Commanders T. O. Doane, J. F. Berg, Albert Perry and Comrade George Stover, represented Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, and conducted the ritual of the order. In addition Mr. Fletcher read the war record of the dead soldier, besides making a few appropriate remarks. Comrade Stover was a member of Col. Cronkite's company, but until the latter's death did not know where he had been living.

There were many handsome floral tributes, including a bunch of roses and greens entwined with an American flag, from Post No. 73, G. A. R., a large wreath from the associates of Col. Cronkite in the Custom House, and a tribute from Rankin Post, of Brooklyn.

The remains were taken to Washington, this morning, where a military funeral will be held at the interment in Arlington Cemetery.

The pall-bearers from Rankin Post, No. 10, of Brooklyn, were Edward Maybury, Paul Shellhorn, Francis Mullen and John Gray.

LITERARY.

In Scribner's for July, Charles E. Magoon's account of what the War Department at the present day has achieved in the Civil Government of Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines is of absorbing interest. He explains briefly how the great instument of destruction, the United States Army, was turned to the work of construction, and wonderfully successful until purely Civil Governments were prepared to take its place.

The Newark Bay Drawbridge.

Nearly every one crossing the New Jersey Central's Bridge over Newark Bay is interested in the work incident to the pier building, and though it is a gigantic undertaking, the work is progressing rapidly and traffic has not been delayed. Seventy foot piles have been driven to form foundation for the new piers, and these have been cut off by machinery, at a depth of 30 feet below water. As these piles were driven and cut off under each track separately, it was necessary to carry the traffic on a single track, which has been done with almost no delay to trains, which at this point are very numerous. The large caissons in which the piers are built were erected last fall on the north bank of the Bay. These consist of a grillage, or floor four feet in thickness, and sides built with strong posts and planks, and the whole is made water tight, the joints being caulked in same manner wooden vessels are built. Three of these caissons have already been towed to the site of the new draw and partially filled with concrete, of which the new piers are to be built. When the weight of concrete sinks the caissons as low water as the level of the foundations, they are towed into their final position under the trestle, and when accurately located, by boring a few holes in their sides, they are filled with water and sunk in their permanent position, being supported by the piles, and stone filling which has been thrown in, making a durable and substantial foundation. Work is then continued on each pier until they have reached their final height. It is expected that all four piers in the westerly half of the new piers will be filled and ready to receive the steel work by the 30th of June.

PLAINFIELD BOY'S WORK AT COLLEGE

Arthur E. Smith Graduated With Honors From Rutgers College.

HIS RECORD IN COURSE

EXCELLENT IN STUDIES, ORATORY AND ATHLETICS.

Received Barbour Prize — Prominent in D. K. E. Affairs—Pitcher on Baseball Team—Manager of Glee Club.

Among the graduates of Rutgers College this year is Arthur Embury Smith, of Grandview avenue, North Plainfield. His career through school and college have been one continued success.

When he was graduated from the North Plainfield High School he was the second honor man and made the salutatory address at the commencement exercises. He was the first of his class in mathematics and won the John Valiant mathematical prize of $15. While in school here he took an active interest in military tactics and was a member of Dr. Ward's New Jersey Military Academy as long as that institution lived.

He entered Rutgers College four years ago, and became one of the leading members of the Freshman class. In that year he became interested in college fraternal societies and identified himself with the Delta Kappa Epsilon, one of the most exclusive in the College town. During his junior year he was elected manager of the college magazine, "The Scarlet Letter." His name appears in the publication of 1903 among the list of editors.

Mr. Smith became the manager of the College Glee Club, which has delighted Plainfield audiences on several occasions. During his senior year he was chosen delegate to represent the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity convention to be held in Memphis, Tenn., this summer. Athletics also had honors in store for the North Plainfield student. He joined the college baseball team and soon had the position of pitcher. The successes of the team so far this season speaks well for his work in that capacity. He was prominently identified with the college batallion.

In the final examinations previous to his graduation he was successful in being one of the honor men of his class. In oratory he won the Barbour prize and upon his graduation the degree of bachelor of science was conferred upon him. Civil engineering is his chosen profession.

AN INDIAN WARRIOR ?

Bones Discovered Surrounded by Old Musket, Coins and Arrow Head in Blacksmith Shop.

A few scattered bones, the rusty remains of an old flint lock, some coins on which the signs are indecipherable, and several arrow heads have been discovered buried five feet deep beneath the blacksmith shop of J. E. Flannery on Third street opposite Church street. Men digging in the cellar found the remains Thursday.

¶ They are probably all that is left to tell the story of some old Indian or colonial warrior. The bones were reburied and the other relics are in the possession of Fred W. Hand, of Leland avenue.

CUPID'S DART BROUGHT BLAZE OF SPLENDOR

Thousand Society People at Wedding of Miss Edith Hyde and Everett Colby.

BRIDE A LOVELY PICTURE

SON OF JOHN D. ROCKFELLER WAS AMONG THOSE WHO USHERED.

Crescent Avenue Church the Scene —Reception at House Followed— Superb Decorations and Music —Wedding Trip Abroad.

It is not often that a man and a girl enter upon the venture of matrimony in such a blaze of splendor as attended the wedding Tuesday afternoon of Miss Edith Hyde, daughter of Mrs. Charles Hyde, of East Front street, and Everett Colby, of Oldstead Hall, Llewellyn Park, Orange. All that wealth could buy, in the way of adding beauty to the ceremony and reception, all that society could lend of brilliancy and impressiveness, was there to make the event memorable. Plainfield has seldom witnessed a society wedding of more distinctive interest graced by the presence of so many distinguished people.

The bridal procession formed in the church at 4:30 o'clock. A choir of nineteen boys from Grace Church, of New York, sweetly singing Barnaby's "O, Perfect Love," met the bride at the door. The organ, played by James M. Helfenstein, of Grace Church, from which tender music of Barnaby passed into the more stirring strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, and then the choir still singing preceded the bride up the aisle. Following the choir boys came the eight ushers and the maid-of-honor with the two little flower girls strewing the bride's pathway with beautiful spring blossoms. The bride approached the altar on the arm of her brother, Charles Livingstone Hyde, who gave her away. The groom and his best man, Howard A. Colby, his brother, met the bride at the altar.

Rev. William R. Richards, D. D., of the Brick Presbyterian Church, formerly of the Crescent Avenue Church, read the Episcopal service, following which the bridal party passed out to the music of Mendelssohn.

The bridal gown was superb, consisting of a white liberty satin gown with a long square court train. The corsage was trimmed with duchesse lace, the skirt being without trimmings. The veil was of applique lace. Miss Hyde carried a silver mounted prayer book with long book marks and a spray of orange blossoms. Her hands were covered with lace mitts, and in her hair she wore a large diamond tiara, the gift of her mother. A string of pearls about her neck was the gift of the groom.

The maid-of-honor, Miss Edith Hoadley Smalley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Palmer Smith, of Nethergood, was gowned in white and pale green chiffon, with duchesse lace trimmings. She wore a large picture hat and carried a bouquet of cardinias. The flower girls, nieces of the bride, were Dorothy Hyde, daughter of Charles W. Hyde, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., and Miss Helen Hyde, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kepler Hyde, of Titusville, Pa. They were dressed in white mousseline, trimmed with Valenciennes lace, with large picture hats and white plumes.

The ushers were John D. Rockfellow, Jr., Robert G. Mead, John Kenny, Sherman Day and Dr. Parker Syms, all of New York; Girard P. Herrick, of Philadelphia; F. deL. Hyde, of Plainfield, and Stanley Mc Cormick.

A color scheme of green and white was beautifully carried out at the church. In the background at the altar were immense palms, blooming hydrangeas and bunches of phlox. On either aisle were gladioli stocks, white chrysanthemums and bride roses. The standards were wound with clusters of white fleur-de-lis, tied with white satin ribbons. In the windows were huge clusters of hydrangeas in bloom surrounded by tropical foliage. The glass screens were garlanded with smilax, spring blossoms and mountain laurel. Lilies scattered among the flowers added their fresh beauties, and at the entrance were oak leaves. Red roses, at the entrance to the aisles formed the only bit of color outside of the green and white.

The reception at the home of the brides' mother, 606 East Front street, filled in the hours from 5 o'clock to 7. The newly wedded couple, assisted by

LAWN FAIR FOR CHARITY

CHILDREN AID THE NETHERWOOD FRESH AIR HOME.

Four Little Girls Have Charge of Affair—Sales Beneath a Tent.

Through the earnest efforts of four young girls, Helen Ryder, Helen Woolley, Helen Smith and Ethel Rogers, a successful lawn fair was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Helen Ryder in Central avenue, for the benefit of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home. A goodly sum was realized as a profit.

A large tent was erected on the lawn and beneath it was sold fancy articles, cake, candy and ice cream. A grab-bag was a source of much profit. "Teddy" Ryder, a sturdy little chap, had charge of a pin wheel table, and he sold his entire stock at a good profit. Miss Mary Moffett had charge of a swing. Miss Edna Burr acted as cashier.

Assisting the four young girls who had the affair in charge were Ethel Webster, Ethel VanWinkle, Alice Drake, Alice VanHorn, Edna Mober, Fred Smith and Ethel Vail. The young folks received help from a few older persons, among whom were Mrs. E. B. Ryder, Mrs. Nelson VanWinkle, Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Woolley, E. B. Ryder and Miss Moffett.

CAREER OF HONOR AND USEFULNESS

Sketch of Rev. John S. Zelie the New Pastor of the Crescent Ave. Church.

MUCH TRAVELLED MAN

GRADUATED FROM WILLIAMS COLLEGE AND YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

Has Contributed to Religious Periodicals—Strengthened Several Churches—Comes Here From Schenectady, N. Y.

Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, who will succeed to the pastorate of the Crescent Avenue Church next September, has had a thirteen-years experience in the ministry, during which his labors have been attended by unvarying success. As a pulpit orator his power is exceptional, and he has also won distinction as a writer. He will assume his new duties early in September the exact date being still undecided. He succeeds Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, now pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church of New York.

Rev. Mr. Zelie was born in Princeton, Mass., where his father was minister of the Congregational Church. At his father's death when he was three months old, he moved to his mother's home in Bangor, Maine, where he received his early training. He is a graduate of Williams College, where he took the first prize at the sesquilight prize speaking and was president of the class in his senior year, graduating in 1887. Mr. Zelie attended the Union Theological Seminary for one year, studying during the two following years at Yale Divinity School where he graduated in 1890.

Mr. Zelie's first settlement was over the Congregational Church in Plymouth, Conn., in Litchfield county, where he was minister for four years. In 1892 he married Miss Henriette S. Campbell, of Cherryfield, Maine. Three years later, he was called to be associate minister of the Old Stone Presbyterian Church in Cleveland, Ohio under Dr. Hiram C. Hayden and in charge of Bolton Avenue Presbyterian Church. A few months prior to his coming, this church had been divided by a dissension in which the pastor and about two-thirds of the members withdrew, establishing a Congregational Church on the same lot. A fine new building then in process of erection was thus left with only some ninety remaining members. Mr. Zelie took charge in July 1894, preaching the first sermon in the new and nearly empty building. Gradually conditions improved after a long struggle, until in 1900 when Mr. Zelie left, the church had reached a membership of 400, was united, strong and prosperous, indicating the power of the pastor's influence.

When in Cleveland Mr. Zelie had much to do with the College Chapels, officiating there regularly. In December of 1900 he accepted a call to the historic First Reformed Church of Schenectady, one of the oldest foundations in the country, with a beautiful church building of which Edward T. Potter, brother of Bishop Potter was the architect. Schenectady has grown in the past fifteen years from 12,000 to 35,000 owing to the General Electric Works which employ nearly 11,000 men, of which it is said that nearly 500 are college graduates, making a pleasant field for work. During this pastorate a fine parish building costing $30,000 was erected.

Outside his regular duties as a divine, Mr. Zelie has done much writing during the last ten years. In that time he has contributed regularly to the long editorial column on the front page of the Sunday School Times, being one of the four who wrote for that column. Other sketches, articles and reviews from his pen have appeared here and there in the Congregationalist, the Critic, and other magazines and papers.

In 1895 together with Rev. Carroll Perry, rector of St. Philips, Garrison, New York, a brother of Bliss Perry, editor of the Atlantic, Mr. Zelie wrote a little book published by the Merrymount Press of Boston, called "Bill Pratt, the Saw-Buck Philosopher," a biography of one of the interesting characters for fifty years well known to the students of William College.

He traveled in Europe in 1899 and again in 1901 when he made Genova, Switzerland, his headquarters, his object being to gain material concern-

JOSEPH O. OSGOOD GUEST OF ENGINEERS

Prominent Men Give Dinner in Honor of Distinguished Boroughite.

AFTER-DINNER TALKS

FORMER MAYOR WILLIAM L. SAUNDERS ACTS AS TOASTMASTER.

"Who's Who and What" About the Festive Board—Remarks Made by Those Who Thought to Centre on Science.

Nearly two score residents of Plainfield and North Plainfield, all men of technical education, gathered around the board at the Park Avenue Hotel last Tuesday, to do honor to their fellow townsman, Joseph O. Osgood, chief engineer of the Jersey Central Railroad and one of the oldest engineers in the country. It was a testimonial dinner, informally arranged, but of most delightful nature. From this meeting, the first gathering of engineers who claim this city as their home, may result the formation of a regular organization with similar dinners once or twice a year.

It was quite a distinguished party that sat down to partake of the excellent repast prepared by Mrs. Wagstaff, manager of the hotel. The details had been arranged by P. V. R. VanWyck. These were the invited guests:

Former Mayor W. L. Saunders, vice president of the Ingersoll-Sergeant Drill Company; Chas. Warren Hunt, secretary of the American Society of Civil Engineers; William G. Besler, vice president and general manager of the Jersey Central Railroad; Col. Mason W. Tyler, lawyer; F. W. Tredell, mining engineer of the C. & G. Cooper Company; Jas. H. Jowett, of the Ingersoll-Sergeant Drill Company; Stephen Haff, designer; Joseph E. Morse, chief engineer of the Tide Water Oil Company; Frank H. Ball, general manager of the American Engine Company; Henry D. Hibbard, of the Manganese Steel Safe Company; Dr. Leonard Metz, consulting engineer; Councilman W. A. Garrigues, of the Lovering & Garrigues Iron Company; Stephen R. Kroh, manufacturer of stone crushing machinery; George H. Frost, editor of the Engineering News; Benjamin S. Church, former chief engineer of the New York water works; Robert A. Meeker, State Supervisor of Roads; Emil Wolfmann, engineer and contractor; Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett; M. A. Zook, A. K. Owen and James L. Brownlee, of the engineering department of the Jersey Central Railroad; Harry L. Meeker, of the Electric Vehicle Company; F. A. Dunham, civil engineer; A. L. Bowman, mechanical engineer; John H. VanHorne, civil engineer; Frank W. Roller, electrical engineer; L. W. Serrell, electrical contractor; Willard M. Miner, electrical engineer; LeRoy Clark, mechanical engineer; P. V. R. VanWyck, electrical engineer of the New York Telephone Company; H. C. VanEmburgh, borough engineer, and C. C. Upham, mechanical engineer.

Former Mayor W. L. Saunders acted as toastmaster and made the first speech of the evening. He said incidently:

"I was asked the other day, 'What is the purpose of this dinner?' I trust that our guest will restrain his native modesty when I give you my answer. This dinner, I said, is like every other dinner, the first purpose is to have plenty of good things to eat and drink and the second purpose is to rejuvenate a lot of steel crusted and iron rusted old engineers and have a good time at Mr. Osgood's expense. I don't mean his financial expense, of course, but you know there is a saying that money is not everything in this world. I told my questioner that there would be a third and rather extraordinary purpose at this dinner and that was to protect human digestion by sitting down on after-dinner speeches. There would be none of any consequence. I would talk a little, of course, that custom's to be helped and it was only natural inebriation from an exuberance of compressed air.

"Our guest has not asked us to dine with us tonight because we are proud to call ourselves his friends and because he is the leading representative of our profession residing in this vicinity. Mr. Osgood is a distinguished member of the American Society of Civil Engineers with a record of experience in the West and South that has brought to him 'golden opinions' from business men of New York. DANTES GETS DIPLOMA.

Action of Brooklyn College of Pharmacy Causes Resignation of Faculty Members.

Because Edmund Dantes, a former Plainfielder has been awarded a diploma in the Brooklyn College of Pharmacy, two professors in that institution have resigned. Professors E. H. Bartley and Albert H. Brundage charge that Dantes has twice served terms in prison for theft and forgery.

Dantes was employed by Charles H. Hall, of Watchung avenue, four years ago as a drug clerk, and, it is said, while Mr. Hall was away on his vacation he stole his diploma and some money, changing the wording of the diploma in order to use it to his own advantage. The New York College of Pharmacy took the matter up and, it is alleged, had the man sent to Blackwell's Island. It is claimed that Dantes has served in the navy but was a deserter.

MISS FLORENCE REID A CHARMING BRIDE

Plainfield Girl Marries Alfred Hoyt Bill, of Faribault, Minnesota.

THE WEDDING AT HOUSE

HANDSOME DECORATIONS AND BEAUTIFUL GOWNS CONSPICUOUS.

Rev. Charles E. Herring, Assisted by Rev. Jerome Gardner, Officiates—Couple to Travel Abroad —Some of the Presents.

The marriage of Miss Florence Dorothy Reid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Reid, of 333 West Seventh street to Alfred Hoyt Bill, of Faribault, Minn., took place Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents. The wedding ceremony was performed at 5 o'clock in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives.

Sweet peas in great profusion formed the principal decorations. There the walls were hidden behind screens of the flowers with white ribbons holding them in place. In the library, where the ceremony was performed daisies arranged in a solid bank circular in shape formed a miniature pulpit for the minister and the walls were almost entirely invisible behind the network of wild flowers. The dining room decorated in red roses, formed a marked contrast to the color scheme and decorative features of the reception rooms. The halls were lined with potted palms and ferns giving the entire lower floor the appearance of being a veritable flower garden.

At the appointed time VanBarr's orchestra from New York, played Mendelsohn's wedding march and the bridal party started from an upstairs room down the ribbon entwined staircase to the parlors.

She was attired in white satin crepe de chine. The gown was trimmed with Duchesse lace. A tulle veil was caught up by a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white sweet peas. The maid-of-honor, Miss Anna Reid, a sister of the bride, wore a gown of dotted Swiss trimmed with old lace.

The bridesmaids were Miss Bertha Reid, sister of the bride; Miss Lataila Bill, sister of the groom, and Miss Edna Toffey, of Jersey City.

They all wore white dotted Swiss with large blue sashes and white picture hats. They carried bouquets of lillies of the valley and forget-me-nots. The best man was Irwin Palmer, of Joliet, Ill. The ushers were: Edwin Thompson, of Louisville, Ky.; James Reynolds Waite, of Auburn, N. Y.; and Willard Reid, of Savannah, Ga., a brother of the bride.

Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Jersey City and Rev. Jerome Gardner, of Rochester, N. Y., were the officiating ministers. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Following the marriage ceremony a reception was held and a wedding supper was served, then the newly married couple started on their honeymoon late in the evening.

For two years they will travel abroad and upon their return, it is said that Mr. and Mrs. Bill will make their home in Minnesota.

The bride's present from the groom was a collar of pearls and diamonds. The bride's gifts to the bridesmaids were pearl cuff pins. To the maid of honor she gave a gold spangled bracelet. The groom gave his ushers opal scarf pins.

Guests were present from New York, Jersey City, Joliet, Ill.; Faribaut, Minn.; Plainfield, N. J., and Louisville, Ky.

FISH COME WHEN CALLED.

Curious Species Brought by a New York Naturalist to This Country from Asia.

Otto Eggeling, a naturalist of New York, has finally succeeded in importing from Asia the first specimens of the curious fish known as the anabas ever brought to this country, says the Times.

The special peculiarity of the anabas, which inhabits the streams of interior India, is that it travels for miles on land in search of water when the streams are dried up.

Lovers of aquariums have for years endeavored to secure specimens of this fish, but without success, as they always died in transit, especially when in the vicinity of the Suez canal, owing to the intense heat.

Mr. Eggeling conceived the idea of placing the fish in earthenware vessels, containing a sufficient quantity of water-soaked earth, and two months ago he corresponded with friends in India, who secured several fine specimens and shipped them. The fish arrived last week, and when the earthenware pots were opened, the earth therein was found perfectly dry and the fish were in a lifeless state. Several hours after being placed in water, however, they came to life, and are now as well as ever.

These fish are beautifully marked, and when the light strikes them at certain angles their whole bodies assume all the colors of the rainbow. They average about two and one-half inches in length, and, unlike other fish, breathe through the lungs instead of the gills, thus enabling them to live on land.

It is said that the anabas can be tamed as any domestic animal, and some when called to, eating food out of one's hand. These fish have what might be called "crawlers" on the lower part of their bodies, thus enabling them to travel over land.

MESSAGES IN MERCHANDISE.

Many Instances Are on Record, Among Them Being Some of a Tragical Nature.

In regard to the story which has been going the rounds of the English papers lately as to a Liverpool man finding a message written upon an egg by the packer, a widow in Manitoba, whom he ultimately married, the London Graphic recalls that many true incidents of the same kind could be related. In 1899 a message was found in a barrel of apples that had come from New Zealand. In this message the packer of the fruit, a young woman, asked that her ancestors, whose names were given, came from Kent, and she asked the finder to ascertain if any of her name and family still remained in the country. As stated in the papers of the time, the finder was able to give her full particulars as to surviving relatives. But Mr. Tew, of Leeds, a member of a Yorkshire banking family, had at one time a collection of these "messages in merchandise," some of them being very tragical, and being a survival of the days when peaceful traders were caught by Algerian pirates and sold into captivity and slavery. One such message had been written in blood of a coarse canvas bag that had contained gum arabic; another appeared as a sort of tattooed stain on a large cork that had fastened up a vessel containing attar of roses.

SHARPENING OF SABERS.

The Secretary of War Announces That It Is Not a Violation of the Laws of War.

The question has come before the war department whether the sharpening of sabers is a violation of any law, or custom of war, or of the Geneva convention. The inquiry came from Capt. Le Roy Eltinge, Fifteenth cavalry, now at Sisseton, S. D., says a Washington report.

That officer reports a well circulated opinion among officers that it is not permissible to grind sabers when fighting a civilized enemy. The judge advocate general of the army found nothing which brings the character of this inquiry within the exceptions of paragraph 847 of the army regulations, and the secretary of war announced that the sharpening of sabers is not a violation of the laws of war nor of any of the conventions which have been accepted by the United States, either expressly or by implication for the government of its military forces when engaged in actual military operations.

The Geneva convention and its modifications relate to the care and ventilation of the sick and wounded in time of war.

Honeymoon and Jail.

The jailkeeper at Fort Scott was astonished the other night when a good-looking young couple asked for permission to stay in one of the cells till morning. It was explained that they had just been married over in Missouri and were going into southern Kansas, where the man had work. They ran out of money and had no place to sleep. The Monitor says the bride was good looking and pleasant and seemed to regard the matter as something of a joke. But think of honeymoon commenced in jail.

Hens Laying for Church.

Western women are certainly ingenious as well as enterprising. The Kansas City Journal says: "The women members have hit upon a novel plan to raise money for the support of a rural church in southern Missouri. They devote to this purpose all the eggs their hens lay on Sunday. There is, of course, no way to prevent the hens from working seven days a week if they want to, but these women don't intend any longer to be partizans criminals in appropriating to their use eggs laid in defiance of the Sabbath."

BALDWIN DENIES IT.

General Declares Officially That He Never Prosecuted Negroes and Filipinos to No Case.

The war department at Washington took official cognizance of the reported statements of Gen. Frank D. Baldwin, commander of the department of the Colorado, in disparagement of the Filipinos and Negroes as soldiers, and Secretary Root directed a formal inquiry to be addressed to Gen. Baldwin asking whether or not he had been correctly quoted. The general promptly denied that he ever made the statements attributed to him. Gen. Baldwin is fresh from the Philippines and has just succeeded Gen. Funston in command of the department of the Colorado, with headquarters at Denver. The statements attributed to Gen. Baldwin to which official exception was taken are as follows:

"One of my reasons for liking the Filipino as a soldier is the same that gives me a preference for the Negro in the same capacity. In a fight I am not worried about his safety, as it doesn't make any difference whether he gets killed or not.

"You can understand my point better by taking the case of a full-blooded dog and a cur. If you owned them you would sooner sacrifice the cur than lose the better dog, which you prize."

Gen. Baldwin entered the military service as second lieutenant of a Michigan regiment in September, 1861, and served until the close of the civil war, reaching the grade of captain. In February, 1866, he was appointed second lieutenant in the Nineteenth regular infantry, and has served with that arm continuously since, passing through all the grades to that of colonel, which he reached July 28, 1901. June 9, 1902, he was appointed brigadier general. He will reach the retiring age July 28, 1906.

HERBERT G. SQUIERS.

United States Minister to Cuba Is a Diplomat of Ability and Wonderful Tact.

A fact that goes to show how widely American interest and American activity are now distributed over the whole globe was the appointment as the first United States minister to Cuba of a man who won distinction in military affairs in China. Herbert G. Squiers was secretary at the United States legation in Peking when the Boxer outbreak occurred, and was shut up in the besieged city with the other foreigners. He had previously had some slight knowledge of military affairs, and this he exercised so ably in the defense of the legations that the slight fortifications proved sufficient to keep the besieged from the attacks of the enemy long after it seemed as if they must be doomed to destruction. Mr. Squiers' conduct in this affair was so efficient that he was complimented in the reports of all the foreign delegates made to their governments. Mr. Squiers was born in Canada, but has long been an American citizen. The post which he now fills requires an unusual degree of tact and ability.

Their Walk Betrayed Them.

The fur of the silver fox is very costly. To escape paying duty on articles fashioned from this fur, a couple of ladies resorted to trickery. A female inspector of the New York custom house had her suspicions aroused by the way the ladies walked on stepping from a European steamer. She found their lower limbs encased in muffs and boas made from the skin of the animal above mentioned.

MOVING BY INSTALLMENT.

Strange Way of Changing Quarters Revealed by a New York Expressman.

He looked like a truthful man, yet nobody would believe him when he said he did not know where the trunks were going, relates the New York Times.

"It is very strange that you don't know," said the landlady. "You are the expressman. If you don't know, who does?"

"The fellow that will finish the hauling, probably," he returned, serenely.

"Don't you going to do the whole job?" she asked.

"No, only half of it. I will take the things to our office and somebody else will take them the rest of the way. The boss at the desk will know the address. I don't know it. The moving is done on the installment plan to keep you folks here from finding out where the other people went. They were afraid to trust me with the number for fear you might worm it out of me, so they told it to nobody but the manager. Lots of people who move often make the trip in sections like that. Half the time when I take a trunk away from a boarding-house I don't know where it will wind up. That is generally done when there has been a row and the folks who leave don't want to be followed. Been a little trouble here, I imagine," he added, tentatively.

"Yes," sighed the landlady, "a little."

OVER A MOUNTAIN RANGE.

Aerial Tramway for the Transportation of Tea in the Island of Ceylon.

One of the most interesting aerial rope ways has recently been constructed on the island of Ceylon, British India, for the transportation of tea, this up-to-date system dispensing with the services of hundreds of men and beasts which were formerly maintained and employed in carrying the tea over the miles of mountainous country. The tramway, which runs in almost a direct line, says the Philadelphia Record, is three miles long; the road which was followed by the flesh and blood carriers was a much greater distance.

This three miles of tramway passes over several ridges, one of which has a considerable elevation. The tea leaves, in bags, are placed in the great carriers, which are in the form of a hanging cage, as the latter pass the driving terminal, by wire-rope transmissions from a turbine three quarters of a mile distant. The labor required to work the entire line need not exceed six men.

The tramway has been in use for four months, and to the most satisfactory service. The delivery of the tea is performed quite as reliably as heretofore and is done in much less time and much more cheaply.

MUST SIT UPON RUGS.

If We Would Avoid the Danger That Is Said to Lurk in High-Backed Chairs.

A contemporary which is devoted to the discussion of hygienic subjects makes a somewhat alarming suggestion. It maintains that high straight-backed chairs are responsible for a large share of the ills to which woman are prone.

Neuralgia, backache, headaches, depression, and so on may be directly traced to troubles engendered internally by the postures we are compelled to continually assume on these chairs.

The suggestion is put forth, therefore, that we should be about on soft rugs on the floor, adapting these, as fancy dictated, to our own ideas of comfort.

This eastern seraglio kind of arrangement would give us our much-needed rest, as well as suppleness of form, we are assured, but how would it fit in with out fashions, our mode of entertaining, and our general household arrangements?

The spectacle of the average matron flopping about with a number of smartly-attired guests on the drawing room floor does not present itself to the mind's eye in other than a grotesquely comical form.

DIDN'T KNOW KING EDWARD.

Shopkeepers in Paris Would Not Accept English Coin Bearing His Face.

A correspondent of the London Express in Paris describes his experiences in trying to change a sovereign with the king's head on it for French money. The first place was at a stall of a leading Parish bookseller.

"It is not good," said the woman behind.

"Yes, it is," was the reply. "It is an English sovereign and is worth 25 francs."

"Ah, not it is a medal."

"No, not good English money."

The fact that it had not seen one like it, I am afraid.

"Never mind whether you have seen one like it. It is the head of Edward, the new king, and the gold is good."

"No, no. I want to see the queen's head, and I will not take it."

Finally the woman said she would give 20 francs for it. Four other people who were tried argued in a similar manner, and were all afraid to take the risk. The sovereign was eventually changed at a restaurant.

Americans Getting Contracts.

The Birmingham Post calls the attention of British manufacturers to the fact that contracts involving the sum of $65,000,000 have been obtained by American interests during the last few weeks for the construction of electric traction systems in England, Russia and Holland.

BRAVE MOUNTAIN GIRL.

Miss Kellogg's Wild Ride on the Back of an Elk and Her Almost Miraculous Escape.

Among the applicants for the position of game warden for Routt and Rio Blanco counties, in Colorado, is Miss Emma Kellogg, a young woman of nerve who boasts many an adventure.

The most thrilling experience of which she tells is a wild ride on the back of an elk. While out in the hills one day she came suddenly on an angry bull elk. She had leaned her gun against a tree, and before she could get it the elk was upon her.

She took refuge in a sapling and tried to hold the animal's antlers around it, but her strength was not sufficient and the elk broke away. Miss Kellogg took advantage of a moment's respite to climb a tree and sat on the first limb. This angered the elk more than ever, and he gave the tree such a bump that Miss Kellogg fell off.

She would have been stamped to death by the animal's sharp hoofs had it not been that luckily she fell on the elk's back. Then, with great presence of mind, she grasped the antlers and held on for dear life.

Away they went, the crazed animal dashing through the trees with the velocity of an express train. Up hills and across valleys the animal sped, jumping over the rocks with tremendous leaps that almost unseated the frightened rider.

The elk darted through some thick brush where overhanging branches came low down in order to brush the rider off. But the terrified animal miscalculated about the antlers and got caught in the branches. It struggled and struggled, but could not get loose, and it was but the work of a moment for the intrepid mountain girl to kill the captive animal by cutting its throat with her hunting-knife.

DECEPTION WAS VAIN.

Why One Canadian Bishop Will Never Again Depart from the Road of Veracious Conversation.

An eminent Canadian bishop lately paid a visit of inspection to a lunatic asylum near Toronto. Before introducing the bishop to one of the inmates, the physician in charge warned him not to cross or contradict the unfortunate man, but to agree with all he said.

"If you humor him," said the physician, "you will doubtless find him agreeable, intelligent and apparently sane, his only mania being that everybody is conspiring against him."

"YOU LIE LIKE A HEATHEN."

The bishop assented, and was soon conversing amicably with the lunatic, who finally said:

"I see Queen Victoria is married again."

"Um—er—well—Oh! of course," assented the bishop, after some natural hesitation, in view of the queen's death.

"So she's married President McKinley, has she?" queried the lunatic next.

This arbitrary mating of two of the world's illustrious dead was almost too much for the bishop to sanction, even in the interests of peace and harmony, but he finally managed to acquiesce with fairly good grace.

"Well, who are you, anyway?" blurted out the lunatic.

"I am a minister of the Gospel," replied the bishop.

"Humph!" retorted the lunatic; "you look like a parson and you dress like a parson, but you lie like a heathen."

THE SLOWLY RECEDING MOON.

Later Body May Have Been Born of Our Earth Millions of Years Ago.

Looking back through the mists of time we see the moon ever drawing nearer and nearer to the earth. Our satellite now revolves at a distance of 240,000 miles, but there was a time when that distance was no more than 200,000 miles. There was a time, millions of years ago, no doubt, when the moon was but 190,000 miles away; and as we look further and further back we see the moon ever drawing closer and closer to the earth, until at last we discern the critical period in earth-moon history when our globe was spinning round in a period of about five or six hours, writes Sir Robert Ball, in Bookbuyers' Magazine. The moon, instead of revolving where we now find it, was then actually close to the earth; earlier still it was, in fact, touching our globe, and the moon and the earth were revolving each around the other, like a football and a tennis ball actually fastened together.

It is impossible to resist taking one step further. We know that the earth was, at that early period, a soft molten mass of matter, spinning round rapidly. The speed seems to have been so great that a rupture took place, a portion of the molten matter broke away from the parent globe, and the fragments coalesced into a small globe. That the moon was thus born of our earth uncounted millions of years ago is the lesson which mathematics declares it learns from the murmur of the tides.

PISTACHIO NUTS.

A Favorite Dainty with Greeks in This Country Becoming Popular with Americans.

Two species of pistachios come to this country. Those from Armenia, Syria and Persia are larger, more tender and better flavored than the varieties which come from Greece and the Greek archipelago. The Greek nuts are dryer and less desirable to the American taste, though the New York Greeks prize them greatly and introduce them into most of their homemade cakes, says the New York Sun.

The large grade of pistachios have appeared on afternoon tea tables of late and have also been served whole as part of desserts, with wine for accompaniment, a mode of serving them that has long been popular in Italy.

So popular has the flavor of this nut become that several imitations of pistachio paste are for sale. A compound of crushed, blanched almonds, colored deftly with various harmless green substances, is often palmed off for pistachio paste.

The Armenians in New York use the pistachio nut for stuffing poultry and for making pilaus and various savory dishes just as the French use the chestnut. The nut when soldened and boiled is also used as a vegetable just as the chestnut is used.

HOW THEY ADVANCED IN LIFE.

One Tramp Owes "Rise" to His Mother, the Other Is a "Self-Made" Man.

The kind-hearted lady missionary was canvassing in the outskirts of Brooklyn when she came across two tramps lying on a pile of warm furnace slag, says a New York Times writer. One of them was about the worst-looking tramp on earth and the other was an easy second. After the usual preliminaries and offers of some slight assistance the kind lady said:

"Now, my men, tell me, please, how you came to this state."

"We walked, mum," said the worst-looking of the pair.

"You misunderstand me, my good man. I mean how did you come to the condition in which I find you? Tell me, please, both of you. I want to use the information for object lessons."

"Oh, yes, I understand you now, mum. W-a-l-l. I have no hesitation in sayin' that whatever I am I owe to my mother," responded the one who first acted as spokesman.

"An' as fer me, miss," said the other. "I own with a degree of pride and satisfaction that I am entirely a self-made man."

Some Odd Nicknames.

Nearly every prominent man of title in England has a nickname and some of these cognomens are a trifle odd. For instance, Sir Michael Herbert, British minister to Washington, is known as "Mungo." But why does not appear to be clearly known; the duke of Westminster is called "Bend-Or," which was a Derby winner owned by his grandfather; the duke of Marlborough is "Sunny," from Sunderland, one of his many second titles, and Granville Gordon has his life answered to the name of "Granny."

Oklahoma's Only Battlefield.

The only battle ever fought on what is now Oklahoma soil took place on the Washita river near the Antelope hills. Here in 1868 Gen. Custer, with 900 cavalry, engaged in a deadly combat with Black Kettle, a Cheyenne chief, with an unknown number of warriors. Custer lost 19 soldiers and one officer, but won the fight, killing Chief Black Kettle with 203 braves and taking 53 prisoners.

Figures About Potatoes.

For every 10,000 inhabitants of Germany, 166 acres of potatoes are planted, as against 112 acres in Austria, 98 acres in France, 25 acres in the United States and 31 acres in Great Britain and Ireland.

SENATOR CLARK SUED.

New York Girl Claims That Montanan Copper King Trifled with Her Young Affections.

It developed recently that Senator William A. Clark, of Montana, the "copper king" and multimillionaire, was sued by Miss Mary McNellis, of New York, in the supreme court for $150,000 damages for breach of promise more than a year ago and the affair was conducted with so much secrecy that not a word of it ever reached the ears of the public. The other day Miss McNellis' lawyer asked to have her case reopened for a public trial.

Miss McNellis gave her testimony before James L. Bishop, a referee appointed by the supreme court on March 1 last year. She testified that she was in Chicago about the 8th, 9th or 10th of July, 1896, on the occasion of the democratic convention, and was looking for Elliot Danforth, whom she knew.

"I was told," she continued, "that he was up in the Montana headquarters. I went up there and met Mr. Clark in Mr. Danforth's absence. Mr. Clark said he was pleased to meet me and would like to meet me again. I said I was pleased to meet him and would certainly like to meet him again."

Senator Clark called on her, according to the witness, and took her to dinner at a hotel. "We had some dinner or supper—supper I suppose you would call it," she said, "consisting of oysters, salad and champagne. First we had cocktails, one apiece only; then we talked for a little while."

The conversation ran upon Montana and copper for a time, but finally, according to Miss McNellis, Mr. Clark promised to make her his wife.

Senator Clark, who admitted having known Miss McNellis for a long time, denied that he had ever promised to marry her. The senator is 60 years old, is a widower and has five children.

THE STOKES BATTERY.

New York Millionaire Inventor Thinks Cannon Will Not Injure His Unique Craft.

Anson Phelps Stokes, of New York, has secured a patent on the floating batery he invented and will protect al his rights therein. The millionaire philanthropist's attorneys believe the invention to be of great value and think the United States will adopt it for coast defense purposes.

Viewed from the shore the Stokes fighting machine will look like the upper third of a huge gray iron sphere. It will be protected with the heaviest armor that can possibly be made, something thicker and tougher than any now in use, while the perfect globular shape of the vessel or battery will make it practically impossible to injure her with projectiles or even with torpedoes. Whatever missiles happen to hit her will glance off, deflected by the nonresistance of the spherical target presented.

The battery of this floating fost will consist of one great gun or possibly more, which remains immovably fixed. To depress or elevate the muzzle the trim of the firing side of the battery itself will be changed, however, by changing the position of movable ballast or counterpoises.

The Stokes battery will not propel itself, but will be towed to its position, where it will ride at ease, securely held fast by a powerful mushroom anchor.

Bad Thing for Club Men.

A new doorknob has been devised, but it is certain clubmen will not welcome it, although it makes a latchkey unnecessary. By rotating the knob in the same manner as a safe knob, until the proper combination is secured, the door can be opened. The lock is susceptible of 100,000 combinations, and he who knows not or has forgotten the proper one cannot gain admittance through that door.

PEANUT-EATERS IN CARS.

A Public Nuisance That Most People Would Like to See Put Down and Out.

"If I could have my way about it," said a sensitive citizen, according to the New York Sun, "I would have a law passed forbidding the eating of peanuts in elevated or surface cars, and requiring the guards or conductors to eject from the cars any person so offending.

"Men, strange as it may seem, not children, are the chief offenders in this direction. You may see grown men sitting in a car, and, regardless of their fellow passengers, calmly eating peanuts and dropping the shells on the floor.

"To many persons the odor of peanuts within a confined space, as in a railroad car, is unpleasant, as the sight of the litter of shells on the floor must be to all. But the men peanut eaters go right on eating and so disposing of the shells. Why, I have seen a district messenger boy eating peanuts in a car do better than they in one way anyhow. This boy put his empty shells back into the paper bag from which he had emptied the peanuts into his pocket.

"I have seen men eat apples in an elevated car and throw the core under the seat. I have seen a man eat an orange in an elevated car and not even take the trouble to do that with the orange peel, but just lay that down on the vacant seat beside him. But such men as those I regard as fine gentlemen as compared with the grown man who eats peanuts in an elevated car and drops the shells on the floor. Him I regard as—

"Well, the peanut eater I would have firmly, even if gently, put off the car."

WHITE WATER IN THE OCEAN.

Singular Phenomenon Witnessed at Rare Intervals in the Tropical Regions.

Of the many sights witnessed in the oceans of the globe, one of the most curious and most weird is that described by sailors as "the milky sea," ships being surrounded for several hours by water that appears to be a snowy, white mass. Compiled from experiences extending during the last 70 years, an interesting account of the phenomenon is given on the North Atlantic and Mediterranean Pilot Chart. The spectacle is restricted to the darkness of night and rare occasions, and, while it is limited mainly to the warmer waters of the tropical belt, it appears to be more common in the Indian ocean than in the Atlantic and Pacific. From the white water the light is so strong that ordinary newspaper print can be read on board ship, but the scene at this moment of an awe-inspiring description. The horizon is blotted out, sea and sky seem to become one in a sort of universal luminous fog, which, like a London fog, robs the observer of the sense of distance and direction, the dark being lit up with a ghastly, shadowless light. Last June off the west coast of South America a bucket of the white water emptied back into the sea resembled molten lead. This curious sight has interested scientific investigators, Darwin among them; but while it is, no doubt, related to the many phosphorescent displays common at sea, there is no difficult explanation forthcoming of this particular manifestation or of the peculiar atmospheric effects resulting from it.

FIRST BOOK OF LAWS.

Statutes Drawn Up by King of Babylon Five Centuries Before Laws of Moses.

The well-known assyriologist, Dr. Hugo Winckler, says the London Express, has published an account of the legation promulgated by King Amraphel of Babylon, which, so far as is known at present, was the first book of laws ever given to the world. King Amraphel lived, 2,250 years B. C., and is mentioned in the bible as a contemporary of Abraham, so that his statutes were drawn up fully five centuries before the laws of Moses. They number 282, and contain the following:

"If a woman who sells beverages gives bad value for the money paid her, she shall be thrown into water.
